NEW YEAR'S PLANNING.—

New Year's season is the time for taking stock of past experiences, of profiting by the mistakes of the past, and of building larger and better plans for the future. That is one of the most profitable results of the orderly and systematic measuring of the passing of time; it gives us a standard by which we may measure our achievements, both of the past and of the time that is to come.

New Year's resolutions have become, to many, a mockery and a source of jesting. One wonders why this is so, for certainly it is a most commendable thing to plan wisely and well, and to make for one's self high and holy ideals. The explanation is possibly to be found in the fact that most resolutions have taken the negative form. We resolve that we will not do this, and we will not do that, and soon we find ourselves doing the very thing that we have resolved not to do. The psychologists tell us that there is but bittle value in a negative idea. The man who stands up to address a crowd tells himself that he will not be afraid, and finds himself the prey of an enervating fear. Another says, I will be master of myself and of the occasion, and comes through with flying colors. One is thinking of fear, the other is thinking of mastery. And in that fact lies all the difference in the world.

Instead of resolving that we shall rid our lives of the faults and blemishes, it might be infinitely more profitable to center our thinking upon the fine and heroic things that we are going to accomplish. It is possible to so crowd the life with the true, the good, and the beautiful that there will be no place for the sordid, belittling and weakening things of life. And in our planning for the future year, Christians ought to be giving a large place to what they shall undertake and pursue, which will help to bring the kingdom a little nearer. Nothing will bring larger results of happiness and peace than that which is invested in the work of our Christ and of His Church. Fill your days so full of noble thoughts and self-sacrificing service that there shall be no place for the selfish and the mean.

CONGREGATIONAL MODERATOR HONORED.—

A little over a year ago, the Christian Herald, an inter-denominational religious weekly, decided to make an annual "Distinguished Religious Service Award." This honor was to be awarded to the religious leader who, in the opinion of the Christian Herald editors, had made the most notable contribution to kingdom advancement during the year. The selection was to be made solely in the light of service, no attention being paid to denominational affiliations. The man selected for this honor for the year 1929 is Fred B. Smith, moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches. The citation reads as follows:

"Fred B. Smith, moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches, lay evangelist, crusader for law enforcement, for world peace, for Christian unity—Christian Herald Association has elected you to receive the second annual award for distinguished religious service.

"You have been chosen because the Christian Church for more than forty years has had in you a demonstration of what can be wrought by a layman who is wholly given to the purpose of Christ. In your position as chairman of the executive committee of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches you have contributed, largely to the rallying of American opinion in support of the pact to outlaw war. As chairman of the Citizens' Committee of One Thousand for Law Enforcement, you have provided a bulwark of support for the prohibition law. In your capacity as moderator of the National Council of the Congregational Churches, you have led significantly toward the consummation of union between your own and the Christian denomination. For these things, and because of the evangelical spirit which continues to characterize your leadership, we are of one mind in selecting you as the individual who, during 1929, has rendered the most distinguished service in the field of this award.

"For the Christian Herald Association: J. C. Penney, Godfrey Hammond, Daniel A. Poling, Stanley High."

In addition to the honor which the award carries, the Christian Herald Association pays the expenses of the recipient on a tour of Europe and the Holy Land. Mr. Smith is always on his way. He has crossed the ocean many times in pursuit of his work for the kingdom, and now he is going on a vacation trip which is accorded him because of the work which he has done for the Master. But Fred B. Smith is the type of man who will crowd even a vacation trip full of service for his Christ and his fellow-man. The Christian Church joins heartily in the congratulations to Mr. Smith and concurs in the wisdom of those who made the selection. Those of us who have been privileged to meet Fred B. Smith feel that the honor was most worthily bestowed.

SAYING AND DOING.—

Every once in a great while we chance upon something which we have been thinking all along without knowing we were thinking it. Or perchance it is something which we have felt without ever really formulating it into definite words. Church Management recently carried such an article under the heading "Does Your Official Board Take Action?" which we are reproducing:

"'My official board took definite action upon this matter last night,' said one minister.

"'You mean it made a decision,' replied the friend. 'Official boards like to make decisions, but few of them take action or make action. They leave that for the minister.'

"It is one of the most truthful statements this writer has ever heard. Most Church boards don't take action. They merely make decisions. They like to meet around the table and discuss things in general. They will discuss things in specific. They will vote and record the vote. Action is supposed to follow the vote. They leave that for some one else.

"Some official boards feel that their total of activities is to find suitable tasks for the minister. They want to keep him happy and busy. They are advisers, not co-laborers; professional consultants, not executives. Of course, some ministers invite this sort of thing. But the wise one has a different motive in bringing responsible laymen to his boards. He isn't looking alone for advice, but action. Happy is the Church which has an official board which really takes action."

Attention is called to this thought not because that the official board is different from the rest of the Church members, but because this tendency to confuse saying and doing is a common weakness of Church members in general, both lay and clerical. It has been this writer's observation that the official board is generally a cross-section of the Church membership as a whole. You will generally find about the same faults and about the same fine traits manifested in the official board which mark the Church at large.

And when one comes to think about it, what this writer has said about the official board when it meets in executive session, is remarkably like the action that is so often taken by preachers when they are assembled in Conference. We preachers, too, seem to have an idea that when we have voted a good strong "aye" in favor of a resolution which has been presented to Conference that we have done our part toward making it effective, and that it is the responsibility of some one else to do the work.

If talk alone could transform the world and bring in the millenium, the preachers would have won the world long, long ago. But it takes more than talk and beautifully worded resolutions to drive out evil that is deeply intrenched and to lead men and women to the attainment of high and holy ideals. And since we are in the midst of the New Year season, it might not be a bad idea for each of us to take a trial balance of our talking and our doing. The weakness of talking and not doing seems to be of long standing. For Jesus observed it in His day, and said: "Not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Happy New Year! Make only such resolutions as you can carry out, but set the goal higher.

Rev. J. W. Patton, bringing in a SUN renewal from his congregation at Bethlehem, reports large congregations, morning and evening, last Sunday, and interesting services and a good day.

The tenth anniversary of the Sunday School of the First Christian Church of Richmond will be celebrated next Sunday, January 5, 1930. A special program is being arranged.

Of course, you had a Merry Christmas. The spirit of the occasion simply gets in the bones, and strikes into the soul as well, and one just has to enjoy the season and be glad in the time of "peace and good will."

Rev. G. D. Hunt, general secretary of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Christian Conferences, has visited fifteen Churches since the annual Conference and feels much encouraged over the outlook for the coming year. Bro. Hunt is ready to undertake a new work at Alexander City, in Alabama, and hopes to begin this at an early date. The ministers' and laymen's meeting of the two Conferences was held Sunday, December 29th, with the Roanoke Christian Church.

It is learned with genuine sorrow that Rev. A. W. Hirby, Dayton, Ohio, member of the Home Mission Board of the General Convention, died on Christmas Day at 2 P. M., at the Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton. The funeral was held on December 28th, 1:30 P. M., at Stratwood. Bro. Hirby leaves a wife and six children. He was a man of pleasing address, a faithful minister and much beloved as a pastor and as a member of the General Board of the Church, and as a brother beloved he will be missed. Our sympathy goes out for the bereaved.

Greensboro (First) Church held a very agreeable and largely attended service Sunday night, December 15th. The new pipe organ, installed through the instrumentality of the Truitt Philathea Class, was used for the first time on December 8th. Mrs. W. B. Truitt, the organist, had prepared a splendid musical program, with which the congregation was delighted. The pipe organ was given to the Church by the Philathea Class, of which W. B. Truitt is the teacher, and is a two-manual organ of very lovely tone and workmanship. On Sunday evening, the 15th, the Sunday School and choir had a special Christmas service, consisting of Christmas carols and tableaux—scenes of angels, shepherds, wise men and the nativity. The story of our Saviour's birth was told through songs and through these scenes. On Sunday evening, the 22nd, the choir rendered their Christmas cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem." The congregation is much pleased and very happy with the new organ.

Our sympathy goes out to Bro. and Sister M. J. W. White, Norfolk, Va., over the tragic loss of their son, Wilbur, during the Christmas holidays. Returning to Norfolk from Washington, where he had been engaged for some months, the car in which he was riding collided with a bus, killing young Bro. White almost instantly. Dr. L. E. Smith, his pastor, conducted the funeral from the home in Norfolk December 26th. The deceased leaves a wife and children, besides a heart-broken father and others to mourn his untimely going. Tragedies are always deplorable, but because of the contrast and with the happy expectations of family reunions at Christmas time, they seem more heart-rending and tragic than ever. Young Bro. White was returning home with the highest anticipations of rejoining his family from which his work and engagements had called him the past several weeks, and by no fault or failure of his own, almost in the twinkling of an eye, those hopes were blasted and he goes to join that great family on the eternal shores where there are no tragedies and no heartaches. God bless and comfort the bereaved.

Among the sad and lamentable tragedies of the Christmas season was the death of Russell Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Jones, of Raleigh, N. C., Saturday night, December 21st. Returning to his home late Saturday night from the bank, where he has been a faithful and efficient clerk for seven years, crossing Hillsboro Street, Raleigh, he dodged out of the way of one car only to jump directly in the road of another, whose impact knocked him unconscious, from which unconsciousness he never recovered, dying at the hospital to which he had been carried early Sunday morning. The interment was in the Wake Chapel Cemetery and the funeral was conducted by Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, Raleigh, Monday, 3 P. M., December 23rd. Russell was a fine young man, having served successfully as bank clerk and had studied law, taking the bar and passing successfully for license to practice at the last session of the Supreme Court for the examination of candidates. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the heart-broken and bereaved parents, the brother and sisters, and for those who lament and mourn his going away in the prime of life through this tragic event. The accident was declared to be unavoidable, and was one of those strange and unaccountable turns of the wheel of fortune that brings life to a sudden close and carries one into the great beyond. Truly was David expressing a universal experience when He said, "As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but a step between me and death."

A VISIT TO DANVILLE.

On Sunday afternoon, December 15th, we had the privilege of visiting our Bro. Sorrell at Third Avenue Christian Church. The party was composed of the Carolina quartet of Palm Street Christian Church—A. H. Henshaw, E. Rich, W. E. Wyrick, and R. E. Stevens. We arrived about 5:30, where we found a nice feast awaiting us at Mrs. Corbin's, Mr. Pruitt's, and the pastor's home. After eating and a few moments of rest, we went over to the Church, where we found quite a surprise. I have been reading and hearing of the work there, but had not realized what they were doing. We were shown over the building, and as we entered the new department we found a nice building well equipped for training the young people. Since Bro. Sorrell has been with the people at Danville for a little more than three years, we find he has been able to lead the Church on, not only to a well-equipped building, but a high spirit with great hopes for the future.

They have gone under the new building and dug out a space eight feet deep, eight and one-half feet wide and forty-nine feet long. Here we find room enough for about two hundred beginners and primary scholars. At present they have only four rooms, but have left the building so they can easily convert it into eight rooms. The new edition is equipped with a small-size piano and with folding chairs and other furniture to match. I learned that they have now an equipment that will take care of five hundred scholars and from the looks of conditions, no doubt they will soon need the rooms.

We were very much gratified with the fact that Bro. Sorrell does not allow any contest of any kind to come into the Sunday School or Church, but by special invitation to come to Church by his people. That has been the secret of his success.

Now, a few words about the service. It began promptly at 7:30, with a full house. Bro. Dixon, with his splendid choir, rendered a half-hour's enjoyable song service. The Carolina four gave several selections which were enjoyed by all. Dr. S. T. A. Kent spoke on "Dreams and Visions." Dr. Kent brought a splendid message on the young people having visions. He pointed out that if Bro. Sorrell and his people had not caught a vision the Church would have been no better off today than it was four years ago. Then he further showed that a vision needed to be backed up with prayer, careful planning and ambition. His message was greatly enjoyed by all.

Bro. P. H. Ricketts, the director of the young people's work and assistant pastor, presented the building. Bro. Ricketts stated that a little more than two years ago the Sunday School demanded more room. Then they added a thirty-five-hundred-dollar department, known as the young people's department. Then this past year the Sunday School had grown so the auditorium would not take care of the opening service and not room enough by any means for the classes. Then, on the 5th day of July, they started to build a beginners', primary, and junior department, which cost fifteen hundred dollars. Bro. Ricketts presented this building from the brotherhood of the Church, the men's organization, who promoted this and were able to get it through with the cooperation of the other organizations of the Church and individual help.

Sister Elsie Crawford, one of the workers in the beginners' department, received the building, with words adequate to fit the remarks made by Bro. Ricketts; after which I had the privilege of dedicating this new building.

We are proud of the work that our Danville people are doing, and rejoice with their pastor for the success that God has given him in his work. May God richly bless the work and give them a better year's work than they have just closed.

WINDSOR, VA.

Rev. E. B. White, pastor of the Antioch Christian Church, held his regular quarterly meeting service Sunday morning, December 15th, at 11 o'clock. His text was taken from the ninth chapter of Isaiah. The theme was "Jesus the Wonderful." We had a good attendance, and our congregation is gradually increasing. The members of our Church seem to be co-operating splendidly with our loyal pastor. We believe yet that there is a bright day for Old Antioch, and we are hoping that it may dawn in 1930.

The Young People's Society of Antioch Church held a very enthusiastic meeting Sunday night, December 15th, at the home of Louise Pierce. The pastor, Mr. E. B. White, and family were with them, who helped to carry out a more interesting meeting. There were visitors from Zuni, Mt. Carmel, and Windsor, whom the the society was very glad to have, as it is divided into two groups, one group working against the other, and each visitor counts a certain number of points. A very interesting program was rendered, which seemed to be enjoyed by every one present. Their next meeting will be held at Antioch Church on January 5, 1930. Every one is invited.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING ACQUAINTED WITH CHRIST.

BY JAY WM. BARRETT.

"For they know his voice."—John 10:4.

Of the people, there are two leaders. Jesus Christ, through the Spirit and the Word, is the Leader of those who know Him in the experience of salvation. They know Him as their dear, loving Saviour, kind, gentle, loving and tender in His dealings with them.

They know Him as one who never sleeps, whose eyes are always open to their situation and needs. They know Him as one who is able to deliver in every time of need without regard to what their needs may be. They know nothing is too hard for Him. They know He is a dear, loving Saviour, who never tires of their coming to Him. They know that all power is given unto Him in heaven and on earth. They know Him to be a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother. They know Him as the one who died for them, as the one who rose triumphant over death for them, and as the one who sits at the right hand of God to intercede for them.

Satan, the devil, is the leader of all those who are still rejecting Jesus Christ. The devil has no power to save from sin, neither does he desire to save any one from sin. The great desire of his heart is to damn every soul that has been and may yet be born into this world. He likes to afflict the people, and then make them think God does it. He takes great delight in deceiving his followers. He likes to draw a veil over their faces and so keep them from seeing the real situation. He He likes to deceive them into trouble, and as far away from God as possible, and then laugh up his sleeve, so to speak, at them. He leads them into all the pitfalls he may. He likes to entangle them as the spider does the fly, and then laugh at their terrible situation. He makes his followers believe he is leading them on to success and pleasure, while his only purpose is their everlasting damnation. His followers hear his voice without understanding him and follow him on down, down, down to everlasting despair and ruin. They wake up in hell like the rich man did and plead for mercy, but then it is too late.

God is faithfully warning the people through the Word, the Holy Spirit and the testimony of His saints to flee from the devil and his inducements thrown out everywhere, and come to Jesus for salvation. Come, get acquainted with Him by repenting of their sins and exercising faith in the atoning blood of Jesus Christ. Get acquainted with Christ. Learn to love the pure and good. Join the blood-washed throng as they journey heavenward, following in the footsteps of Jesus.

1. What hinders man from knowing Christ?

(1) The presence of sin in one's life. Sin is as a veil over man's eyes. It is as a mountain rising high between man and his Saviour. Sin is a deep, dense darkness, and so sin is bewildering. Sin may be removed by repentance toward God and faith in Jesus Christ. So the lack of a new heart or of being born from above hinders one from knowing Christ. Man in his natural state does not know the Lord, is not acquainted with Him. So, to become new creatures is an absolute necessity in becoming acquainted with Christ.

(2) Failure to get a clean heart hinders one from knowing Christ. (Matt. 5:8) "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The devil is the father of carnality, and carnality is very much like its father. Carnality, if yielded to, will deceive, will becloud one's spiritual vision so that he cannot see God plainly. Carnality causes one to doubt the Scriptures and to think it just a little bit unwise to take God at His Word. Remove the least and last remains remains of carnality, and nothing will seem so reasonable and right as what the Lord says.

(3) Failure to read the word of God daily, prayerfully, and in perfect faith hinders a man from knowing Christ. When we read the Word prayerfully and in real faith, God talks to us. Then we talk to God in prayer and faith makes it all real and plain to us. By reading the Word, then, God talks to us, and by prayer we talk to Him. Jesus says, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

(4) Failure to talk to God about the things which concern us, hinders acquaintance with God. We should consult the Lord about everything that comes before us to be dealt with. Big or little things, it makes no difference. It is "the little foxes" that spoil the vines. Get Jesus to help you to keep them off, and so become better acquainted with Him.

(5) Listening at men instead of God's word hinders us from being well acquainted with the Lord. Settle it now and forever to hear God's word instead of the word of any man, it matters not who that man may be. It is safe to trust the word, very unsafe to trust men.

2. In what should we know the Lord?

(1) In the salvation of our souls. We should never rest without an experience of salvation in our hearts. Jesus says, "For they know his voice, and a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him." John says, "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

(2) We should know the Lord in the witnessing of His Spirit with our spirit that we are His own. John says, "We know that He abideth in us by the spirit which He hath given us." "Now, if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His."

(3) We should know Him in the experience of sanctification. We know that when we had consecrated all and believed, the altar, Jesus Christ sanctified the gift. Perfect love filled our hearts, and man fear was cast out.

3. As what should we know the Lord?

(1) As our Saviour from sin. We should realize the deliverance. Sin in the heart is like a cloud in our spiritual sky. With our sins all forgiven, the cloud disappears. Known sin in our hearts makes us feel guilty. In our new experience, guilt has passed away. "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. The old life, with its likes and dislikes, has passed away.

(2) We should know Him as our Sanctifier. We met the conditions of his word. We felt the change. Now the Spirit bears witness with our spirit that the work is done.

(3) We should know Him, in the Holy Spirit, as our Teacher and Keeper. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee." As our Teacher, He shows us the Word as it applies to our life. He enables us to apply the Word. He helps us to understand the present and to see much of what lies before us.

(4) We know Him as our Example. Jesus said, "For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow in His footsteps. We have accepted Him as our example, and when we are put to the test He looms up before us as He whom we should follow.

(5) We should know Him as the one who loves us with a pure, unadulterated love. He has proven His love for us over and over again, and being saved we feel His love filling and thrilling our very souls. We are comforted in the experiences of life because we know He loves us. He is our ever-present friend, able, ready and willing to supply all our needs.

(6) We, some of us at least, know Him as the Healer of our bodies. It is the privilege of all of us to know Him as the Healer of our bodies. God said to Moses, "I am the Lord that healeth thee." David said, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy name, who healeth all thy diseases." James says, "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the Church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Now, so far as I know from studying God's word, these promises have never been withdrawn from us. God is still in the business of healing our bodies wherever the conditions of His word are met and the proper faith is exercised. Blessed be his name forever more.

ELEVEN HUNDRED THOUSAND MILLIONS.

This is some sum, as the street urchin would say. It represents the cost of the great war to the French people, as expressed in present-day francs, according to the estimate of M. Louis Dubois. Inasmuch as a franc is worth about four cents in American money, from the last quotations which we have received, this would make the cost approximately forty-four billion dollars. M. Dubois says that this sum is forty-four times the pre-war budget of France, and that it imposes a staggering burden upon the French people. He complains bitterly concerning the failure of the Germans to pay the bill of damages which he thinks they owe and he is also not at all pleased because the United States has not seen fit to make a more satisfactory settlement of the French war debts. M. Dubois is one of the leading French statesmen, was former Minister of Commerce and Industry of his country, and former president of the reparations commission. The Paris Union des Interets Economiques, sixteen place de la Madeleine, is distributing a little booklet entitled "War Debts and Reparations" which has been prepared by this distinguished representative of the French pinot of view. It is a good book for Americans, and Englishmen also, to read with thoughtful attention.

As we see the situation, the pamphlet reflects to an extraordinary degree both the economic and the psychological outcome of war. M. Dubois still hates Germany and wants her to pay for the terrible losses which France has suffered. He does not seem to realize that everybody lost by the great war, that nobody won, and that nobody was entirely responsible for it. Only the abolition of this irrational method of settling international disputes can prevent a repetition of the tragic conditions outlined in this little book.—Christian-Evangelist.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE NEW YEAR.

God has graciously divided time into periods. It is well. The wisdom in this is obvious. It enables mankind to cast up accounts, to reckon with the past, and out of such reckoning take counsel and lay plans for the future. The hours and the days come and go with such rapidity that we fall into routine and forget the whence and the whither. The years being of longer duration, cry out from their ending and from their beginning, "Whither bound? Whence came ye? From what experience in the past will ye profit?" It is well to hear the voice of the New Year and to take counsel, if for no other reason than to see how far through the year we have come, or how far backward we have gone.

Were habits formed that are slowly but surely sapping the strength, absorbing to poor purposes the energy, wasting mental and spiritual fervor and achievement? If so, at the beginning of the year is the best of all good times to prune out the evil growth. This is what the good Book means when it says, "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell."

Has unfriendliness, ill will, animosity toward any one, neighbor or friend, begun to spring up in the heart? Now is the very best of all seasons to take stock of such unwholesome growth and remove it from the life, by confession or petition. Jealousy, envy, hatred, unfriendliness are evil growths which limit the mind and restrict the heart, and cause the soul to shrivel and to shrink. There is no parasite quite so deadly and destructive as that of hatred, as it fastens its tentacles to the human mind and sends its rootlets into soil that was sown with a better growth and intended for a better fruitage.

Were there persuits the past year that made for moral and spiritual achievement, for the betterment of man, the improvement of self, and the glory of God? Then, there is no better time than now to take stock of these, to nurture and to cherish them as virtues which are to be cultivated through the coming year.

This Christian Church of ours has much to be thankful for, and to rejoice over, as achieved the past year, and much also to cultivate during the coming year. Through all the decades of our existence, we have lived, preached, longed for Church union. The past year has seemed something accomplished and brought to happy fruition in that time. The Christian Church and the Congregational Church, so much alike in polity, pursuit and program, have decided in future to pursue their path together, to lay aside the last vestige of division, and with united strength and energy undertake a common task, a united task, for the betterment of the world, for the salvation of souls, the building up of the kingdom of God on earth. To this end, every enterprise of the Church should face the New Year with new determination and new zeal in the power of added strength.

Our CHRISTIAN SUN the past year has carried each week its messages of hope and life and light into thousands of homes, and has reflected or done its utmost to reflect and to interpret the spirit and the fellowship of a people under the leadership of Him who said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "I am the way, the truth and the life."

The Church that follows Him as Leader and lives the life that He reflects and inspires has a strength that will not let it fail, and a hope that will not give way to despair. Through the past year, our people have rallied with loyalty and liberality, with devotion, and with sacrifice, to the needs and the call of their colleges, their orphanage, their missionary appeals and program. All of this should encourage and inspire to more zeal for the Church and a larger liberality in the coming year, for this is, indeed, the work and the will of the Lord.

And then back of all this, and beneath it all, is the Word of God, the will of God as revealed in His Book, as we learn it in our daily reading and meditation. Have we read the Bible and sought its lessons of life and love the past year as we should? Have we begun the day and closed it with the reading of at least a few verses from the Book of books, and with a silent but sincere prayer from the heart that God would enable us to live according to the teachings of this Book and reflect the spirit of Him who gave the Book and who is revealed in the Book? This is fundamental to the life of the Christian, and in taking stock of the past and laying plans for the coming year, we should not disregard the foundations. "Other foundations can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus the Christ." J. O. A.

THE WISE.

There may be many ways of wisdom, but there is one way that none can doubt, and all who love God may pursue. It is the proverbial way. It was already a proverb in Israel when Solomon lived and wrote. "He that winneth souls is wise" (Prov. 12:30). One may not be wise as the world counts wisdom, but that true wisdom which abides and brings joy is reflected in this act. He that winneth souls is wise. One may do many things well and yet not be wise. One may build a fortune, grow very rich, be possessed of abundance of this world's goods, and yet be a fool. The world is often mistaken in its judgment and is deceived as to men, but God is not deceived, and His Book reveals the way of true wisdom. It even reveals the way of the beginning of wisdom. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge"; that knowledge which is true wisdom. It also marks the way to the achievement of wisdom. This is the purpose of all our education and learning, of our scholarship and training, of our movements and motives, that of winning souls.

Dr. Stanley High has recently taken a trip around the world, being most of all interested in world betterment, and the progress of mankind toward righteousness and truth. Out of his visit, He asks this question through the press which has heralded it far and wide: "Will foreign missions die with this generation?" Dr. High declares that foreign missions will die if looked upon as a benevolence, a charity, or a philanthropy. He declares that foreign missions began as an evangelistic enterprise, a soul-winning task, and unless the enterprise can be kept to this as its main objective, then death must come to the enterprise. Missions may have a wide program of benevolent activities, social uplift and the rest, but if missions are to live and have their place in the program of the Church, they must be as they were from the beginning—evangelistic. They must keep ever to the fore, and at the heart of the activities of the Church, the one supreme objective, that of winning souls in the name of the Lord through His redeeming and lifting power.

Dr. High feels that we have tempered our religion, in the homeland, with our benevolent and philanthropic activities; have cooled our ardor and anxiety for the winning of souls with an intellectual substitute and a mental antidote. We are not striking deep enough at the heart of things, and are not keeping to the fore the words of the proverb, "He that winneth souls is wise." We wish CHRISTIAN SUN readers to get the point of view of this man of world-wide acquaintance, and so we quote the heart of his statement from a recent communication to the New York Christian Herald.

"Foreign missions began as an evangelistic enterprise. It grew because it remained evangelistic. There was, at least, one chief thing in common between the Haystack Prayer Meeting on the Williams College campus in 1806, where North American missions had their beginning, and the gathering of the Mount Hermon Hundred, in 1886, where they received their greatest impetus. Both were prayer meetings. That is more than an incidental fact. No one thought of foreign missions save in fundamentally evangelical terms. The enterprise was the agent of the prayer meetings and the altars of Protestantism. The prerequisite to an aroused missionary zeal in a Church was a religious revival.

"Latterly this has greatly changed. One doesn't rely on prayer meetings these days to arouse the interest of students in foreign missions. Instead we have discussion groups: very fine discussion groups with a blackboard, an enormous number of questions and every body taking part in the debate. The Mount Hermon Hundred had Dwight L. Moody for their leader. Today the demand seems to be, not for a leader, but a referee. It's quite likely, at any rate, that Dwight L. Moody wouldn't be so popular. He was too sure. His faith didn't end in a question mark.

"Now, this vast dialectic with which we have been visited has probably served some Christian purpose. It has at least adapted the Christian terminology to the jargon of our times and at the most indicated that the case for Christianity can be stated without violence to our present scientific temper. But in its fundamental task I believe our effort at forensic evangelization has failed. It may have established men's belief in the intellectual respectability of Christianity. I doubt if it has re-established their faith.

"All this has affected foreign missions. Under the spell of the question-mark mentality, we have seldom gone about it to convert the doubter. Rather, we have seemed to assure him that foreign missions would do no violence to his doubts. We haven't done this in so many words, of course. But we have spent a lot of time over his questions. And much of this time, unquestionably, was well spent in that way. But having done our best with his arguments, we have still found ourselves with only a lukewarm individual on our hands. The gift we got was only about half what we expected; the decision we hoped for was only tentatively made.

"And we seemed to forget entirely that real zeal for foreign missions—or for Christian work of any sort—never had its source in anything other than a religious; that is, a down-to-the-very-bottom, life-changing experience.

"As a result, foreign missions, from having been recognized and supported as an agency of spiritual regeneration, have become widely regarded as merely a church-supported philanthropy. As a philanthropy they are, I believe, doomed to failure and extinction, for it will lack the power either to give them success in the field or to win support at home. A good many people who have been and might be enlisted in a world enterprise that was dynamically religious will simply not give their aid to one that is presented to them as an ecclesiastical competitor of State and privately supported charities.

"As I have already indicated, the foreign missionary enterprise—in operation on the field—remains fundamentally evangelistic. But very often it is not as an evangelistic enterprise that it is described here at home, but rather as a healing or an educational or a social service."

We are not to think of foreign missions as an education or social service, but as a service in the name of our Lord and to His glory that, through His redeeming and lifting love and life, souls may be won, redeemed, saved. This is the work of foreign missions and the work of the evangelist at home. It is well enough to have our aids, but it is fatal to substitute the fruit for the tree or the shadow for the substance. J. O. A.

A CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM.

While it is all fresh in our minds, it is well to emphasize again the eternal saying of the Lord's prophet, "And a little child shall lead them." As one thinks of the Christmas festivities just past, of the joyous scenes about the Christmas tree, of the stuffed stockings beside the fireplace, of the toys and the joyous children everywhere—one realizes that Christmas is the child's holiday, and the child's very own time. And that is why it is all so very happy and complete. Grown people are too serious and too full of cares and responsibilities to put on a real festive occasion. Maturity and age yield so readily to the stern and stubborn things of life; childhood so readily to the happy, joyous and glorious things of life. The children have just carried us through a glorious season. We grown-ups followed along and looked on and tried to do our bit. But we could not reach it. The children had to do that. Theirs is the day; theirs is the time; theirs is the season.

Christmas is their very own, and what the rest of us do is merely in imitation of what the children are doing and of the direction in which they are leading us. There are old "sober-sides" and "wise-acres" who would try to make us believe there is no Santa Claus. The simple truth is that the most real and the most everlasting, the most perennial of all personages is Santa Claus. He belongs to the children, and the children belong to him. They show us how to put on and to carry out a real holiday, a real festive occasion—an occasion of merriment and joy and gladness, of giving and receiving, of going and coming. "Verily, a little child shall lead them."

And it is the teaching and the contribution of our Lord to earth. He came to bring to the hearts of men that peace that passeth all understanding, even the peace, the joy, the forgiveness and the friendship of youth. He is working away in the world, and the spirit of sincere, glorious childhood is leading on, and through such leadership we shall be brought, the world shall be brought, to a glorious day of peace and of forgiveness and of good will, and He shall come again to claim His own and be with them in blessings and in beatitudes forever. J. O. A.

RELIGIOUS vs. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

It is necessary to distinguish these two terms. Religious education is a generic term and may be thought of as content or as a process. Christian education, on the other hand, is a specific term, and it, too, may be conceived as content and as process.

I have elsewhere defined these two terms as follows:

(1) Viewed as content, religious education is the theory and the practice of teaching religion. From the same standpoint, Christian education is the theory and practice of teaching the Christian religion.

(2) Viewed from the standpoint of process, religious education is the process by which we learn how to live with and for each other and unto God. Christian education from the same standpoint would be defined as the process by which we live with and for each other and unto God as revealed in Jesus Christ, and as interpreted by the Holy Spirit.

From these considerations, it is evident that man can be religious without being Christian. He can be religious without being an adherent of any particular religion. He may have an awesome and reverential attitude toward what has been called the cosmic energy of the universe. This would make him religious because he recognizes a power outside himself and higher than himself that has determinative influence over his life and his destiny, and to which he accords reverence and respect.

In order to be a Christian, however, a man must be religious in the sense that Jesus Christ was religious, in the sense that he regarded God as Father, and man as brother; in the sense that he should make the revealed Word of God a means of understanding His will and mind and purpose concerning his individual life and destiny as well as concerning the life and destiny of all men every where. And so a man cannot be Christian without being religious.

Some Christian thinkers have in these latter days, because of the confusion of meaning between these two terms, coined a new term. We find them speaking of "Christian religious education," by which they mean the process and method fo religious education expressed in terms of the Christian idealism and revelation.

State institutions of public learning can teach religious education without violating the principle of the separation of the Church and the State, but they cannot teach Christian education without violating this principle. These institutions cannot teach Christian education in the sense that they should be anxious to make their students adherents of the Christian religion and to bring them into active discipleship of Christ. Christian colleges, however, are a failure unless they are able to accomplish these purposes in the lives of their students. W. A. H.

UNIVERSAL WEEK OF PRAYER.

In accordance with a custom running back many decades, the first full week in January—January 5th to 11th—is to be observed as the "Universal Week of Prayer." The Federal Council of the Churches in America, in collaboration with the British section of the World's Evangelical Alliance, has issued a series of topics and suggestions for prayer, which will be circulated throughout all English-speaking lands.

The topics all center around some aspect of Christian fellowship and unity. The specific topics for the successive days, beginning on Monday, January 6th, are as follows:

Monday—"Thanksgiving and Confession."
Tuesday—"The Church Universal."
Wednesday—"International Friendship and Co-operation."
Thursday—"Foreign Missions."
Friday—"Family, School and University Life."
Saturday—"Home Missions."

The call for the observance of this period of prayer says:

"The year 1930 will be significant beyond any year in the recent history of the Church. Most of the great communions of our country are uniting to observe it as the nineteen hundredth anniversary of Pentecost. By appointing bishops and other leaders, lay and clerical, and by the passing of most urgent resolutions at conferences, synods and assemblies, the Churches have declared their purpose to make this year a year of waiting before the Lord for the coming of the same power which fell upon the disciples. Each communion will do this according to its own plan and method, but may we not urge that the vital thing that shall be uppermost in the thought of the Church shall be waiting before God until the coming of the Holy Spirit shall be a reality in each individual life. If the coming of the Holy Spirit was a necessity for the birth of the Church, is it not a necessity for its continued life?"

While we shall adopt in general the program which has been suggested for Churches throughout the world, a program looking toward Christian unity everywhere, can we not insist upon the fact that, as at the first Pentecost, the common purpose of the enduement of power which Jesus said should come through the Holy Spirit may bring us into one accord? Would anything be more desirable than that, from every Church or assembly gathered for the week of prayer, the same message should be sent out to the world as that which told the story of the first Pentecost: "They were all with one accord in one place, and suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing, mighty wind, and it filled the house where they were sitting, and there appeared unto them cloven tongues as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

As a preliminary to this baptism of power, it is recorded "They all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication." It is to this fact, which was the one essential to the glorious equipment which gave the Church its power, that the week of prayer at the opening of the New Year calls attention. The machinery of the Church would seem to be adequate. Its methods and plans are multiplied on every side, but the greater the machinery the greater is the need for power, and this must come not in mass movements, but by the surrender of the individual soul, waiting before God for a personal equipment.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

After Christmas, man returns to the every-day life in housekeeping, school, business, Sunday School and Church. Christmas places a new emphasis on the memory of the Bethlehem Babe, and the centuries that have kept alive and spread that historic event. It is said that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Mary's Baby put new spirit into the heart of mankind, and childhood and parenthood share in the blessings brought to the world through that simple manger in Bethlehem.

Angels came that night from heaven singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The shepherds went in haste and found Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger. Later, the wise men came from the East, fell down and worshiped the Babe and "presented unto Him gifts—gold, frankincense, and myrrh." Three classes of beings honored Jesus—angels, shepherds, wise men. From that day to this, Jesus has been the center of attraction for all grades of people. The wise people, the working people, and even angels may gather around this Saviour of the world. None are too high or too great to come to Jesus, and none are too low to bring their faith and their love to Him.

Babyhood and childhood have a new place in the home, the Church, and the public mind since Jesus came into the world. Jesus came out of a humble home to teach the world that the poor have equal chance with the rich in life. It is not where we came from, but where we go to that determines our value. The log cabin may contain a President as truly as a royal palace a king. The country Sunday School may furnish a great preacher as well as the fine city Church. Man looks on the outward, but God looks at the heart. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

The Christmas tree, the stockings filled with Christmas presents, the beautiful Christmas cards, the sumptuous meals, the kind words, the friendly visits, and family reunions, all came from that Babe in the manger nineteen hundred and twenty-nine years ago. That which is good endures. Centuries add to the blessings brought to man through the Christ-Child.

After Christmas is the test of grateful hearts. What will the children who enjoyed the Sunday School Christmas entertainment, fruits and candies, do about going regularly to Sunday School through the New Year? What will the grown people who enjoyed Christmas with the children do about remaining after Sunday School for Church in the New Year? Not how much you enjoyed Christmas, but what you do after Christmas will write your history for 1930. "Take my life, and let it be consecrated, Lord, to Thee." Jesus loves us all the year; yea, all the years! So let us serve Him faithfully till next Christmas, and we will enjoy it more.

ELON LETTER.

A CHRISTIAN CREED FOR THE NEW YEAR.

A considerable amount of loose thinking and loose writing is evident in the world today, respecting the fundamental religious attitudes that should characterize men in their personal and social lives. We find articles in religious periodicals and books purporting to teach the Christian religion which are really not concerned about Christianity at all, but about a sort of generalized religious attitude. A great many people are likely to be misled by these writers and thinkers.

At the beginning of the New Year it is well for us to consider what are the real essence, the real abiding fundamental principles upon which Christianity rests. There will be a wide difference of opinion as to details and specifications to be included in the interpretation of these abiding principles of our religion, but it is doubtful if a man can be said to enjoy the possession of a Christian creed of living unless in his thinking and in his conscious efforts at practice he embodies the following tenets or beliefs:

1. God the Father is the loving spiritual parent of the human race and the Creator of the physical world.

2. God the Son is Christ Jesus, revealing His Father as the loving spiritual personality He is, and through this revelation He is constantly and eternally the Redeemer of man.

3. God the Holy Spirit is present in His world and the ever-present interpreter of the divine love and thought to the human heart.

4. Man is the child of God, created in His own spiritual image, and brother to every other child of God in all the world, and under obligation to do all that may become the child of such a Father to express his brotherhood in helpful living.

5. This present world is God's handiwork, meant to be an arena to develop the powers and make happy the life of God's children.

6. The aim of this present life is to make the social order in all its individual units, as also in all its organizations and institutions, correspond with the will of God for men. Our purpose as God's children should be to transform this world into the kingdom of God.

7. Human destiny is comprehended in the hope that God's children will so live in this present world that they will be qualified to enter into the further joys of their Maker when the spirit which man essentially is has been released from this tenement of the body by the transition which we call, for the lack of a better term, death.

8. The Bible contains God's Word. He has spoken in all ages to all who would hear. He is speaking today, chiefly through His Scriptures. Some have heard more perfectly than others. Their messages are in our Christian Bible, which contains for us all the rule of faith and practice we shall ever need, subject to the Holy Spirit's interpretation. This creed we are now writing is useless, since it is all contained in our true creed, the Bible.

9. The Church is the organized institution through which the followers of Christ undertake to express His will in the world. Jesus is the Head of the Church. The Church is His bride.

10. They are entitled to the fellowship of the Christian Church and to membership in the kingdom of God, who exhibit in their lives vital piety fruiting in Christian character. No other test of Church membership can rightfully be employed to exclude any professing follower of Christ from fellowship in the Church, the body of Christ.

11. And every citizen of the kingdom of God has the duty and privilege, as well as the right, to be his own interpreter of God's will and purpose and plan. The liberty of conscience and the right of private judgment can never be abridged. They are the inherent right and duty of each and of all, and should be cheerfully and tolerantly accorded to each by all, always recognizing the fact that the chief value of the Christian way is found in the life we live rather than in the creed we profess or the theological system to which we subscribe.

Let me wish all the readers of the Elon Letter a Happy New Year, and let me express the further wish that every reader will, out of these abiding principles, evolve his practical creed of living, so that 1930 shall be crowned with goodness and happiness and satisfying achievement in fruitful living.

VALLEY LETTER.

I think the past fall has been one of the busiest I have ever had. I got into revival meetings as soon after Conference as I could get other necessary work out of the way, and kept constantly at the job, scarcely missing a night except while attending the General Convention, at Piqua, Ohio, until real winter weather caused me to close down before I was quite ready, about the first of December.

My first meeting was at Bethel, where we had a good meeting with good attendance, nine conversions and eleven additions to the Church.

The second meeting was at Leaksville. Here we struck a busy time among the farmers, and the attendance was not quite as good as usual, except on Sunday nights. Rev. R. A. Whitten, from Elon College, was with me and did the preaching, and did it well. The people soon became very fond of him and will long have a very warm place in their hearts for him. There were three conversions and two additions to the Church here.

The third meeting was at Timber Ridge. Bro. Whitten was with me here part of the time. The people liked him fine, both as a preacher and as a man. He made many friends there who will gladly welcome him back at any time. There was one conversion and three additions to the Church.

Next I joined with the Methodist pastor at Capon Bridge, W. Va., Rev. J. C. Spindler, in a union evangelistic effort at Timber Mountain and surrounding community. We started in with high hopes of seeing a real religious awakening in the entire community, but severe winter weather interfered to such an extent that we decided to close until spring.

It was my privilege to be with Dry Run and Timber Ridge in their Christmas services this year. Both rendered fine programs to large audiences. There is a splendid array of young talent at each place, which, if properly cared for, will mean much to the Church and the kingdom in days to come.

I am hoping now to enjoy a few weeks of rest and study at home between Sundays and between funerals and the many other extra duties that come along in my work, and of these there has been an unusual number this fall.

I shall have several more meetings to hold when spring opens up.

Life insurance outstanding among American citizens now amounts to approximately $100,000,000,000, according to figures given out by the Life Insurance Presidents' Association. This amount is said to be nine times the insurance outstanding in Great Britain. During the year 1928 the huge sum of $18,218,000,000 in new policies was written. Life policies now in force are more than double the total of 1922.

GOSPEL LIBERTY.

(The following, from The Congregationalist, Boston, Mass., is beautiful in spirit, and is of personal interest to SUN readers.)

Quite apart from its personal reference—which it would be a mere pose to pretend is not pleasing, even if it be somewhat embarrassing both in the extravagance of its reference to the past and in the ideal that it creates for the future—the comment of the Christian Century on the coming merger of The Congregationalist and The Herald of Gospel Liberty is noteworthy. Our contemporary says editorially in its issue of December 11th, under the heading, "Church Union Enters the Periodical Field":

"The unity of Christians would seem to be making appreciable progress when the time comes that two Church weeklies of long and illustrious lineage can be united. But the union of the Christian and Congregational Churches, now in process of consummation, has produced the union of two of the best-known religious journals in the country—The Congregationalist and The Herald of Gospel Liberty. The combination is to go into effect on March 1st, and the rest of the Church press will watch with keen attention as Dr. William E. Gilroy, after these years of brilliant editing of The Congregationalist, presents to the public the new paper, with its picturesque title of The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty. There will be no hesitation in prophesying for the new paper, under Dr. Gilroy's editorship, a greater influence than the two papers which have formed it ever exerted in the days of their separate existence. And that is saying something! It is impossible in contemplating this approaching union not to reflect on the joy that it would give to the soul of the man whose name is most intimately connected with the recent history of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dr. Alva Martin Kerr. The note which Dr. Kerr struck oftenest, the cause to which he committed his paper most deeply, was the necessity for the union of Christians. It is only a few months since Dr. Kerr passed on, and his Church and those responsible for the policy of his beloved paper must still have heard the echoes of his voice very clearly when they decided to take the advance step toward unity."

In thanking the Christian Century for this encouraging expression of personal confidence, we would record our hearty acceptance of its fine statement concerning the implications of the merger, which is no longer merely proposed, but has now been actually determined. A telegram from Hermon Eldredge, managing editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, received while the last issue of The Congregationalist was in the press, announced the action of the Board of the Christian Church, formally approving of the merger proposals, already endorsed by the administration committee of the Congregational Publishing Society.

Two things impress us in connection with this merger, shortly to be consummated: First, the privilege of carrying on the work of Christian idealism which is associated in our minds with that heroic and admirable soul, the late Dr. Alva Martin Kerr—a Christian idealism expressed likewise in the devoted and sacrificial service of the group of Christian leaders who have maintained The Herald of Gospel Liberty, chiefly by honorary service, since Dr. Kerr's death; and second, though the new name, The Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, may be somewhat cumbersome, we welcome its vital significance, particularly at a time when Congregationalists need to be reminded of the historic and spiritual realities underlying their professed faith. The Congregationalist is, or ought to be, the organ of Gospel Liberty, and it is all to the good to make the emphasis vital. The significance of the new name ought to be more than a formal incorporation of the former name of a merged paper. It ought to stand for a deep reality of vision and conviction.

At the very time this name was being decided upon, the daily papers were full of the action of Bishop Manning in prohibiting in a Christian Church the performance of a Christian function by one of the best-known and most highly honored ministers in the land. Judge that action from the most mitigating standpoint possible, and it still represents something far short of gospel liberty—in fact, it stands as the very antithesis of that gospel liberty, or liberty of prophesying, which our Congregational forbears, even as those of our Christian brethren, found it their chief mission to declare. Gospel liberty is a fine phrase. The times are in need of it. It expresses what has been for years our deepest end and purpose.

We rejoice in the prospect of being able more pointedly to say so; and if the prospective new name be the union of two names, already somewhat long and cumbersome, with tempting suggestions of the pedantic, let it be ours to uphold the ideal that both names express with the simplicity and clearness of the ideal itself. Thus may we give to the name a new vitality and application in an age that is none too keen in its spiritual appreciations and distinctions.

ALL THE "IFS."

"If when I was a lad, I had taken more interest in my school work, I might have been a successful man. As it is—" His shrug placed him in mediocrity.

"If I had taken one-half the chances life has offered me," she reflected. "If . . . if . . . It's odd, isn't it, how about the middle thirties all those one-time 'ifs' begin to clamor?"

"They're like bells sounding in the distance," he nodded. "Say like that sound behind us along the valley."

A Church has chimed the hour in a mile-away village. The spire could be seen dimly etched against the skyline. The sound of the bell's striking came to them like some approach of time, sandal-footed, half-muted.

"One wonders," she said, "what happens to all those 'ifs,' those 'might-have-beens' in our lives. Are they debris merely? Litter on the path of life?"

"All the 'ifs.'" His voice fell on a minor key, lifted presently to a higher note. "Perhaps they're not debris—nothing is that in life, I suppose. Perhaps those 'ifs' are some part of the main fabric—little strands in the stuff of things. Our regrets play some part in today's symphony for all of us: those 'ifs,' those 'might-have-beens.'"

They looked back again along the valley-way they had walked. Evening was filling it deftly with half lights, shot through with the sun's crimsoned setting. All that lay behind was mystic in this afterglow.

"They're rather pathetic, those lost 'ifs,'" she said. "Little lost things, homeless, unpossessed!" She added presently: "Life's wonderful, isn't it? When one looks back, it's the negative as well as the positive that counts—all the negations as well as the affirmations."

"I've a fancy," he said, "that in the beyond we'll look back and see the 'ifs' and 'might-have-beens' in right proportion."

"As if," she said quickly, "there'll be some fold where those straying 'ifs' of life can at last be shepherded."—A., N., in Christian World.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT OF MISS ADAMS.

(Below is the annual report of Miss Victoria Adams to our Mission Board. It will reveal to Sun readers something of the busy and fruitful life of a missionary. Miss Adams, a graduate of Elon College and known to many Sun readers, is proving to be one of the most loyal, useful, popular and beloved missionaries on the field. The consecration and enthusiasm she carries into her great work are inspiring.—J.O.A.)

It does not seem possible that it is a year ago—just the day after I mailed my last annual report—that the terrible cyclone struck this island, destroying so much property and leaving the people more destitute than they had been for many years. A full report of the relief work which our mission conducted has been given at another time. Let me mention just briefly that the members of our Church at home responded wonderfully. I have received 250 boxes of clothing, each averaging from 80 to 100 pieces, and $68 in money. With these supplies, we aided the members of our Churches and also a great many who are not connected with our Church. It was a comfort to be able to give the suffering people articles of clothing which they needed so badly.

Some of the clothing sent in the boxes was not practicable for the cyclone victims, but was in very good condition. This we saved, and at the suggestion of some of our members sold it for a very nominal price. We have a fund to date of $120, and our club girls and some of the other members are working hard to increase the sum, hoping to use it to build a small chapel in one of our country points. I shall not take more time to tell of this work, but I do wish to thank all of our Church organizations for their splendid Christian co-operation in helping this field so generously in the time of great need. I assure you that it was appreciated.

My regular work has been mostly among the children and young people of our Church. As we know, the young people are the hope of the universal Church, and the leaders of civilization tomorrow. We expect much of them; therefore, we must give them our best attention. I have given them practically all of my time, trying to help them build up a strong and effective program in their organizations.

I have been responsible for the following work in our Ponce Church: Junior Endeavor, Intermediate Endeavor, girls' club, intermediate department in the Sunday School, Sunday School class, English class during the week, Christmas entertainments and programs, and the daily vacation Bible school.

My Junior Endeavor group has been a great inspiration. We have a membership of sixty-two little folks, twenty-four of them being active. The society has carried on a complete program of Junior Endeavor activity. We have given six special programs, and two public programs, inviting the parents to meet with us. The boys and girls have learned fifteen Bible stories, ten nature stories, three psalms, fifty chosen Bible verses, and the life and some interesting stories of Washington and Lincoln. Seven of this group have earned their Bible by their splendid memory work. Four of the older members will next month receive their Junior Endeavor diploma and enter our intermediate society.

Aside from these regular activities, our juniors have given a special musical number in Sunday School almost every Sunday morning. Once a week I have met with them, with the help of little Ines, and practiced their special hymns. We have had monthly socials and three picnics, have played together and worked together happily for the past year. Oh, I must not forget to tell you that this group has also helped the Church by contributing to the Church expenses $1 a month.

The Intermediate Endeavor has also enjoyed a good year. I have helped them make their weekly programs and have aided in all their activities. We have lost a large number of our best members through removal from Ponce. The group has co-operated in Church activities and has called with Dona Delfina or me, certain ones helping each week. The intermediate department of the Sunday School is not organized or given proper attention because of lack of a place to meet and efficient teachers. However, there are three classes just starting the graded lessons. Oh, how I wish that our Ponce Church had a community house to meet the requirements of our different departments. I shall live in hope of seeing this need realized some day on our field. With faith we shall receive all things.

My girls' club, which has met weekly at my home for the past two years, has accomplished a great work. The girls helped a great deal during the cyclone period. For six weeks they met once a week and sewed, making clothing for the boys and girls in the cyclone district. Our special program has been the study and practice of the domestic arts, trying to improve conditions in the homes. We have enjoyed a series of talks on womanhood by various women leaders in Ponce. The main purpose of our program has been to develop an appreciation of a well-balanced Christian life, including the recreational side as well as the spiritual. Hence, we have managed to have one social every two months, and picnics and hikes. This group has tried to create a real friendship circle with various girls in our Churches in the States, carrying on correspondence with them and sending them our handwork to sell for us. Now we have eight dollars in our fund. We want to increase it and use it for educational work, helping some of our own members with their elementary education. These girls have certainly lived up to their names—"Always Faithful."

Last year as I visited various homes I found a good many of our little folk had failed in English at the public school. Therefore, I began a class in the Church twice a week to help these boys and girls with their English, and certainly enjoyed the two hours spent with them.

Besides the above work, and the daily vacation Bible schools which have been reported elsewhere, I have made 950 home visits among our Church folk, as well as the public schools and hospitals, and have helped Rev. Ojeda in his work at Clausell Chapel through program planning, visiting and attending services.

On this island we are very interested in union work. I have co-operated in the work of other groups of young people whenever possible. There is a great need for Christian recreational life, so I have organized a girls' athletic club for the girls of all the evangelical Churches and any others who wish to join. We have not been able to do much as yet, because of the rainy season, but are hoping to get started next month. As it is impossible to play outdoors, I have asked the public school director to allow us to use the grammar school gymnasium. Also I have had responsibility in the Loyal Temperance Legion of this island, which has taken a great deal of time.

As a whole, we have had a very good year of work, and I have been happy in spite of any hardships or handicaps. I have been learning the language little by little, and hope to take a special course to improve my language in the near future. It does not seem possible that I shall return for my furlough in the coming year. I am happy and yet sad, for I have learned to love these people dearly and would hate to part from them.

I must not forget to say that I am very sorry to see our beloved Pastor Ojeda leave our mission, as he has given his best service at our different points during the last nine years. I have enjoyed working with him at our Ponce Church, and he has helped me greatly in learning to know his people and the language. Our prayers will go with him and his dear family, and we wish him success in his new work.

I wish to thank again all our Church people in the States for their splendid co-operation and the cheerful letters and help given me during these past two years. I need your daily prayers, that God may give me strength for more work. I can do all things through Christ, who gives me the strength and courage.

VICTORIA ADAMS.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR JANUARY.

Woman's Societies.

Theme: "Prayer and Praise."

"For which of you by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature?"

Song. Prayer. Business.

1. Devotional period—the fourth pillar—development.
2. Current news.
3. Reading, "Two Prayers."
4. Heart-to-heart message.
5. Story, "His Christ in Gethsemane."

Suggestions:

1. The fourth pillar is development. The leaflet states: "Stewardship demands development. We must grow in all of the things that go to make a full-rounded Christian. And we cannot grow by our own efforts, "for which of you, by taking thought, can add one cubit to his stature?' When we as Christians recognize the inadequacy of all human resources and cast ourselves utterly upon God, we may be assured that rising from our knees there will be growth and joy and victory."

This is the first month of 1930. The air is atingle with prayer currents. Everywhere men and women are assembling to devote a week to voicing together their prayer and praise to our Heavenly Father. Men and women everywhere will drop their busy tasks or will side-track them for the week of prayer when, together with ethor members of his family, they will enjoy sweet quiet and communion with him.

In our missionary society we shall sing, "Take Time to Be Holy," and let every one of us resolve, "As for me and my house, we will take time to be holy in this blessed new year, 1930." And, more than that, let us resolve to develop in spiritual power.

Young People's Societies.

Is our religion worth sharing?

Purpose: To take a new view of our Christianity and to find out whether the kind we are living is worth sharing.

Program:

1. Hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy." Lord's Prayer. Scripture, 1 Cor. 13 (by memory, if possible). Hymn, "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

2. Project committee report.
3. Leader's introduction.
4. Two illustrations.
5. One aspect of America.
6. Our forms.
7. Questions.
8. Meditation.
9. Benediction.

Willing Workers and Juniors.

Theme: "Making Promises."

Quiet music, "Just as I Am."

Call to worship. Trust ye in the Lord forever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

Response. O Lord, Thou art my God: I will exalt Thee, I will praise Thy name; for Thou hast done wonderful things.

Song, "Can a Little Child Like Me" (change "Little Child" to "Junior Boy" or "Junior Girl," the other group singing the last half of the verse as a response).

Prayer, Psa. 19:14.

Offering (use response given last month).

Continue along the same line as laid down for the last two months, but widening the field. We have talked of our own local Church, and of our denominational work, as we strive to carry out the will of God and our Lord's command. Where have we gone with our message? Japan? Porto Rico? Any other places? Yes, this year we have missionaries in the Philippines. Tell of Rev. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, who have gone out from our Norfolk, Va., Church. While they have gone under the Congregational Church, we have a share in supporting them, as part of our money this year will go to the Philippines.

Story. Read the story from the foreign mission study book, "The Jewels the Giant Dropped" (75c in paper).

Handwork. Secure the picture map of the Philippines (50c in paper), and let the Junior begin now to fill it in with the pictures they have colored. Children under ten will like to work on the Philippine picture sheetpasting pictures in their notebooks, etc. (25c in paper). You will, of course, wish to participate in the sending of treasure chests to the Philippines. Watch your Church papers for information.

Closing song.

Benediction.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson I—January 5, 1930.

Childhood of Jesus.

Golden Text: "Thou shalt call His name Jesus; for it is He that shall save His people from their sins."—Matt. 1:21.

Lesson: Matt. 1:1-2:23.

Six months, half a year, in the gospel of Matthew! What a splendid opportunity to make a constructive and thorough study of that gospel! What a splendid opportunity to come to a better knowledge of the life of Jesus and a better understanding of His teachings! What a splendid opportunity to develop a richer spiritual life, and to deepen personal consecration! This is the first Sunday of the New Year. Let us all resolve that we will try to be a little more faithful in our lesson preparation and a little more earnest in our efforts to live as well as to teach the truths in this gospel of Matthew.

A Few Facts About the Gospel of Matthew.

Inasmuch as we are to study Matthew's gospel for six months, it might be helpful to state briefly a few facts about this gospel. The gospel of Matthew, or the gospel according to Matthew as the title really is, means the "good news," as it was recorded by Matthew. The author was a Jew, a converted tax-collector or publican, sometimes called Levi, a man evidently of ability, and one of the twelve disciples or apostles. The purpose of Matthew's gospel, put in a few words, is "to show or to prove that Jesus is the true Messiah of the Jews. Matthew wrote primarily to and for the Jews, and a favorite expression of his is "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken through the prophets." The contents of the book, briefly stated, are reports of the deeds and discourses of Jesus. Matthew, like Luke, includes a number of parables. Some of the characteristics of the gospel are the frequent use of the term "the kingdom of heaven," the arrangement of the material by subjects rather than in a chronological way, the emphasis upon the universal aspect of the gospel, and the missionary spirit. It would be an excellent thing if teachers and pupils would get a good commentary or read a good introduction to the gospel of Matthew. To know why the book was written and what it contains would help so much in the interpretation of the successive lessons for the next two quarters. There are tremendous possibilities in these twenty-eight chapters to be discussed the next twenty-six Sundays.

Today's Lesson.

Today's lesson deals with the childhood of Jesus and has as its background the first and second chapters of Matthew. The first chapter is concerned with the long genealogical table which makes more or less dry reading to moderns, but which has a tremendous spiritual significance, in that it traces the descent of Jesus from David, and bears witness to the fulfillment of prophecy which had foretold the coming of such a one. The remainder of the chapter is concerned with an account of the angel's appearance to Joseph, who was told to take Mary for his wife, being assured that the events which had perplexed him were the expression of the purpose of God in sending into the world the one who should save His people from their sins, and who should be called Jesus. It is rather interesting to note that Matthew devotes only one verse to the birth of Jesus. Because the birth of Jesus was the theme of the Christmas lesson, it will not be repeated here. The key verse in the entire first chapter of Matthew, and indeed of the whole book, is the twenty-first verse, "Thou shalt call His name Jesus; for He shall save His people from their sins." Jesus Christ is the world's Saviour. He came to redeem men from the penalty and the power of sin. History and the experience of men are increasingly hearing testimony that He does have power to save unto the uttermost them that come unto God by Him.

Some Teaching Points.

Instead of giving an exposition of the second chapter, suggestive teaching points will be listed, points which have as their background certain verses in that second chapter.

1. They that are truly wise will seek Jesus Christ to worship Him.

2. The wise men, it must be remembered, represented the Gentile world. The gospel is universal in its appeal and in its scope.

3. There are certain persons and certain interests that resent the intrusion of Christ. They are troubled when they hear that He is about to come or has come into their world.

4. Small, out-of-the-way places have given the world its great men.

5. Those who, in the spirit of moral earnestness, set out to follow such light as they have, will eventually come to Light.

6. It is from the East that the great world religions have come—Judaism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Christianity.

7. Humble parents, like humble places, have given to the world its great men.

8. The fact that the wise men found a "young child" suggests the fact that God enters into human life in simple, unostentatious, but intimate ways.

9. Those who would truly worship must also open their treasures unto God.

10. Those who give heed to the inner voice will be led aright.

11. Those who are God's "anointed" have no claim to special privilege. Joseph had to flee to Egypt to save the Christ Child.

12. Godly parents and wholesome home influence is more potent than environment. Jesus spent His boyhood in Nazareth.

13. Those who find Christ will rejoice with exceeding great joy.

Lesson II—January 12, 1930.

Baptism and Temptation of Jesus.

Golden Text: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—Matt. 3:17.

Lesson: Matt. 3:1-4:11.

A new figure had loomed up in the religious life of the Jewish people. A strange, gaunt, scantily clad, and sparingly fed man had emerged from his hermit-like life and had begun to preach in the "wilderness"; that is, in the savage and desolate land immediately west of the Red Sea. In spite of the fact that he kept away from the cities and spoke in the out-of-the-way places, he soon got a hearing, for there was a moral vigor about the man, and a directness about his message that caused great crowds to go out to hear him. John the Baptist did not mince words. He did not trim down his message. He was a second Elijah, a stern, fearless, outspoken man of God, speaking the truth, let it hit whom it might.

The burden of John's preaching was repentance. He insisted upon a change of mind and a change of life. Repentance for John meant more than sentimental sorrow for wrong-doing; it meant the fruitage of a new life. "Bring forth, therefore, fruits—an amendment of life—worthy of repentance," said John. And when those who heard him asked him just what he meant, he promptly told them in terms of their every-day lives. He showed the utmost contempt for the Pharisees and the Sadducees, the so-called religious leaders of his day, preening themselves in their self-righteousness, and he told them that it was folly for them to trust in the fact that they were "the sons of Abraham." It was not a case of ancestry; it was a case of changed living that counted.

The reason that John gave for all this was the fact that "the kingdom of God or of heaven" was at hand. The fullness of time had come. In fact, John was simply making ready the way for the one who should come, the one who was so much mightier than John that John felt he was not worthy to unloose the latchet of his shoes. He was to be the Great Discerner and the Divider of men. He was to baptize them with water and with fire. Needless to say, John had the sterner conception of Jesus' nature and work.

In connection with John's preaching, he had been baptizing with water. This baptizing was a modified form of washings which the Jews used as a symbol of cleansing. In other words, John used baptism as a symbol of an inner change, an evidence that the recipient of baptism had committed himself to the new manner of life, the gateway into which was repentance. All this is the background of today's lesson—the baptism and temptation of Jesus.

The Baptism of Jesus.

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John to be baptized of him." John was His cousin, it will be recalled. The Master wished to align Himself with the forces of righteousness. It goes without saying that Jesus was not baptized for the remission of His sins. He was the sinless one. Whatever else baptism meant for Jesus, it meant the dedication of Himself to the Father's work, the public recognition of the fact that He had accepted for Himself God's will as it was to be expressed in His Messiahship. And whatever else baptism means for us, it ought to mean that. Baptism is an outward symbol of an inner experience. It not only represents the cleansing from sin; it represents the definite enlistment in the work of the kingdom. It is not necessary or expedient to go into the matter of the mode or method of baptism. Sincere Christians differ very conscientiously on that point. But it is perhaps not too much to say that they are all agreed on one point—the important baptism is the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

"And, lo! the heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon Him; and, lo! a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." The heavens became open to those who have yielded themselves to God's will, and the spirit of pardon, and peace, and truth, and strength, and love comes down upon them. There comes also that inner voice, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

The Temptation of Jesus.

The account of the temptation of Jesus must have come from Jesus Himself. Matthew and Luke probably record what must have been an intimate account which Jesus gave to His immediate followers.

"Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." Spiritual opportunity and privilege inevitably brings temptation. The temptation followed hard upon the baptism. When a man thinks he stands, let him take heed, lest he fall.

"He was afterward a-hungered, and when the tempter came to Him he said, 'If Thou be the Son of God, command these stones be made bread.'" The tempter attacked Jesus at the weakest point. He was hungry. The devil suggested that He use His power to turn stones into bread. There is also an ingenious deviltry in the words, "If Thou be the Son of God." "As the Son of God, you ought not to be subject to the limitations of ordinary men. Come now, you have all power; use it, and make yourself some bread." It was the temptation which comes to every man—to use power, in whatever form, for one's selfish ends. Jesus' action here was typical of His entire ministry. He never used His power for selfish ends, or to further His own desires.

"Then the devil taketh Him up into the holy city—it was the religious capital of the Jewish world—and setteth Him upon the pinnacle of the temple—it was the very center of the religious life of the Jews. "If Thou be the Son of God, cast Thyself down." Make a display of your powers. Get yourself some publicity. Why not? God has promised to take care of you. It was the temptation to presume upon God, to tempt Him. It is to be noted in this connection that the devil quotes Scripture, but he twists it to his own uses. It is to be noted here, too, that Jesus always answers the devil with Scriptures.

"All these things—the kingdoms of the world—will I give Thee, if Thou wilt fall down and worship me." The kingdoms of the world—that was what Jesus wanted. It was a subtle temptation. It was the temptation to get a worthy end by unworthy means. It was one of the many short cuts by which the devil has always tempted men. Jesus' reply indicates that the secret of happiness and the way to all honorable ambition lie in the worship and service of God.

"Then the devil leaveth Him (Luke says for a season) and behold angels came and ministered unto Him." "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" for a season. And he who resists the devil and, through the help of the Word and the help of the Spirit, overcomes temptation, will find that angels have ministered unto him.

Christ was tempted in all points like as we are. These temptations are not exactly typical of all of our temptations, for the phrase "If Thou be the Son of God" has significance. But the fact that Christ was tempted in all points like as we are means that He knows how to help us when we are tempted. Therefore, let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Jubilee Year Committee.

The General Board directed the Executive Committee of the Convention to appoint a new Jubilee Year Committee. The following have been appointed: Executive committee—Rev. Raymond G. Clark (chairman), Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, D. D., and Rev. Omer S. Thomas, D. D., with consulting members, Rev. F. C. Lester, Mrs. Alice V. Morrill, Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., and Rev. Frank Wright.

"The Christian Annual.

The Board approved the union of the "Congregational Year Book" and "The Christian Annual" in one book this year. The joint book will be issued a little later than "The Christian Annual" has been issued heretofore. It will appear probably about May 1st. The two secretaries will be the editors.

Franklinton Board of Control.

Dr. W. A. Harper and Dr. Charles H. Rowland resigned from the Board of Control of Franklinton Christian College, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Mr. John V. Sees were elected as their successors.

Associate Editors.

Rev. P. G. Coffin, D. D., and Mr. Hermon Eldredge were elected associate editors of the merged Church papers—The Congregationalist and The Herald of Gospel Liberty—which merging is to take place about March 1st.

Ministerial Relief and Retiring Annuities.

The General Board elected three executive members of a committee on Ministerial relief and retiring annuities as follows: Dr. A. G. Caris (chairman), Dr. W. P. Minton and Mr. John V. Sees. These executive members were authorized to appoint four other consulting members.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

AT THE LAST.

"At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."—Prov. 23:29-35.

A wise man will think at the first what a course of action will be at the last. He will not launch his boat in the stillest pool above Niagara Falls, for he knows that the rapids are near, and the fearful plunge and the deadly rocks below. He will not take the first glass of wine, whatever boon companions may urge him on, because he knows that only a short time in the future the companions will all have abandoned him, and his health, his money, his work, and his character gone, and he will be left with his bitter regrets and with all the fiends of hell mocking him for his folly.

No habit is more valuable than that of looking ahead. When we start out on a journey, we know just where we are going and how we are to get there; but we take the journey of life at haphazard, letting chance determine whither we shall go and how we shall proceed from day to day. What wonder that at the last the majority of us find failure!

Prayer.—And yet, our divine Guide, we know that only with the leadership can we go safely and triumphantly from the first to the last. We choose Thee, and in choosing Thee, we choose the best beginning and the happiest ending. Go, Thou, with us all the way, and be to us our blessedness at the last. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE TERRIBLE HEIGHT.

"Ebed-melech, the Ethiopian, said unto Jeremiah, Put now these rags and worn-out garments under thine armholes under the cords."—Jere. 38:6-13.

One of the most royal acts chronicled in the Bible was done by an Ethiopian slave, and done with the help of a rope and some ragged old clothes. There could hardly be a greater contrast than between Jeremiah, the mighty prophet of the Lord, and that ignorant menial; yet Ebed-melech proved himself to be a kingly gentleman and a resourceful hero, and the gentle way in which he did his deed commends him even more than the courageous deed itself.

One lesson we need to learn from Ebed-melech is to consider no one too far above us for us to help. Very often the great of the earth are most in need of the touch of kindly human sympathy. No one is too exalted to value kindness.

So let us never hesitate to express appreciation for the work of preachers and other public speakers, of our teachers, however superior they are to us, and sympathize with the rich and the wise and the great in any misfortune. They need it more than we can realize.

Prayer.—Lord, make us helpful, and brave with our helpfulness. May we follow Thy example of love for all men. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CHAIN OF SUPERSTITION.

"Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits, and the wizards, out of the land."—1 Sam. 28:3-14.

King Saul, that strange mixture of wisdom and folly, after driving out of his domain the sorcerers and fortune-tellers, fell so far at the end of his life as to hunt out the witch of Endor and consult her about his fate. Such superstitions are still current to an alarming extent. Only yesterday I received a letter from a Christian reader of this paper asking me seriously if there was anything in palmistry, wizardry, clairvoyance, astrology, and spiritism. Only a few weeks ago, a horrible murder was committed in order to get rid of some one who was supposed to have cast a spell on the murderer. Well-known men of business have their favorite seers whose advice on business ventures they will follow.

These beliefs and practices lower men below the level of the beasts. They are nothing but a heathen worship of chance.

If you can conveniently begin a journey on Friday, do so. Ask for room thirteen at a hotel. Look for the new moon over your left shoulder. Break all the superstitions you know about, and keep it up. If you feel the least uneasy about it, you may realize your danger of having fastened upon you the chain of heathenism.

Prayer.—Make us free with Thy freedom, O Lord Jesus! Cut away from us the hindering follies of the past. Admit us to Thy world of reason. And may we live, not as the craven victims of unknown fears, but as confident and valiant children of God. Amen.

THURSDAY.

KEEPING AT IT.

"He becometh poor that worketh with a slack hand; but the hand of the diligent maketh rich."—Prov. 10:1-8.

Notice hands, and you will gain a deep insight into character. Some hands are quiet and steady; others are nervous and restless. Some hands grasp firmly; others easily drop what they seize. Some hands are well kept as valued instruments; others are carelessly allowed to fall into disrepair. As a man's hands, so, usually, is he.

Now, in the spiritual life, as in the material, "the hand of the diligent maketh rich." Not without industry can we become rich in any grace, any virtue, any power of the soul. Constantly keeping at it is necessary if we would draw near to God in prayer. Ceaseless labor must be the portion of him who would know God. Persistent endeavor is needed if we would gain for ourselves the kingdom of heaven.

Prayer.—Yes, Lord, we realize that though "heaven alone is given away," it is given only to those whose valiant lives prove that they are fit for it. The slothful cannot enter the gates of that purposeful realm. They would not be happy if they got in. Lord, fit us for Thy heaven. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE WAGES OF GOING ON.

"The wages of sin is death; but the free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Rom. 6:15-23.

Sin always comes to us with the promise of life, a more abundant and exultant life, more pleasure, or more wealth, or more ease, or more fame and power; but sin always comes to us with a lie in her hand, for these that she offers us are only cheating images of life nad not the real thing. Sin pays us back in death. This is one of the two most necessary things for man to learn.

The other is that in and from Christ we can get the opposite of death, which is endless life, and with it get in reality all that sin falsely promises us. The life of virtue means to us all that the life of our Saviour, the Lord of glory, means. It is we in Him and He in us, forever. It is all that sin promises, transformed from lies into the everlasting truth.

Prayer.—Lord of life, be Thou our life. Lord of glory, be Thou our ageless renown. Lord of infinite wealth, be Thou our possession. Lord of joy, be Thou our delight. Forever and ever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE RIMS OF LIFE.

"They know not the thoughts of Jehovah, neither understand they His counsel."—Micah 4:1-13.

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney once wrote wisely, "God makes the rims in which we are placed, but we ourselves can make our lives what we will within these rims." The rims of our lives hold us within very definite limits. It is foolish to chafe against them, and to try desperately to become what our Creator never intended us to become. That way lie only weariness and disappointment.

But it is only the transient things that are shut away from some of us by the rims of life. When we understand this, and cheerfully accept our God-appointed limitations, life becomes beautifully simplified, and we find time and strength for the things we can really do.

Prayer.—Thy way is best, our Father; Thy way is always best and happiest. May Thy way be our joy, and in it may we find our great reward. For the sake of Thy well-beloved Son. Amen.

SUNDAY.

AND HE SHALL REIGN.

"The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever."—Rev. 11:15-19.

This wonderful scene in heaven is an inspiration to every Christian. It is our Saviour who is shown exalted on the supreme throne of the world. It is our Lord who has become Lord of lords and King of kings. It is our elder Brother, our Friend who receives these heavenly plaudits.

Can we not feel honored in Him? How proud we are if some one whom we have known since childhood, some one with whom we are acquainted and who has visited in our home, is made President of the United States! But do we ever reflect with delight and pride upon the exaltation of Jesus Christ! He is closer to us than any human being could be, yet we forget His majesty and glory, and never seem to think of it as reflecting glory on ourselves.

Prayer.—It is a marvelous thing, O Most High, to be Thy friend. It is a supernal privilege, O Thou Almighty, to know Thee. Thou wilt enter our house. Thou wilt come in and sup with us. Yes, if the door is shut, Thou wilt even stand there and knock. We open to Thee, O King. All pride and honor are less than this. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The children are looking forward with a great deal of delight for the coming of old Santa Claus. For the thirteen years we have been in charge of the Orphanage, the children have not been disappointed. Friends have always helped old Santa to make every child in the institution happy. We are hoping this year will be no exception to the rule.

Our little baby boy, four years old, the pet of the institution, will not be able to be with us this Christmas, as he had the misfortune to get his leg broke last week and is confined in the Rainey Hospital, at Burlington, N. C., and will be there for six weeks.

It seems when it rains it pours! We sometimes think troubles come the same way. We feel that the Orphanage has had its full share this fall. The superintendent had to have a very serious operation in the month of October. While he was in the hospital, the Orphanage barn, with practically all of the hay, was burned, caused by spontaneous combustion. It rained so much in the hay season that it was impossible to get the hay thoroughly dry. The dampness with the overripe soy beans caused the hay to heat and combustion followed. Then one of the little boys had an acute case of appendicitis and had to have an operation. On December 14th a little boy fell off a wagon and broke his leg and had to be carried to the hospital. While the superintendent was at the hospital having this little boy treated, two little boys were playing on the lawn and one of them fell and broke his leg and was carried to the hospital. On Monday following, another little boy had an attack of appendicitis and had to have an operation.

This makes three operatoins for children since June, and two broken legs. In our thirteen years up to June first we had had one collar-bone broken and two arms. We wonder if the thirteenth year is an unlucky one!

But with all the trouble that has come upon us in this thirteenth year, our Thanksgiving offerings have been the most discouraging, so far, that we have experienced at all. Are we turning a cold shoulder to widows and the fatherless in their affliction and giving them a stone when they ask for bread? Are we really interested in helpless children or have we let our hearts grow cold and unsympathetic? Let each member of the Church who reads this letter ask himself or herself this question: Have I contributed my part to help the little children in the Christian Orphanage this year? They have asked you for bread and clothes and a home. How much have you as a Church member contributed to help supply these needs?

Our financial report this week shows our total collections for this year to be only $23,196.09. To reach our goal we must raise by the end of the year $6,803.91. Will you help us reach it by mailing us your check at once to help us. It would be a fine thing to wind up your year's work with. Will you?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

A SURPRISE.

Sunday, December 15th, the pastor went out to preach at Happy Home, and two of the Danville members went with me. After the services we hurried home to meet our evening services. The pastor came back in good time, with Bro. Coward at the wheel and with a broad grin on his face. He wondered why he should be so happy, but did not suspect any thing. A short while after arriving, he called his pastor and advised him that he had better examine his car; probably something may have gone wrong, and in particular he advised me to see if any thing had gone wrong in the rear part of the car.

When I opened the rear of the car, I better understood. I began to take out, and I continued for quite a while. I will not attempt to enumerate all the nice things that were taken from the car, but just such things as a woman is always glad to get for her pantry. Some folks may believe there is no Santa, but when so much can get into a car with the cover locked and before my eyes almost and me not see it, I dare say I would dispute with them.

I want to thank the good folks of Happy Home for the glad surprise and the much-appreciated donation. M. T. SORRELL.

WADLEY, ALA.

I am writing this note to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in behalf of two very fine orphan girls, who are in school at Piedmont Junior College. These are very talented young girls, and certainly they are worthy of any assistance we may give them. Now, they are needing assistance in a financial way. They must pay current expenses. They have no money. They have neither father nor mother; no one to look to but the more fortunate, generous-hearted Christian people. "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord, and for his good deed He will repay him again." Who will help in this cause? Send your remittance, of whatever amount, to me at Wadley, Ala. I will acknowledge same through THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Grandmother Hamlin, of Antioch Church, gave the first dollar, my wife gives the second one, and I give five dollars. Now, won't it be easy for us to meet this call? And then we will be happier than the girls themselves. I am writing individuals in their behalf. Send your offering to G. D. Hunt

As the old year passes into history, I am reminded that all material things are passing, and what we do for our Lord must be done quickly. There is no place or time for us to let up in our Christian effort. I therefore, trust that our young people will not forget the former request with regard to finishing the auditorium of Piedmont Junior College. We must finish it with the beginning of the New Year. I am expecting a good year, and I pray that we may undertake greater things for the kingdom of our Christ.

Now, I must speak of the second great need of our Church, as provided for in our Conference program—that of missions. To be missionary is to be helpful. We must be willing to help our Lord's cause along in any way that we possibly can. Our program says that we purpose to get our women organized in every Church. That would be fine, not so much for the money that might be collected, but for the influence wielded and the service rendered. There is no enterprise of religion that goes like missions go—the life-giving power of the gospel must depend on the unselfish service of the faithful of God. If all of our good women were thus organized, they would do the kingdom invaluable service.

But listen! Brethren, our program provides that, in addition to the women's work, our faithful men shall crown their own happiness, as well as to honor their Lord, by organizing themselves for specific service. Oh! if our men could be impressed to contribute some of their sound business judgment and some of their hard-earned money to the kingdom of God and His dear Son. With the aid of our good women, we could put the program over for the glory of Jesus Christ.

My dear brethren, our Church is weak—and weak only because we have withheld from it our prayers, our consecration, our service, and our money. When we give ourselves and our means to carry forward the kingdom of our Lord, then we will enjoy more our material blessings. God wants men, God needs men, and God must have men to assist in saving a lost world. I am expecting a mighty rush of our men in these two Conferences this year to come up to the help of the Lord. Why not the men of our Church in the far South send out a missionary for God? Can you answer the question? Why not? We are just as strong as we think we are, and just as weak as we believe we are. Let us gird up our loins and prepare to meet our obligations and duties like men. Let every local Church give the men a chance; let every pastor encourage them to do small things for Jesus and grow thereby into larger things and richer experience.

Yes, give us a woman's missionary society in every Church, and the united co-operation of our men, and we will see what we will see!

G. D. HUNT.

DANVILLE, VA.

On Sunday, December 15th, we had the privilege of having with us Dr. S. T. A. Kent, of our Ingram Church, Paces, Va. Dr. Kent brought us a message on "Visions and Dreams." We also had with us the Carolina quartet, of Greensboro, who rendered several songs that were not only enjoyed but were uplifting to all who heard them. At the close of the service, Rev. J. L. Neese, of our Palm Street Church, Greensboro, dedicated our new Sunday School department. We were indeed glad to have the brethren with us, and may God richly bless each of them as they give their time to and in His work.

PHILLIPS.

Mrs. Rebecca Anne Phillips was born March 25, 1852, and died November 18, 1929, at the age of 77 years, 7 months, and 23 days. Sister Phillips was a member of the Bethlehem Christian Church, and a good Christian woman, although old age and affliction kept her from attending Church during the latter years of her life. She is survived by two sons and a number of relatives and friends. Funeral services at the Mountain Valley United Brethren Church, November 20th.

RICHARDS.

At the ripe age of 77, Deacon A. B. Richards, on the 20th day of November, laid down life's burdens and entered into the rest beyond. In the home, community and Church his had been an active devoted lfe, filled with the good deeds which he did.

From early life he was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South. Soon after the organization of the Christian Church in Winchester, he transferred his membership to that body, and until the end came was a pillar of support in the work of the Church.

On September 9, 1875, he was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Honestoffle, with whom he lived in happy union until she was called home. To this union were born four daughters and six sons. These, with two brothers and a sister, remain.

Funeral services were conducted from the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. B. Nelson. Interment was made in Mount Hermon Cemetery, Winchester. The many friends in attendance attested the love and esteem in which he was held. May our loving Father bless and comfort the bereaved.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ.
The battle fought, the vict'ry won:
Enter Thy Master's joy."

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

BUCHANAN.

Ben T. Buchanan died at his home, near Moncure, N. C., December 18, 1929. Bro. Buchanan was nearing his 85th birthday. He was married in early manhood to Mary E. Gunter. To this union were born two children—a son, E. H. Buchanan, of Route 2, Moncure, N. C., and a daughter, Mrs. Bernice Mansfield, of Route 2, Sanford, N. C.

After the death of the first wife, Bro. Buchanan was married to Miss Della Ferrell, who was to him a very faithful, kind and true companion. Bro. Buchanan was a faithful member of Lee's Chapel.

Funeral service for the deceased were conducted at Zion Christian Church, December 18th, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. E. Franks, a former pastor. May the Lord bless the bereaved.

J. A. DENTON, Pastor.

HARPER.

Brodis Harper went to be with his Lord on December 5th, after six weeks of intense suffering. Bro. Harper took his suffering in fine spirit and retained hope of recovery up until the last few days of his stay with us, at which time his desires became centered on his heavenly home. He was in the bloom of health and youth, only nineteen years old, a greatly beloved boy in the community, and a faithful worker in the Church. We are going to miss him, and the Willing Workers of the Church will miss him the more because of his close walk and love for these young people.

To those who are bereft by his going, we can only say, strive and wait until such an hour shall again bring you face to face with him, and may the loving Father comfort your home while you wait.

The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Bro. P. H. Ricketts, his teacher. After the service at the home on Third Avenue, the body was laid to rest in Lemont Cemetery with the rites of the Willing Workers and Red Men, of which he was a member. The Willing Workers of the Church all wore white flowers and deposited them with him at the grave as a token of their last tribute of respect.

The large contribution of flowers and large crowd that attended the services were evidences of his life of service, esteem and respect.

WOOD.

Mrs. Francis Stinson Wood departed this life on the 7th day of December, 1929, being 84 years of age. Sister Wood had been in declining health for several years, and the end came not unexpectedly. She seemed not to fear death in the least, but to be prepared and willing to go.

She held her membership at Wake Chapel Christian Church when she joined in girlhood. For several years she has not been able to be at Church often, but she seemed to love her old Church and its sacred memories.

She was buried in the Piny Grove Cemetery, where other relatives are at rest. The services were conducted by Bro. Atkins and Bro. Morris, of the Baptist Church, assisted by the Wake Chapel and Piny Grove Choir. God bless the bereaved.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

WHITE.

We, the ladies of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Suffolk Christian Church, feel very keenly the passing of one of our faithful members, Mrs. Nettie Jane White, who departed this life on October 21, 1929.

While we mourn the departure of our dear sister and co-worker, who had been a patient sufferer for some time, we feel that our loss is her gain; and may we strive to imitate her good examples by being more faithful in our duties to God's cause.

We bow in humble submission to God's will and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy and recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, nad a copy recorded in the minutes of our society.

THE PRISON PROBLEM.—

Among the many perplexing problems that confront modern society, that of what to do with the criminal and the law-breaker seems to become increasingly difficult. If crime and law-breaking continue to increase as they have within the last quarter of a century something is surely going to have to be done about it. It will not be possible to support such a prison population as will probably have to be dealt with fifty or a hundred years from now.

The recent outbreaks within some of the largest prisons of the country indicate just how serious the situation is. Many of these prisoners are desperate and hopeless men who are willing to gamble their lives against a chance to escape. Is it possible to devise a prison regime that will still leave to the prisoner some semblance of what human life ought to be, and at the same time will not make possible such risks to the life of the men who are serving as guards, as no State has a right to impose upon the men whom it employs?

There is not only the risk of mutiny and riot; there is the tremendous expense of supporting thousands of idle prisoners. The State cannot very well engage in manufacturing enterprises, using convict labor, and sell its products in competition on the open market. Soviet Russia has announced that it will close many of its prisons, sending all long-term convicts to prison camps in Siberia. The project contemplates what will virtually be prison colonies. But the Russian policy offers no solution for the situation which most modern States are facing. It begins to look at times, as if the State will be forced to adopt some policy of teaching and inculcating respect for law, morality and religion, in sheer self-defense if for no other reason.

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.—

The International Sunday School Lesson for January 5th brings afresh to our minds the heartless brutality of the ancient Herod in slaughtering all the babies of two years of age and under in Bethlehem, in his vain attempt to destroy the new-born Babe that had been hailed as the King of the Jews. It would be hard to imagine a more despicable act by one who had been adjudged worthy to rule over a great people. It is a comfort to think how the world has advanced in its realization of the meaning of humaneness. Surely we have come a long, long way since the days of Herod.

And while musing upon these thoughts, my eye fell upon a brief magazine article entitled, "Europe's Orphan Children." The article relates how that in the countries where there were orphanages already established before the war, that the existing institutions were entirely inadequate to handle the thousands of war orphans. It also relates how that governments were confronted by what they considered more pressing problems, and failed to take steps to meet the need. It summarizes the situation thus: "As a result, thousands of children became amazingly adept in shifting for themselves, but were so hardened and brutalized in the process as to become a real menace."

The post-war press has been flooded with books and stories depicting almost every phase of war results. But in so far as we have seen, no writer has undertaken to depict the tragic efforts of war upon the orphaned children. Probably no living writer is equal to the task. We have heard the tragic story of the children of the Near East—no, we really have not heard the story; we have only been given a glimpse of the physical wants of the children.

In every land whose sons fought in the war, there are thousands of children who were forced to face life without the knowledge or help of a father's protecting love and care. A careful estimate has been made of the lives that were directly and indirectly offered upon the altar of Mars. But no one has ever taken the time to find out how many children were orphaned by the bloody sacrifice. There was great weeping and lamentation in Judah because of Herod's brutality. But the World War left grim and silent desolation in the hearts of millions of children who were not even aware of their loss. The passing years have burned into their hearts some realization of their misery.

We have learned something of the cost of war in terms of men and money. But we shall never know how unspeakable war really is until we learn to read its results in terms of the starved bodies, the hungry hearts, and the lives of little children that have gone on the rocks because their father's life was offered on the altar of human sacrifice to appease the blood-lust of the god of war. What Herod did to the babies of Bethlehem is but an atom when compared with what modern warfare can do to the children of the so-called civilized world.

THE PATH TO CHRISTIAN UNITY.—

The past year has seen some notable accomplishments along the line of Christian unity. The actual achievements that have been effected are far-reaching. Perhaps even of greater significance have been the discussions of possible union which have taken place. These discussions and conferences have pretty accurately mapped out the course that Christian unity must follow. It is something of considerable worth when those who are striving for a worthy goal are convinced that the avenues of approach that have been followed in the past lead no where. The seeker is then ready to try other means for reaching the desired end. Those of us who have spent all our lives in the atmosphere of the Christian Church cannot properly appreciate the difficulties encountered by those who have lived in a different atmosphere. We will have to learn a fine spirit of patience, while our compatriots are learning to sacrifice those things which have seemed to them to be essential. The findings of the Christian Unity League, which met last November, in St. George's Church, New York City, clearly indicate the path by which Christian union will have to be achieved. They are well worth the consideration of every earnest Christian. They are given by the Christian Century as follows:

"This committee is deeply impressed by the significance of the obvious fact of Christian history, that attempts to base Christian unity upon any statement of beliefs held in common has always led, and must always lead, not to unity but to division and controversy. Sincere and earnest men think differently about religion as about everything else, and find the way to co-operation less by attempts to formulate their convictions than by devotion to their common tasks. Statement of Christian conviction there ought always to be in every group and age, but the great goal of Christian unity lies at the end of another road.

"Believing that Christianity is primarily a way of life in which we move forward together with all those who, through the centuries and throughout the world have shared, and now share, the Christian faith in one God and Father of us all, the Christian experience of the redemptive power of the life and death of Jesus Christ our Lord, and the Christian purpose to extend on earth the kingdom of God, we find our consciousness of Christian brotherhood impoverished and the effectiveness of our Christian service sorely weakened by our present sectarian divisions. We cannot face the doing of the will of God for our generation and the building of a more Christian world for our children after us, as these tasks have been laid upon our mind and conscience by what we believe is the spirit of the living God, without a larger measure of Christian unity, not only in spirit, but in effective organization. We believe that the road toward such unity, the farther reaches of which we cannot yet clearly perceive, lies plainly in the direction of a braver co-operative adventure between all Christian groups in the effort together to extend the kingdom of God both in our local communities and throughout the world. And we call upon all those who share that conviction to seek with us this larger influence of the spirit of Christ in all organized Christian life and work."

NOTES-PERSONALS

The "Annual" has been unavoidably delayed this year. At this writing still one set of minutes is out. It will take about two weeks after the last set is received before the "Annual" can be mailed.

One cannot think of the Christ in terms of nationality. One cannot think of Him simply as a Jew or Gentile. Moses is Jewish, Confucius Chinese to the core, Aristotle is Greek, Shakespeare is English, Goethe is German, Hugo is French, and Emerson is American. Christ alone transcends all national lines. He is universal and eternal.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will regret to learn that while the snow and sleet during Christmas was at its worst, Dr. P. H. Fleming, Burlington, the county welfare worker for Alamance and one of our beloved ministers, while on his rounds carrying baskets of provisions to the needy, had the misfortune to slip on the ice and fracture in two places a lower limb. He was carried immediately to the hospital, and now in a room radiant, aglow and fragrant with potted plants and sweet flowers, and visited constantly by loving friends, he rests with tolerable comfort while nature does the work of knitting up the wounded limb. He will possibly be confined to the hospital yet for a few weeks. Hospital nurses and friends are doing all that can be done to make his confinement bearable and agreeable.

We note, with gratification and pardonable pride, the strong, winsome face of Miss Graham Rowland in the January number of the Missionary Review of the World. This international magazine devotes three pages of its January number to work among the Indians, and with the other seven faces appears that of our own "Graham," who, of course, suffers none by the comparison. Of the three pages devoted to the Indian work, Miss Rowland furnishes from her own pen practically a whole page which is rich, rare and racy, and reveals the character of this fine woman. Any work is fortunate that enlists her intelligent and consecrated enthusiasm. We congratulate the Missionary Review of the World in its world-wide search for interesting personalities engaged in missions to have discovered and given to its readers this likeness nad contribution from Miss Graham Rowland.

Dr. D. B. Atkinson, Albany, Mo., Vice-President of the General Convention, speaks in the following terms of Christian union: "This union movement is not simply a denominational consolidation. Overtures will be made to other denominations to join the union. The purpose is to develop on basis of union that will enable all Christians to unite. Leading Christians everywhere are awakening to the fact that the people of God must unite, and failure to do so will render the Church impotent in the face of world tasks. The basis of union as adopted by the Congregational and Christian Churches is very simple and plain. 'The basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ.' 'We are Christians' would be a fair way to state the basis, and because we are Christians we belong to the one body, Christ. Is that an adequate basis for the union of the followers of Christ?"

THE SUN carries in another column this week "A Call to Prayer,' issued by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. This call seems fitting, appropriate and impressive. The nations of the earth have so long and so often resorted to arms and hatred and destruction to settle their disputes that it seems difficult, if not impossible from a human point of view, for diplomats and politicians to think in terms of international and world-wide friendship, amity and good will. But that which is impossible with man is possible with God, and God alone can change the selfishness, the prejudices and the animosities existing between the nations and bring mankind to realize the letter and the spirit of the words uttered by the apostle under inspiration centuries ago, "God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." It will be well, indeed, for Churches and Christians everywhere to observe Sunday, January 19, 1930, as a day of prayer for God's blessing on the conference to be held in London beginning January 21, 1930, which conference will certainly determine the course of nations for some years to come. Let every SUN reader carefully read and observe the plea by the Federal Council for this universal day of prayer.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The Franklin Christian Sunday School has endeavored to make as one of its new year projects the attainment of new chairs for the auditorium. To do this, the committee is sponsoring a brilliant concert recital by the famous London dramatist, Professor John Duxbury. With him comes his son Arthur, tenor soloist, who has attained high compliments by press and public of England, America and Canada. These artists appear in Fellowship Hall, Suffolk, next week. Mr. Duxbury has a great repertoire, consisting of readings such as "The King of Kings," "The Story of Joseph," "The Book of Job," "Enoch Arden," "Pilgrims Progress," and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The coming of these artists to our town, sponsored by the Sunday School, is to be appreciated by the public. They are to appear in the high school chapel Thursday morning.

Another item of interest is the recent agreement on the part of many of our Sunday School teachers and officers to sign the following covenant:

"Desiring to make my work for the Master count for the most possible as a teacher or official in the Franklin Christian Sunday School, I sincerely promise my God and fellow-teachers to do my best during the year 1930 by—

"1. Being regular and on time every time, unless prevented by some unforseen reason. In such a case, I will notify the superintendent of my department as early as possible.

"2. To co-operate in every possible manner with the superintendent by attending all of the monthly teachers' meetings and participating in the programs and discussions.

"3. To teach Church-going to my pupils by attending Church at least once each Sunday.

"4. By devoting at least two hours each week to study and preparation of the lesson to be taught, and will take advantage of the annual teachers' training courses that are offered me."

This pledge is submitted through THE CHRISTIAN SUN with the hope that other Church schools might take advantage of its uniqueness in making more loyal teachers in kingdom work.

STATE ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION.

The State of Massachusetts has been marked by the wets, we understand, as the next to be put into the group of States for repeal of the State enforcement laws of the eighteenth amendment. This fact makes it the center of special interest in the news columns. A press dispatch bearing the date line of January 1st states that the Governor, Hon. Frank G. Allen, in his message to the legislature declared that the proposed repeal "would be an incentive to violate the law," and he added, "So long as the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution is law, our duty is clear-cut and well-defined."

The Governor's words are sane and to the point. If New York State had had such intelligence and loyalty to good government in its governorship at the time its Mullen-Gage law was repealed under Governor Alfred E. Smith, it would have been delivered from its present unsavory attitude of indifference to lawlessness and crime. By this remark we do not mean that the State is totally in the hands of nullificationists, and friends of liquor. The vote is very close on a State-wide issue, but unfortunately many of the leaders in both major political parties have been of such type as Governor Smith and Senator Wadsworth, and relief from such leadership is not yet in sight.

Speaking further on the subject of the attitude of the States on national prohibition of the liquor traffic, Miss Norma C. Brown has the following to say in a recent issue of The National Enquirer:

"In the field I have been overtaken by an inquiry concerning the States which have no State laws for the enforcement of prohibition. The action of Wisconsin, together with the effort of the wets in Massachusetts looking in the same direction, and their boasts that Illinois, Pennsylvania and other States will be next in their line of attack, have set dry people wondering anew about the obligation of States and the extent of their legally recognized rights to fail to fulfill it.

"It should be remembered that no State has on its statutes as effective law any measure "contrary to the eighteenth amendment," as some suppose them to have. Any law passed either by a State legislature or the Congress actually in conflict with the eighteenth amendment would be promptly declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States upon its first appearance as a factor in any cause brought before that tribunal.

"But there are six States that have no law for the enforcement of prohibtiion. It is for failure to use their power in compliance with their obligation in this connection rather than for the enactment of inappropriate legislation that criticism is due them. From the act openly defying the eighteenth amendment we have protection in the power of courts to declare void such legislation; but from failure of bodies to supply proper laws to bring the power of State governments back of the policy we have seemingly no recourse, as there is no power by which the Federal government can force reluctant legislators to do their duty.

"Of the six States now without laws in this connection, Maryland alone has never enacted a State code. New York's was repealed by action of her State legislature. Montana's was repealed as the result of a referendum. Wisconsin held an advisory referendum which was followed by repeal by the legislature. New Mexico and Nevada have both lost their laws by virtue of their being declared unconstitutional, and they have never been replaced by statutes meeting the requirements.

"On no line of attack have the wets a better developed program than that whereby they proposed to repeal State laws. Inquiries on this subject are heartening. If we can get all the dry forces to seek out the facts they will be moved to intelligent resistance to this assault."—Wesleyan Methodist.

THE GREAT APPEAL.

"Choose you this day whom you will serve."—Joshua 24:15.

When Joshua assembled all the tribes of Israel about him, he spoke words that rang true to all who heard. To them he made a great appeal in behalf of God. "And Joshua said unto all the people, the Lord God took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan and multiplied his seed, and gave him Isaac. He gave unto Isaac, Jacob and Esau, and unto Esau He gave Mount Seir. And when the tribes were lost in the bonds of Egyptian bondage, slavery and wilderness, it was God who sent forth stalwart men such as Moses and Aaron to lead them out to a land of promise. It was the Lord God who brought you into the land of the Amorites, and I have given you a land for which ye did not labor, and cities which ye built not and ye dwell in them; and of vineyards and olive yards of which planted not, ye do eat. Now, therefore, fear the Lord, and serve Him in sincerity and in truth; and put away the gods which your fathers served and serve the Lord." For said Joshua as he made to them the great appeal, which is made to us this day in the year 1930, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."

You may select the gods of your fathers, which were gods of stone, of fire, and of idolatry; or you may choose to serve the true God who is Jehovah of Hosts. He is the God to whom I appeal. He is the God for you one and all to serve. This God is your Creator, and in making you in His likeness He gave you the power of choice. Today you are called upon to exercise the freedom of your will and choose, according to your best judgment, the God of your choice. One's friends may advise, God may impress, but man alone must make answer to the supreme appeal.

Having submitted unto the people the great appeal, saying, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve," he sets forth his own decision to the appeal, and no doubt when Joshua said, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord," the people were led greatly by his example to answer and say, "God forbid that we should forsake the Lord to serve other gods: for the Lord our God, He it is that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage . . . therefore will we also serve the Lord, for He is our God."

As we think of how good the Lord our God has been to us during the past year, and of His promise to be with us throughout the New Year 1930, we ought to rise up and pledge our lives to Him in unbiased service. The great appeal, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve" is:

(1) A personal appeal—"Choose you"; (2) an immediate appeal—"this day"; (3) an imperative appeal—"whom ye will serve."

As we consider the claims of the great appeal, let us not forget that there is greater force behind the appeal that comes to us than the appeal made to the tribes of Israel, for since that time, God has revealed Himself unto the world in the personal life teachings, works and suffering of His only begotten Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, who today makes the great appeal, which is still—

1. A personal appeal—Choose you. Each man, woman, boy and girl must some day give an account of life's choices. Each one of us is given the power, wisdom and ability to choose for ourselves the things that will mar or make character. No one can make these choices for us. Our friends can choose gifts, such as wearing apparel, for us, but they cannot choose for us the God we serve. The matter becomes intensely personal with you and with me. The appeal to serve is "Choose you." And the conclusion is that ye cannot serve God and mammon. Ye must be for or against Jesus Christ, for no man can serve two masters.

Religion is intensely personal. It is designed by the great creator to enable mankind to develop into the fullest and most abundant life possible. It helps the individual to grow into a desirable social being that he may be of greater service to his fellowman. Religion such as Jesus Christ offers us today gives to all men a personal God, a Saviour and a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Sometime ago, a brother pastor and I talked at length with a promising young business man about accepting the great appeal of Jesus Christ. He said he would have to talk with his mother about the wisdom and advisability of the matter. To this feeble excuse, I said, "When you order goods from the salesman, you don't talk with your mother about what you should order; when you transact business at the bank, you don't talk with your mother first, for you know that she will be happy whenever you succeed in your business choices. Your mother believes in you and wants to see you make good. She is your good friend and helper, but she cannot make your business choices. Neither can she select the God for you to serve. Nevertheless, she would insist that you serve her God, who is Jesus Christ her Lord." Our text does not appeal, saying, "Choose for some one else the God he must serve, but instead it says to you and to me, "Choose you." Further words of personal appeal are:

"Except ye repent, ye shall likewise perish" (Luke 13:5).

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

"Whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whoever shall deny me before men, him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 10:32).

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28).

The appealing question is what will you do with Jesus the Christ—accept or reject?

2. An immediate appeal—"This day." In the works of the dramatist of old England, we hear one of his characters say that "There is a tide in the affairs of men which if taken at the flood leads on to fortune—neglected, all the rest of life is born in shallowness and misery." As we think of these timely words of Shakespeare, we are impressed with the fact that no man should put off until tomorrow the choice that should made today. One must take advantage of the flood-tide if he would be borne to fortune.

Now is the time—today is the day of salvation. The great appeals sound in your ears today and no man knoweth what a single day may bring forth. Tomorrow may be too late to decide this great personal appeal. I am thinking of the occasion when one of the Vanderbilt men, sitting at his desk, dropped over and died in the midst of a sentence. He was in the act of completing negotiations for a million-dollar business deal. It was never completed. So may we be called away during the next few moments, hours, days or months. To delay to answer His appeal is to rob one's self of joy and happiness. To delay until another occasion is to lose opportunities of service and influence that are needed in the work of the kingdom today.

Each year men spend millions of dollars for insurance. Paderewski has his fingers insured for $100,000 and collected $5,000 for a slight injury to a finger that occurred in Philadelphia. Men insure against fire, accident, sickness, theft, rain, cyclone, floods and death. Bankers will not readily lend money to a man who does not insure, nor will jobbers send goods, employees will not work for such a one, for they are considered poor risks. In like manner, the man whose life is not insured against the wiles of the devil, the temptations of the world and the fire of sheol, is a bad risk. Society fears him, honest men shun him and God pities him. Let no one insure his car and neglect his soul. As surely as the body is ever on its way to the grave, one's soul is on its way to eternity and the only one that can save it for eternal happiness and joy is the Lord Jesus Christ. "Commit thy way unto Him, trust also in Him and He shall bring it to pass." "Choose you this day."

3. An imperative appeal—"Whom you will serve." It makes all the difference in the world whom one chooses to serve as his God. Let us hear the words of St. Paul as to the Galatian Church he writes relative to the fruits or works of the two opposites. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, laciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, and such like . . . they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

"But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law."

THE PERSISTENCE OF SLAVERY.

At what early day of history human slavery began we do not know. That it has been gradually abolished, we delight to learn. We wish its abolition might have been much more rapid and were now complete. But it still exists. According to Lady Simon, of England, in her recent book, "Slavery," there are now, in this year of our Lord, four million people in bondage, the property of their fellow-human creatures. The principal slave-holding areas are in Abyssinia, Arabia, China, Liberia and other sections of Africa. Women chattles are numerous and easily procured in Western China. The equivalent of this bondage exists in every Christian land where "white slavery" plies its trade.

The kind of slavery of which Lady Simon writes is not serfdom, nor industrial bondage, nor political subserviency. It is the slavery which puts a human being completely, soul and body, into the possession of another human being. He is valued and handled as property. He or she has not one single personal right.

The interior of Africa continues to be the playground of kidnappers, and their heartlessness is as great as in the days of the slave ships headed for Europe or America.

The League of Nations, among its many great and laudable undertakings, is endeavoring to stop slavery. The practice is elusive and requires close and prolonged vigilance. But this barbarity upon hopeless chattels will meet a more and more aroused conscience and a more and more determined and combined assault among civilized countries. Human slavery is too terrible to last forever.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE SUPREME MESSAGE OF JESUS.

Amid the doubt, denial and uncertainty of our time, one views with optimism and satisfaction the emphasis some outstanding Christian leaders are putting upon the supreme message of our Lord. The Christian Churches are this year to celebrate the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost, the outpouring of the Spirit of God upon the Church, the Gentiles as well as the Jews. This is well because it gives an opportunity of emphasizing the need of heralding again the evangelistic message and the note of triumph and victory through the saving power of our Lord.

In last week's SUN it was pointed out by Dr. Stanley High that salvation through Jesus Christ was the only hope of the nations, and that His passion for souls and the redemption of man was sufficient for the trials, temptations and ordeals of this world; that He alone could right the wrongs of mankind and redeem man from his fallen estate.

Now a message comes from Dr. Charles L. Goodell, secretary of evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches, declaring, with fervor and passion, that the "supreme message of Jesus is not the message of a teacher, but of a Saviour." Continuing, Dr. Goodell declares that "the Sermon on the Mount was not by any means His greatest deliverance to the world. It was only His inaugural, spoken when those who listened were not able to comprehend deeper spiritual truths. His greatest sermons were those preached to individuals, and that supreme message which was last upon His lips before those lips—moistened with the vinegar of malice and purple in the agony of death—had cried, 'It is finished.'"

Dr. Goodell realizes that the world is worn and weary and needy, and the only one who can bring in the kingdom of God and fulfill the desire of all hearts is Jesus Christ with His saving and sufficient message. He declares further, "A weary world standing at the cross-roads is not asking for a new sign-board to point the way (Jesus is Himself the Way), but it is looking for a living message from Him, who alone can guide it into all truth (Jesus Christ is the Truth)." And Dr. Goodell points out a fact as follows, which, indeed, is startling and will certainly be a surprise to many:

"Here, in the matter of religious education, we in America are face to face with a lesson which we must not overlook or forget. If secular education is falling down at the point of character, the same thing is also true of our religious education. Taking the country at large, there are 30 per cent less children in the Sunday School today than there were thirty years ago. But this is not the saddest thing about it. The percentage of those who are coming from the Sunday School into vital relationship with Christ and membership in the Church is also increasingly less."

Dr. Goodell declares that religious education is doing a vast work, but it has no substitute for the supreme message of Jesus. Rather it is an aid and should be carried on in the light of that supreme message, and in order that the supreme message may find its lodging-place in the hearts of the people. What the Church must realize is that the words of our Saviour are spirit and are life, and they constitute the supreme message of an all-sufficient Saviour.

"No doubt our teachers are better trained than those of a former generation in matters of philosophy and pedagogy, but are they walking more closely with God? Do they know more intimately Him who said, 'I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly'? The psychology of conversion or prayer is no substitute for those experiences. The study of the number and authorship of the books of the Bible is no equivalent for the translation of their message into good and honest hearts. 'The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life.' And that is the purpose which must lie behind all our Christian religious education."

FROM DENIAL TO DENIAL.

The Pope of Rome, in a recent public address, declared that Protestantism "is getting more and more exhausted," and has reached a point where "its own very sterility is inspiring many souls with a nostalgia for Catholicism." The Pope rejoices at this, and declares that Protestants are flocking back in multiplied numbers to the Catholic Church. The Pope's diagnosis of the situation is interesting. He declares that "Catholicism shines in the clear light, while Protestantism goes from denial to denial." The head of the Catholic Church declares that his Church speaks in no uncertain terms and teaches no unfamiliar doctrine. Furthermore, it asserts with positive assurance the position it has always maintained, and nowhere leaves a doubt as to its authority, its dogma and its doctrine. Over against this, the Pope contends that "the modernism" of the present time, the skeptics, the doubters and atheists, all of whom, of course, are classed as Protestants, go from "denial to denial" of the tenets and doctrine of Scripture and of the Church.

While Protestants can in no sense agree with the Pope in his pronouncement, it is well for us to take note of the fact that there is lack of certainty and authority of utterance, both in the pulpit and in the pew of Protestantism. We are not ready to admit the sterility of our faith and of our Church, nor that Protestantism is by any means exhausted; but we must realize that the soul of man is not satisfied with a question-mark, nor will it feed on husks and be satisfied. The soul must feed on the Bread of Life and must have no doubt as to the authenticity and reality of that Bread for its sustaining and satisfying power. We Protestants need to reassure our faith with a closer study of the Word of God and a closer application to and a deeper appreciation of the eternal truths which that Word teaches. The great English statesman, Gladstone, declared years ago that they who cast doubts upon the authenticity of the Bible and seek to undermine the faith that the reading of that Book begets "are blasting at the Rock of Ages."

The Word of God is the Rock of Ages. But, strange to say, that there seems to be in our time an ever-increasing violence of attack upon this eternal Rock, and these attacks, with their evil consequences, are what the Pope of Rome calls going "from denial to denial." "I am the Bread of Life," declared our Saviour, "even the Bread which came down from heaven"; and what Protestantism needs today is to declare with authority and emphasis that they who eat this Bread and drink of this cup will satisfy their souls and will go from strength to strength in His power and in His name. There is nothing so paralyzing and so deadly as doubt, skepticism, denial; and the Pope is right in declaring "that the soul of man longs for certainty, for surety, for positiveness as the elements of its faith."

LIQUOR ACROSS BORDER.

Many Americans feel that prohibition is a failure because it is not prohibited. Now and then one is found who will declare that conditions are better over in Canada where some two years ago the government went from prohibition to governmental control. We forget that we had a long way to go in the matter of prohibition, and that settling the drink evil is no small matter. For the information of those who still believe that Canada has benefitted by going into the liquor business, we invite attention to the following questions and answers. Mr. Gifford Gordon, of Philadelphia, recently addressed these questions to Mr. Elmore Philpott, editor of the Toronto Globe, who received replies as given:

"Is it your opinion that government control makes for real temperance? No.

"Does government control decrease or increase the consumption of liquor? Liquor consumption has doubled in Ontario in two years.

"Does government control decrease or increase number of drunken drivers of automobiles? Drunken drivers have multiplied by ten, while cars doubled.

"Have deaths from accidents due to drunken drivers increased under government control? Yes, enormously.

"Have industrial accidents decreased under government control? No; increasing 7 per cent faster than payrolls.

"Has government control eliminated the bootlegger? Large bootlegger eliminated, but small bootlegger multiplied.

"Has government control proved any benefit to the young people? No."

On January 16, 1930, prohibition will have been in the Constitution of the United States, by adoption of the eighteenth amendment, exactly ten years. The Federal Council and other Church agencies have called upon the people to ring the Church bells and the bells at schools and on college buildings and assembly halls for ten minutes at 12 o'clock noon, January 16th (one minute for each year of national Constitution prohibition). This is well, and it is to be hoped that the triumphant sound of more than a million bells will sound out the note of gladness and of progress.

True, prohibition has not carried us as far as we had hoped and expected, but by every experiment and fact known to morals and to economy, it has carried us a long way. Recent figures compiled showed that within a year after prohibition went into effect, savings accounts in the banks of the United States increased by millions, and that the actual sale and consumption of liquor, though not prevented, has decreased and is decreasing from year to year tremendously. The people of the United States have set their faces with determination toward a great goal, and they will not be easily turned back, especially when all the facts of economy and morality are on their side. REPERTORY.

A series of Wednesday night prayer-meeting addresses delivered in the Presbyterian Church during the building of our Church in 1892.

I. LOVE.

In Greek philosophy, Empedocles has spoken of love as overcoming previous discords. Agathon sings of love as the youngest of the gods, living and moving delicately wherever bloom is in the hearts of men; the author of all virtue and all good words, obeyed by gods, fair and causing all things fair, making men to be of one mind at feasts; pilot, defender, saviour, in whose footsteps all should follow, chanting strains of love.

In the Buddhist plan of salvation, the believer becomes free (1) from all evil desires, (2) from ignorance, (3) from doubt, (4) from heresy, and (5) from unkindness and vexation. The first enmity the awakened believer has to fight against is sensuality, and the last is unkindness; and the highest point he can reach—the point above purity, above justice, above even faith—is universal charity. Till he has gained that, the believer is still bound. True enlightenment and true freedom are complete only in love.

Paul says, "The fruit of the Spirit is love." Sin is called the work of the flesh, because the flesh excites men to sin; but love is the fruit of the Spirit, because the Spirit excites the heart to righteousness.

Love leads the train of Christian graces, for the "greatest of these is love." The moral philosophies of men fail to disclose the origin of true love and the supremacy of its operations in uplifting man and the nations. But Paul shows that love of the true sort is the "fruit of the Spirit" as a divine life in man. If this is accepted as truth, then all loves not excited by the Spirit of God, in the souls of men, are false loves; for two kinds of love are recognized in the "word" and in the "consciousness of man." "Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." "The love of money is the root of all evil." "Who hate the good and love the evil." "If any love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

The love inspired by God is the fruit of the Spirit, and we must discriminate between that and the false loves awakened in us by the works of the flesh. True love is summed up in two commandments: (1) Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; and (2) Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." Love, in this place, is a spiritual condition, and embraces only the good and the permanent.

1. Love indicates correspondence in character. "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Love is the great power that attracts similar characters. It is the center of spiritual force, the correspondence between man and God, the bond of union between men of like spiritual conditions.

It is easy to determine character by what men love, for love is the sign of the inner life. Men are going downward so long as they love beneath themselves. To love "the things of the world"—Perishable things; when man himself is immortal —is to die in the end. Hence, man is always better or worse than he appears, because what he loves is the key to his character. If he loves wicked associations, the vices of the world, the lusts of the flesh, similar qualities reside in his soul. If he loves God, purity, the graces of the gospel, his soul is rising toward heavenly heights. Love is the great impulse that moves heavenward or hellward.

2. Love is, therefore, the witness of the spiritual condition. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples: if ye have love to another." "If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" We make love, therefore, one of the tests of our sonship—love to God and love to man. They do not exist apart. If the love of God is in us, we will love what God loves and hate what God hates. "Love your enemies." This is a fruit of the Spirit. The natural man cannot do this. No human philosophy ever suggests it: it is of God; for in this was manifested the love of God toward us, because God sent His only Son into the world, that we might live through Him, and that while we were sinners, Christ died for us." "We love Him because He first loved us."

3. Love is the greatest and richest fruit of the Spirit in the soul. It is so much of God in man. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." We love Him because He first loved us." Love thinks no evil, bears all things, hopes all things, endures all things. Love never fails. All professions and works may fail, but love loves on to the end. Love is God at work in the soul, casting out evil, reconstructing the emotions, filling the heart with affection, and flooding the life with good. It banishes evil from the domain of the soul, pours a tide of life out into a stream of good will to men, and sends the light of an illumined spirit into a dark and dreary world.

"Love is the sweetest flower that blows;
Its blossom never dies.
On earth among the saints it grows,
And ripens in the skies.
Pure, glowing red and spotless white,
Its purest colors are:
Nor can the tongues of angels tell
How bright its colors are." W. W. S.

A QUESTION.

The following question is laid before THE SUN readers for meditation and reply, since it comes from one anxious and interested:

"December 30, 1929.

"J. O. Atkinson, Editor,
Elon College, N. C.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Please tell why the State of North Carolina allows filling stations to remain open on Sundays, selling everything lawful and some things that are unlawful, perhaps. This is found at nearly every cross-roads and is a gathering place for the men and boys of the community when they should be attending Sunday School and Church. I do not wish to stir up anything, but I do wish I could start something that would stop this practice wherever it may exist in North Carolina.

"Sincerely yours,

"R. W. B."

We wish this question could be answered for our inquirer in a way that would help bring to the attention of the people the necessity of observing the Holy Sabbath Day. We forget often that the Sabbath was instituted of our Lord and is, threefore, sacred, and he who violates it, not only breaks a human, but a divine law, and does so to his own hurt. All of God's laws are benevolent, and were and are enacted out of a benevolent hand and motive. This benevolence is always the best, not only for benevolence as such, but for economy as well, and for all that makes for the best interest of mankind everywhere. Therefore, every law of God that is violated brings injury in some way to those who violate it, and does violence both to the best economy and to the highest benevolence.

EVIL SUGGESTION.

There is an evil which may be noted in many cities of our land. Handsome show-windows are filled with papers having pictures upon which no one should look. Theatrical and movie advertisements with evil suggestions are posted in prominent places. These things should be prohibited by law, but inasmuch as the law fails, Christians should guard their purity by closing their eyes as far as possible against them.

Art is often the handmaid of impurity. The human form is so presented in sculpture or colors as to suggest evil. This statement is heresy in the opinion of many artists and connoiseurs. "Evil be to him who evil thinks." They quote these words of a most impure man of a most impure age. Or they quote the Scripture and tell us that "to the pure, all things are pure." A text which, properly interpreted, would rule out many pictures from our art galleries, and some music.

It does not mean that pure persons may look at or handle impurity without taint, but that a pure person will have nothing to do with impurity. To the honest, all things are honest. Can an honest man therefore steal without sin? No! An honest man loves and delights in honesty. So a pure man will seek purity, and will shun impurity either in art or literature or anything else.

He will avoid it in his conversation. He will avoid hearing or seeing or thinking of that which may lead to it. He will close his ears to, and show his disapproval of stories and jokes which suggest it. He will take no pleasure in scandals. Love "thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity."

Christians have a duty in this regard, the importance of which can hardly be over-estimated. —The Presbyterian.

A gentleman, walking along the shore, thought he would carry home one of the pretty limpet shells all about him on the rocks. He tried to pick up one, but the limpet clung so firmly to the rock that he could not pull it off. He was surprised that so little a creature should be too strong for him. He next tried to push the limpet off the rock with his cane, but he could no more move it than the rock to which it clung so firmly. He said to himself, "I'll see whether I cannot have you yet." So he sat quietly and watched the limpet, to see if it would stop clinging and move about. For a long time it held on. Then it moved a little. With one sudden grasp he took it in his hand, because it was not clinging to the rock.

Satan knows he has no power to harm us when we are cleaving to our Rock, Christ Jesus, so he lurks about for his chance when we have abated our watchfulness and prayer. What we all need is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. With Christ enthroned in our hearts, "that wicked one toucheth us not."—Selected.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. Jesse Thompson Whitley, D. D., son of Mills William and Margaret Ann Ward Whitley, was born in Suffolk, Va., February 6, 1850. He was educated in Suffolk Schools, Richmond College and the University of Virginia. He was converted at Providence Methodist Church in 1865, while W. B. Wellons, D. D., was conducting a revival. He united with the Suffolk Christian Church, of which Dr. Wellons was pastor.

After he completed his education, he assisted Dr. Wellons in the publication of THE CHRISTIAN SUN from 1867 to December, 1869. He was licensed to preach by the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference in 1869, and ordained as an elder in 1871.

In November, 1872, he married Miss Mattie S. Cathon, of Suffolk, and she became the mother of two daughters—Mary Esther and Annie McTysine, who became the wife of Rev. C. E. Pleasants, who, at this time, is the pastor of Oxford Methodist Church, in Suffolk. He was pastor of Christian Churches in Isle of Wight County, Va., in 1872-1876. Upon the death of Dr. Wellons, February 16, 1877, he became pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN until March, 1879. He had occupied that position since 1876 on account of the failing health of Dr. Wellons.

In March, 1879, he withdrew from the Christian Church and united with the Virginia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained in that Church until his death in Norfolk, Va., November 1, 1929. After serving as pastor in Parkersburg, W. Va., and Catlettsburg, Ky., he was elected chaplain of the University of Virginia, serving in that capacity during the sessions of 1881-1882 and 1882-1883.

After his chaplaincy at the university, he served as pastor in Salisbury, Md., and cities in Virginia, including Norfolk; then as pastor of Ashland Methodist Church and chaplain of Randolph-Macon College. He served seven years as presiding elder in the bishop's cabinet.

In November, 1915, on account of the condition of his vocal organs, he retired to the superannuate relation and settled in Norfolk, Va. In 1916 he was chosen as a member of the news staff of the Virginian-Pilot, and later as a member of the editorial staff, writing chiefly on moral and religious subjects. He began with "Monday Morning Message." After several years, he changed his subject to the "Views of a Veteran." About seven hundred of his messages were published and continued up to his death.

In 1923 he published selections from these Monday articles in a book, "Filled With Messages from Thee." He published another book from these articles called "What Jesus Said About Heaven."

He received the degree of doctor of divinity from Randolph-Macon College in 1904. March 11, 1919, he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Preachers' Relief Society of the Vriginia Conference, and also a director, and continued in both offices until his death.

Dr. and Mrs. Whitley celebrated their golden wedding on November 21, 1922, in a reception tendered by the pastor and congregation of Park Place Methodist Church, Norfolk, Va.

Dr. Whitley preached his first sermon in the Suffolk Christian Church, and his last sermon in the same Church and from the same text, 1 Cor. 13:13, "Now abideth faith, hope, charity: these three; but the greatest of these is charity," on October 27, 1929.

Upon his return to his home in Norfolk that evening he entered the house, went to bed and passed away in peace, November 1, 1929, and was buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, November 3rd. His faithful wife, his two daughters, his only granddaughter, Dorothea Pleasants, and his son-in-law, Rev. C. E. Pleasants, were at his bedside when he entered into rest to receive his welcome and a crown.

When the life-size portrait of Rev. William Brock Wellons, D. D., founder of the Suffolk Christian Church, given by Mr. John T. Griffin, a banker, of Portsmouth, Va., and painted by Mr. MacRobbins Long, son of Judge B. F. Long, of Statesville, N. C., was unveiled on Sunday, October 8, 1916, Dr. Whitley was present and offered the prayer, and then preached at the evening service from Acts 11:24, "The Noblest Work of God." He loved Dr. Wellons and the Christian Church, and the Church loved him. He was a true Christian, a fine writer, a faithful friend, a lover of God, mankind, and home.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

Dr. Henry Louis Smith has been president of Washington and Lee University for the past eighteen years. Prior to that time, he was president of Davidson College, in North Carolina, for several years. President Smith has been a real factor in Southern education of the Christian type. His voice has never been lacking in a crisis, calling the people back to the fundamental thing in college education—the development of Christian character. With all his insistence on Christian character, he has also been insistent on scholarship. He has wedded scholarship and Christian charcater together in a most wholesome way in his two college presidencies of the past quarter of a century.

President Smith retired from the presidency of Washington and Lee on December 31, 1929, and has returned to Greensboro, N. C., his boyhood home, to take up his residence for the remaining years of his life, which his friends hope will be many. He has announced that he will give himself to rest and the preaching of the doctrine of Christian education. He is certainly entitled to the rest, and as to his ability to preach Christian education, that is freely acknowledged by all.

Just on the eve of his retirement from the presidency of Washington and Lee, Dr. Smith issued a farewell message to the alumni of that institution. That message is so very appropriate at this time—and not only for Washington and Lee, but for a great many other institutions—that I am going to quote from it rather freely. Dr. Smith says:

"While the post-war development of our high schools is still overcrowding every institution of higher education with young women applying for admission, the rush of young men to colleges and universities has so far subsided that three-fourths of our smaller American colleges opened last fall with an unexpected falling off of men students; and since they must compete with immense State colleges liberally financed by taxation and offering every sort of scholarship and free tuition, these smaller institutions are faced with still further loss of patronage and are now energetically campaigning for new students.

"To maintain our present attendance without offering free tuition or scholarships is, in my judgment the 'big job' of my successor. I have already organized a wide campaign toward this end, and have engaged a well-trained field agent, the first in many years, to carry on this work next summer."

Dr. Smith offers some very pertinent suggestions to the Washington and Lee alumni, telling them what they can do to assist their alma mater. Among these are the following:

"1. Visit your leading local editor. Ask if he received and publishes regular news items from W. & L. Tell him you are anxious to see such news as often as possible.

"2. Visit the principal of the high school. Talk up W. & L. to him. Find out what graduates he has sent, whether he receives the W. & L. bulletins, and whether he will furnsih you with a list of his finest boy-seniors with their home mailing address. Then send these at once to W. & L.

"3. A third method of aiding your alma mater is to visit any parents among your friends who have boys preparing for college, explain to them the many social and educational advantages of W. & L. and urge them to procure a catalogue and make a study of the institution.

"4. A fourth step is to send to W. & L. a list of the names and mailing addresses of any boys (or of their parents) who should be on our mailing list of possible students.

"5. Another sorely needed line of action is to remember your alma mater in your will, and urge others to do the same, letting the university know the name of every one whose will contains such a bequest."

If the Elon alumni will insert "Elon" in these suggestions where Dr. Smith has used "W. & L.," they will find this message very, very appropriate for our alma mater and her needs. I pass on to Elon's friends and alumni this stirring message from President Smith as a New Year suggestion at this time.

YOUTH AND RELIGION.

The new awakening of the Church to the value of the religion of youth is the most significant discovery of modern times. There has never been a more determined effort to interest young people than at the present. There are many who feel that youth needs religion merely for the purpose of reforming the ills of society. For such people, religion becomes only a means to an end, and religion is merely the means for gaining a social purpose. Fine as this may be, there must be something larger and more worth while than just a social purpose. Others say that youth needs religion to provide a cultural background for life. Much as this is necessary, we must have a greater basic value than this. A third group often claims that youth needs religion to conserve religious knowledge and to maintain the Church. Here religion becomes an end in itself, and thus is ofttimes a barrier, actually keeping people away from God.

A greater reason, however, why young people need religion is fundamentally because religion is the basis of life. And youth's first task is to achieve a personal religion. They need this in order that they might find themselves and find life, for religion is life. It is this purpose that will develop young people to their fullest capacity. This is more than a social purpose, or a religious purpose. It is both, and even more. Youth have characters to form, ideals to mold, and lives to live. Character and ideals are the foundation stones upon which the superstructure of life is to be built.

Youth needs religion for the construction and reconstruction of human life, for this is the thing young people are continually doing day by day—constructing and reconstructing their lives. There is a strong tendency toward change in the normal adolescent life. The direction which these changes take depends upon the ideals which youth erect for themselves. We all admit that the greatest life that was ever lived was that of Jesus. This ideal life should be held up as the goal of all life, upon which to construct and reconstruct our lives.

Youth needs religion and desires a religion, but it must be a religion for youth or none at all. They are not interested in a pious religion of nominal Christians; nor are they interested in a religion of theological propositions or dogmas. It is the religion of the young man, Christ Jesus, as He lived and taught it, that will have its appeal for youth. His religion was partly the product of His own youthful struggles, ideals, and hunger for righteousness and truth. The sort of religion that youth desires is one that will be a practical religion, one that will help in "living life as they face it today in a modern world, a religion of sympathy and helpfulness in reaching the capacity of that larger, richer, fuller life.

A religion that contains "the spirti of Jesus" is the kind of religion that will help young people solve their problems. They do not care for a religion that is just to imitate. If they endeavor merely to imitate Jesus, they will find that there are phases of modern life for which the life of Jesus offers no direct guide. There are modern problems to face today that did not exist in Jesus' day. Jesus never narrowed men down to a single mold, commanding them to do such and such a thing in one definite way. His was a religion of the "spirit," not of the law. If youth can so study His life and teachings, and thus live in His spirit, they shall have a personal force of character, a worthy ideal, and a tremendous power that will help them face the problems of life.

Youth desires a religion that will express itself in daily life in all its phases. Life is life, and it is impossible to separate it into little compartments and speak of business life as separate from the Christian life, or social life as separate from the Christian life. Each is inclusive of all of life. And the religion of youth is a religion that will express itself in all they think, feel, do, or say. Their religion will express itself in solving problems of every-day life. Our young people's conferences throughout the country are evidences of this. These conferences—with themes dealing with such problems as the home, the Church, citizenship, race relations, modern social problems, industrial problems, international problems of war and peace—portray to the adult world that young people are thinking in terms of daily Christian living. The type of religion which they are demanding will help to Christianize business, industries, inventions, and institutions. In the background of the mind of youth lies a personal interest that their fellow-men may live larger and fuller lives. Life is the dominant interest of these young people because they are living in the prime of life with all of its enthusiasm and vigor. They want others to share in this personal religion which they have come to know. These young people express their religion less in terms of professionfi and more in terms of action; less in mere thoughts, and more in that way of life which Jesus proclaimed He came to give to the world.—Rev. Frank J. Wright, in Herald of Gospel Liberty.

"Do you know," said the successful merchant pompously, "that I began life as a barefoot boy?"

"Well," said the clerk, "I wasn't born with shoes on, either."—Christian Advocate.

RING OUT THE OLD, RING IN THE NEW!

The passing of time would be a very stern fact, which would harden and discourage most people if we did not believe we were going somewhere. Each day is saved from being at worst a farce and at best a tragedy because it really has no beginning and no ending, except in the arbitrary measurements of clock and parallax and because there is always the Great Companion. If there were only night and silence after a day of beautiful work, joyful associations, and limitless dreams, we should be of all intelligences the most miserable. But life is not duration of darkness. It is an endless recurrence of sunbursts. On the watch-tower when night shuts out distance and objects and hideous powers may creep on us unaware breaks forth the cry, "Watchman, what of the night?" And from the heights comes the certain answer, "The morning cometh."

This word is for those who are passing down the valley through the shadows; it comes when we contemplate the long, long flight of the years and those carking experiences that break the heart and cause the strongest soul to bend and tremble.

It is the swift flight of time which dazzles us, confuses us and is often our undoing. But it is precisely that which is, which ought to be our hottest spur to action. If we are going to do anything in this life we must act quickly. Probably a score of times within two months I have heard people say: "The year is so short, what has gone with it?" Meaning, I suppose, "why has the year been so short?"

If we press the thought, what has the year brought and taken away, it may become very disconcerting. In the loveliest and most touching of all the old year poems, George D. Prentice exclaims, thinking at midnight as the old year crossed over into eternity and the new came on to take its place: "The year has gone, and with it many a glorious throng of happy dreams."

This is solemn, though neither doleful nor sad, but it takes a man to contemplate it without dimming eyes.

Lessons knock urgently at the mind and heart of the thoughtful. It is good for a man to have his soul stormed after this fashion. Business men take stock of their goods that they may know how strong or weak they are, and prepare for new adventures or retrenchments in their business. Every wise man who believes in the moral order, and in the worth of character, reviews his own life from time to time that he may readjust himself to God, Christ, his Church, his neighbors, and his country if he find he has drifted, and that he may see whether there are new works for him to take up, or new paths that beckon him to higher duty and larger opportunity. We know a man who periodically visits a physician incognito to see whether he is physically fit and to get counsel about his body. He asks to be dealt with scientifically, as though he were just a specimen and not a human being. The physician not knowing him, has no temptation to spare his feelings or exaggerate his chance of life, gives advice without color or bias. My friend disciplines himself accordingly and feels the stimulus of a fresh beginning.

If our past year is an open book, written full by memory and conscience, the recording angels in our souls, and assized by our own judgment in the sight of God we shall have to weep over sins committed and possible wounds and real damage to other souls. The "unkind cut," the stones thrown in to muddy the springs of life, and the ghosts of wasted days and hours come around

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

GOD'S GOOD WORK GOES ON.

Whoever undertakes a work of righteousness lays himself liable to criticism. This does not indicate that all who are criticized are engaged in the work of righteousness. It does state a universal truth, however. The more righteous the cause, the more biting and vigorous the criticism. They had stoned the prophets and persecuted them before Christ's day; but the most determined and bitter persecution was directed against the Christ of God. They did Him to death with a hatred, a madness and a passion not manifested before. And, whatever has been challenged and championed solely in His name and for His sake since they crucified Him has evoked the severest criticism and called forth the bitterest prejudice and most scathing criticism.

Take the item and enterprise of foreign missions as an example. This enterprise was instituted solely in His name, out of His commission and in keeping with His will. He was the Sponsor and the Founder of the program. And in so far as that program has been carried out, the Church alone has had to undertake it and to execute it. There is no other agency or organization in this field than that of the Church. There are States, orders, fraternities, benevolent societies, that assist in the philanthropic and benevolent work of the Church; but only the Church itself undertakes the missionary task, and this solely in the name and for the sake of Him who instituted it. And from the day He instituted this most divine of all His enterprises, it has been the subject of bitterest criticism, abuse, animosity and prejudice. For example, they tell it among the Churches, and some Church members are ready to believe it, that it takes one-half the money for foreign missions to get the other half over; that those who have the gospel sent them do not appreciate it and will not hear it; that there are interests and enterprises all about home, and so if we are able to help anybody, let us help those about us and who, we know, are in need. And yet so far as we know, these critics have never organized a movement to do the work differently from what the Church is doing it, nor have they sought any other channel through which to reach and redeem the unsaved millions of the earth.

Now, in spite of all the criticism, abuse and prejudice, God's work goes marching on, and the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation for all who hear and accept it. Drs. Harland P. Beach and Charles H. Fahs, in the "World Missionary Atlas," show that there are now throughout the non-Christian world "29,188 foreign missionaries; 151,735 native workers, who are conducting Christian work in 4,598 stations and 50,513 out-stations; 36,246 Churches, with 3,614,154 communicants who shine like stars amid the darkness of the non-Christian world." This heartening report from this authentic source continues:

"Adherents swell the number of the Christian community to 8,342,378, and an uncounted host stands upon the threshold of the kingdon; 2,440,148 pupils are being educated in 50,079 missionary schools ranging from kindergartens to great universities; 858 hospitals and 1,686 dispensaries treated in a recent year 4,788,258 patients in the name and spirit of the Great Physician. Millions of pages of tracts, books and periodicals are annually published. The Bible is being distributed in 853 languages and dialects at the rate of over 11,000,000 copies a year. The British and Foreign Bible Society prints five tons of Bibles every day, and the American Bible Society since its founding in 1816 has issued 70,082,448 volumes. The breadth of Christ-like sympathy is movingly exemplified in a great hospital for the insane, 104 leper asylums, 32 schools for the blind and deaf, and 361 orphanages. For this vast and varied work, the Churches of Europe and America, in a recent year, gave $69,555,148. The very recital of such statistics impresses one with the magnitude of the enterprises. Dry though they sound, to him who knows their meaning, as a missionary once said, they are clothed with the flesh and blood of those whose lifework they represent.

"It is wonderful record when one considers the comparatively brief period in which missionary work has been conducted, the difficulty of inducing people to change hereditary beliefs, the limited resources of mission boards, and their support by only a part of the membership of the home Churches. Foreign missions are not only the vastest, but the most successful of the varied enterprises of the Christian Church. One thanks God and takes courage."

And so the work of God in reaching, redeeming and saving to the uttermost goes marching on, while the critics criticize and the carpers carp.

PORTO RICO.

It seems a long time since I had a real talk with SUN readers, but surely have not forgotten you. I have been very busy, that is all; but my prayers and thoughts have been with you always, and my wish is for your success and happiness for the coming year. May your lives be filled with spiritual riches.

So much has taken place since I wrote last that I really do not know where to start; so I will just leave my long story for a future mail, and now take the opportunity of thanking every one of you for your thoughtful and cheerful greetings and gifts which you have sent me on this Christmas Day. I assure you that you have made my Christmas a real one, not only by your joyful message and beautiful gifts, but also by sending me boxes of clothing, so that I may be able to make others happy by giving them the clothes that are needed to make their Christmas happy also.

Wish to thank you again, and wish for all a Joyous New Year.

Sincerely yours,

VICTORIA E. ADAMS.

IN THE BEGINNING GOD.

Among the many mysteries of life that the wisdom of man cannot fathom is, when was the beginning? Some say 4004 B. C.; others say millions of years ago; and still others do not question when and how, but are satisfied with the consolation of the fact that "in the beginning, God." It is a source of no little joy to attribute the beginning of things to an all-wise, all-powerful, all-loving Father.

Not only was God in the beginning of this world in which we live, but the same God was in the beginning of millions of other worlds round about us, as well as all minor things.

In the beginning of humanity was God, who breathed into man the breath of life and he became a living soul. God was in the beginning of the most sacred institution in the world—the home. From this holy and sacred institution have come the great men and women of all ages. No man-made institution or organization can ever take the place of the home, no matter how much stress we may place upon them, and many of them are doing great things in our Master's name.

In the beginning of the Church was God, and He has stood by it during all these years of struggle, and assures us that victory will be ours. The Church is here to bless man, that he may honor and glorify God through this channel. It is here to stay, even "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

In the beginning of 1930, God. He has richly rewarded each one of His children during last year, and realizing His presence in the beginning of a New Year, let's make it the crowning year of Christendom.

In the beginning of every new day, God. In the beginning of every business transaction God should be there; but so often we dismiss Him and allow the devil full control.

God is the beginning of every life, and I can see no reason why He should ever be crowded out, that that life should wander away in sin and suffer the agony that must come to the sinner.

In the beginning of the great missionary movement, God. "Go ye, therefore, into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

In the beginning of the orphanage, God. "As oft as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me."

It is a great thought to think of God in the beginning of all things, but a still greater thought that He continues throughout this life, and is the beginning of every high and holy thought that we have. This same God who was in the beginning of this present life will be in the beginning of our future lives that shall have no end.

Roanoke, Ala. G. L. VEAZEY.

OUR ENLARGING PROGRAM.

Who of us has yet fully realized all the implications of our Christian union program? Probably no one. After praying, talking, hoping, conferring, resolving for more than a century that real Christian union might come, we are beholding with our own eyes some of its first fruits. Scarcely can we apprehend the fact that Christian union is under way. We should be the happiest people living, for we are beholding the actual working out of that for which we have existed. By solemn and unanimous vote, with tears of joy, two bodies, including more than a million members, have taken the initial step. What an enlarged fellowship! Indeed, what an opportunity to enrich our very lives! How we rejoice when, in a local Church, a hundred decide to cast their lot with us and go our way. At once we plan larger programs, increase our equipment, and make new Christian contacts. So now, in our larger fellowship, we must undertake for God that which neither group dreamed of doing alone heretofore. This one union is not a consummation, but, rather, a beginning.

Now, the details of the union must be worked out with care and faithfulness. The new agency —the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches—must be developed. The year of 1930 will necessitate many important conferences and united programs between our two former bodies; and, too, a more vigorous effort to enlist other bodies. Both the Christian forces and outside forces are watching the experiment with keen interest. There must be no failure. The venture has been made, and it must be supported with prayer, money and intelligence. We must make it possible for our General Convention to function through our Christian Unity Commission. To withhold needed co-operation or funds would be tragic. The Christian Church has never engaged in a greater movement. Some parents took their children to the Piqua Convention so that in later years they might witness to the fact that they had been present in that momentous hour of the Church's history. Every man, woman and child should have a definite part in helping to carry forward this history-making enterprise.

Christian Stewardship.

This is another mighty movement which is beginning to grip the Christian forces of the world. It is stirring all the denominations. Its spiritual message likewise must now be speedily carried to every nook and corner of our whole brotherhood. Our laymen, women, children, Churches and homes are entitled to the message of Christian stewardship from our hands. It is fundamental, basic and essential. We have caught the vision, but for lack of funds we have not been able to carry out that vision. We must not delay longer.

The Urbana Convention directed that the Bureau of Stewardship "conduct an aggressive, extensive and intensive campaign throughout our whole denomination until every last Church of our brotherhood shall have felt the impact of the stewardship message."

The Piqua Convention again charged the bureau in strongest terms to promote the stewardship work. Stewardship has come to be a recognized need for our homes and Churches, for our children, as well as for our adults. The Stewardship Bureau, like the Christian Unity Commission, has no funds except those that come from the General Convention treasury. Your offerings on Sunday, January 26th, or a nearby date, and the payment of your full allotments, if your Church is on the General Convention budget system, will help to make possible the carrying out of these two programs of the kingdom—Christian union and Christian stewardship. Do you want these agencies to function? The January offerings and the budget Churches will largely make possible the success or failure of the Convention work in this strategic hour to which we have come.

WARREN H. DENISON.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

We profoundly believe that God is leading our nation and other nations toward an hour of destiny. Among lovers of righteousness and peace in all lands, the hope now abounds that mankind may be delivered from the menace of war and preparations for war. The approaching conference on naval armaments in London, on January 21, 1930, may well be regarded as one of the turning points of history. A divine significance is attached to this momentous occasion by those who believe that nations, no less than individuals, are subject to God's immutable moral laws. To all loyal citizens and to all lovers of humanity, it is a time of opportunity, and especially to those who have seen in Jesus Christ the way toward a warless world.

We look with deep gratitude upon the eventful years that have elapsed since the convening of the Washington Conference on the Limitation of Armament. On that occasion, naval armaments were partially reduced. This achievement has been followed by the establishment of the Permanent Court of International Justice and by the negotiation and ratification of the Locarno treaties and the peace pact of Paris. By the terms of this pact, fifty-seven nations, including the United States, have solemnly accepted the obligation to renounce war as an instrument of national policy and have pledged themselves never to seek the settlement of disputes except by pacific means.

The time has come for the nations of the earth to do further honor to their pledges. It is not enough to profess peace. That has been done before. Peace must now be practiced.

The issues of the London Conference are so momentous for all the moral and spiritual interests of mankind that we unite with our fellow-Christians in other lands in prayer and renewed consecration to the ideals of our Risen Lord. In accordance with the action taken by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the leaders of the Free Churches of Great Britain, we earnestly recommend that our pastors and the members of our Churches and congregations observe Sunday, January 19, 1930, as a "Day of Prayer" for God's blessing on the conference.

Let there be throughout the Church a spirit of penitence and prayer. Let us condemn the mad folly of developing world policies upon the basis of guns and battleships. Let us proclaim with boldness the imperishable truth that righteousness, justice and security cannot be established by the violence of military might, and that enduring world peace can be achieved only as nations trust one another and practice the virtues on which peace inevitably rests.

The calling of the London Conference has brought the peoples of the earth to another fork in the highway of human history. To the left lies the old way of jealousy, selfishness and unrestrained ambitious nationalism; to the right, the path of mutual trust, co-operation and brotherhood. The one leads to the practical repudiation of the pledges of the peace pact of Paris, and to increasing reliance on the instruments of slaughter and destruction. The other leads to the practice of the ideals and spirit of the pact and to increasing reliance on international co-operation, good will and justice. Which road the nations take at the London Conference will depend on the spirit and the will of the peoples and their obedience to their common Father.

FEDERAL COUNCIL.

THE BLESSED ADVERSITY.

It is safe to say that practically all of the men who have achieved distinction in the world began their life's career under very unfavorable circumstances. There may be exceptions to this rule; but if so they are very rare. It was the difficulties in the way that stimulated their energies and brought out what was in them. And yet these very men who have developed their strength by conquering their difficulties, and have won their victories by their own pluck and perseverance, are trying to make life easy for their sons and daughters so that they will not have to struggle as their fathers did.

Somebody says, "Obstacles are things to be overcome." And in the overcoming of them one develops strength to conquer other and greater obstacles. The list of notable men who began life at the very bottom of the ladder, and who climbed to the top by their own pluck and perseverance, is a very long list indeed. The immortal Homer began life as a beggar; Aesop was a slave; Demosthenes, the son of a sword-maker; the poet Akenside was a butcher's boy; Jeremy Taylor was the son of a barber; Ben Johnson was a bricklayer; Hugh Miller, a mason; David Livingstone, a factory worker; William Carey, a shoe cobbler; Faraday, a bookbinders appr'entice. This list might be stretched out indefinitely. The one thing to be remembered is that hardships and difficulties are really blessings in disguise.

Lesson III—January 19, 1930.

Jesus Begins His Ministry.

Golden Text: "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 4:17.

Lesson: Matt. 4:12-25.

We are studying today the beginning of a ministry that was destined to transform the world and thus to write the most thrilling chapter in history. The ministry of Jesus is, by all odds, the most important and amazing thing in history.

"Now, when Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison—" John had been cast into prison because he had told Herod the King to his face about his sin in living with another man's wife. There was nothing soft about this fellow John the Baptist. The message of the kingdom must be proclaimed, and Jesus went from Jerusalem and vicinity where he had been for a few months, into Galilee. It is significant that he went from the center of Judaism into Galilee, whose inhabitants were predominantly Phoenecian and Grecian, with some Arabs. Their open-mindedness was more fertile soil for the gospel, and in this they were a type of the whole Gentile world in contrast with the Jews.

He Came Unto His Own, and His Own Received Him Not.

"And leaving Nazareth—" Nazareth, it must be remembered, was Jesus' home town, and he had to leave it because the people became so enraged because He would not perform miracles or signs for them, and because He very frankly told them that God was interested in the Gentiles as well as the Jews—He came and dwelt in Capernaum, or He came to live in Capernaum. It must never be forgotten that Jesus lived a life, and it was the life He lived that gave point and power to the words and deeds of Jesus. It is just as true of those of us who preach or teach. Capernaum was a busy, sea-side town, lying on the main route to the north and east, and it was inevitable that the fame of Jesus would spread.

The Beginning of the Things Jesus Did and Said.

"Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Like John the Baptist, Jesus called for repentance, a change of mind, of heart, of life, of motive; and like John He proclaimed the coming of the kingdom of God or of heaven. The kingdom of God was no new phrase to the Jews, but Jesus gave a new interpretation and a new meaning to it. It was the reign of God in human hearts, the doing of the will of God on earth as it is done in heaven. Jesus accepted nothing less than this as the objective of His life as well as the subject of His preaching.

Calling the First Disciples.

"And Jesus, walking by the Sea of Galilee, saw two brothers, Simon called Peter and Andrew, his brother, casting a net into the sea; for they were fishers." Not very promising material, it would seem from a casual, human viewpoint, especially in the light of the magnitude and the exacting nature of the task. Several interesting facts are to be noted in the call of these first disciples. They were real men—rough, rugged, out-of-door men; men accustomed to wresting a living from nature in the hazardous method of fishing. They were busy men—they were casting a net. They were brothers, and Jesus capitalized on the family relationships. They were men who responded to the higher call of life—they left their nets and followed Jesus. They were men of large faith—it took faith to leave a means of livelihood to follow an itinerant and, as then, an unknown preacher and teacher.

"Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Come after me, learn of men, become like me—that is what Christian discipleship means. I will make you fishers of men. Fishers they were; fishers of men they were to become. Christ exalts the ordinary vocations of life as well as calls to new vocations.

"And straightway they left their nets and followed Him." They had a sense of values, and they were men of action. Let those who think of and picture Jesus as a "pale Galilean" account for the fact that men like Peter and Andrew, James and John—they were called sons of thunder—followed Him. We call Him Master, and we do well, for such He is.

"James and John mending their nets." Again it was men who were busy; men who had the knack of getting things done. They left both their nets and their ships and their father. He who loveth not Jesus more than family relationships is not worthy of Jesus. It is to be noted that they did not leave their father "in the lurch." He had servants, and he had a business. These two brothers—sons of thunder—were to become two of the world's immortals.

The Three-Fold Ministry of Jesus.

"And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people."

Jesus went about teaching. In fact, He is known as the Great Teacher. In spite of the fact that He lived nearly twenty centuries ago, and in spite of the amazing progress of modern education, we have never gone beyond Jesus' ideals and methods as a teacher. What is more, we cannot go beyond them. All that we can ever hope to do is to come up to them. Modern educators still go to Jesus for the secret of good teaching, and increasingly even secular educators are going to Jesus for the subject-matter as well as the method. Unless education can embody the spirit and ideals of Jesus, it can never be full-orbed and complete.

Jesus went about preaching. It is almost impossible to say when Jesus was teaching and when He was preaching. Jesus was a teaching preacher and a preaching teacher. His message was the gospel, or the good news of the kingdom. He proclaimed the love of God, the forgiveness of sins, the experience of sonship, the fact of brotherhood, the abiding values of life, the life everlasting. It was good news. It still is good news. And it still needs to be proclaimed both at home and abroad, for it is profitable both for the life that now is and that which is to come.

Jesus went about healing. Jesus gave due recognition to the importance and place of the body. Spirit was supreme, but the body was the dwelling-place of the spirit. The Christian Church has been very sound in spirit and in principle in founding hospitals and in caring for the sick. This is one of the distinguishing marks of Christianity and one of its most blessed fruits. "A deeper respect for life and a deeper sense of purity have followed as necessary consequences."

Topic: "How Can Nations Practice the Golden Rule?"—Matt. 7:12; 20:20-28.

Some Bible Hints.

Only as the leaders of nations are true Christians will they strive to obey the Golden Rule. First convert the world's leadership (v. 12).

What is wrong for the individual cannot be right for the State. States will steal from one another until they see that all stealing is wrong (v. 12).

Ambition prevents the universal practice of the Golden Rule. A desire to be foremost in service is needed (vs. 21, 26).

No nation has dared to be out-and-out Christian because no nation has had leaders who absolutely believed in Christ's principle of sacrifice (v. 27).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Nations can practice the Golden Rule by honest, above-board dealing. The spy system and secret diplomacy show that they do not do that.

When nations send their disputes to a court of arbitration, they will be practicing the Golden Rule. International justice instead of war echoes the spirit of that rule.

We can begin practicing the Golden Rule by reducing armaments. All nations at once, of course. This can be done only through international agreement.

When the nations signed the Kellogg pact, outlawing war, they were acting in the spirit of the Golden Rule. Law is always better than war; war settles nothing.

A Few Illustrations.

The way to conquer evil is to do good. The way to abolish war is to think peace and to act peacefully.

The principle behind the League of Nations is to secure equal rights for all nations and see that the smaller get a square deal. Each for all, and all for each.

President Hoover's good-will tour to South America in 1928 was a Golden Rule tour. Nations will not practice the Golden Rule until they feel good will toward one another.

To apply China's indemnity to educate Chinese students was an application of the Golden Rule. To exchange students with Mexico would build up good will and be worth more than an army.

To Think About.

Why do we believe that prayer will help international relations?

If you were President of the United States, how would you apply the Golden Rule if a foreign country insulted the United States flag?

Are we applying the Golden Rule to foreigners here at home?

Topic: "Shall We Abolish or Expand Missions? Why?"—Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 1:8.

Some Bible Hints.

To abolish missions would be like treason when the King ordered advance in the face of the enemy (v. 19).

We have no choice. We must "go" and "teach" or be false to the Master (v. 19).

Jesus alone has authority to say whether or not missions shall be abolished or expanded, and He has spoken clearly (v. 18).

If we abandon Christ's program and mission, He may abandon us. Are we prepared for that? (v. 20.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

The Church is a service organization. It exists not for itself, but for others, not only to be blessed, but to be a blessing.

We are not the judges as to whether or not the world needs missions. Christ alone is. He can see need when we may see none.

To abolish missions is to surrender to evil, to give up the principal reason for the Church's existence. It would inevitably mean dry rot and decay.

There is plenty of room for expansion. We are but touching the fringe of missionary work. Our gifts are dreadfully small. We need expansion of heart, gifts, and life.

A Few Illustrations.

Shall doctors let sick people die by the wayside? No. How, then, can we pass a sick world by?

We may abandon obsolete missionary methods, as we give up some buildings in order to build greater and better. We should rather build bigger and better missionary work.

We must be generous enough to give up missions that are duplicating work done by other boards. Overlapping is inexcusable, in view of the world's great need.

No one that visited Russia during famine years ever proposed to abandon feeding the children there. No one that knows the needs of backward races will advocate letting them alone.

To Think About.

What missions in our denomination might well be abandoned?

What missions in our denomination most need expansion?

How can we help to increase our Church's missionary gifts?

THE CHURCH AT WORK.

Reports and Statistics.

This office has spent much time recently on financial and Christian Annual statistics and reports. May we not plead with Church clerks, Conference secretaries and pastors for more care and accuracy for 1930 reports than we have had heretofore. Some Conference secretaries are anxious that their reports shall be as full and accurate as they can possibly make them, and from those we get just the information that our denomination and interchurch organizations require. It is a joy to receive such reports. It is possible for every secretary to do it if he plans for it early and spends the necessary time. We most earnestly request pastors and official boards to see and know what kind of reports are being sent by the Church clerks to Conference. Some pastors are accurate and full, and there is no reason for inaccuracy if clerks realized their importance.

Again we request all Conferences to use the blanks prepared by the General Convention. They contain information that the denomination needs. May we not have the most hearty co-operation in reports and statistics this year?

Information Desired.

We wish the following information at once: The year in which every Christian minister was ordained; the year in which he was called to his present field, or fields; the date of the organization of every Christian Church. All this may be given on a postal card. We thank you now for your co-operation.

Jubilee Year.

The General Board at its recent session adopted a general program from January 1st to Pentecost, and authorized a committee to direct the program. The period was divided into three sections:

(a) January and February was designated as a time of instruction and inspiration.

(b) March to Easter was designated as a period of attendance, consecration and sacrificial giving.

(c) Easter to Pentecost was designated as a period of conservation and extension.

During the present period—January and February—three items were emphasized:

(a) The "Week of Prayer" should be observed in every Church.

(b) The devotional reading and study for this period are to be based on the gospel according to Luke and the Book of Acts.

(c) That during this period all pastors and Sunday School superintendents should be given information relative to the full program up to Pentecost, preferably by personal correspondence from the jubilee committee.

NOTICE.

Being a minister in the Christian Church and holding an A. B. degree from Elon College, together with four years of very successful ministry in the Eastern Virginia Conference, and am at present without work, would be pleased to get in touch with any Church or Churches without a pastor. Address all correspondence to

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

OTHER PEOPLE'S THOUGHTS.

"We desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest." —Acts 28:16-24.

The leading Jews in Rome met Paul, and were ready to hear what he had to say to them. This was much to their credit, for he was a prisoner, and their standing with the Roman government might be jeopardized by this association with Paul; nevertheless, they gave him courteous attention—better attention than he had received in Jerusalem itself.

There is a Spanish proverb which says, "He is a fool who thinks that another does not think. That thought of others is sadly common. Especially do men and women of profound conviction often ascribe the absence of thought to those who differ from them.

The air of the world is thick with cries of "Fool"! "Fool"! And Christ said that whoever cries "Thou fool" is in danger of hell. This is because crying "Thou fool" is a certain proof of spiritual pride, and men must have the humility of little children if they would enter the kingdom of heaven. Also, we learn from others, and especially from those whose minds differ from ours, so that the man who tosses aside with his "Thou fool" all contrary opinions, cannot be teachable, and cannot make much progress in spiritual living.

Take it for granted that others think. Have mind hospitality. Others may think wrongly; then reject their thoughts, but do not reject them unheard.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, who didst ever ask Thy blundering disciples what they thought of Thee, may we draw close to other minds by holding real communion with them. Drive far from us spiritual pride and all self-conceit, and may we learn Thy will and Thy wisdom from all Thy saints. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE HEAVEN-LIGHT.

"Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come."—1 Tim. 4:6-16.

John Ruskin once declared that no great picture was possible unless it had in it what he called "heaven-light." That is true of great pictures, and it is also true of great lives, which are lives of the kind that all Christians ought to live. If only earth-light is in them and no heaven-light, they are cheap, tawdry, evanescent. If heaven-light is to be discerned in them, they are glorious with a deathless glory.

How shall we put the heaven-light into our picture? How, but by living with Him who came from heaven to be the Light of the world? He alone knows how to illuminate mortality. From Him alone can we catch the heavenly radiance.

Prayer.—O Christ, shine upon us with Thy clear shining! Part the mists and drive them from our lives. Chase away the last dead clouds of spiritual night and give our souls a free sky. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SPOTS IN THE SUN.

"Become . . . without blemish in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye are seen as lights (R. V. margin, 'luminaries') in the world."—Phil. 2:12-18.

There is the great Sun of righteousness, the majestic center of the spiritual universe, and there are we, millions of little suns, each set to give a bright light in his portion of the universal order.

Paul knew nothing of sun-spots, but he anticipated the telescope, and our present knowledge of sun-spot periods, and the striking effect of those periods in producing variations in the light of the sun and also in its electric radiations. At any rate, the apostle had an intimate knowledge of us human suns, and insisted that we must be without these hindering sun-spots.

Prayer.—We cannot of ourselves, our Saviour, maintain our souls in purity. How easily they are smirched with sin! How readily they receive the taint of folly! We pray for the daily cleansing of Thy Holy Spirit, for He alone can cleanse us and keep us clean. Amen.

THURSDAY.

MERCY'S OTHER SIDE.

"Walking, and leaping, and praising God."—Acts 3:1-10.

Henry van Dyke says that "joy is as much a duty as beneficence. Thankfulness is the other side of mercy." Mercy is God's side and gratitude is our side.

God has spared our lives. God has loaded our lives with benefits. We have not deserved the benefits, we have deserved penalties instead. We realize that we are living monuments of God's mercy. Then we should be singing monuments, hallelujah memorials, leaping as we go and praising God.

It is better to have grateful hearts, even though our gratitude is silent and cold, than not to be thankful at all; but what an unworthy return for our Father's forgiving love!

Prayer.—God of all mercy and lovingkindness, we bless Thy holy name. Day after day shall we sing of Thy goodness. Night after night shall be vocal with Thy praise. All our lives we shall go leaping, and shouting our thanksgiving. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE DIFFERENCE THAT JESUS MADE.

If a man die, shall he live again? Jesus answered it in the affirmative. He did more than that. He vitalized His answer with His personality. And this has become so effective in human experience, that he who comes to know Christ realizes the possession of immortality.

Of all the questions which have been raised about the Bible, none have ever been raised against the promise of Christ to give eternal life to His followers. Men raise the question about His ability to fulfill that promise, but that Christ committed Himself to bringing man to a place by His side in the eternities is a fact of history.

This has changed the quality of man's hope. It removed the boundaries to the infinite, and man no longer strains his vision to a misty shore and an alien country, but with an eye of faith sees the homeland of his soul. We are told that until Jesus came, man had no desire to be with God. At the most, he sought not God's comradeship, but His strength, and the power he called down upon his enemies he also feared for himself. Fear of God's wrath was a constant fear of humanity. But after Jesus came, man's thought of his own destiny was changed. A God of wrath became a God of love, and that God was seen and felt in the person of Jesus Christ, and an eternity with God became man's glorious anticipation. This is man's hope today. The hope of completion, the hope of fulfillment, the hope of unfinished tasks and the hope of our reborn personality.—D. A. P.

SATURDAY.

GETTING TOO CLOSE.

"Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practice deeds of wickedness with men that work iniquity, and let me not eat of their dainties."—Psa. 141:1-10.

We are told a story that during the Civil War a steamer stopped at a landing on the Mississippi River, and a planter came on board offering the captain $10,000 if he would take a boat load of cotton to New Orleans. The captain said he could not, for he had strict orders not to allow a single bale of cotton on board. Thereupon, the planter raised his offer to $20,000, and then to $30,000, and finally to $110,000. When he reached the last figure, the captain flashed out his revolver and shouted, "Get out of this boat or I will kill you! You are getting too close to me."

This reminds us of the words of Jesus, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Such an example of a determination and a spirit to combat temptation is overwhelming. Order Satan off your boat.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, grant us vigor in the combat with the evil one. May we have the spirit that Thou didst show in the wilderness. May we be enabled to focus all our powers against him, too, and be Thou our Helper, or we shall fail. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GOD'S EXTENT OF FORGIVENESS.

"Testifying both to Jews and Greeks repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."—Acts 20:17-27.

This was the whole counsel of God. It sums up Christianity, and he who has sincere repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ has an adequate religion.

Repentance includes putting an end to sin. To go on sinning and repenting deliberately, of course is a false repentance, and no Christianity at all. But one may sin and sin again, truly repenting each time, and still keep in touch with the Lord Jesus Christ, and still obtain His pardon through faith; but all the while one must hate his sin, and be doing all he can with Christ's help to conquer it. That is the only repentance that avails and the only faith that has a place in religion.

Prayer.—Dear Father, we have faith in Thee and in our Lord Jesus Christ. We believe that Thou art our only salvation from sin. We loathe sin and we fear it, but we find ourselves powerless against it, and only in Thy almighty strength and Thy strong arm do we have any power at all. Make us more than conquerors through Him who redeemed us. Amen.

A PRAYER FOR JANUARY.

O God, our Father, Thou who art Creator and Preserver of the whole universe of matter and man; Thou who hast provided for and dost extend to every member of the human family privilege, power and place to glorify Thee through a service of love in the name of Jesus, who brought to the world the eternal gospel of love and light: teach us, Thy disciples, how to embrace and possess it; for we are Thine, and we desire to be used of Thee and for Thee until all hearts shall come into the fellowship of Thy company. Amen.

THE GRACE OF HUMILITY.

Though humility is rare, it is one of the most essential elements of true Christ-likeness. Humility can be firm without arrogance; it can live in refinement and culture without haughtiness; it can yield in non-essentials without breaking; and, united with divine love it goes a long way toward preparing the soul of man for his eternal abode with the blessed.

Humility is defined as "A modest sense of one's own merit; a state of mind without arrogance and self-assertion." Some synonyms for humble, the adjective form, are: meek, submissive, lowly, modest, unassuming. The antonyms for the same word are: arrogant, boastful, exalted, haughty, proud. The importance of this spirit in mankind is suggested by its root in the Latin language, from which we get the word "humus"—ground. And since from the soil comes the greater part of the support of animal and vegetable life, so one must not be a stranger to humility if he would be fruitful of good. It is the soil out of which all true greatness of character grows.

To be really humble does not involve being mean-spirited. It does not mean that one must have a hang-dog look and manner. It is not self-depreciation that courts praise for its affected humility. It does not mean one must doubt his ability to do his work and be as efficient as he can possibly be. "All great men know their business, and know that they know it," says Ruskin. A description of humility can be overdone after the manner of a caricature. We ask, is not this much-quoted saying such an over-statement: "Let all you do and say show that you are little and mean and vile in your own sight"? Sin makes one that way in fact, but the mighty grace of God begins at once to change and improve the subject. Paul put it this way: "For I say . . . to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith" (Rom. 12:3).

The Bible history is full of light on the subject. It shines forth from lives eminently useful, and its lack appears as a contributing cause to the downfall of those who failed and fell. It appears in the acceptable sacrifice of Abel, in the earnest and venturing faith of Abraham, in the solidity of character of Joseph, in the meekness of Moses, in the attire and habits of John the Baptist, and in the conquering zeal of the early disciples who rejoiced in their afflictions when they suffered for Christ's sake.

As long as King Saul was little in his own sight God gave him success, but when he felt his kingship and became exalted, he fell. The great trouble came into David's life when he was about half-way through his forty years of rule, and through an incident when he rushed past the humble grace of self-denial.

The Lord Jesus was a perfect example of humility. Angels sang at His birth, kings came to worship Him in His infancy, and He often communed with His Heavenly Father, and at times heard His Father speak directly to Him. This did not rob Him of humility, nor did His Nazareth home and His daily toil make Him any less a king. The Lord Jesus was not proud; He was humble. He knew that pride turned an archangel into a devil, and throughout His earthly life He steadfastly shunned the beginning of this root sin. All Christ's followers have in Him a perfect and practical example of humility, and we shall do well to learn of Him daily new lessons in this excellent grace.

The Syrian woman who begged to have the demons cast out of her daughter was so humble she simply would not become offended, even when she seemed to be rebuffed four times. She came up again as often with her earnest plea for deliverance, and finally won from the Master the heart-warming reply: "O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt." That is a story we love. Where are the people among us who are Would we stand for half the testing of faith and perseverance that this Canaanite woman did? Do we become touchy when ignored or rebuked? It is a great compliment to your Christian character if the brethren feel that they can ask you to resign some pleasure for the good of others, or mend your methods, or rectify some mistake that hurt another, or restore some broken friendship by taking the heavy end of the blame undeserved.

God has methods for making men humble. Are we enough interested to learn them and apply them? Many a good man or woman goes through life with a mere fraction of his possible usefulness because he has never been thoroughly broken down and broken in to fellowship His Lord in true humility. An engineer said to an Indian farmer: "We can put water on your land if it lies low enough." Confessing our mistakes, and faults, and sins (if we have sinned), should be sufficiently serious business to us that we shall mend matters and improve the deep ground-work of our Christian experience. The present holiness movement is becoming alarmingly lacking in humility. Who among us are watchnig all of life's standards of dress, speech, manners and general appearance so as to show we are followers of a meek and self-denying Saviour?—The Wesleyan Methodist.

to remind us. But after all, we are not bound to give in to the moods which they would throw upon us.

In view of the subtle influences that would deceive the very elect, the Satan who can seem to transform himself into an angel of light, the most earnest survey of self should be in accordance with the apostle's words: "Examine yourselves to see whether ye be in the faith." The lure of the world is intriguing and a liaison with it easy, but that means the loss of the soul. There are certain tests of spiritual wholeness, and among them just such questions as whether we love home, delight in the services of the Church, like reading the Bible, have ardor for good causes, and love for one's fellow-men. If one sees a Bible and a modern magazine with a lurid cover lying by it on the center-table, it ought to alarm him if he has an impulse to reject the Bible and seize the lurid magazine.

But our review of the past is for the purpose of getting a new grip, through a reconsecration. One may best test the influence of his life, and its direction and tendency by noting the causes with which he is allied, the big movements and ideals in which he believes. That is the way to make one's life count and his soul great. The world is being reorganized. Evil and good face each other in dead earnest. Evil is defiant, good determined, and the angels look on and burn to join the struggle. Perhaps they do. One must ally himself with some great cause and his conscience should not rest unles she believed in them all. For example, man must count himself as standing on the outside of the best that is known on this earth if he is not a member of the Church; he should stand with all law enforcement movements; he should join the war against war, and be numbered with those who believe in God and worship Him. A man is peculiarly poor and pitiable who has no God. An atheist is the sorriest figure in this world. It shows intelulect, heart, and range of soul to believe in God.

If a man feeling he cannot understand as he might wish, comes to "trust to luck" or flings himself out in the happenings of chance, he will make a pretty mess of his life. Time is not a maniac scattering dust, and God is not dead. He is the living God, His way is intelligent, and man may walk in the light even as he is in the light. Greater things than we have ever known are yet to come, and every one may help hurry them if he has a clear mind, a positive movement, and a powerful will.

Causes in which one may pool his life with others to make the world better are the Anti-Saloon League of America, the Red Cross Society, a political party that embodies the principles of the gospel, a missionary society, Sunday School, and the special movements and organizations of his own profession. In order to live life well and truly, one should have a trade, a task, a calling, a fellowship, a country and a God. His methods of growth are work, fellowship and worship. His goal is redemption and his supreme obligation to let his light shine.—Christian-Evangelist, Dec. 26, 1929.

CRUTCHFIELD ACCEPTS PASTORATE.

By way of the Durham Morning Herald comes the following item of interest: "Henderson, Jan. 2.—Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, for several years pastor of Liberty Christian Church, at Epsom, this county, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Christian Church, of Henderson, it was announced today. He will not give up his pastorate at Liberty, but will merely divide his time with the city Church, continuing his work at the Epsom Church. Rev. Mr. Crutchfield will preach his first sermon as pastor here on next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The call to Rev. Mr. Crutchfield was extended by the local congregation at a meeting of the membership held last Sunday morning, and the pastor's acceptance was announced today. The Church has been without a pastor since last November, when Rev. D. M. Spence resigned to go to Norfolk."

DISTRESSING BLINDNESS IN EAST.

The most distressing thing in the East is the large number of blind people. One may see groups of children at play, and suddenly realize, from some queer movement or gesture that they are blind. A row of blind beggars sitting alongside a wall sunning themselves is a pathetic thing to behold, but beyond pathos it is to see groups of little children grouping aimlessly in all directions, or resignedly sitting down, staring vacantly ahead, or turning in the direction of sounds that interest them. The cause of their blindness is the dread disease, trachoma. One can see flies that swarm over heaps of refuse and filth, go straight to the children's faces, buzzing from sick eyes to healthy eyes and the reverse. Nothing, or almost nothing, is done about it. Entire families are stricken. In Jerusalem, Cairo, Alexandria and Damascus a blind father and mother may be seen dragging their blind children behind them. The East needs an awakened conscience in the West to heed the words of Jesus to go preach the gospel and heal the sick.—Christian-Evangelist.

If you are in sin, you ought to weep over your sins, but you ought to begin to rejoice over the fact that Jesus Christ has borne your sins. The soul that sinneth it shall die, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Melvin E. Trotter.

OBITUARIES.

HOLMES.

Cornelius Franklin Holmes was born February 11, 1856, and died December 21, 1929. His wife, who before her marriage was Louisa Jones, is still living. He also left five children, four brothers and one sister. The funeral service was conducted at Pope's Chapel, with Rev. E. M. Carter officiating, assisted by the writer. In spite of the disagreeable weather, a host of people were present.

Bro. Holmes was one of the pillows of his Church and was noted for his faithfulness in attendance and devotion to his pastor. We shall miss him; but his work in this world has ended, and we rejoice as he goes not only to his reward but to make his greatest contribution in that city not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

R. L. HOUSE.

ANDERSON.

Miss Angeline V. Anderson was born March 17, 1844, and died November 27, 1929, aged 85 years, 8 months, and 10 days. Deceased was a member of a very prominent and useful family in Hampshire County, W. Va. She was a sister of Dea. A. S. Anderson, who during his lifetime was a strong pillar of the Timber Ridge Christian Church; also a sister of Bro. J. M. Anderson, a faithful member of the Church there now.

She was a woman of strong Christian character and a faithful member of the Methodist Church. Funeral services were held at Timber Ridge Christian Church on November 29, 1929.

A. W. ANDES.

MARTZ.

William Michael Martz was born February 26, 1852, and died December 11, 1929, at the age of 77 years, 9 months, and 15 days. Mr. Martz was a good neighbor and a kind man in his home, and well thought of in his community.

The funeral service was conducted at Bethlehem Christian Church, near his home, December 13, 122, and the body laid to rest in a cemetery in New Market by the side of his wife and daughter, who preceded him to the grave a few months. Surviving are a son and daughter. Rev. Joe French assisted the writer in the service.

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

A DECADE OF PROHIBITION.—

January 16, 1930, marks the ending of ten years of nation-wide prohibition in the United States. A movement has been launched to observe the day by the ringing of the Church bells for a period of ten minutes, beginning at noon on that day. This is planned to be national in its scope. Communities, cities, and Churches will plan such celebrations as seem to them to be appropriate.

It is in order for the friends of temperance to realize that we are standing amid the most crucial time in the history of the temperance movement in the United States. The next few years will decide the course which the history of temperance will take in this country. The greatest difficulty that prohibition is facing now is the fact greatly exploited by the politicians.

The ten years of prohibition have served to show the difficulties and the weaknesses of the plan under which we are operating. Any thoughtful mind must have been aware in the beginning that such an undertaking was bound to be attended with tremendous difficulties. And there are those who are determined that the public shall miss none of the faults and failures of the prohibition enforcement efforts. The drinking of intoxicating liquors is a social evil as old as the history of the human race. If it had been possible to completely eradicate or adequately control the situation within ten years, it would have been one of the most severe indictments upon civilization that it had not been done centuries before. We need to be reminded that we are fighting a fight of centuries, and not of decades.

It is easy enough to see and to call attention to the instances in which the prohibition laws are being flaunted. Evil is always its own advertisement. But one dreads to attempt to picture what the past ten years would have been like had we had the old-time saloon scattered over the country. We have seen the crime wave that swept the country following the war. We have seen the wanton taking of human life, which we have reaped as the result of teaching the glory of killing. But what would it have been like had the lawless element been inflamed by the drinking of liquor that was procurable on every corner.

If one were to accept the effusions of the wet press at their face value, it would make us believe that it is really interested in the cause of temperance and in the purity and sobriety of youth. But every one who knows anything about the liquor industry knows that it never has been and never will be interested in but one fact, and that is to sell the largest possible amount of liquor to the greatest number of people. It has never been concerned with the broken bodies, the blasted hopes and the wrecked homes which it has left in its wake. Liquor has never served but two purposes—the one to satisfy depraved appetites, the other to pile up ill-gotten gains for covetous men.

The time has come for honest people, who love sobriety and temperance, to serve notice on the wet press and the wet politicians and the organized liquor interests that they are determined to fight the issue through to a finish. The desperate efforts which are being made to change the present prohibition laws is the best evidence possible as to their effectiveness. If, as some claim, the drinker can get all the liquor he wants and the seller can sell all that he has for sale, why is there such an insistent demand for a change. A careful survey of both the achievements and the failures of the prohibition laws should lead to a sincere determination that the next ten years shall show what really can be achieved in the making of the United States a sober nation.

IF CHRIST HAD A MAJORITY.—

There are certain questions that never can be answered, but the fascination of them the human mind is never quite able to escape. As one thinks of the great crisis which the world has faced and is facing, one cannot but help wondering what would have happened if Christ only had a majority. What would have happened on that memorable occasion, nineteen hundred years ago, when scheming men laid their plots to arrest and put to death the Man of Galilee, if there had been a majority which was favorable to Christ? All through the pages of history there are times when great issues have hung in the balance, and when decisions have been made which brought suffering and death to millions of men and women. Looking back, it is easy to see how that the great catastrophies might have been averted if Christ had only had a majority in the councils where those issues were being decided.

Two of the world's largest aggregations of people are today standing face to face with the most crucial testing, and there is none who can tell what the future has in store for the people of China and of India. Evidently both countries have broken with the past and are about to launch out upon new and untried ways. The world is anxiously awaiting what the future will unfold.

In China there is the evidence of the failure of the old order, and the painful lack of the wisdom or the strength to establish a new and better order. There has been unloosed among Chinese youth new ideas and new aspirations that are as powerful as dynamite, but there is no regulating controlling power which can turn these mighty forces into constructive channels. The established government is not sufficiently strong to cope with the situation. In China we have the picture which the Master drew of the sheep without a shepherd, and with the human flock numbering into the millions.

There are those in China who have learned the ideals and principles of the Christ, and who are practicing them in their daily lives. But it appears that the Christian world has been so slow in the sending of the gospel and has neglected the opportunity so long that China has come to her crisis without the Christ as the dominating power among her millions of people. It might have been an entirely different story if the Church had made more of the opportunity to proclaim the Christ in China. It would not even be necessary for a majority of the people to accept the Christ if only the leaders knew how to think and work in the light of Christ's teachings.

It looks as if the cup of China's woe is never to be full. Her land has been infested with bandit sand robbers. Her cities have been pillaged by invading armies. The harvests have failed in many sections, and the press carries the news of more than 15,000 perishing in a single cold wave that sweeps the country. And there is not much that can be done for the land as long as the Christ is unknown. It is with a nation as it is with an individual, the most vital problems can only be solved by the individual and by the Christ working from within.

India is not threatened with such grave physical disasters, but the political situation is assuming alarming proportions. Lord Irwin, Viceroy of India, recently escaped assasination by seconds. If the attempt on his life had succeeded, grave consequences must have followed. The demands for liberty for India are being repeated ever louder and louder. The demand for Indian independence has called for a renewal of the promise that India is evintually to have dominion status. But the meeting of the All-India Nationalist Congress, held at Lahore during the closing days of December, declared that nothing would be satisfactory but absolute political independence for India.

The man who is today the most powerful figure in all India is Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi does not profess to be a Christian, but he professes to be shaping his policies by the teachings of Christ. A year ago Gandhi declared in favor of dominion status only that he might stay the more radical demands of other factions. Now he is forced to agree to the demands for political independence for India. And again we are forced to wonder what would happen if Christ only had a majority in India. It is not merely a question of politics. England has exercised a policy of benevolent paternalism of which the average high caste Indian knows little and cares less. Only the Christ has a program of deliverance for India's millions about whom nobody else cares.

NOTES-PERSONALS

"He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."—James.

Rev. R. A. Whitten changes his residence and address from Elon College to Reidsville, N. C. His correspondents should note the change and address him accordingly.

E. Stanley Jones, the well-known missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India and author of "The Christ of the Indian Road," has just completed a new volume, "The Christ of Every Road." It bears the sub-title, "A Study in Pentecost," and is of special timeliness in connection with the coming nineteen-hundredth anniversary of Pentecost. The volume is to be published by Abingdon Press early this year.

Rosa W. Sanderson puts it this way in the Churchman: "Thou shalt remember that when thine own ancestors were savages and barbarians, other men brought to them the saving and civilizing Christian gospel. Now that thou art rich and prosperous, beware lest thou export to Asia and Africa only thy science and efficiency, thy warships, goods and moving-picture films and forget to export the Christian message and the Christ-like spirit also."

Rev. A. R. Flowers is beginning his work for the year 1930 in Jacksonville, Fla. Bro. Flowers thinks the year 1929 has proven to be his best year. His work for the past two and a half months with the South Georgia Association has been worth a great deal to the young people of that association. This was the report of the association's president at the Ministers' Union December 27th. Bro. Flowers will be in Florida until March 1, if no longer.

Dr. E. L. Moffitt, Asheboro, former president of Elon College and ex-editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, was a very welcome visitor at the college the past week and in the home of the present editor of THE SUN, with whom he tarried for a night and talked much of other days and prospects for the future. Dr. Moffitt is deeply interested in the union of Christians and Congregationalists, and feels that such a union means much, not only for these communions, but for the Christian world.

Rev. Robert Lee House, Duke University, Durham, N. C., was recently elected president of the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School Convention. We are sure Bro. House will carry into this position intelligence, zeal and enthusiasm and will do his best to make the next session the best of all the good sessions this body has ever yet held. We congratulate the Convention on finding so worthy and capable a successor to Prof. Vaughan, of State College, who has served the Convention so well in past years.

From the Herald of Gospel Liberty: "Miss Jewell Truitt, office and field secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Christian Convention, spent last week in the Dayton office of the General Christian Education office in the interest of a closer co-operation in the work. She attended sessions of the Young People's Congress leaders the previous week and came in touch with young people from all sections of the Church in group discussions planning their work for 1930."

The Christians and Congregationalists of our negro constituency are having a two-day meeting this week, January 14-15, in Manly Street Christian Church, Raleigh, to discuss plans and the progress of union of the two Churches. There are large numbers of negro Congregationalists and Christians in North Carolina and adjoining States, and they are working toward a united plan and program, according to the decision of the Council and Convention of the two Churches. THE SUN editor, by invitation, addressed the gathering in Manly Street Church on the 15th, explaining the progress of the union thus far and the program to be pursued between the two Churches in working out the union.

From the Herald of Gospel Liberty, January 9th: "Dr. Fred B. Smith, moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches, has been awarded the Christian Herald medal for distinguished religious service as a lay evangelist, crusader for law enforcement, for world peace, and for Christian unity. The Christian Herald publishes an article on 'The Story of Fred B. Smith' in its issues of December 21 & 28. This is a distinguished recognition of the work of Dr. Smith, who is now the co-moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches and endeared himself to the Christian Church in his visits to our General Convention sessions at Urbana and Piqua and by his addresses."

There were just twelve lynchings more in the United States in 1929 than there should have been. There is never an excuse for lynching, and every such resort to madness and murder is inexcusable, especially at a time when the machinery of the law is in good running order and justice is dealt out with quite an even hand. There was one more lynching in 1929 than in 1928, which saw eleven of these murderous mob outbreaks. The report given to the public concludes: "Among the occasions cited as bringing about the lynchings were a dispute over the price of blackberries, an altercation about work followed by stabbings and writing to a white woman. In only three out of the twelve lynchings was attack on a woman given as extenuating cause, the report reads."

Never count a man old and infirm till he quits; nor is he laid on the shelf and put aside till he lays himself there by inactivity and the lack of determination to go on. These thoughts come to mind from a recent visit with our ever-youthful brother of years Rev. P. T. Klapp. Passed the eightieth milestone now and having last summer gone close to the brink, seemingly, he is back, as vigorous and determined as ever, and is ready for Church work and the pastorate. He declares he is ready, willing and anxious to serve any Church now desiring his services, and he feels as capable of rendering just as efficient and energetic service as in previous years. That is what we call consecration and determination, and a spirit that never grows old.

THE SUN'S editor had the privilege of supplying the pulpit at Long's Chapel Sunday, January 5th, for the pastor, Dr. P. H. Fleming, who is in the hospital and who, we are glad to report, is steadily improving. Long's Chapel Sunday School and Church are not large in attendance, but the spirit of loyalty, intelligence, interest and co-operation on the part of Sunday School and Church is manifest and inspiring. Happy is that Sunday School and Church who work together in the spirit of harmony and constant attendance to carry forward the work of the kingdom. Dr. W. M. Jay, of the Elon College faculty, filled the appointment for Dr. Fleming at Union on Sunday, January 12th. His brethren are glad to supply for Dr. Fleming while he is being nursed back to strength and activity again.

Beginning March 1, 1930, the Herald of Gospel Liberty will merge with The Congregationalist under the name of "Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty." The Herald announces that all renewals or subscriptions to the Herald of Gospel Liberty will be accepted at the regular rate during the month of January—$2 per year for the weekly edition, including the monthly, but that the price of the publication under the merger will be $3 per year. Any SUN readers wishing to have for a year the Herald of Gospel Liberty till March 1st and then the merged publication throughout the year for $2 should send their subscriptions at once to the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, Ohio. Many SUN readers should certainly have this merged publication that they may acquaint themselves for the first and possibly the most crucial year of the merger, and by subscribing in the way named they can secure the same by virtue of a liberal agreement between the two papers for $2.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., now past ninety, makes so many donations to the Church, charity and benevolence that they have ceased to be news and are given little place in the press. It is doubtful if it was published very far and wide that on December 24, 1929, this great giver made an unconditional gift of $500,000 to the Ministerial Relief and Annuity Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. While Henry Ford has now the distinction of being the world's richest man (we have never heard much of his giving to any Church, charity or benevolence), John D. Rockefeller bears the more honorable distinction of being the world's greatest giver, having already in the course of his lifetime given away over $500,000,000. He says it is no accident or happen-so that he gives of his means to the Church, since his mother and the Sunday School he attended taught him in youth to tithe and to live within his income and to give a portion of that income to the Church, however little that income was, a habit which he formed and a custom he followed when his income was less than $2 a week, and also when he labored for a wage of $10 a month.

Another evidence that the world is smaller and closer together than ever is that during the naval conference, which opens in London on January 21st, short messages will be delivered at the White House ten minutes after they are filed in London. In the event any unforseen emergency arises during which the American delegation would desire an expression of the President's views, the same will be communicated without delay. Much depends upon the naval conference in London, for upon its decisions will hinge the expenditure of millions in armament by the nations or the saving of these millions to be used to better purpose. The Federal Council has called upon the Churches and the people of Christendom to unite in frequent and earnest prayer, that God will direct and divinely guide in this London conference. Instead of the nations secretly and separately planning war and preparation for war, it is a good thing, indeed, that they can come together and be in intimate association and conversation about plans and pursuits that make for peace. The world should come closer together in heart and purpose, as it has come closer together in actual contacts and communication.

THE CONVICTION OF SIN.

"And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin."—John 16:8.

A county court-room, such as I visited the other day, is one of the most interesting institutions in existence. There one beholds all forms and conditions of life. He sees human beings at their lowest depths. On the faces of most of the victims that come to court is written words of despair. Marks of sin are forever indicated. Indeed, the judges, attorneys, jurymen and witnesses come face to face with the reality of sin in the world. The court-room is designed to furnish justice to all who stand before the bar. When sin has convicted a person, he must needs seek justice as the only means of relief.

As we meditate and worship together this day, I would have you think with me of a trial which takes place, not in the court-room of the county, but within every heart and soul. Such a trial is of more serious import than the trials of even our supreme court. The trial to which I refer is that which follows "the conviction of sin."

Every reader of these words has at some time been convicted of sin. Sin made its advent into human life back yonder in the days when our first parents were caused, by sin, to yield to the vanities of temptation. It is just as real and as destructive today as then. All have sinned and fallen far short of the Creator's expectations of His children. Some of the most common sins of today may be listed as (1) indifference, (2) hypocrisy, (3) selfishness, (4) bodily indulgence, (5) blasphemy, (6) wastefulness and negligence. Most of us have been convicted for having committed some of the common-place sins named in this list. We do not think of them as sins, however, but rather as traits of our various personalities. We, therefore, blame them on human nature and say that heredity should be punished rather than ourselves.

Let us ask the question, "What is responsible for the conviction of sin?" There is but one answer, and one has but to think of the words of our text to be made aware that "When He is come, He will reprove (convict) the world of sin." Thus may we say that He (the Holy Spirit) personified, is the convicting power of sin. It is He that quickens the human conscience; it is He that places the high standard of righteousness before us; it is He that alone convicts one of the common-place sins that so easily befall each of us. The Holy Spirit, in a three-fold sense, convicts. These are clearly suggested by the words of Scripture under consideration.

The Holy Spirit (1) arrests us from sin, (2) brings us to trial for sin, (3) issues the verdict of sin.

1. Arrests us from sin. In the context of our scriptural selection we read His words, saying: "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go away, I will send Him unto you, and when He is come He will convict (reprove or arrest) the world of sin. Not every one has suffered the humiliation of being arrested by the sheriff or the policeman. However, the Holy Spirit makes its arrest upon us all. His arrest does not cause great disturbance before the crowd. It does not cause one to get his name on the page of the newspaper, but the arrest causes great disturbance yonder in heaven, and on the pages of God's ledger the record is made. When the arrest is made, the public knows not of it, but in the quiet of one's home, or when alone at night, the conviction of sin becomes a reality and the victim under arrest comes to realize that he has done wrong. In making the arrest, the Holy Spirit says: "Mr. Business Man, you are arrested for short-changing your customer; college and high school student, you are arrested for unfair play in athletics and for cheating on examination; housewife, you are arrested for hypocrisy and untruthfulness to your husband; children, you are arrested for telling falsehoods and taking toys that belonged to your playmates.

The Holy Spirit says to the Church member: "Sir, you are arrested for withholding your talents from Him who gave them. You are arrested for keeping back from Him your time and ability. The things of the world are not yours, but God's, and to Him you are to pay acknowledgment, and for failure I hereby arrest you." For "to Him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, it is sin." Again you are under arrest for the commission of certain crimes. You gave testimony that you loved God and man, and you went forth and defrauded your neighbor; you said you were for the good and progress of the kingdom of God, and you stood up the next opportunity afforded you and fought with all your might to supplant your own pastor in a forward step to make your Church more appealing to the stranger without its gates; you prayed for the great missionary enterprise, and then gave less than a tenth of your income to help carry on the work of telling the old, old story of Jesus and His love to those who have not yet heard.

Our friends may call our attention to our frequent failures and faults, but the Holy Spirit alone convicts us, stops us, arrests us. It is when He speaks that we are led to pause and consider the seriousness of the charge for which we are arrested.

2. The Holy Spirit brings us to trial for sin. When man faces such a trial as that brought on by the arrest of the Holy Spirit, he sits alone with his trouble. There begins at once a battle within his soul. There are two opposing forces at work upon him. On the side of the defense, the devil pleads in behalf of the victim's experience. He holds that sin is permissible and that man's theory of life should be to have a good time—eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow death may come and that will end all of life. The defense says, "Fear not, neither worry, for the powers called righteousness are weak, and you will be set free again." The defense says, "You have a right to get money any way you can and to use it by gambling to get more, if you so desire."

The prosecution is the convicting power of the Holy Spirit which causes the arrest and who holds that man has no right to lower himself to the depths of vice and corruption. He says God made His children for more noble and glorious purposes than yielding to the call of the underworld. The prosecution, therefore, appeals in behalf of man's relation to God rather than his obedience to the devil. He says, "My word is truth . . . and man shall live by truth, for the truth alone shall set men free. He that drinketh of the water of life, which I shall give, shall never thirst again. I have come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly."

Then the Holy Spirit insists that he who is guilty must repent, saying, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sin and to cleanse from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:19).

3. The Holy Spirit issues the verdict of sin. The great trial ends, and man hears the great Judge pronounce his verdict. The craftiness of the defense has failed to furnish sufficient proof and justification for the warrant of sin, and thus the jury finds man guilty and says to all mankind, "There is none righteous, no not one" (Rom. 3:10), and "Except ye repent, ye shall likewise perish" (Luke 13:5). The question is asked, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8:36-37.) The Holy Spirit speaks through the words of Holy Writ, and sayeth unto all who are convicted of sin, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shall be saved" (Acts 16:31), for, "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). And then the Master speaks and says to us, even as to one long ago, who was arrested and brought to trial for her sins, "Go, and sin no more." "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:11-12).

POUNDED.

On the night of December 25th, about 8 o'clock, there drove up in front of our home several automobiles. It looked very much as if some one wanted to see the parson in order to be married and had brought along kinfolks and acquaintances. But it turned out to be something far better. These autos were from the neighborhood of Pleasant Union Church and were loaded not only with people of that Church but with many good things to eat (and some to wear) which those good people brought to their unworthy pastor. There is no use trying to name all the good things for there were some of almost every thing that one needs around a kitchen. Well, of course, wife and I rejoiced—and later feasted. I wish I could be a better preacher and pastor, a better man, so that I could render better service to a people who are so kind to me.

There is much being said about the rural Church today, and much of which is not optimistic. However, I still believe that here we find the cream of the wheat and the seed-bed from which many a city Church pulpit is being supplied. Yes, I still believe that "lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places," and that" He hath set my feet in a large room."

May our Lord's richest blessings be upon this dear people, and give me strength and wisdom to feed them on the Word of God.

Besides this pounding, other Churches that I serve have given us many things to help the pantry. There have been some other gifts, all of which I want to prove my gratitude for by better service.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

WINDSOR, VA.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Windsor Christian Church will begin the year with renewed enthusiasm. This year we have already added seven new members to our roll.

Our new pastor, Rev. E. B. White, has created much interest among the young people along the line of organizing a Christian Endeavor and a fellowship league, which we intend to do soon. We are loyal to our pastor, and he is loyal to us; with this co-operation we hope to achieve many worthy things the coming year.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"HUMANISM" AGAIN.

Of course every new pronouncement or fad in philosophy, science, or religion attracts attention. Just now, that which seems to be prominent on the boards in philosophy and religion is the new gospel of "humanism." This would not seem so serious if it was not seeking to entrench itself at the very heart of the Church and in the teachings of pulpit and pew. We are told that real religion and the only religion worth while is that which honors, exalts and serves humanity. These teachers and preachers would have us believe that we can serve humanity best by devoting ourselves solely to the consideration of humanity and leave God out entirely. In this religion there is no place for Christ, nor anything that is invisible and unseen and mystical. In other words, these teachers of humanism say that the best way to honor God is to forget Him, and the only way to serve Christ is to leave Him alone and relegate all thought of Him to the scrap-heap and get busy serving your fellow-man; and if you must worship, and you should, then worship "humanity."

Dr. A. T. Robinson, professor of New Testament interpretation in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., writing in the Christian Index (Baptist), gives this first-hand information and insight into this doctrine and the mind of some who are teaching it. Dr. Robinson says:

"At the recent meeting at Drew Theological Seminary (Madison, N. J.), a paper of "Humanism" was read by Prof. E. S. Ames, of the University of Chicago, who is one of the leading exponents of the new doctrine. I listened attentively and asked him some questions at the close to clear up some of the fog in his paper. As best I could gather, Prof. Ames does not believe in a personal God at all, but only in what he calls reality. He finds no place for Christ save as an example of the way to perform one's duties towards others which constitutes religion. I asked him what prayer was, if there was no personal God to whom to pray, but I could only understand that prayer had a wholesome reaction on one's self as he communed with himself."

The fact is, "Humanism" would abolish worship, and in its stead would have us come together at stated times on Sundays, say, and let the preacher or leader discuss means and methods of serving humanity, of helping the poor and the needy, of relieving the distressed, and of laying plans for social progress and betterment. If the humanists had a gospel, it would be simply a social gospel; that is good news from their point of view about better plans of lifting humanity to a higher plane of activity through plans of benevolence and philanthropy. The teaching of such a gospel is apparent, if it may be called a gospel, because it takes certain apparent facts of Christ's life and sets them up for the totality of His teachings. He did teach that the way to serve God is to help humanity, but nowhere did He teach that we could serve humanity best by leaving God out.

In spite of all that Professor Ames, of Chicago University, might say, and others like him may teach, the heart of man is hungry for the reality, the personality, the presence of God, and for the saving knowledge and power of His blessed Son, Jesus Christ.

In further reporting the meeting at Drew Theological Seminary, Dr. Robinson says: "The thing which really gripped the gathering was Dr. John R. Mott's masterly survey of world conditions in the Orient, where men are turning with hungry hearts to Christ as the only hope of the world." And this will grip the heart of man and of any gathering when poured from a soul that is acquainted with God and given to a people who realize that they need and must have God. We have not served God best when we have served our fellow-man most, if in doing so we have left God out of the reckoning, for God is the Creator and Father of us all. He comes first and must be put first and kept there in our thinking and in our attitudes, if we are to overcome the world and give to mankind that for which his heart is hungering and breaking. We agree most heartily with the concluding sentence of Dr. Robinson in his report of the Drew Theological Seminary Conference:

"To put social duties in the place of duty to God is to put the cart before the horse. There are millions of men and women today who rule God out of their lives, and they are the criminals who bring terror to our cities. The professional humanists are on a false trail. They may delude themselves and a few gullible followers, but men of balance and poise know that God is and that He reveals Himself to men in His Son Jesus Christ." J. O. A.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Is the Sunday School at its best? Is the Sunday School increasing or decreasing in numbers and in interest? It is worth while right now, when this year is new and fresh, for superintendents teachers and others interested to ask that very question. Dr. Goodell, of the Federal Council, gives out to the world this alarming statement:

"Taking the country at large, there are 30 per cent less children in the Sunday School today than there were thirty years ago. But this is not the saddest thing about it. The percentage of those who are coming from the Sunday School into vital relationship with Christ and membership in the Church is also increasingly less."

This is surprising as well as alarming, because it was supposed that, with new emphasis on religious education and the hundreds of enlarged plants for Sunday School and Christian Endeavor quarters and activities, it was natural to conclude that there had been a great increase, both in numbers attending Sunday Schools and in the percentage of those coming from the school into vital relationship with Christ. If Dr. Goodell's statement is based on actual findings (and we certainly take it for its face value, coming from such authority), not only should Sunday School officers and friends become alarmed, but the Church as well. It is from the Sunday School that the Church is replenished and built up. If there is let-up in Sunday School growth and activity now, we may expect these results to tell on the vigor and vitality of the Church in the near future.

This can be done. Sunday Schools easily fall into a groove, and those who should be concerned take for granted that the school is doing about as well as could be expected under the circumstances. But, is it, in fact? Since when has a determined effort been made to increase the numbers in the school? What is being done Sunday after Sunday to increase interest in the school and to enlarge attendance? It is safe to say that there are large numbers of children and grown-ups within the reach of every school who are not now enrolled in any class. It will help the school to go out after these, to urge them to come in, to put on a campaign, a continuous campaign, for increased attendance and also for a deepening of interest in the real work and worth of the school.

The object of the Sunday School is to tie its pupils up in a vital relationship with the Church and to bring its pupils to accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour. If the school falls down in this it fails in the great aim for which it is carried on. While the year is young and fresh and new, why not put forth a new and fresh and redoubled effort to turn the receding tide and make your school at least a larger and a better school in attendance and in vital service? J. O. A.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE.

When Pontius Pilate was on the judgment seat conducting the sham trial that sent our Lord to His crucifixion, he asked the people this question: "What shall I do with Him who is called the Christ?" The people answered in no mistakable terms: "Crucify Him!" This seemed to be an easy way of getting rid of this troublesome character. He had started something. He had aroused discussion. He had awakened interest. He had created a commotion. He had produced a conflict. And Jesus the Christ is doing just that in the world yet. When men come face to face with Him, their consciences are awakened and they begin to cry out, "Crucify Him!" All sorts of doctrines are preached, all sorts of gospels are proclaimed to the intent and purpose that they may do away with the man called Christ Jesus. They are still clamoring for a substitute; they are still raising all sorts of issues—but no substitute for the Christ can be found. However mysterious He may seem, however strange and marvelous and wonderful His life may appear, however much He may awaken our conscience, make uneasy our hopes, or disturb our thinking and our conduct, we might as well face the fact that there is no substitute for the Christ. He, indeed, is God, manifest in the flesh, and no man can know God as revealed in the flesh and as living among men, save as they know Him in Jesus Christ. For us and for the whole wide world there is no substitute. This utterance rings with a clear note from the pen of Dr. Charles E. Jefferson in a recent issue of the Christian Century.

"I have looked the whole planet over and I see no man but Jesus only who is able to take away the sin of the world. I have sat at the feet of the world's crowned religious leaders, and I have seen all the great religions in their homes, and I now know that it is Christ or nobody. He has no competitor in the field. No one else has the slightest chance of winning the homage of the entire human race. More and more he is to me what he was to Saul of Tarsus—'the image of the invisible God.' More and more he is to me what he was to John the Beloved—'God made manifest in the flesh.' More and more He is to me what He Himself claimed to be, the eternal Son of the loving God. To know Him is indeed life eternal. To work with Him in establishing on this earth the kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy this is what makes my life more and more worth living."

This is, indeed, that which makes life worth living—to accept no substitute, to be satisfied with no other personality or persuasion than Jesus Christ, the true, the living Son of God. He is the world's only hope; He is our Saviour, and without Him the world plunges into despair and spiritual chaos. J. O. A.

REPERTORY.

A series of Wednesday night prayer-meeting addresses delivered in the Presbyterian Church during the building of our Church in 1892.

II. JOY.

It is not enough to destroy the noxious weeds in a garden; something good must be produced. It is not enough to flee the manifest works of the flesh, but true virtues must take their place. Joy is in the heart. It is opposed to grief. It is a fruit of the Spirit. It is a spiritual condition so deep, so permanent, and so rich that nothing but the Divine Spirit can bring it forth in the soul of man. So far as examination has been made, no human philosophy suggests anything that corresponds to spiritual joy. It has been the dream of poets, and the experience of the gods. Joy is not a promise, but a precept oft-repeated. "Rejoice in the Lord alway." It remained for the word of God to tell us of the gracious fruit of the Spirit in the experience of man. The Bible mentions this idea nearly two hundred times. It is a part of the experience of every well-disciplined soul. Paul exhorts the Thessalonians to "rejoice everymore." Jesus says: "Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

In this fruit of the Spirit the Bible discloses a new soul-condition, an inner possession of wealth of divine security, a heart-investment of unrivaled value; an experience unknown to the unbeliever, a perpetual melody in the soul. It sits upon the throne of human life as a queen, crowned with celestial glories, while under her feet is a pavement of sapphire. All that is embraced in "feasts and wine," in poetic conceptions, and more, is enriched and perpetuated into the eternities. "In Thy presence is fullness of joy." This divine thrill, this intense experience, this fruit of the Spirit, has several sources and modes of expression. It is spiritual in its deepest experiences and relations.

1. In God. Habakkuk begins his prayer with trembling, and ends with a song of triumph: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." Job said: "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him." David often concludes his prayer with praises. "Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased." The fruit of the Spirit makes us rejoice in God more than in all else.

2. In the Bible. "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart." As a good counselor gives the right advice, so does the book of God to the heart. The grace of God brings heart-joy: earth-born mirth is only on the lips; heavenly joy fills the being "with joy unspeakable and full of joy." David said: "I rejoice at Thy word, as one that findeth great spoil." Think of the four leprous men who lay at the gate of Samaria, in the time of famine, while the Syrian army encamped outside. In despair they said: "Why sit we here till we die?" So they rose up in the twilight to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they came, the Syrians had fled. The Lord had made them hear the noise of chariots, of horses, even the noise of a great host, and they left the camp as it was, and fled for their life. And when these lepers came into the camp they found great spoil. They ate, they drank, and carried away silver, gold, and raiment. They were saved, and Samaria was saved. God's word to the spiritually minded is life and salvation. It is great spoil and joy.

3. In the temple. "The redeemed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with singing: and everlasting joy shall be upon their head, and they shall obtain gladness and joy." When the foundation of the temple was laid in the time of Ezra, many of the people who had seen the first house in its glory "shouted aloud for joy." And when it was finished, they dedicated this house of God with joy. "They kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy, for the Lord had turned the King of Assyria unto them to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God." David understood the value of the temple, and said: "I went with them to the house of God, with the voice of joy and praise." "I will offer in His tabernacle sacrifices of joy."

5. In Christ. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy: for unto you is born this day a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord." Whoever receives Christ truly has in his soul a perennial fountain of joy; hence, there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." Jesus said to His disciples: "These things I have spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." The disciples were "filled with joy and the Holy Ghost." The world cannot produce joy, and joy will not grow in unregenerate souls.

"Joy is a fruit that will not grow
In Nature's barren soil;
All we can boast, till Christ we know,
Is vanity and toil.
But where the Lord has planted grace,
And made His glories known,
There fruits of joy and heavenly peace
Are found—and these alone." W. W. S.

COOLIDGE-SMITH-ROSENWALD AWARD.

Conrad Herbert died some time since in New York and left an estate of some six million dollars to be given to charity, welfare, educatinoal and religious work. The three eminent citizens named in the title to this editorial were designated to dispose of the money according to their best judgment.

On January 6th they made known their decision. Some seventeen hundred applications were received. Thirty-three awards were made. Institutions and causes of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish origin were about equally represented. No religious bias influenced these great citizens in their disposition of their trust, and every enterprise they helped is worthy.

Institutions of learning definitely connected with the Catholic and Jewish Churches were granted allotments, but no Protestant college definitely related to a denomination was remembered.

Negro institutions were especially favored, due, no doubt, to the interest in negro welfare work of the great-hearted Julius Rosenwald.

No gift was made for endowment. Every award was for specific purpose, and in most cases with a stipulation that an equal or larger amount should be raised for the purpose from other sources.

There is much food for thought in the principles that evidently guided these three great Americans in the disposition of this trust in the public good. Has the Protestant denominational college served its day? W. A. H.

WILSON IN HONOLULU.

The Rev. Dr. Clarence H. Wilson, 149 Hilcrest Avenue, Yonkers, N. Y., leaves on Monday, January 6, 1930, for Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, where he will be the preacher for several months at the Central Union Church, the largest Church in the islands. He sails from San Francisco on January 11th. Dr. Wilson was elected in November to be the first chairman of the executive committee of the newly merged General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches. He was formerly pastor eighteen years at Glen Ridge, N. J., a suburb of New York. Dr. Wilson will return from Honolulu to join the Congregational pilgrimage which will sail in June from New York on the S. S. Adriatic for the decennial meeting of the International Congregational Council at Bournemouth, England.

Central Union Church is the outgrowth of Bethel Chapel, erected 1833 of parts shipped around Cape Horn from New London, Conn. The chapel was designed to be a religious haven for the many seamen on the whaling ships which then were accustomed to winter in the commodious harbor of Honolulu. The first service in the chapel is reported to have been attended by a respectable number of residents, masters of vessels and seamen. The choir, composed of members of missionary families, was led by Gerritt Parmlee Judd, missionary physician, one of whose descendants, Lawrence McCully Judd, was appointed governor of the islands last year by President Hoover.

It was the congregation of Bethel Chapel which is said later to have provided the first hymn books ever sent to California.

Central Union Church reports 1,530 members. Thirty-three different racial or national groups are represented, the largest representation being from Anglo-Saxon communities of America and Europe. Members have been received from Churches of forty-two different Christian creeds, including Unitarian, Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox and Mormon; members have also been received from the Buddhist and Jewish faiths.—News Bulletin.

A PRAYER FOR JANUARY.

O God, our Father, Thou who art Creator and Preserver of the whole universe of matter and man; Thou who hast provided for and dost extend to every member of the human family privilege, power and place to glorify Thee through a service of love in the name of Jesus, who brought to the world the eternal gospel of love and light: teach us, Thy disciples, how to embrace and possess it; for we are Thine, and we desire to be used of Thee and for Thee until all hearts shall come into the fellowship of Thy company. Amen.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The question of preaching the gospel is threefold: the preacher himself, the congregation, and the community. There is, so far as reputation goes, good preaching and poor preaching. Some preachers have great reputation, based on oratory, rhetoric, or personality. But that is not always good preaching in the biblical and spiritual sense. Good preaching improves the social, moral and spiritual condition of the community. A question arises as to what is the best method to produce good preaching. Education often fails, big pay often fails, honest effort on the part of the preacher often fails. Natural gifts do not always produce good preaching. What can give the congregation good preaching? The denomination does not produce it. Good men change denominational relations and then do not become good preachers. Co-operation between preacher and congregation will come close to the solution of this great matter.

Bishop Galloway, of the Methodist Church, South, attended a conference, and while there he preached to a negro Church. Some of the conference ministers went to hear the bishop preach to the negroes. After the sermon, one of the minisetrs said to the bishop: "You preach better to the negroes than you do to us." A negro standing by, said: "We hope him." In those three words you have the answer as to how to have a good preacher. The congregation can have the preacher they wnat and need if they "help him."

Then the question arises, "How can the congregation help to make a good preacher?" Four ways may be suggested:

1. Attendance. A book membership will not produce a good preacher; but regular attendance upon the worship hour will help to improve the preaching. You cannot talk to one over the phone as well as face to face. A letter is not as good as a visit. The presence of the members inspires the preacher and stirs his heart and his mind. It deepens the thought he had already prepared, arouses enthusiasm in his soul, and puts new tones in his voice.

2. Attention. Public speaking is improved by the close attention of the audience. When the house is full, and the attention is tense, the preacher has all his best powers aroused, and he gets closer to his subject and closer to his congregation. Every Sunday School teacher and public school teacher knows how difficult it is to teach when students do not give attention. The same is true in ordinary conversation. Go and listen are two good words to improve the preacher.

3. Prayer. A praying congregation never fails to have good preaching. That is reason why sermons are so spiritual, so moving and so effective in a revival. The congregation is in the spirit of united prayer.

4. Contributions. Giving is a part of worship. Giving attendance, giving attention, giving prayer, and giving money. To give money only helps some, but to give all four will produce results in character, influence, and in preaching. Any congregation can have good preaching if they can say, "We 'hope' him." W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

Four-Dimensional Religion.

In a well-chosen verse, Jesus is described as having developed in "wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." This is generally interpreted to mean that His development was normal mentally, physically, spiritually and socially.

In a passage in Revelation we are told that the new Jerusalem lies "four-square."

We need not be surprised, therefore, to read in Ephesians 3:18 about the "breadth, and length, and depth, and height." This is what I call four-dimensional religion, and I would like for us to think together for a few minutes in regard to the significance of these words in the field of religion.

Religion in the first instance is described as to its breadth. I take it this means its inclusiveness. It is as inclusive as experience, and there is no realm from which religion may be properly excluded. The old psychology used to teach that we had a religious instinct, but the new psychology is more nearly in accord with the Christian conception in that religion is said to have an instinctive basis, by which is meant that every instinct or urge or drive or inherent tendency in acting a certain way, all of which are terms that modern psychology uses to describe what used to be known as instinct—that all of these are capable of religious interpretation and application. On a recent Sunday afternoon, I heard Harry Emerson Fosdick, in his radio sermon, rejoicing in the instinct of pugnacity as he described it, and insisting that it should be sublimated or changed from a selfish to an unselfish basis, and so become religious. The first dimension of religion is its breadth, its inclusiveness.

Length is next mentioned as characteristic of religion. Metaphysically speaking, length is without beginning and without end. It, therefore, denotes the progressive element in religion. As we look back over the history of mankind, we cannot but be convinced that progress has characterized religious conceptions, and there is no reason for believing that it will not continue to characterize them, world without end. The very minute that religion ceases to make progress, it will cease to be dynamic. Becoming static, it will die. The second dimension of religion is progress.

Depth is next given as the characteristic of religion. To find just how deep religion is, we must sound the depth of human emotion, of human intellect, and of human volition. Everything that relates to feeling, to thought, and to conduct is included in the depth of religious sentiment.

Realizing the possibility of spiritual achievement out of the depths of religious experience, and by considering the distance humanity has come from the meager beginning, we are inspired by the progress made and by our confidence in God and our love for our fellow-man to go still further in the firm assurance that still larger achievements lie ahead. The third characteristic of religion is, therefore, inspiration.

The final characteristic of religion is its height. Just how high religion is, or is to be, it is impossible for us to predicate. It is a flying goal. When we reach what we had thought would be the height of its attainment, it has advanced beyond us. It relates to the aspirations of the human heart; it connotes the idealism that lures us on to spend all our energy in the fruitful promotion of life, particularly the enduring, abiding, abundant life. The fourth characteristic of religion is, therefore, its aspiration.

Inclusiveness, progress, inspiration and aspiration—these constitute the four-dimensional religion which Christianity is.

WINCHESTER, VA.

In many respects the work here is encouraging. There seems to be increased interest among the Church groups. Our attendance at the Sunday School and Church services is on the increase, and in other ways we note signs of progress. All these indications of growth in interest are encouraging to pastor and leaders.

Under the leadership of Miss Anna Amelia Seabright, the Junior Christian Endeavor Society has recently been reorganized and is doing fine work. Miss Seabright has also organized an Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society, which gives promise of great usefulness.

On the evening of December 8th, the Ever-Ready Missionary Society gave a beautiful and helpful pageant, the title of which was "The Two Masters." We have seldom seen an interpretation of the author's thought so truly and effectively given.

On Sunday evening, the 22nd of December, a Christmas pageant was most effectively presented, the title being "The Star Leads On." We would like to mention the names of all who contributed to its success, but space forbids. We would say, though, that all acquitted themselves well. It was considered by those in position to know, one of the very best services given in the city. It was given under the direction of Mrs. Boyd R. Richards. Mrs. Roy A. Larrick had charge of the costuming, while Mr. Larrick had charge of the lighting.

Among the good things that have recently come to us, we would not be unmindful of the kind consideration shown us personally. In addition to many cards, our people remembered us with a generous and much-appreciated "pounding," including many good things for the pantry, apples, cash and other gifts. For all these kind remembrances we are truly and humbly appreciative.

HENDERSON.

The First Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., called Rev. H. E. Crutchfield as part-time pastor, and he preached his first sermon as pastor last Sunday evening to a large congregation which seemed very much pleased. The choir has reorganized and will give special music every Sunday evening. The Sunday School put on a Christmas program and pageant, "The Twelve Gifts," December 29th, which was appreciated by a packed Church. The Church is looking forward to a year that much good may be accomplished under the leadership of their energetic and consecrated young pastor. Mrs. W. O. C.

TAKING TIME.

In the beginning of the year 1930 is heard a voice that says to us: "Lay up for yourselves in heaven, where moth and rust cannot enter, and where thieves cannot break through and steal." During the coming year shall we not take time to do the following things?

Take time to estimate the value of your soul. Human action does not indicate that the correct value is being placed on the three elements of man—body, mind and spirit. The body comes in for a large percent of the efforts and the sacrifices made. Much time is taken in feeding, beautifying and satisfying the body. Months and years are taken in an effort to meet the needs and the demands of the flesh. This is true also of the mind. There seems to be no end to the call of the brain for time in its pursuits of knowledge. The human race is devoting so much time in trying to satisfy the body and the brain that there is but little time left to be used for the needs of the soul.

We are not in right relation to real values when we spend most of our time on the things that perish with the using. Christ assures us that if a man gain the whole world and lose his own soul he loses his one possession of supreme value. In this busy age we should take time to estimate the real value that gathers about our three-fold possession. Take stock with yourself and during the coming year take time to learn the real value of yourself, and then direct the most of your time where it will bring to you the treasures of two worlds.

Take time to get acquainted with Jesus Christ. The most of us know something about Jesus. We have read about Him. We have heard the preachers and good men speak of Him. That is not knowing him. The most valuable time of life is not that time when the cup of pleasure is filled to the rim, but that time when we are getting acquainted with our Lord. It takes much time to become acquainted with Christ. We take time to become acquainted with our business, with the problems of government, but the all-important question is, "How much time are you taking to get acquainted with Christ?" To know Him is worth more to us that all the treasures ever recorded on the pages of ledgers.

If we fail to take time to know Him in this world, how can we expect Him to know us in that world into which we are traveling? Christ is living in every community, and we can become acquainted with Him if we will only take the time. Paul took many years of his life in learning Jesus, and as he came down to the sunset of life he said: "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have entrusted to Him against that day." Take many of the precious hours and days of the coming new year and spend them in getting acquainted with your Lord.

Take time for prayer and fellowship with God. We are so busy in these last days that we are making God's habitation a clearing-house and not a place of blessed communion and holy fellowship. We are not taking time to pray as much as we should. Family devotions have passed from home life. We are up early and out late, and the secret closet is never visited. We do not take time for meditation. It is business and pleasure, and pleasure and business all the time. God's Word is never read. We have time for the daily paper, the magazines and trade journals, but no time for the Holy Book. The average Church member has time for picture shows, auto rides, and other diversions, but not much time for the worship of the sanctuary. No man can have sweet communion with his family without giving to them some of his valuable time. God must be sick at heart because His children on earth are saying that they have no time for fellowship with Him. He who will take time during the new year to pray, to meditate on righteous things, to read the Book of books, and to attend the services of the sanctuary, will come to the close of the year finer in spirit and richer in heart than if he were to take all of his time in digging for the things of this world. —Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE PARABLE OF THE WIRE.

The house where I spend my summers and where in near-by cottages I gather my children about me in a much-too-swiftly moving season is not palatial, but it hath a vast fireplace where I build a log fire almost every morning and evening. So that when the day is especially hot my children say, "Is it not hot enough that father should have a fire?" For I make a fire not for the warmth alone, but for the joy and light thereof. But in that house I have electricity. And we do all our cooking upon an electric stove. And we burn candles only when we have a swell dinner; for common-place occasions we have electric lights. And my little maid useth the broom not very much; she hath an electric carpet sweeper. And she ironeth her clothes with an electric iron. And she hath a sewing machine that runneth by electric power. And I listen to prize fights and concerts and Mr. Hoover's addresses over a radio that requireth no sloppy batteries, for it is hooked up to the electric current. And this summer I have installed an electric refrigerator. So cometh over one wire a single electric current which boileth and freezeth and which giveth light and heat, and music and power.

And I said, I have read in the writings of my friend Paul that all the widely diversified manifestations of productivity in the spiritual realm, including preaching and prophesying and heating and administration, and I presume also of commerce and politics, are manifestation of one and the self-same spirit dividing to every man severally according as He will. And I ask for no other sort of miracle so long as it is possible for me to receive into mine own simple country home over a single wire a tamed streak of lighting, to whom I say, I desire music, and it sayeth, yes sir, and giveth me the symphony orchestra; or, this rug hath on it the pine needles which I carried in with the logs, and it saith, yes sir, and sweepeth them up; or, I want water hot for my kind of coffee which is good to the last drop, or ice for my lemonade, and it saith, yes sir; or let there be light, and there is light; and all of these worketh that one and the self-same streak of lightning, bringing to me these results according to my will.

So sit I in the solitudes of cottage amid the pines and beside the little lake; and not only do the blimps and airplanes fly above me, but the air is filled with all manner of voices which I turn on or off precisely as I wish. Yea, and beside all this, an hour ago a little bird came in to see me, and when I caught it and took it to the door, and held it in mine hand and spake gently unto it, the little thing made no haste to fly away, but went almost reluctantly. So to my doors and within my walls come miraculous things, and for all these workings of the one Divine Goodness, I thank God.—Congregationalist.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

NO EASY WAY TO EVANGELIZE WORLD.

One of the most insidious dangers to the missionary cause is the vague feeling that there ought to be found an easy way to evangelize this world. Such a sentiment is more or less widespread, often unconsciously held. It is at the heart of nine-tenths of the objections to our missionary policy, the criticisms of our missionary plans, and the reasons advanced for the lack of success.

"It can be worked in the station but not on the circuit." "It is fine for the country but not for the great Church." "There are too many appeals." "We need a unified program." "Everything should be in the assessments." "Nothing should be in the assessments." "My people will not respond." "I have an unusual situation."

We are all familiar with such statements. They all resolve themselves into this: "It is too hard!" Yet in thousands of Churches—city and country from the greatest to the smallest—all such contentions are annually disproved.

There is no easy way to bring this world to Jesus Christ. God has ordained that it must be done by sacrifice. There is no other way. Any easy plan of carrying on the missionary program will end in disaster. The man who seeks an easy method will forever seek in vain.

The missionaries who gave up home and hope of preferment do not shrink from hard work—you never heard of one who did!

The fathers of Methodism who spread scriptural holiness over these lands and bequeathed the Church to us were not afraid of struggle, but exulted in it.

Jesus Christ, who saved us at the cost of His blood and bade us follow Him unto the uttermost parts—He was not afraid of sacrifice, but counted it not loss to empty Himself of the glory that was His before the foundation of the world.

The disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. When we have spent curselves to the last drop of energy, we will still fall infinitely short of the love that bought us. Let no man or woman who has glimpsed Calvary and heard the great commission from the Mount of Ascension ever again seek an easy road to human redemption. It will cost us all we have.

We are now in the midst of the January-February missionary cultivation movement. It involves hard work on us all. But this hard work will mean success. It will mean that the Church will catch anew the missionary spirit and our work around the world will go on.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

SACRIFICIAL GIVING.

How comparatively few people know how to give liberally, willingly and cheerfully for the carrying on of Gods work. Durnig the great World War our nation gave liberally, some perhaps even sacrificially; we did without sugar, flour and other necessities, to say nothing of luxuries—and for what? That the world might be made safe for democracy; that our present form of government might be preserved and our homes unmolested by a threatening enemy.

If the membership of Protestant Churches today could be made to see the importance of waging a more aggressive warfare against the kingdom of Satan, whose presence in the world is causing all of humanity's sufferings, threatening the peace, safety and structure of every nation and every home, surely there would be a more ready response to the appeals for finances to carry on the great program of the Church.

If the Christian citizenship of this land were to practice self-denial and give as they gave to preserve our democracy, it would be possible to equip multiplied thousands of consecrated young men and young women, armed with the "Sword of the Spirit" instead of high-powered rifles, to sail to other lands to carry out the great commission of the Master. Surely we lack the vision of the possibilities of such sacrificial giving, and so long as that vision is lacking, millions of people will perish in spiritual ignorance and physical suffering.

We know so little about real sacrificial giving. The prevalent program of festivals pageants, rummage sales and suppers, to which the average Church has to resort to raise money, is an appalling attestation of that fact.

A very beautiful example of liberality was reported to me recently in a letter from one of the mission stations I visited last spring. Among the workers is a native Bible woman whose salary of ten dollars a month is provided by an American lady. This worker is faithful and tireless in her efforts to carry the gospel into the homes of her people. The missionaries out of their budget were also allowing five dollars a month to a very talented native girl who is making herself a very useful helper in the activities of the mission center. The letter said: "We ran out of funds and had to tell Lila we could not continue paying her five dollars a month for the work she was doing with us. But when our Bible woman learned of the situation she said: "Do not let Lila go; I will give her five dollars a month out of my salary." And so we are able to keep Lila through our Bible woman's beautiful sacrifice."

What a tragedy for a missionary to write, "We ran out of funds," when there is such an abundance in the homeland! What love for the kingdom was evidenced by a dark-skinned native woman who was willing to divide her income, that the work might not suffer loss! Would God that our people of the homeland might know the joy of such sacrificial giving!—Nashville Christian Advocate.

WITH THE CONGREGATIONALISTS.

There was a Congregational Church in the Wyoming town where my father was the Methodist preacher. The Congregational minister, as my father put it, was "brotherly." But as a boy and an enthusiastic Methodist, I rather resented him and regarded his Church with suspicion. He was a competitor for the religious favor—not too generous at best—of that frontier community. The fact that his choir had two of the town's best singers hurt my pride. School-mates who went to his Church suffered, in my eyes, for their Congregational affiliations. There wasn't much that I could do about it. But one think I did with a vengeance. At 7 o'clock on Sunday nights when I went over to ring the first bell for Church I made it a point, at all costs, to outring the Congregationalists.

But something has happened to the Congregationalists—or to me. Either I am not so good a Methodist or these folks aren't such good Congregationalists, or else we are all better Christians. At any rate, for ten days now I have been living in the Congregational fellowship, traveling with Congregationalists, speaking before Congregationalist audiences—from New Britain, Conn., to Minneapolis and Fargo. I learned a great deal.

I learned for one thing that fried chicken—whatever its previous ecclesiastical connections—is no longer uniquely Methodist, but that it fries as brown over a Congregational fire and is served as handsomely by a Congregational Ladies' Aid Society. I learned, too, that when I stood before a Congregational audience there were no language difficulties to surmount. My "Methodist" remarks went unmodified. Modification wasn't necessary, because on everything important there was nothing to modify. We were agreed. And I learned that, to a Methodist, probably the best argument for Church union is a Congregationalist—or a Baptist or a Presbyterian. And vice versa.

A good many people are saying these days that Protestant division is maintained, not by the things that matter but by the things that are non-essential. I believe that. It has been the kind of ecclesiastical structure we live in rather than the kind of folks that live in it that has kept our Church families apart. We have assumed that a stucco house must mean stucco folks inside; and the same with clapboards and brick. And we have been wrong. I admit that I prefer my Church house to have episcopal trimmings. But not so much that I any longer suspect those whose tastes differ or would any longer hesitate to scrap my own architectural preferences for the sake of family unity.

In fact, after these last ten days, I am convinced that probably what the Wyoming town needed on Sunday nights was not a Methodist-Congregational bell-ringing contest, but a Methodist-Congregational consolidation. With only one Church to support, we might have had chimes for the belfrey.—Stanley High, in Christian Herald.

The direction of our conduct depends on the principles and ideals upon which our character is founded. Great thoughts give us great courage. A noble ideal makes a noble life.—Victor Charbonnel.

HAS MODERN CIVILIZATION OUTGROWN THE BIBLE?

One day last summer, the author rode from the railroad in the valley up to Jerusalem in an automobile of American manufacture. It seemed odd enough to go gliding toward the ancient city with the engine humming and the Syrian chauffeur with his clear, quick eyes and his steady hand at the wheel. One thought of those long-fled years when the ass was the carrier of powerful kings. One remembered that Jesus entered Jerusalem riding on an ass. He had a word of mastery for that ancient day.

You still see camels with their burdens in Jerusalem. As you look at their awkward case of motion, are you tempted to think that they, too, represent the world of the prophets and of Jesus? Are you tempted to think that the world of swift-moving cars—all the complicated world of modern machinery—has passed beyond His ken? Is it possible to think of Him as Lord of a world of moving wheels and bolts and softly humming dynamos? Is the Bible best represented by lonely ivy growing upon a forgotten wall? Or is it like a tree of life yet containing healing for the nations? Is it a memory of tragic loneliness? Or is it a power more potent than dynamos, more effective than great engines?

Perhaps you look up at a passing airplane in Syria and as you follow it with pursuing eyes to dim distances you wonder if it has made it impossible to see the bright shining of angels' wings. You think of all the vast steel structures in the world and you wonder if Bethlehem in Pennsylvania has taken the place of Bethlehem in Judea. You enter a vast factory full of automatic workers—you see the power of the iron man in industry—and you wonder if the clear-eyed prophet of Nazareth can make himself heard in all this din.

The situation is serious enough and you turn with a half-whimsical understanding to the foresight of the inhabitants of Samuel Butler's "Erewhon," who destroyed the machines before they became their masters. For all that, you cannot go the full length of the suggestion of that great man Mahatma Gandhi and bring back the spinning wheel and throw the dynamo into the rubbish-heap. The problem of the machine cannot be solved by an executioner. It must be solved by a master.

If modern civilization is likened to a high-powered automobile, we may gaze at the great machine with grave anxiety. But we will see sooner or later that we cannot meet the situation by destroying the machine. What we really need to do is to find a new driver. We will scarcely cease to produce machines. We must learn how to produce men who can be trusted to control and use the machinery for the purposes of moral and spiritual order, for the good of the world and the honor of God.

And the Book which the American Bible Society sends about the world still contains that secret. It does not tell us how to make machines. It does tell us how to make men who can be trusted with machines. It does tell us how to produce men who will not wreck civilization with the high-powered machinery which they construct. It does tell us how to produce men who will use the whole mighty output of the machine age for the purposes of the kingdom of God.

All fear that the Scriptures have become antiquated vanishes quickly enough when we see that persons great enough and good enough to save civilization from a sort of mechanical suicide are the supreme need of the hour. The age which produces machines is not particularly skillful in producing persons. The ages which produced great persons must teach us how to produce the masters of our machines.

There is no literature like the Bible for teaching us how to produce men who are stronger than their own desires. Only the Man who rode into Jerusalem on an ass knows the secret of making men whose hands will be steady upon our high-powered machines. The safety of the world is in the hands of the driver. And it is the driver who can be provided by the Man of Galilee.—Lynn H. Hough, in Federal Council Bulletin.

PENTECOST—1930.

At the annual meeting of the executive committee of the Federal Council, after a vigorous discussion of the topic, "How to Secure the Largest Spiritual Results from the Nineteen-Hundredth Anniversary of Pentecost," the following resolution was adopted:

"The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, through its executive committee, earnestly calls attention to the vast spiritual possibilities which lie in the proper observance of the nineteen-hundredth anniversary of Pentecost.

"The imperative command of the Master to the disciples was, 'Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endowed with power.' The same command is binding on us today as it was upon the early disciples.

"Using the same means of unity and prayer, let us wait before God for a similar blessing of power. Already it is being poured out upon some of our Churches, and practically all of the denominations affiliated with the Federal Council are committed to the program as outlined by the commission on evangelism leading up to June 8th.

"We recognize the importance of all movements for human betterment and the necessity for the social gospel, and the need of the deepening of the spiritual life in the Churches that there may be power available for all phases of their labor for the establishment of the kingdom of God and the winning of the world for Christ."

ISLE OF WIGHT.

Rev. E. B. White, pastor of Isle of Wight Church, filled his regular appointment on the first Sunday afternoon and delivered to us an uplifting and soul-stirring message, his subject being "Going Forward in 1930." Our one regret was that the entire membership was not present to hear this wonderful message. After services a conference was called to discuss plans for the year.

We believe the Church membership realizes the need of a more co-operative spirit, and is ready to stand behind their loyal pastor and under the guiding hand of our Heavenly Father. We believe that old Isle of Wight will go forward in 1930. M. Turpin Whitley.

NOTICE.

Whereas, there was no invitation extended to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference for its annual session, which meets Tuesday following the third Sunday in July, 1930; and whereas the place of meeting was left to the executive committee, we would be glad for any Church who can and will entertain the convention for the 1930 session to communicate the same to Rev. Joseph E. McCauley, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

The executive committee would like to have a meeting for the purpose of completing its plans for the program for this year at the earliest date possible. The place of meeting will determine some of the details in planning the program. If you are interested in entertaining the convention, it would be a great favor to the committee to extend your invitation at an early date.

Joseph E. McCauley,
Norfolk, Va. Executive Sec'y.

NOTICE.

The executive committee of the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met in Raleigh, Friday, December 13, 1929, to consider the resignation of Mr. Harold W. Johnson as president. His resignation was accepted and Rev. R. L. House was unanimously elected to that office. We feel sure that Bro. House needs and desires the co-operation of the entire convention. In his behalf we are asking that you pray for him and work with him in making the convention a success.

We are hoping that each Church will sponsor a live Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society. Plan now and meet us at Liberty, Vance, next July with a good report from each. We are counting on you. Please do not disappoint us. Mrs. R. J. Newton, Henderson, N. C., R. 1. Secretary.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson IV.—January 26, 1930.

Standards of the Kingdom.

Golden Text: "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."—Matt. 5:8.

Lesson: Matt. 5:1-48.

Time: Midsummer A. D. 28.

Place: Horns of Hattin, a monutain near the Sea of Galilee.

Jesus had been preaching and teaching for more than a year. The multitudes were gathering to hear the words such as no other man had spoken. For some time a small group had been going with him nearly everywhere he went, but it was quite recently that he formally set them apart formally as his disciples. It was immediately following this act that this wonderful discourse which we know as the Sermon on the Mount was delivered.

The mount on which it was delivered was, according to tradition, a square-shaped hill called the Horns of Hattin. It was about sixty feet high and had two tops. It is situated about three miles west of the Sea of Galilee and seven southwest of Capernaum.

The sermon itself has well been called the moral law of the Kingdom of Christ. It is to the New Testament what the Ten Commandments are to the Old.

The lesson is divided into three very clearly defined sections, all dealing with the Standards of the Kingdom: I.—The Standard of Blessedness; II.—The Standard of Obedience, and III.—The Standard of Love.

The Standard of Blessedness.

1. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." No doubt this statement was a disappointment to many, for their thoughts were on a temporal kingdom, to be set up by a temporal Messiah. Perhaps they thought: "How easily Jesus could succeed with His great power, which they had seen Him manifest in healing the sick and relieving those possessed of demons. The moral courage Jesus displayed in dissipating their brilliant but false hopes was both wonderful and beautiful. The analysis He gave of character would certainly set them thinking and cause them to look at life from a new angle.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit" sounded strange to people who were looking for a Messiah who would free them from Roman power. Though Christ was King, He was not clothed in earthly splendor, but with spiritual power and authority to set forth conditions of entering the kingdom of heaven. Those meeting the conditions will find the blessedness of which Christ speaks, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

The kingdom of heaven is God's great gift to all who accept it.

2. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Rev. Howard A. Johnston says: "Every man who passes through the first Beatitude finds himself knocking at the door of the second. Only the poor in spirit are blessed when they mourn. And the mourning which the Master had primarily in mind is not the sorrow because of bereavement, or the pain of physical suffering. It is the grief of soul in the consciousness of sin, and the sense of self-condemnation before the eye of God."

3. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Our language gives us no word that fittingly expresses the true idea of Christian meekness. It doesn't mean servile, abject, lacking in self-respect. The meek are mild, amiable and conciliating; they respect themselves too much to be proud, arrogant, and quarrelsome, and they respect others too much to be either servile or haughty. The meek are those that have the quality of character which enables them to bear up under trial, as did Moses, Jeremiah, Jesus and Paul, for they endure as seeing Him who is invisible. Meekness is not incompatible with strength of character.

4. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." "The first and abiding condition of happiness is not that we should be able to have what we want, but that we should be able to want what we ought to have. Jesus came into the world to waken in men's hearts a sense of their true need. He taught that that need is righteousness. Righteousness is the response of the highest in man to the claim of God."—Rev. Percy C. Ainsworth.

5. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. "There must be, in some faint measure at least, a corresponding spirit in us to receive any gift or blessing from God. It is true, therefore, in relation to God, that the merciful shall obtain mercy, and the unmerciful shall find no mercy. The selfish man tells you everybody is selfish, while he who has a generous heart finds generous spirits in every company. The unmerciful find only coldness and ungentleness, while the merciful obtain mercy."—J. R. Miller.

6. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "According to an Oriental idiom, he who was admitted into the royal presence was said to see the king. Purity of heart is that court dress and badge without which it is impossible to gain admission to the King of kings."—George Dana Boardman.

7. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God." God hates war; God hates strife of any kind, on the personal or national scale; and God so loves peace that He gladly receives as His true children all those who seek in every way to promote "peace on earth, good will to men."

The Standard of Obenience.

1. The laws of the kingdom. Every kingdom must have laws, and it might have been expected that Christ's new kingdom would have new laws; but instead of new laws, Christ put a new spirit into the old laws. He was the completion of the old laws. His kingdom was that to which the old laws pointed, His dispensation was the fulfillment of the Mosaic dispensation, the New Testament is reared on the foundation of the Old Testament. The Jews regarded the five books of Moses, the Pentateuch, as the law, and the remainder of the Old Testament, including the historical writings, as the prophets.

Christianity is indeed a revolutionary religion, for it finds the world upside down and sets it right-side up again; it transforms a man's entire view of life, as the Beatitudes have just illustrated. But it does this not by abrogating any divinely given law already existing, but by carrying it on to new insight and nobler accomplishment.

2. The law of peace. Our Lord gives six illustrations of His principle that the law is to be obeyed in the heart, and that exterior obedience is not enough. The first is in relation to the command, "Thou shalt not kill." The scribes and Pharisees would say that this law was obeyed if one refrained from murdering; but Christ said that if one cherished anger in his heart, the commandment was broken, for the feeling of anger soon becomes the wish to murder, and in God's eyes a wish is a deed. His law of peace requires peaceful thoughts toward all men.

3. The law of purity. "Jesus applies the same reasoning in reference to the Seventh Commandment. He declares that it is broken not merely by a sinful act but by every impure desire. He warns against allowing any occasion for evil thought. No matter how great the sacrifice involved, one must put out of his life all that might cause him to be tempted needlessly, any thing which might endanger the purity of his soul."—Prof. Charles R. Erdman.

4. The law of reverence. The Jews of Christ's time used oaths on every occasion. "Their number was endless; men swore by heaven, by the earth, by the sun, by the prophets, by the temple, by Jerusalem, by the altar, by the wood used for it, by the sacrifices, by the temple vessels, by their own heads."—Cunningham Geikie.

They were careful not to break literally the commandment against profanity, but they broke it essentially, for it is a commandment requiring reverence for sacred things and for truth.

The Standard of Love.

1. The law of retaliation. As a judicial code, properly administered by legal officers, this is a necessary rule, still followed in all civilized countries; but as a code of private revenge, Christ condemned it. Christianity will have no lynchings, no vendettas, no blood feuds. The massacres that have stained the history of the world are abominations in the eyes of God, however they may be masked under the guise of religion or of political expediency.

2. The law of universal love. "Ye have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy: but I say unto you, Love your enemies." This is the climax of Christ's teachings, a teaching which found its supreme illustration in Christ's death on the cross for sinners who were His enemies. " 'But,' you say, 'it cannot be done.' I answer, 'It was done once.' 'Ah,' you say, 'that was different.' I answer, 'Wherein is the difference? Certainly not in the mind of Him who said, "Follow me." ' "—Rev. Robert Norwood, D. D.

3. The law of perfection. "Ye, therefore, shall be perfect, as your Heavenly Father is perfect." Perfect in love, in regard to which Christ has been speaking. The perfection which would be impossible for us in and of ourselves is possible for us in and from our Saviour.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, January 26, 1930.

Topic: "What is Our Church Planning This Year?"—Acts 2:41-47, 13:1-3. (Denominational Day. Beginning Christian Endeavor Week.)

Some Bible Hints.

The Church must set up a membership campaign. New blood or death (v. 41).

We must plan for new interest in the Church, new consecration, new devotion to the practice of the teaching of Jesus (v. 42).

Plan for larger friendship, more sociability, less class distinction, more of the happy spirit of Christ (vs. 44-46).

Planning should be preceded by prayer. A praying Church is sure to be a missionary Church (vs. 1-3).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Loyalty to our Church suggests that we adopt its program of work. It is well to have a well-considered plan for definite things to do.

To realize any plan for larger gifts to missions, we should have a mission-study class. We should also tell in the meeting, week by week, part of the story of some missionary book.

What are we planning for the community? We should survey the community and find what it needs. Then plan to meet that need—evangelistic, social, recreational, etc.

Endeavorers can take part in local evangelism, attend revival meetings, hold cottage prayer meetings, distribute invitations and tracts, bring in friends, and so forth.

A Few Illustrations.

Denominations are now getting out pageants suitable for presentation along lines of denominational work. Let us use these and emphasize their message.

Denominational plans are made to help the local Church. They suggest lines of work. As one hand washes the other, so do the denominations and Churches help one another. They cannot very well exist without one another.

Ruts! That is the Church's danger. We need the wider view of affairs that the denomination gives us to prevent narrowness and futility. Let us broadens our views and our interests.

The tabernacle in the wilderness was built with the people's gifts. What a denomination can do depends on the gifts of the Churches. Even denominations cannot work without money. We can help build the kingdom in the wilderness by our gifts.

To Think About.

How did we help advance our denomination's plans last year?

What share can our society have in our denomination's plans this year?

How do our denomination's plans fit local conditions?

MOODY'S BIRTHDAY.

The annual gathering of Christian workers will for the twenty-fifth year convene at the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, February 3rd to 6th, for the four days of the "Founder's Week" conference. The auditorium at the corner of La-Salle Street and Chicago Avenue has been provided with an electric amplifier system by which the speaker's voice will easily carry to every part of the hall. The system is also extended to a number of other lecture halls, so that overflow meetings will have the privilege of hearing the chief addresses from the main auditorium. Many hundreds of sittings are thus added to the hearing capacity of the auditorium.

Three continents contribute to the program in the participation of Rev. Charles W. Abel, from New Guinea; Rev. William Lamb, from Australia, and a strong group of speakers well known to American Church gatherings—Bishop Horace M. DuBose, Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D. D., Rev. Francis W. Russell, D. D., Mr. H. A. Ironside.

The missionary emphasis will be marked and triumphant. In addition to Mr. Abel, speakers from abroad will include Dr. H. W. Hudson, from China, and Mr. Harry Strachan, from Central America. "Alumni Day," Wednesday the 5th, and "Missionary Day," Thursday the 6th, will be days of outstanding power and significance.

Dr. James M. Gray, president of the Institute, will preside at most of the session, and the inspiring institute auditorium choir will be directed by Mr. T. J. Bittikofer in rendering many soul-stirring anthems and in leading congregational song.

CHILDREN OF THE LIGHT.

There are children of light and children of darkness. The latter shun the bright, the pure azure shining sky of truth with all its loving beams. Their world is like the world of insects, and is the world of night. Insects are all light-shunners. Even those which, like the bee, labor during the daytime, prefer the shades of obscurity. The children of light are like the birds. The world of birds is the world of light—of song. Nearly all of them, says Michelet, live in the sun, fill themselves with it, or are inspired by it. Those of the South carry its reflected radiance on their wings; those of the colder climates in their songs; many of them follow it from land to land. —Author unknown.

The Christian Advocate (Nashville) says: "The membership gains in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1929, were 14,942. In 1928 they were 1,005. This is gratifying, indeed, not only to Methodism, but to the Christian world, and it is hoped that the year-books of other communions will show a like increase in numbers."

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

ORDERED WAYS.

"Jotham became mighty, because he ordered his ways before Jehovah his God."—2 Chron. 27:1-6.

King Jotham of Judah took the right path to power. Other rulers have sought for power by ordering their ways before the people, or before the politicians, or before the financiers, or before the generals and their armies; but Jotham, though he doubtless had regard to the various elements of his kingdom, had primary regard to Jehovah his God, and became mighty because he ordered his ways before Him.

All of us want to be strong. We all want to be able to do things, and to have such influence that we can get others to do things. But few of us realize that there is one and only one infallible way to be strong, and that is to ally ourselves with the Omnipotent. In ourselves we are weakest of the weak. Few of God's creatures but surpass man in at least one point, though none of them surpass man in the aggregate of qualities. Our strength comes from understanding our weakness and joining ourselves to God's power. When we do this most fully, we prove Paul's principle, discovering that when we are weak then we are strong.

Ordered ways are planned ways, and not the ways of change. They are the ways of God's orderly providence. They are the ways of wisdom, of confidence, and of peace.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we have erred and strayed from Thy ways like lost sheep. Bring us back again, we pray Thee. Restore us to the ways of Thy salvation, and there we shall discover strength. For we are only happy when all our ways are in Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

MEASURED AGAINST GOD.

"As He who called you is holy, be ye yourselves also holy."—1 Peter 1:13-21.

Corot once said, "When I find myself in one of nature's beautiful places, I grow angry with my pictures." Lovely as his landscapes are, they are only feeble copies of God's marvelous handiwork. The artist could not be expected to equal nature in its glory, and we are content and happy with his approximation.

But in the spiritual world a higher standard of excellence is set before us, one which, at first, seems impossible of attainment: we are to be holy with the very holiness of God. How can that be brought about? How can the creature in any respect equal the Creator?

The answer is, of course, that we could never do it in our own strength and with our own poor abilities, but we have God Himself to help us. He is willing to enter our lives, bringing His perfect holiness to purify and exalt our spirits. In the physical realm it is not so. Nature does not enter the artist's paints and live again on the artist's canvas, though we may say so in a metaphor; but that is exactly what happens in the realm of the soul.

Prayer.—O Holy Spirit, we are not proud, but very humble and grateful, when Thou dost make us holy with Thy holiness. We know well how evil we are, how unworthy of Thy blessed presence. We understand the supreme condescension Thou dost show. And we rejoice continually that we are the children of a God so holy and so kind. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

OUR CHOICE OF SLAVERY.

"If the servant shall . . . say, I love my master, . . . I will not go out free; then . . . he shall serve him forever."—Ex. 21:1-6.

In the old Hebrew days, if a master offered to manumit a slave, and the slave chose not to accept his freedom, but to remain with the master whom he loved, then he was to be a slave to him for the rest of his life. That happened many times, we may be sure, as it happened many times in the South after emancipation.

And yet it was always the exception, for men have an instinctive love of freedom, usually surpassing their love for a human master, however kind the master may be. But when we come to the soul's relation to our divine Master, the Lord Jesus Christ, conditions are wholly different. Paul loved to call himself the slave of Christ, and all Christians join him in that loyalty. All Christians spurn what the world calls freedom, and choose rather the perpetual and complete service of the Son of God.

Prayer.—Uplift us into Thy slavery, Redeemer of men. Admit us to be Thy serfs, Thou Ransomer from death and the grave. As slaves, we shall wield sceptres, and as serfs we shall dwell in palaces and we shall sit on the eternal thrones. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OUR AIM.

"I have set the Lord always before me."—Psa. 16:1-11.

The brilliant Marie Bashkirtseff wrote in her diary: "It is the New Year. At the theater, precisely at midnight, watch in hand, I wished my wish in a single word, intoxicating, whether it be written or spoken—fame." What an empty wish was that with which to start a new year of life! She attained fame of a sort, but what does she think of it now?

If you were equally honest, what wish would you express in a word, watch in hand, at midnight on December 31? Would it be "money"? Would it be "ease"? Would it be "pleasure"? Would it be "power"? What would it be?

If David were making the wish, we know what his one word would be—"God!" He set the Lord always before him as his one goal, his one absorbing desire. To have God, of all God, ever more and more of God—that was the height of his ambition, the depth of his longing.

That is the one aim that is sure of success.

Prayer.—We set Thee before us, gracious Lord. Thou, O Christ, art all we want. Fill us with Thyself. Satisfy us with Thy personality. Give us what Thou wilt, if only Thou wilt come to our hearts and abide. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THOUGHTS AND WAYS.

"My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah."—Isaiah 55:6-13.

If our thoughts were God's thoughts, then our ways would be God's ways. Thoughts make ways. Thoughts create lives. Our lives so often go amiss because we so seldom take thought for our thoughts.

What are God's thoughts, that are so different from our ordinary thoughts? They are thoughts of love. They go out toward all men with purposes of helpfulness, and with feelings of deep sympathy.

Prayer.—But Thy ways may be our ways, O Jehovah, because Thy thoughts may be our thoughts. Thou wilt put Thy thoughts in our heart, and set our feet in Thy paths. Thou wilt take our own foolish, weak, and wicked thoughts out of our minds, and put Thy strong and beautiful thoughts in their place. Do this for us, we pray Thee, that we may be Thine forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GRASS AND GRACE.

"If God doth so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"—Matt. 6:25-34.

A scientist can take us out into the fields and show us many interesting things. The grasses, the flowers, the bushes and tree, the insects and birds, and even the snails and the earthworms have life histories full of marvelous facts. But botany and zoology do not reveal the chief facts to be drawn from the fields. For those we must go to the Founder of botany and zoology, to Him without whom nothing was made that has been made, to our Lord Jesus Christ; and He will take a common blade of grass and from it draw conclusions of the Father's love which insure peace and trust, and all joy in life.

This is the real science, to know the goodness of God; and any science which does not lead to it is "science falsely so called." So to see the grass that we may draw from it grace is the true knowledge. This beautiful world is full of the Father. He has impressed Himself on every part of it so clearly that the devout mind cannot fail to find Him there. Though we have all the lore of books, we go through the world blind if we do not see as Christ saw it.

Prayer.—Great Teacher, forgive our little faith. Pardon our lack of insight. How can we fail to trust our Creator when all His creation is proof of His lovingkindness! Amen.

SUNDAY.

HALF-DRESSED.

"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."—Rom. 13:8-14.

Dr. F. B. Meyer wrote that we are constantly rushing half-dressed into life. We are proud, not having attired ourselves in Christ's humility; we are weak, having forgotten to put on Christ's strength; we are harsh and unlovely, because we have left off Christ's "meek and quiet spirit." We need all parts of His raiment, and especially "the garments of salvation" and "the robe of righteousness," which He is ready to give us.

Many a nominal Christian has a half-dressed soul. This is made apparent by a glance at the faces, so many are sad or sour. It is manifest in the voices, so many are querulous or harsh. It is clear in the lives, so many are listless or careless. The Christian who has put on Christ has put on beauty, and energy, and gayety, and kindliness, and hopefulness, and courage. Ah, what brave attire is that!

Prayer.—Make our life, dear Father, a feast, the wedding feast of Thy Son. We will rejoice and be glad in it. So lovely is this world which Thou has given us! So glorious is this existence which Thou hast provided for us! Amen.

Christian Orphanage

January 11, 1930.

Dr. P. J. Kernodle,
1536 E. Broad St.,
Richmond, Va.

Dear Bro. Kernodle:

I am sorry that my letter and report did not reach you for the issue of THE SUN of January 9th. I mailed the letter last Saturday night on the 6 o'clock train, and it should have been in your office on Monday morning. I am sending you a copy of that report and also my report for this week, and will thank you to print No. 1 first and let No. 2 follow, so it will correspond with my record here, as my report No. 2 is the concluding report for the year.

Thanking you, and with every good wish, I beg to remain,

Yours in the work,
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

(The above letter explains why there was no report in last week's SUN. The last form of THE SUN was held until Wednesday morning for this report.—Managing Editor.)

Dear Friends:

We want to thank every Sunday School, Church and individual for every contribution made, for every kind word said, and every good deed done to help the little children in the Christian Orphanage during the year 1929. While we have not done as much as we would like to have done, we have the consolation of knowing we did our best. It is no little task to care for 120 children. It takes time, patience, religion and money to feed, clothe, educate and train them for good citizenship and the Master's kingdom. When you give money to help the Orphanage in its work for humanity, you are not giving it; you are making an investment in human life. Who is it that does not really enjoy investing in some little helpless child and see that it has a chance in life! We feel very proud of boys and girls who have been reared here and have gone out in life and are now filling their place in human society.

As we begin this New Year, let us not forget the 120 children in the Christian Orphanage. Let each and every one do something to help it do a still larger work. Remember us in your prayers. Remember us with your gifts.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

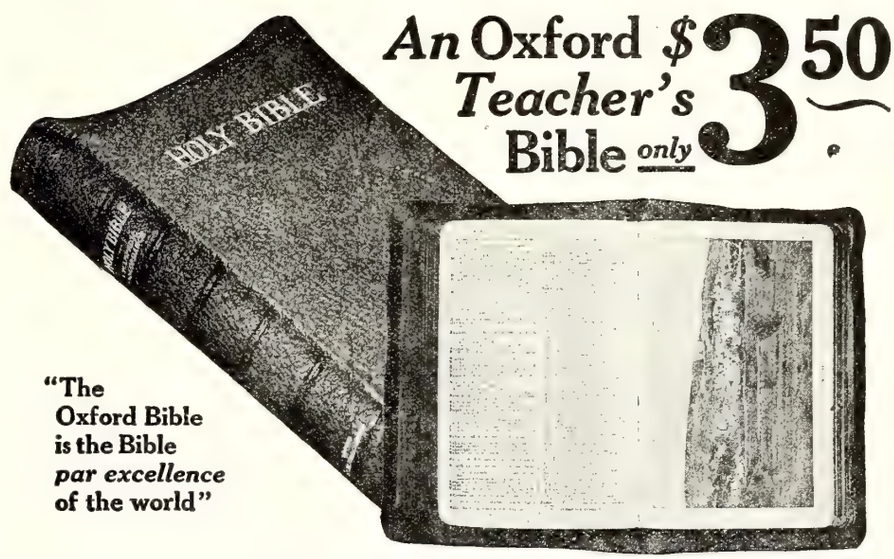
OXFORD BIBLES



An Oxford Teacher's Bible only $3.50

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

The best recommendation of the OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLES is the fact that over 3,000,000 copies have been sold. The wonderful helps they contain save your time because they are alphabetically arranged, making reference easy. They take the place of many books about the Bible, and can be depended upon, being written by eminent scholars. The Helps contain 32 graphic illustrations, besides 15 beautifully colored maps. The text is the Authorized or King James version, with over 50,000 centre column references.

OBITUARIES.

MAY.

Mrs. Sarah Myriam May was born on June 24, 1874, and died November 21, 1929, at the age of 55 years, 4 months, and 27 days. Sister May united with the Christian Church about thirty-five years ago, and was a faithful member until death, holding membership at the time of her death with Mt. Olivet (R) Church. She is survived by her husband, John A. May, and by five children. Funeral services were held at Bethel Christian Church, November 24, 1929.

A. W. ANDES.

STEPPE.

John W. Steppe was born December 20, 1867, and died December 23, 1929, aged 62 years, 3 days. Deceased was a member of the Methodist Church and lived the last years of his life at Earleysville, Albemarle County, Va. His remains were brought to his old home neighborhood and buried at St. Peter's Church, near Shenandoah, Va.

Funeral services were held there December 25, 1929. He is survived by his widow and one brother and two ssters.

A. W. ANDES.

MUMFORD.

We, the ladies of the Woman's Missionary and Ladies' Aid Society of Isle of Wight Church, feel very keenly the passing of our most faithful member and co-worker, Mrs. Annie Nelms Mumford, who departed this life on December 18, 1929. While we mourn the departure of our sister, who has been a patient sufferer for some time, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain, and may we ever strive to imitate her example by being more faithful in our duties to Gods cause.

We bow in humble submission to God's will and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy, and recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy recarded on the minutes of our society.

MRS. M. TURPIN WHITLEY.
MRS. W. FRANK PORTER.
MRS. JOHN M. ROBERTS.

PAYNE.

Bro. Joe P. Payne, a faithful servant of God, was born December 25, 1857, and died November 27, 1929, at his home in Reidsville, N. C. For more than five years Bro. Payne was a shut-in, but his being cut off from the busy world did not cut him off from his God. He had an unfaltering faith and always talked freely of his joy in the hope of eternity when friends came near. He was faithful to his Church and loved it with a love like only true followers of Christ can have. He was widely known and was loved by all.

He will be greatly missed by his many friends, a devoted wife, and the following children: Jasper, Lewis and Lynn, Mrs. Hattie Apple, Mrs. Pearl Pearson, and Miss Ida, who lived with him.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Christian Church, Reidsville, N. C., of which he was a member, by the writer and Rev. R. A. Whitten.

J. H. DOLLAR.

NEWMAN.

It is with feeling of profound sorrow that the Woman's Missionary Aid Society of Henderson Christian Church have to record the death of one of our true and loyal members, Mrs. D. L. Newman, which occurred December 21, 1929, after a few hours' sickness. She fell asleep in the arms of loved ones here, to awaken in the arms of loved ones up yonder.

We, the members of the society, wish to offer the following resolutions:

1. That we mourn the loss of our friend, but bow in humble submission to the will of Him that doeth all things well.

2. That her husband and children have lost a loving and devoted wife and mother, and her passing leaves a vacancy that cannot be filled.

3. We extend to the Church and her family our heartfelt condolence and a prayer, that they may say, "Thy will, oh, Lord, not mine."

4. That these resolutions be recorded on our minutes, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

MUMFORD.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Annie Nelms Mumford, whose death occurred December 18, 1929; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death our Church has lost a faithful and zealous member, an efficient and loyal worker, and our Sunday School a consecrated member.

2. That recognizing her valuable services to her Church and her unfaltering faith in Christ, her love and interest in her Christian work, we heartily commend her example as being worthy of imitation.

3. That while we believe our loss is her gain and heaven is richer because of her presence there, we recommend her family to the gracious care of our Heavenly Father.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and one recorded upon the minutes of the Church register.

PER CENT OF CRIMINALS IN THE U. S. POPULATION.

Judging from the headlines of our big city dailies, one would come to the conclusion that our country is made up of criminals, but August Vollmer, head of the police research department of the University of Chicago and official adviser to President Hoover's Crime Commission, says there is approximately one criminal out of an average of 120 residents in the United States. This does not seem large, but even at that it is far too large. Possibly we may not expect 100 per cent of clean, upright men. Perfection is rarely attained, yet why should we have any criminals at all? If we were to give Christianity a fair show, there would really be no criminals in the country.—Exchange.

CHRISTIANS' ATTITUDE TOWARD JEWS.—

Recently Rabbi V. E. Reichert, of Cincinnati, wrote an article under the title, "How Proselyting Feels to a Jew," which was published in the Christian Century. It is not our purpose to make reply to the reasoning of the rabbi, nor would we discuss the issue as to whether or not the Christian is justified in attempting to persuade Jews to accept Christianity. We would rather raise the question as to whether the attitude of Christendom toward the Jew is really Christian.

The most casual knowledge of the history of the Christian Church will serve to acquaint one with the bitterness which was manifested toward the early Church by the leaders of Israel. The New Testament contains sufficient reference to make plain what the attitude of the Jewish world was toward Christianity. And it was inevitable that there should grow up in the hearts of Christians a spirit of retaliating bitterness. Naturally, through the centuries, as Christians and Jews have lived together in the same lands, the ancient bitterness has been alleviated. Each has come to some understanding of the other's beliefs and convictions. In many sections, especially in America, there has developed a mutual respect of sorts. But has the Christian world ever manifested such a spirit of love toward the Jews as was taught by the Christ? One would hesitate long before giving an affirmative answer to this question.

There is today a great gulf fixed between the Jew and the Christian. This gulf is so wide and so deep that what the rabbi called "proselyting" and what we Christians call "missions to the Jews" can accomplish so little that it is negligible. Nor does it seem possible to ever profoundly touch the Jewish world with the message of the Christ, unless Christendom shall be able to manifest a spirit of love at once so strong and so unselfish that the heart of Israel shall be won in spite of itself. For, after all, the one essential difference between Judaism and Christianity is the insistence of the Christ on the power of a love that is as wide as humanity and as strong as life itself. Such a love manifested toward the Jews would presage Christianity's crowning triumph.

NAVAL LIMITATIONS CONFERENCE.—

The hopes of the world should be centered upon the conference on naval limitations which was convened in London on January 21st. There are two reasons why the conference should be of vital interest to every American citizen. The first is the influence which the outcome of the negotiations will have on world peace. The experience of the past has borne out the contention that war is made by the nations that are prepared for war; that is, those that have strong armies and big navies. Navies are especially necessary for the waging of modern warfare, not alone for their use in actual combat, but for their protection of the shipping which must carry food, supplies and munitions of war. With commerce organized as it is today, practically all the nations of the world must depend upon other nations for some of the necessities of life. Therefore, the blockade becomes a strong implement of war, and blockades can be maintained or defeated only by strong navies.

The outcome of the approaching conference will also serve as an accurate measure of the degree of confidence that has been established betwene the leading nations of the world. War is bred in distrust, suspicion and hatred. Ten years have done much to cool and to curb the seething hatreds among nations. But whether or not there has been built up a sufficiently strong spirit of friendship and a desire for peace remains to be shown by the achievements of the next few weeks at the London conference.

The outcome of the conference vitally affects every American taxpayer and every one who is interested in the arts of peace and the cultivation of the finer things of life. We boast of modern civilziation, and we Americans sometimes get the idea that America is leading in civilization. Yet the most recent figures show that of every dollar which finds its way into the treasury of the United States, seventy-two cents of it goes to pay for the wars in which we have engaged during the past and in preparation for the wars which we may have in the future. It is a sad commentary upon our vaunted civiliation when one of the strongest and richest of nations must spend almost three-fourths of its wealth in the waging of war. There must certainly be a higher and a better way by which nations may live together in peace and amity. In a very real sense, our Christianity is on trial at the conference table in London. It is a time for deep heart searchings and prayer.

SATURATION POINT IN PREACHING.—

The "saturation point" has become a familiar term in trade circles. It has been made familiar to those not primarily interested in trade by the prophecies as to the saturation point in the automobile industry, something that many thought had been reached several years ago, but which now seems as far away as ever. Now there are evidences that religious leaders are becoming interested in the saturation point in sermons. How many sermons can the average man or woman reasonably be expected to stand is certainly an interesting question. It is, of course, perfectly evident that for some people any sermon whatever is more than they can stand. They are unable to bear up even under a partially denatured sermonette. Certainly we are not here considering such an unheroic individual. But in this scientific age we ought to be able to find out what the average Church member can stand in the way of sermons.

The question has probably been raised by the increasing number of Church members who do not care to expose themselves to more than one sermon on Sunday. It is being suggested that to listen to more than one sermon on Sunday is expecting too much of ordinary mortals. It will certainly be a comforting morsel for the preacher if it can be conclusively shown that the failure to attend the evening service is due to human limitations on the part of the listener and that the quality of the preaching has nothing whatever to do with the issue.

Such a discussion as this cannot completely be divorced from the question as to how many real sermons the average preacher can preach in one day. I suppose that most preachers have noted the striking similarity, in subject and content, between their morning and evening sermons. If such a similarity has not been noted, a careful study is apt to reveal it. And there is good reason for such a coincidence. If a preacher has become so gripped by a subject that he can preach about it with appealing and moving fervor, he is not likely to be able to preach about anything else that day. Even when the preacher is preaching sermons prepared at an earlier date, it requires a feat of mental and spiritual gymnastics to get out of the mood for one sermon and into the mood for another radically different line of thought.

Does the average Church attendant really need two sermons on Sunday? Is the average hearer really capable of taking in two sermons in one day? Certainly any fairly intelligent hearer can follow the line of argument and give mental assent or rejection to the conclusions that are deduced. But if the sermon does what all good sermons should do: calls for mental and spiritual readjustments; if it presents spiritual goals and ideals toward which one should strive—does the one counteract and nullify the influence of the other, when two sermons are listened to? If there be spiritual merit in sitting submissively and respectfully under the sound of the preacher's voice for half an hour, then the sermon of the evening is an absolute necessity. But let us bear in mind that we are talking not about whether there should be two religious services, but whether there should be two sermons. It is surprising that there has not been more experimenting in Protestant Churches with the effort to build worship services with the sermon left out. Maybe the reason why more such services have not been held is because preaching has been found to be easier. It is perhaps well that we are slow to give up the custom of having two sermons every Sunday, for the same reason that causes every poor marksman to insist on a double-barreled gun, and many of them prefer pump-guns or repeaters.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. A. Harper attended last week the nanual session in Washington, D. C., of the American Association of Colleges.

Congregationalists and Christians have voted to unite their Church affiliation in Salisbury, N. C., and the former "First Congregational Church" with a Church membership of thirty and a parish house and property valued at $30,000 becomes "The United Church," Congregationalist-Christian, of Salisbury.

THE SUN editor, J. O. Atkinson, is this week attending a meeting of the Mission Boards and Prudential Committee of the Congregational Church, in Chicago, to which boards he was elected at the Piqua Convention last fall. Dr. L. E. Smith, of Norfolk, Va., is also in attendance as member of the Board of Ministerial Relief and Annuity.

When "times are hard" and finances close, the enterprises of religion and righteousness are the first to suffer. The Christian Advocate tells us that "the shortage of funds in the Methodist Episcopal Church the past year has resulted in the recall of two hundred of its missionaries and the 'dismissal of hundreds of native workers.' We heartily regret to read of these facts and earnestly pray that a different result will be accomplished in 1930." But has anybody reported a shortage in returns from movie-picture incomes, or a decrease of revenue to any amusement or luxury?

Rev. S. E. Madren and people of our mission in Carroll County, Va., are under deep obligations to Bro. J. I. Branch and family of our Auburn Church, Auburn, N. C. Some time ago this Church purchased a piano and offered their organ for sale. Bro Branch and family conceived the happy idea, which they carried out, of buying the organ and donating it to our mission work in Carroll County. The organ has been installed in good shape, and is fulfilling a real mission and adding greatly to the joy and the delight of the services under the leadership of Bro. Madren. This was a beautiful and considerate act on the part of Bro. Branch and family, and supplies a need that was deeply felt by Bro. Madren and his people.

Mrs. D. P. Barrett, writing under recent date from Ponce, Porto Rico, says: "We have had an exceedingly busy Christmas season, with Sunday School entertainments, singing of carols, entertaining in our home and reaching as many of our old and sick as we could. It is a satisfying task; but oh, the misery and poverty everywhere! I don't think it has ever been worse. In December we received six packages. You can imagine the pleasure it gave to distribute them and thus help a little. We Barretts are in usual health, thank you. We are observing 'Week of Prayer' this week. We are hoping the two lady representatives who were to visit Porto Rico before the Southern Convention meets will 'really and truly' come, and soon."

Lieutenant-Governor J. E. West and Mrs. West were the very happy recipients of a silver water service, a beautiful gift from the Senate of the State of Virginia as a token of esteem and admiration in which the Lieutenant-Governor and his wife are held by the people of Virginia. The occasion was notable and historical, having been observed in the presence of the Governor and officials of the State in the Capitol Building on the occasion of Lieutenant-Governor West's retiring from office on January 14th, after a continuous service in its legislative halls for fourteen years. The speaker, in presenting this silver service on behalf of the Senate, facetiously remarked that he had his doubts about presenting even a water service to the Lieutenant-Governor, "since he was so very bone-dry that it was not known if a drinking service of any kind would be acceptable." The Lieutenant-Governor certainly has rendered his State a most honorable and acceptable service and made his name secure by being a stout and stubborn champion of prohibition and law enforcement. He has served his State well, and retires from official position with the love and the applause of a grateful and admiring constituency.

WADLEY, ALA.

Dear young people of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Christian Conferences,—Since my last letter to THE SUN, the student body at Piedmont Junior College has floored the main body of the auditorium of the administration building.

You will have to hurry, young peopel, if you get in on this delightful work. The rostrum is yet to be floored, which we mean to do in a few days. Come on, dearly beloved, and help now, so that when we all gather for our commencement and also our summer school of religious education we will be glad to see our new auditorium presentable. And listen, we have plans under way for beautifying the campus, and we must have some money. Just a little from each Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society; just a little contribution from each of us will put the program over, and then next summer we will have a young people's rally and big barbecue and some fine speaking.

Our ministers and laymen will all meet at Piedmont Junior and have a real good time. Won't that be fine! Get ready to come, for we must not fail. The overhead of the auditorium is to be ceiled. We need your help. We need it now. Let each Sunday School appoint a committee to secure the contribution. Let all our young people help. We will show to our Church and college that we are loyal, and to our God that we are true. We are not able to do great things, but we can be faithful in that which is least.

Who will be the first to answer with an offering and have your name placed on the honor roll?

Now, dear young people, help me to pray that God may give us the best year yet and crown it with glorious results. Next Sunday I will be at Corinth, with Rev. C. W. Carter, and at night at Roanoke, with Bro. Veazey. I have visited nineteen Churches. I must get around before revivals begin.

NOT A KICK.

The total of $3,000,000,000 for Federal highways and rural post roads is being sought by various measures, according to an analysis of the bills introduced during the present Congress, stated Thomas J. Keefe, general manager of the American Motorists Association. In speaking of one of ehese bills which has been reported faforably by the House committee, he said:

"One of the most encouraging indications of the trend of the congressional mind toward the motorists' problems was evidenced during the hearings before the House Committee on Roads on the Dowell bill, increasing Federal aid to $125,000,000 per year (it has heretofore been $75,000,000).

"The committee unanimously reported the measure," Mr. Keefe continued, "and also unanimously recommended to the House favorable action on the bill. Furthermore, in its report accompanying the bill, the committee called attention to the fact that no witness had appeared before the committee in opposition to the measure."

Pointing out that the Federal aid program is the nation's greatest assurance for year-by-year development, Rudolph Jose, veteran motor car dealer in the District of Columbia, declares that few problems which have come up for solution on a national scale holds as great possibilities for more pleasurable motoring.

"It is proposed to add $50,000,000 to the sum available for Federal aid work during the next fiscal year," he said, "and further to increase the annual appropriation for the two succeeding years to $125,000,000. Since the annual contribution of the Federal government has been $75,000,000 since 1925, this step will have the effect of embarking on a three-year program with $125,000,000 available for each year.

"Without doubt," he continued, "the Federal aid system has become the backbone of the nation's motor transportation facilities."

No witness appeared before the committee in opposition to the measure. The measure referred to provides for an increase of $50,000,000 per year for roads. In fact, no protests of these measures on the ground that they would increase Federal aid for the roads have been heard.

Astonishing facts! Where are those that rise up in arms when the education bill, providing for a department of education and an appropriation of only $1,500,000, is mentioned; those that have vigorously opposed this measure, stating that Federal aid means "Federal control," "centralization" and "interference with States' rights," to which they are forever and eternally opposed.

Notwithstanding that measures in the interests of roads seek a total sum from the Federal government 2,000 times the amount asked for in the education bill, they remain strangely silent. The only logical conclusion to be reached is that their dire predictions regarding Federal aid where education is concerned are not the real reasons for their opposition to the bill providing for a national department of education. A REAL CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE.

The Quaker Church which President Hoover attends for the purpose of worship has taken unusual action in regard to passing the collection plate. It is no longer being passed. The trustees of the assembly feel that the many tourists who attend are drawn there because of Mr. Hoover's presence, and lest these get an impression of a commercial atmosphere by the taking of the offering, they came to the decision to discontinue passing the plate. They realized the impropriety of commercializing the presence of their most distinguished member. It is a very beautiful tribute to the Holy Spirit, who, no doubt, is often grieved with the vulgarity of Churches that get greedy for the "unrighteous mammon," and do many ungraceful things to get it from others and to protect themselves from liberal giving.

Members of this Church, including President and Mrs. Hoover, have been advised to send their collections weekly by mail or by a messenger, visitors will not be asked to give anything, but they will be welcomed at the services as usual.—Christian-Evangelist.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, Preacher.

THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK OF REVELATIONS.

By Rev. H. C. Caviness.

In the seventh chapter there is a marvelous truth presented that is, the debt of the Gentiles to the Jews, for salvation came by Israel. We find that the multitude out of the tribes could be numbered, viz: 144,000 (Rev. 7:4), but the number out of the nations can't be measured (Rev. 7:9). So, if the casting away of Israel occasioned the salvation of some of the Gentiles, how limitless will the blessing be when Israel is restored. Oh, may we pray for the peace of Jerusalem, plead for the salvation of the Jews; for the dawn of that day when all Israel shall be saved (Rom. 11:26).

We commend the entire eleventh chapter of Romans to the student, for here we find the true relationship of Israel, God and the Gentiles. Out yonder in the future, during the great tribulation, an innumerable company of Gentiles shall be saved who will wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb.

The opening of the seventh seal occasioned the trumpets of judgment, and the cups of wrath; the Lamb opened the seals, but angels sounded trumpets and proclaimed war. Jericho fell when seven trumpets sounded seven times on the seventh day. Assyria (Armenia) is first to be judged, and each judgment only afflicts a third part of men, thus evidencing the compassion of God.

In the ninth chapter we see a "star" fall from heaven, thus symbolizing Satan; a key was given him by God before he could open the pit. He couldn't open the prison house without God's permission, however. Oh, how consolatory to Christians, this impotence of demons!

He mobilized the greatest army in the history of the world, of superhuman characters, two hundred million in number (v. 16). And we find from verse 21 that idolatry, license, sorcery, i. e., trafficking with the dead, will reach an excess in the future never known in the past, which leads to the future worship of the wild beast.

In chapter 10, the seer visualizes a mighty angel, the Creator, robed with a cloud, a token of divine dignity, crowned with "the rainbow." His face and feet are as of fire. He descends from heaven to take His possession, and His great opponent is seen ascending from the abyss, and the conflict between the two Messiahs approaches, Satan having permission to gather on the battlefield all the power of his demonic kingdom, together with many people, nations, tongues and kings, when God proclaims that time shall be no longer, i. e., "There shall be delay no longer."

We find from chapter 11 that the temple is to be rebuilt in Jerusalem; that the anti-Christ is to enthrone himself there, but a little company of believers will meet there looking for the advent of Christ, and the faith of these will be sustained by the "two Messiahs," which will continue for three and one-half years in testimony—the same time our Lord utilized. The wicked will triumph over the witnesses, but only for three days; the incidents here symbolizing the ministry of Christ: three days in the tomb. He arose and ascended to heaven; at His resurrection there was an earthquake. Oh, the triumph of the witnesses was but the power granted by a resurrected Christ.

The twelfth chapter presents a woman, who symbolizes Israel; a woman and a serpent, as in Genesis 3rd chapter. The child was Christ, and Satan's efforts are directed against the Child for purposes of extermination. The war in heaven is future (v. 7). Satna and his hosts now occupy the lower heavens (Eph. 6:12) and he will hold fast to that position until ejected (1 Thess. 2:6) by the second coming of Christ. How long—oh, how long, Lord Jesus? We find in the 11th verse that the only title to the inheritance, whether in heaven or on earth, is the blood of the Lamb.

We next have described the greatest blasphemy of all time and eternity; for man must have rule and religion of some kind, and we see introduced the dragon, who will be anti-God; the wild beast, who will be anti-Christ, and the false prophet, who will be the anti-Holy Spirit. These three will form the infernal trinity, and without exception Scripture speaks of them as individuals. The astounding miracles that will be wrought by the false prophet will establish his infernal origin, and not his divine appointment.

In the fourteenth chapter we anticipate the outpouring of the seven last plagues; here, too, we find the Messiah crowned with the stephanos of victory—not the diadems of monarchy, and evil having reached a climax, judgment immediately follows, but this period of horror will continue only three and one-half years, during which the battle of Armageddon is had.

The great climax of this vast prophecy now approaches, and the rider on the white horse of Rev. 6:2, crowned and armed, is about to meet in battle the rider on the white horse of Rev. 19:11, on whose head will be the many crowns, and out of whose mouth will issue a sharp sword! And the mighty voice that shouted "finished" from the cross, now shouts "finished" from the throne.

In chapters 17 and 18 the most conspicuous prophecy of the Book is uttered. It describes the destruction of the religion and of the city founded by Nimrod. In Revelation the true Messiah and His city, Jerusalem, contrast with the false Messiah and his city, Babylon. One is the Bride and the other is the harlot. All idolatries, both ancient and modern, originate in Babylon; she is the great harlot, and the vast system of falsehood and abomination is Satanic. When John saw this woman he was overwhelmed with amazement, for he was conscious that she claimed to represent the Messianic Church, and such indeed will be the final phase of what is called Christendom.

Let us understand clearly that ever since the third chapter of Revelation, the Church (the Bride) has been caught up by heaven. We find that there is a period of one thousand years between the resurrection of the dead in Christ and the wicked dead; the chaining of Satan during the millenium; his release, the gathering of the final army of the world, the army of Gog and Magog, who meet defeat. The mighty declaration "finished," heard in the amen of creation and at Calvary and now repeated here for the last time, closes all prophecy, and we find Satan in the penitentiary of doom forever (Rev. 20th ch.).

The book closes with the picture of the Holy City, a city fifteen hundred miles square; it appears as a pyramid, its top stone fifteen hundred miles above its base.

The bride of Genesis 3 (Eve) expelled man from the world that then was, but the bride of Revelation 22 invites men to enter the world that will be. The office of the Messiah is repeated again and again in this prophecy: He is the Lamb that was slain, and His blood washes from sin, and alone makes fit for entrance into the Eternal City; and the doom of eternal judgment is pronounced upon all who add to or subtract from these prophecies.

Once more the Messiah speaks, and for the last time His voice is heard crying, "Surely, I come quickly."

May we pray: "Oh, my Saviour, the time of Thy return delay not, lest the living give up their hopes! Delay not, lest earth become a veritable hell, and Thy Church be well-nigh crushed. Oh, hasten that great resurrection day, when the graves that received but rottiness, and retain but dust, shall return Thee kings and priests! Thy desolate Bride saith "Come"; the whole creation saith, "Come." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Amen. (Rev. 22:20.)

The day of eternity is breaking in the East. Thank God!

FANCY GAP LETTER.

Possibly many of our Sun readers are looking for an account of the work at Fancy Gap, since we are coming into a new year. We have been able to continue our Sunday School all the while, even though the weather has been rough at times. The Sunday Schools have a very good attendance for the winter months.

Because of the difficulty in securing a teacher, there has not been as yet any school at Rocky Ford. Possibly there will be some provision made for a school later in the spring and summer months.

The writer has been teaching the school at Elk Spur this winter. We have a very good school, with about twenty-five on roll. Two of our girls who were in school here last winter are now in high school at Hillsville. They are getting along well with their work.

Our children at Elk Spur gave a fine program at Christmas in celebration of our Lord's birth. The deep snow prevented us from having a program at Rocky Ford as we had planned. Yet those children appreciated the gifts which were sent to them by the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Raleigh, N. C. The gifts for the Elk Spur children were provided by the Woman's Sunday School Class, and a nice treat of oranges, candy, etc., was furnished by the Men's Bible Class of the Burlington Christian Church.

Our appreciation and many thanks are extended to the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C.; also to the Woman's Sunday School Class and the Men's Bible Class of the Burlington Christian Church. We also appreciate the neatly dressed dolls which Mrs. W. A. Warner and the juniors of Hopewell, Va., sent us. All these helped to provide a merry Christmas for our children of the two Churches.

Besides the above-named, we have received two other articles of interest. Mr. J. Edward Branch, Garner, N. C., sent a first-class organ to be used in this field. The organ was placed in the parsonage and will give much useful service. Mr. R. H. Peel, Gasport, N. Y., sent a large family or Church Bible, which is practically new. Mrs. Vietta Silsby, who is now in Florida, left the Bible with Mr. Peel, to place where it would render good service. We wish to thank Mr. Branch for his courtesy in sending the organ, and also Mr. Peel and Mrs. Silsby for the Bible. May the Lord add his blessings to the use of both of these in our work here.

It has been a pleasure to work with these people during the past year, and may the Lord bless us, that we may render a better service in His name during the coming year.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUT IN THE WINTER AND THE WEST.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Chicago, Ill., Sunday Jan. 19, 1930.

North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois—and here we are in this snow-covered, ice-clad, shivering, freezing city of more than three millions human beings from every nation, tongue, tribe and color on the face of the earth. Chicago is nothing if not cosmopolitan.

Our train left Elon College at noon Friday. Preparing Sun copy, looking over some manuscripts, dipping into a book—and it is 6 o'clock at Asheville. A ten-minute stay gave time for a fresh breath of mountain air, a brisk walk, and a whetted appetite for supper. And then that book! A friend had sent me "The Tragic Era," a history of the passionate events, men, women and measures that followed Lincoln's assassination that filled that fretful, fateful, feverish time called "Reconstruction." What a time! Surely God's hand has saved this republic of ours more than once, in spite of all the folly and madness of designing, self-seeking politicians to ruin and wreck it. But the passions, whims, madness and prejudices of men die; the calm judgment, the good sense, the right things they do survive.

The last I saw Friday night of Asheville and beyond was a glimpse of the French Broad glimmering in the moonlight. And then at nearly midnight I laid down that book and went to bed. Since our train was not to reach Cincinnati till 9:40 next morning, the porter had instructions not to disturb "lower 8" before 9 A. M. And so while our faithful mixture of Mogul and Greyhound locomotive wound up and down, out and on and through the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee and into Kentucky to reach Ohio, I slept—slept the sweet sleep of relaxation, far-offness and abandon. Neither the grinding of wheels, the plunging of engine, nor the shrill screaching of whistles broke in upon my dreams or disturbed my slumber. That which awakened and startled me next morning was the dining-room porter's inharmonious voice, "Second call for breakfast!" I looked at my watch and it was 8:15 o'clock. I had evidently got man's allotted eight hours' sleep, which every honest person should seek to get out of every twenty-four hours of the day and night. Not believing my eyes, I hastily lifted my window-shade to see if it was light and day. And to my utter amazement, the sun was shining as brilliantly and as gloriously as on any May day, but the whole earth, as far as my eye could see, was blanketed in white. Snow, snow, snow everywhere, on hillside and housetop, lawn, meadow, prairie and woodland. And all day long on Saturday, the 18th, our great old engine, strong as a Mogul, but fit and fleet as a grayhound, plowed through the shining, shimmering, diamond-sparkling snow, glorious to look upon from windows of a well-heated car. When have I enjoyed a day so much!

When my friend Dr. W. W. Staley travels he gets acquainted and makes friends with everybody in the same car with him. Not so your humble servant. He is not seeking acquaintances, neither making new ones nor cultivating old ones when he travels on a train. Just a good book, if you please, and now and then a glance at the landscape, the broad world outside, and he is content never to speak to a living soul all day. And so from 8:15 A. M., when emerging from Kentucky, till 7 P. M., when pulling into Chicago, the eyes of this scribe were greeted and gladdened by far-spreading, snow-blanketed, sun-kissed farms, fields, trackless but futile acres.

A passenger entering the train at Lafayette, Ind., or Indianapolis, said the thermometer was standing at 15 degrees below zero and that the coldest weather of the winter or of many winters was now on. And yet our car was comfortable and our good engineer held a steady hand on the throttle, and never lost a ten minutes from a fifty-miles-an-hour schedule for the more than 300 miles that stretch from Cincinnati to Chicago. Snow was banked and blown and piled everywhere, but faithful laborers toiled and trudged in the deep snow and freezing temperature to keep the switches clear, the tracks open and travelers safe and comfortable.

I do not know when the West is more beautiful and lovely to look upon—in spring, when its infinite level acres are green and soft to the eye to look upon, or in winter when the same infinite, level, far-flung acres are blanketed in white and "shimmer in the sheen" of a full-arbed and cloudless sun. The West is large because there are no hills to bother or break it up, and the eyesight is invited and challenged to look its farthest and penetrate to its utmost and not be tempted.

My mission here in Chicago is to attend the "midwinter meeting" of heretofore Congregational Boards, but henceforth to be Congregational-Christian Boards, to whose membership our General Convention, at Piqua last October, elected me. Dr. L. E. Smith, another member from the South, is here, as are also Dr. Coffin, Dr. Denison, Miss Lucy Eldredge, and other familiar faces of our fellowship from the West. But of this mission and meeting I will write next week, as it is just beginning now, and I know not the issues and the problems that impend. But it is fearfully cold now in Chicago, the mercury far below zero, and snow and ice and the breezing winds are everywhere outside, but inside are warmth and comfort, good food, conveniences and delightful fellowship.

I HAVE A FRIEND.

There is comfort in the thought, however frequently that thought recurs that "I have a friend." I am not speaking of friends in general and all around now. If we generalize our thought and spread out our contemplation, the salve becomes too thin and does not help to cure or to comfort. Just think of one particular friend, an individual friend somewhere who lives, labors, loves, and is. Somewhere there is such a friend; no doubt but that every reader of this line has at least one such friend. The writer of it has such a friend. Not worth while now to inquire whether man or woman, old or young, rich or poor, educated or uneducated. It is sufficient to know and to be able to say any time and under any circumstances, "I have a friend." I am not thinking now of a heavenly, but an earthly friend; one of flesh and blood, who is still of mortal form and frailty; one who can still interpret us, understand us, know our form, fashion and frailty also.

One never thinks of asking a favor of such a friend; of borrowing or bargaining or begging. Neither is it any favors of materialistic or physical type given or received that have created or enhanced the value of such a friend. The artists tell us that pure art, and the only sacred and holy art, is art for art's sake. It is not art for the service it may render, for the contribution it may make. It is just art for its own sake, and has no end in view other than to be what it is and as it is, just excellent and without excuse, in its own name. The same may be said of friendship. There is a friendship which exists, without any end in view, of receiving or conferring favors. Maybe, favors, gifts, tokens will be made and exchanged, but they are the expression, the fruit, the result; not the cause of such a friendship. This is one of God's rich gifts to human society and to mankind. Poor, indeed, is the heart, and sadly alone, indeed, is that life that cannot, under all and every circumstance, say, "Yes, but I have a friend." Such a friend when thought of even drives away despair, penetrates gathering gloom, and brings gladness like a ray of sunshine into the dark and cloudy day.

I have a friend! I know I have. Maybe, I don't see that friend in six months, and no word passes between the two of us, and no token. Such a friend reads a good book, possibly and without consulting me, already knows that I will enjoy it, and forthwith it comes by mail. Such a friend knows that, whether a gift comes or does not come, whether any token passes or does not pass, he is permitted to break in on my thoughts at any time and will be welcome, and that I am permitted to break in on his at any moment and I will be welcome. Such a friend makes a contribution to life that we little reckon with and cannot over-estimate. Truly, friendship is the most sacred of our human words, and carries in its meaning the most noble of our human expressions.

Do we, in expressing our gratitude to the Giver of all good, remember, as we should, to thank Him daily for our friends, and then to beg Him to make us worthy of our friends? A real friend is one of the most precious gifts that the divine hand ever offers to mortal man. Happy is the individual who, in the moments of solitude and meditation, can say, and have no fears or doubts in saying, "I have a friend."

This is, no doubt, why our Lord, before leaving His disciples and while trying to bring them comfort in their separation and sorrow, said to them: "Henceforth I call you not servants; but I have called you friends." Are we grateful to God, who has enabled us to say, "I have a friend"?

PERISHING IN PRESENCE OF PLENTY.

An incident occurred in a Chicago restaurant recently that has attracted attention. A well-dressed man entered and requested a cup of hot water. The waiter who accommodated him noted the fact that he was pale, wan, weary, hungry. When asked, while holding the cup, if he could not be served further, the hungry man, in pride and even with a boasting spirit, told the waiter of the wonderful pie that the restaurant served, of which pie he said he had just eaten two pieces. Hardly had the words fallen from his proud lips when "hunger-weakness" seized him, the cup fell from his weakened fingers, crashed to the floor, and the man himself crumpled and fell from exhaustion, weakened to unconsciousness from lack of food. Being placed in an ambulance, the waiter said to the man in charge: "I knew this man was starving, and I was about to fill a plate and take it to him and tell him what a fakir he was to declare he was not hungry, but before I spoke the words, he fell to the floor with his broken cup."

A pitiable spectacle, indeed, to look upon—a man perishing with food in abundance, even within his reach. While this is a picture from actual life, it becomes a parable.

Every Sunday of the year faithful preachers of the Word stand in their pulpits and go in and out among multitudes, many of whom are literally trembling and falling from heart-hunger, from the weariness of soul-sickness, from the pride and paralysis of sin. These perishing ones will often look into the preacher's face and declare they have eaten and are not hungry, when in very truth the look from their eyes, the expression upon their face, and the outcry of their souls belie their words.

One easily thinks now of millions who are feeding on husks while they perish for the want of the bread of life. They are perishing in atheistic Russia; they are perishing by the millions in famine-stricken China; they are perishing in India and Africa and Japan and America for the want of a bread that is within their reach, even the Bread of Life which alone can strengthen and save their souls.

Verily, amid plenty and despair, hungry hearts and perishing souls are crumpling to the ground, the life-giving cup falling from their grasp, and the life-sustaining bread unasked for and uneaten all around about them. And our Saviour is saying, as He said to His disciples long, long ago, as He saw the thousands of hungry people about them: "Give ye them to eat." J. O. A.

I AM CALLING YOU.

There were recently laid before a large group of young people the following lines:

"I am the best friend of mankind.

"I am hung about with sweet memories.

"I am decked with loving tears.

"In the minds of the greatest men on earth I find constant dwelling-place.

"I live in the lives of the young and in the dreams of the old.

"I safeguard men with a friendly hand.

"I am the essence of good-fellowship, friendliness and love.

"I give gifts that gold cannot buy, nor kings take away.

"I bring back the freshness of life, the spirit of youth.

"I meet you with outstretched arms and with songs of gladness.

"Some time in the future you will yearn for the touch of my friendly hand.

"I am your comforter and friend.

"I am calling you—now!

"I am the Church."

One wonders if this statement goes beyond the mark? Is the Church calling the youth, and age as well, and doing for them all that is promised in the above? It is well to take an account of what the Church is doing and to inquire as to its real worth and weight in the community and in the world. Truly, the Church is calling, and truly does the Church give that which gold cannot buy and kings cannot take away. It is the strength of youth, the courage of adolescence, the joy of old age, and the comfort of declining years. It is more than this: it is the dwelling-place of God on earth, the place where men find God face to face. It is none other than the gate of heaven. So, is it worth more than we have ever put into it? It means more to us than all our gold and gain and earthly possessions.

Truly the Church is calling, and truly should youth hear that call and heed it, and truly should all who long for the best in life and desire the most that life has to give and heaven has to offer, cherish the Church, support it, stand by it, and be loyal to it. It is the most glorious institution outside of heaven, and there is no institution on earth with which to compare it, either in the glory of its past, the splendor and beneficence of its present attainment, or in the promise and prospect of its future. REPERTORY.

A series of Wednesday night prayer-meeting addresses delivered in the Presbyterian Church during the building of our Church in 1892.

III. PEACE.

Peace is not inactivity, but concord. It is opposed to war, which is discord. A nation may be at peace and still in ceaseless activity. Peace of soul is conscious harmony with all good. Eternal warfare rages between right and wrong. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." When the Sea of Galilee was fretted into madness by the wind, the Master rebuked the wind, and says: "I see another law in my members, warring calm. Peter beseeches men to "abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul." Paul says: "I see another law in my membas, warring against the law of my mind." War is the history of salvation in man, but peace comes in the end. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." When Pharaoh had mysterious dreams, his spirit was troubled, until Joseph came from the prison and said to the king: "God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace." The interpretation was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, "and there was inner peace." Think of a prisoner speaking peace to a king! Truth is thus seen to be independent of circumstances or station. It is divine and produces a "peace that passeth understanding." It is a fruit of the Spirit. It is—

Peace With God.

1. By reconciliation. "God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself." "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Christ is called the Prince of Peace. God made a covenant of peace with Phinehas, and with His people through Ezekiel, and continues that peace to us in Christ. Hostile potencies are yielding to the dominion of peace.

"No need there is of vulgar shout,
Bells, cannon, trumpets, fife and drum,
And soldiers marching all about,
To let us know that peace is come."

2. By communion. Amos said, "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" And Paul inquires: "What communion has light with darkness?" "Enoch walked with God; and was not, for God took him: but before his translation he had this testimony that he pleased God." It was communion with Jesus that brought this benediction from Him to His disciples: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." Isaiah breaks out in poetic song to Israel: "O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! Then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea."

Peace With Conscience.

1. "Herein do I exercise myself to have a conscience void of offence toward God and man." Paul exhorted the Corinthians: "Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God." "If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart." Joseph's brethren were conscience-smitten when they went to Egypt, until he pronounced his heavenly benediction and made peace come back into their souls. "Great peace have they which love thy law." "To be spiritually minded is life and peace."

2. Conscious of loyalty to right. The man who knows that he is not at war with truth is strong. Job was strong because in all his trials "he sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Daniel was at ease before the king or in the lion's den, because he knew he was loyal to God. Paul was calm before the council. "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." Tranquil as a sea at rest, strong in the Lord and the power of His might. A wall built true has all the powers of nature to sustain it; the force of gravity that holds suns and systems by its might must yield before work can fall: so the loyal life has all the powers of heaven to sustain it in peace. The "peace of God is as serene as the sky, and nothing can separate us from the love of God that is in Jesus Christ." When the disciples were assembled in an upper room for fear of the Jews, "Jesus stood in the midst and said, Peace be unto you."

Peace With Others.

"Love thinks no evil." "Peace on earth" was a sweet note in the angelic song. "Be at peace among yourselves was Paul's exhortation to the Thessilonians. And to the Corinthians he wrote: "Live in peace." And to the Ephesians he writes: "Endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

On one occasion, Mr. Nott, a missionary, and his companions arrived at the island of Tubooi, and found the whole population preparing for war. The missionaries stepped forward as mediators, expostulated with the leaders, brought them together, and reconciled their differences. The contending armies threw down their weapons, cordially embraced each other, went in company to a new building devoted to the service of God, and sat side by side to hear the gospel of peace.

"We bless Thee for Thy peace, O God,
Deep as the soundless sea,
Which falls like sunshine on the road
Of those who trust in Thee." W. W. S.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Subjects for "Suffolk Letters" are perplexing problems. The same is true in the selection of texts for sermons. The treatment of subjects, when selected, is easy compared with the selection. The same is a problem in the selection of a farm, a home, a business, a profession, or the ministry. The subject for this letter came while talking to a member of a Church on the train about choosing a pastor for a Presbyterian Church. Three "P's" popped into my mind while we were talking, and these are the text for this letter.

The minister needs qualification in three essential departments of his calling. First of all, no doubt, he needs to be qualified for the pulpit. Preaching the gospel is the main task. "Preach the word" is Paul's injunction to ministers. No learning can take the place of the word. No philosophy can take the place of the Bible. To be able to expound the word of God in such a way that all can understand it is the function of the pulpit. A conscious call to the ministry, cognizant of personal obligation to God and the Church, a real religious experience, all enter into the initial steps up to the pulpit. Then as thorough preparation as possible in education is a personal obligation and privilege. Then accepting a change under a double call from God and a Church, the preacher stands in the pulpit to "preach the word." This is the first "P"—the pulpit.

In addition to preaching from the pulpit, the minister is the pastor of the flock. He is in a position to minister to the members of the Church in spiritual things as no other person can. There is a difference between pastoral and social visitations. Social visits imply social relations that are congenial; pastoral visits imply spiritual relations and obligations. People in sickness, in bereavement, in losses, in need, furnish opportunities for soul-contacts through sympathy, kind words, and prayer. Pastoral visiting is easily overlooked and neglected; but it is a big "P" in the pastoral relation. The more humble the situation, the more important and the more helpful is the visit. People in health, in prosperity, and busy, do not need such visits so much; but even the rich are often neglected by the preacher. Their wealth, their home, their associations, limit them in human friendships and pastoral visits. It is well to visit them and have prayer with them. They need spiritual contact and prayer as well as the poor and afflicted. Pastoral visiting is the second "P."

Beyond the Church membership and this close relation between them and the preacher, there are the people outside of the Church. Many of them fine people, neglected by the Church or estranged by conditions that need the touch and service of the minister. Beyond the pale of the Church are the people. Much ministerial value is lost by neglecting those outside of the Church. This field of service requires Christian tact, and it is a great field for manifesting the spirit of Jesus through the life and ministry of the preacher. That is the big "P" where the evangelistic touch may lead many to Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour.

These are the three "P's."

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

There is a great deal of resentment of authority in the popular mind at this time. And yet it is said of Jesus that "the people heard him gladly," though he taught "as one with authority." Evidently the human mind is not innately opposed to authority. Evidently also there must be different types of authority, different sources of origin for it, resulting in different types, some of which the human spirit resents, and some of which it approves.

I think it may be said that there are three types of authority—the authority of force, the authority of tradition, and the authority of truth.

Jesus during His early life came into contact with all three of these types of authority. Toward the first two He was unalterably opposed. He embraced the third type with the enthusiasm of a devotee, and commissioned His followers to pursue it to it sultimate end.

Jesus was, by His very nature and fundamental conception of life, committed to a program of resentment and hostility to all authority resting on force. His respect for personality was so fundamental a concept with Him that He placed one single soul on one side of the seals and all the earth's multiplied wealth on the other and in terms of value pronounced the soul of more worth than all the material substance. He had no sympathy whatever with the authority of force. He placed no value at all upon it.

He was equally opposed to the authority of tradition. We hear Him saying in His Sermon on the Mount, and elsewhere, "Ye have heard it said of olden times," "but I say unto you." This was His unfailing attitude. He handled every tradition thus, not to discard it, but to evaluate it; not to deny its authority, but to resent any effort to impose its authority upon the human mind or spirit without due consideration or approval.

He was with equal ardor committed to the authority of truth. "The truth will make you free," He is reported to have said to His disciples; and He promised that He would send the Comforter when He should have ceased to be with them in person, and that this Comforter should lead them into all truth.

We have nothing, therefore, to fear from the spirit of inquiry, of discovery, of truth. Jesus declared that He Himself was the truth, and the nineteen centuries that have passed since His earthy ministry terminated have amply demonstrated that He spoke words of soberness, words of truth.

In this day, when so much is being said in condemnation of young people because of their resentment of authority, would it not be well to consider whether they are opposed to the idea as such, or whether they are not opposed to the authority of force and the authority of tradition? I have yet to see a yuong person in all my experience who has shown any disposition to resent the authority of truth.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Sunday, January 19th, was an unusual day for us, in that we had company at each service. In the morning the members of the Franklin Lodge, Knights of Pythias, attended worship in a body. The pastor preached on the theme, "The Life of a Great Southerner." In this message he portrayed the essential qualities that were embodied in the entire character of the man whose birthday was celebrated. Robert E. Lee, as a (1) citizen of the South, (2) college president, and (3) a Christian gentleman were upheld with scriptural references in a way that all Southerners would be proud of the great general.

For the first time since leaving this field, Rev. F. C. Lester, now pastor of the Waverly Christian Church, returned to preach to his host of friends. Bro. Lester is a very busy man in this part of Virginia, as well as throughout the Southern Christian Convention, and his visit to us was greatly appreciated and his sermon fully enjoyed.

Pastoral exchanges are fine for both ministers and congregation. There should be more of it, not only among our own ministers, but with ministers or other Churches. Not long ago, a happy exchange was made here in Franklin, when the pastor of the Christian Church exchanged with Rev. R. D. Stevenson, pastor of the Baptist Church of this city.

Plans are being made by our department of religious education, of which Mrs. J. W. Fix is superintendent, to conduct a training school within the next week or so. Teacher training is needed in every school. Just a little time, a little hard work, a little consecrated enthusiasm will work wonders in putting on a school of methods.

At our monthly teachers' meeting, plans were made to continue the coupon system of award, and a committee appointed to secure coupons, which were to be given this year to children for attendance upon the services of the Church and bringing visitors to Sunday School. These coupons are used for exchange each Christmas at the Sunday School store. The following is printed upon each coupon:

"One coupon: Good for exchange at Franklin Christian Church Sunday School Christmas store of 1930. Name..... This coupon awarded only to members of the junior department, intermediate department, and first-year senior classes for Sunday School attendance, Church attendance, and bringing visitors to Sunday School. This coupon is not transferable."

Such a system has proven very satisfactory, and has stimulated children to come to Sunday School and Church. They realize that rewards come to those who are most deserving. Last year some of the children had won as many as 160 coupons. That meant perfect attendance at Sunday School, and each of the preaching services, and visitors brought to Sunday School.

Joseph W. Fix, Pastor.

THE CHURCH OF THE GENERALS.

St. John's Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., is known as the Church of the generals, because it was attended by Robert E. Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson, who were destined to become most famous generals, and by other future bearers of the high military titles. However, it is the glory of Lee and Jackson that gives the Church its distinction. It was, however, the original structure, built in 1836, in which Lee and Jackson worshiped. They were not men who merely attended services. The corner-stone of the present edifice was laid in 1897.

Lee, when stationed at Fort Hamilton before the war with Mexico, was a vestryman at St. John's; and it is recorded that Jackson, who served at the fort from 1848 to 1851, was baptized in the original Church in 1849, when he was about twenty-five years of age.—Ex.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK.

(The Lord working with them.)

So, then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following. Amen. (Mark 16:19-20.)

POLICY OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

The Anti-Saloon League was created for a definite purpose. That purpose is the extermination of the beverage alcohol traffic.

Toward this the league has moved steadily forward through the stages of almost thirty-seven years. As a result of the league's work during that period and the efforts of allied forces, prohibition has been written in the basic law of the nation.

The record of the Anti-Saloon League is unique in the history of social reform movements. It has had the vision to see the need, the courage to heed the call, the sense of responsibility to face the problems, the breadth of judgment to adapt its program to changing conditions of the times, the strategy to move forward just as rapidly as a growing public sentiment would permit, the spirit of devotion to persevere.

Faithfully, patiently, consistently, aggressively, the league has pressed toward the goal of its high calling. After ten increasingly effective years of national constitutional prohibition, the Anti-Saloon League today confidently faces the future and presents the following declaration of policy for the years just ahead.

Legislation.

Constantly changing conditions demand additional legislation both in Congress and in the State legislatures.

We stand today for the realization of the announced program of the President of the United States, who, more than any other chief executive of the nation, has definitely committed himself and his administration to the task of securing enforcement of prohibition. We stand for adequate appropriations to meet the demand for making the eighteenth amendment fully effective. We urge all law-abiding and liberty-loving citizens to co-operate in all necessary and helpful efforts to secure the largest possible degree of efficiency in local, State and national administration and enforcement of this salutary legislation.

Political Policy.

The league does not affiliate with any political party as such. It does give to its constituency and to the public facts as to the records and attitudes of candidates for positions which involve the issue for which the league stands.

The definite policy of the league is not to present candidates for public office. It is, however, its fixed policy to use its strength in the effort to prevent the election or appointment of officials whose records and attitudes do not insure a sympathetic and aggressive policy toward prohibition enforcement.

Now that the eighteenth amendment is a part of the Constitution, we insist that belief in the policy of the government on the beverage alcohol question should be a requirement in the election or appointment of officials who have to do with the enforcement of prohibition.

Attitude Toward Public Officials.

We steadfastly believe in that constitutionally guaranteed right of the people "peaceably to assemble and petition the government for redress of grievances." In harmony with the spirit of that guarantee, we confidently assert our right as American citizen to state our convictions as to lay those convictions on the consciences of those State and national legislators and officials who represent us in government.

The Anti-Saloon League in this matter depends upon the strength of its cause, the reasonableness of its appeal and the purity of its motives to win political consideration. We believe that government officials have a right to know the attitude of our constituency and that that constituency has a right to have their convictions thus presented to their public servants.

Qualifications for Public Office.

Peculiarly is this movement for the solution of the beverage alcohol problem a great social project which was never more so than it is today.

More than ever before the enforcement and observance of the prohibition laws are inseparably linked with the great projects for better social conditions.

More than ever before the fortunes of prohibition and those of other social reforms are one.

More than ever before the object of the Anti-Saloon League and that of other social welfare agencies require the same type of men in public life, and the same open, frank representations as to qualifications of those seeking public office.

Very definitely in these days the line is being drawn between those candidates for positions of public trust who are socially minded and those who represent selfish interests seeking special privileges. Consequently, more than ever before, we must give attention to the question of social-mindedness in the weighing of records and attitudes of political candidates.

Educational Policy.

The major task of the league is to get the truth to the people. Peculiarly is it concerned with reaching those of the pre-prohibition days. The league therefore definitely sets itself to the task of education in order that the men and women of tomorrow shall know the truth which will insure continued freedom from the slavery of alcohol.

We therefore urge upon the temperance forces of every State the imperative necessity of reviving the teaching of scientific temperance in the public schools, with due regard for those scientific processes and well-established rules which belong to public education.

Education for all the people in the interest of the solution of this perplexing alcohol problem must be carried on. Debates and contests, exhibits and pageants, books, periodicals, literature and posters, the radio, the moving picture, the press and the platform, the pulpit and the Church school, all present agencies through which sane, authoritative and vital facts may reach the people.

We must meet sophistry with logic, falsehoods with facts, insidious suggestions with constructive agruments, error with truth. Especially must we strive to bring to the attention of the public the fundamentals on which substantial and permanent public sentiment must be builded.

Completion of the Task.

The most eloquent testimony of the effectiveness of the Anti-Saloon League comes from the sworn enemies of prohibition and the most active, insidious and unscrupulous opponents of the league.

The fact that these opponents of that for which the league stands fear this agency of the Christian and moral forces of the nation more than all else, should encourage our friends and should give pause to those good citizens who are tempted to take their cue from the league's enemies and fall in line with its critics.

The need of such an organization as the Anti-Saloon League was never more imperative than it is today. The task to which this league is committed has not been fully accomplished. That will be done only when beverage alcohol and the liquor traffic are but memories of what men once tolerated and endured.

Resolutely and devotedly we set ourselves to the completion of the task.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE PURPOSE OF MISSIONS.

The purpose of missions is revaled throughout the Old and New Testaments in the character of God. From the beginning till now, the God whom the Jews of the Old Testament worshiped and the God whom Jews and Gentiles of the New Testament worshiped, purposed by His very nature and character that all men everywhere should know Him and have the privilege of worshiping Him as the true and living God. Whole books of the Old Testament, as well as of the New, are written to reveal this salient fact.

The Book of Ruth is a missionary book, or it has no meaning. It tells the story of a woman of God who went out into a foreign land, a heathen, pagan country, and so lived as to win a convert from the most despised and the most loathed of origin of the pagan peoples of the earth; and that woman, won from idol worship to the worship of the true God, becomes the ancestress of King David and of our Lord Himself. The story of Ruth reveals God's power and purpose in winning from the ways of idolatry an idol worshiper and making that woman one of the exalted and beloved of the family of Jehovah and of the earth's redeemed and saved. From Ruth came David, and from David came the Christ.

The Book of Daniel is a missionary book pure and simple. It shows how a man of God living among a heathen, pagan people, preached the wisdom, the majesty and the might of God, and spent his life in kings' courts and prisons, revealing, by his own character, the infinite wisdom and patience and love of God, and by his teaching and preaching declaring the wisdom and the way of God. All of the Book of Daniel is missionary, in that it reveals the attitude of God to a pagan world, and declares His interest in a pagan world and His willingness and power to save a pagan world.

The Book of Jonah is a purely missionary book. In fact, it has no meaning whatever aside from its missionary message. It shows how a man who was called to go as a missionary was overthrown and suffered and was defeated in his own plans because he side-stepped and refused his missionary obligation; and then was delivered only when, in faith, prayer and repentance, he returned to discharge his missionary obligation. The Book of Jonah is, in brief form, the history of the Hebrew race—a race who was entrusted with the oracles of God that they might make known the will of God to the world, and of how they, when they refused to do that, were swallowed up in awful captivity and were not released until they repented and gave up forever idolatrous worship and promised to return and make known the oracles of God.

They, like Jonah, were given a second chance, and when they saw that the world was ready to hear that message and the Gentiles were ready to accept, as Nineveh was, they repented and were sorry of their conduct, and even put to death Jesus and James and Paul and hundreds of others of their race who were willing to carry that message to the world. Thus, the purpose of God from the beginning has ever been that of winning and saving men everywhere who have an opportunity of knowing Him. The strange thing is that those who know Him and the power of His salvation are so reluctant to share that power and that salvation with others. J. O. A.

THE JERICHO ROAD.

"Oh, the sorrow and the woe on the way to Jericho, where the wounded lie and languish on the road."

Although the road to Jericho was only spoken of once by our Saviour, and then in a parable, it is even yet a road to be found and noted for its loneliness and gloom, for its rocks and perils, to all who traverse it. But it was not the literal road that Jesus wanted to impress the people with; it was only a type of the road that all must travel, more or less, through this vale of tears. The loneliness and the gloom almost overwhelm us, and the rocks bruise us, and the enemy of our souls strips us of our faith and leaves us to the mercy of doubt and fear. Then it is that the good Samaritans of God, though neither priest nor Levite, will minister to us in Jesus' name, giving us "the oil of joy for mourning" and "the garment of praise" to make glad our hearts.

Who of us have not traveled this road, and who of us have not craved human sympathy and companionship? Humanity has ever sought human sympathy, though only the divine can truly satisfy. Jesus the Christ showed His human side when He took the three disciples to be with Him in His hour of trial. Every day we are aware of these travelers on the Jericho road. Some come to our door craving comfort, others wait for our coming. Do we sometimes feel that our cruse of comfort is failing, that our own troubles are mountain high? Then we need to go to the feet of Jesus and learn of Him. He was never too busy, never too tired, when He walked the shores of Galilee, to comfort the sad of heart and He says to us, "Follow me." He can speak peace to our souls and send us out as His burden-bearers if we will let Him. We may think that we cannot do much, that we cannot say the right word, but we can weep with those who weep, we can speak kindly to all we meet. And to the agent at the door we can give an encouraging word, if nothing more.

A middle-aged woman, who was trying to make her living by selling useful kitchen utensils, went to a strange city, hoping for success. At one of the first homes she visited, a list of names of Christian women was given her, who might be interested in the utensils and perhaps purchasers. As she called at the addresses given, some gave her enccuragement, but others were vexed that their names had been given and treated the woman with scorn, which caused her heart to ache and the tears to flow as she confided in a sympathetic stranger.

She was one of God's little ones and there are many such on the Jerciho road. About such as these, Jesus spoke the "I was much." We need not fear that we may do a kindness to one who is not worthy, for it has been said that no blessing truly vitalized ever ceases to live. If the blessed be unworthy, it returns on swift wings to the blesser. If we do our part, our Heavenly Father takes care of all the rest, making all things to work together for good.

"Go, bury thy sorrow,
Let others be blest;
Go give them the sunshine—
Tell Jesus the rest." W.

THE SOCIAL WORK OF THE CHURCHES.

In a new volume entitled "The Social Work of the Churches," issued today by the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council of Churches, a contrast is drawn between "two schools of thought," one of which is "preoccupied with the redemption of the individual," while the other emphasizes the relation of the individual to the social environment. There is also an extensive analysis of the way in which the Churches are being influenced by new social and scientific trends.

The volume is a handbook of information regarding the social principles and programs of the Churches, Church federations and religious agencies of the Protestant denominations and other major communions in the United States and Canada. It is designed for the use of ministers, religious and social workers and educators. The book is edited by Rev. F. Ernest Johnson, executive secretary of the Federal Council's Department of Research and Education. According to leaders in the council, this is the only compilation of its kind that has been attempted, and it is expected to have wide use in Protestant circles.

The book opens with a review of "present social trends affecting religion," in which the following occurs: "One of the most notable characteristics of modern Christianity is the existence of two schools of thought, each deriving its tenets directly from Christian sources, yet one preoccupied with the redemption of the individual by means that are essentially personal and private, the other interested chiefly in the redemption of the world as a whole and conceiving the destiny of the individual as inseparable from that inclusive purpose and goal." The latter position is found to be more widely accepted among religious leaders, who manifest a "growing conviction that the conversion of the individual, unless it has specific reference to a 'Christian way of life,' is far less than the example and teaching of Jesus require."

On the other hand, "there is a distinct disillusionment on the part of social workers of the institutional type with mere mass methods of betterment. The development of social case work bears testimony to the fact that permanent changes in individual life and character are not brought about merely by manipulating the environment. The social scientists and social workers are taking larger account of those forces which integrate personality and supply 'drives' for energetic living—forces which we call spiritual. This trend is apparent in spite of the preoccupation in many academic circles and in popular literature with a mechanistic type of psychology."

Regarding the influence of modern science on religious thinking, the review continues: "One of the chief assets in the socializing of religious thought and life is the steady growth of the scientific point of view. More and more, organized religion has found it necessary to square its teachings on the factual side with the discoveries of science. This necessity has involved the restatement of many doctrines and has brought about a lessened emphasis on creeds and creedal differences. In general, the attainment of the religious life is thought of more as a process and less as an isolated event. Religious education has itself become a scientific discipline based upon another newly developed science—the psychology of religion. On the whole, the leadership of the several Protestant communions has ranged itself on the side of enlightenment and is not disposed to quarrel with modern science.

"As religion appropriates the disciplines of science, haphazard methods and false theories which were assumed to have spiritual sanction give way to knowledge and enlightened experimentation. Research is coming to have a recognized place within organized religion, and is commanding rapidly increasing interest. The antipathy, suspicion and contempt which in the past characterized the relations between religious leaders and men of science are giving way to a respectful cooperation. We employ the methods of the social sciences in making religious surveys, gathering religious statistics and studying religious experience. This change has, of course, been only partially effected and the possibilities of collaboration between religion and science have been but slightly explored. Most progress has been made where the forces of religion have effected co-operation among themselves and pooled their resources in research and experimentation."

With reference to the current issue of the relation of the Church to the State, the book outlines the following elements of a needed inquiry:

"1. To what extent should the Church, either on its own motion or in participation with other social groups, attempt to influence government in behalf of legislative proposals, such as social insurance or factory legislation, or in administrative matters which have an evident bearing upon the public welfare?

"2. To what extent may the Church properly participate in partisan political activity in order to secure the election or defeat of certain candidates for office?

"3. To what extent should the Church accept dictation from the State in matters affecting the Christian conscience, particularly with reference to war? In other words, is the Church in any realm rightfully independent of the State and justified in opposing its will? This question affects the Church corporately, and also the teaching of the Church with reference to freedom of conscience."

The changes taking place in moral standards, in the status of woman and of the home, and in the character of the population are considered, along with tendencies in crime, recreation, social legislation and economic life.

One section of the book is given to the effort of city Churches to meet changing conditions through various types of adaptation: "the specialized Church," "the pulpit Church," "ministry to the foreign-born," the "new type of Church building," etc. The need of more critical study of the Church and its methods is urged, in order to answer such questions as these: "What is the actual result of the educational, social and worship activities of the Church? Are people becoming more religious through the Church's ministry and, if so, how is that result being secured? What is the goal of character education and is definite progress being made toward it in the Church school? What is a sound theory of the Church's relation to community life and welfare, political and economic relationships, etc., and to what extent is it being applied? In other words, we need re-examination of accepted norms of activity and accepted criteria of success."

The difficulties confronting the rural Church are similarly analyzed and a great deal of data on rural life is compressed into small compass.

FEDERAL COUNCIL.

A WORD ON BEING DUPED.

The father of Pierpont Morgan once inserted the following advertisement in a number of New York papers: "Bring me a dollar. Smith, New Bond Street 12." The type was big, and on the second day the message was: "You can bring me your dollar tomorrow." On the third day it changed again: "If you don't bring your dollar today, keep it; tomorrow will be too late." On the third day twelve thousand people had sent in their dollars!

Later it was discovered that Mr. Smith was Pierpont Morgan himself. The facetious banker had declared that he could easily find in New York a thousand credulous people who would invest their money with no guarantee, but in the hope of a surprise. He sent the dollars back, after proving that the credulous were twelve times more numerous than he thought. They are indeed legion—these ready dupes of the fraud and the shark.

Even the evident suspicion of fraud in an advertisement seems no deterrent to the credulous. An official of the United States Post-Office estimates that a million people lose a million dollars annually in money and property in mail fraud schemes. They "bite" at anything and put confidence anywhere. One swindler offered "ten yards of beautiful silk for making shirtwaists for ten cents." Thousands of women sent their money, and in return got ten yards of silk thread. Another advertiser offered a dozen quarts of "rye" for eighteen dollars, and thousands of thirsty men were somewhat disappointed when there came a dozen quarts of rye grains.

It sounds ludicrous. Yet these things happen on an incredible scale. Great numbers of people, it seems, like to be humbugged.—F. C. Hoggarth, in Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson V—February 2, 1930.

Putting God's Kingdom First.

Golden Text: "Seek ye first His kingdom and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

Lesson: Matt. 6:1-34.

Jesus hated sham and make-believe. He insisted that there should be sincerity and reality in the religious life and in religious practices. In this sermon, which, as has been stated in an earlier article, deals with the fundamentals or principles of the kingdom, Jesus deals with three religious practices from the standpoint of sincerity and reality.

Sincerity in Giving.

"Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them . . . Sound not a trumpet before thee . . . Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth . . . that thine alms may be in secret." When one gives to charity or when one makes a gift to the kingdom, he is not to hire a brass band and make the fact known. He is to give not for publicity, but because of the need and for the sake of Christ. Giving that has an ulterior motive loses much of its effectiveness and its power. The "hypocrites" missed the point in giving entirely. As a rule, those who give most say least about it.

Sincerity in Fasting.

"When ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance . . . but anoint thine head, and wash thy face, that thou appear not unto men to fast." Jesus did not place a premium on fasting, nor did He discourage it. He simply insisted that if a man did fast he should do it from a sincere motive and in an unostentatious way. Fasting was to be the expression of an inner state. It was not to be paraded before others. It was not to be done to make one feel a holier-than-thou attitude. Here again the Master was pleading for sincerity and reality.

Sincerity in Prayer.

"And when ye pray—Jesus took it for granted that men would pray after some fashion—be not as the hypocrites; for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. They wanted to get credit for being religious. They thought it would help if they could be seen at prayer. Their whole attitude was almost like saying in so many words, "Look at me; I am praying. I've got religion. I am the 'cat's whiskers' when it comes to being pious." Alas! their prayers never got any higher than their own swelled heads. They prayed not because of any sense of need or because of any warmth of devotion, but to increase their religious prestige and to feed their detestable religious pride.

"But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet." Jesus did not mean that men should never pray in public; He meant simply that prayer was an intimate, vital thing, most effectively done by and large when a man was alone with God. "And when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do." They had prayers which they repeated over and over again. They even had wheels with formal prayers attached, so that by turning the wheel they thought they were praying. It was a caricature, a blasphemy against true prayer. Prayer is not primarily a matter of words or of posture, but of inner spirit. Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh in true prayer.

The Lord's, or the Model, Prayer.

"And when ye pray, say, Our Father, our bread, our debts, our debtors, lead us not, deliver us." Prayer is social; it includes others. Prayer is more than mere petition—"hallowed be Thy name"—it has a place for adoration and praise and thanksgiving. It should concern kingdom interests—"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," in my life, in the place I live, and the place in which I work. "Give us this day our daily bread"—give us day by day our daily bread, not cake but bread, our necessities, and give them to us not all at once, but give them to us as we need them. "Forgive us our debts or trespasses"—Jesus knew men would need to pray for that; prayer includes confession and penitence. "Forgive us as we forgive," or because we have forgiven others—a man cannot get forgiveness so long as he has not forgiven others. "Lead us not into temptation"—do not allow us to put ourselves deliberately into temptation, but when we are tempted in the inevitable process of developing character, "deliver us from the evil one. For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever"—anything that we may receive or may accomplish comes from Thee, and to Thee we give the glory.

Jesus did not mean, of course, that every time we prayed we should use this prayer. After this manner, in this spirit, and not necessarily in these words we are to pray.

Treasures Here and Hereafter.

The abiding values of life cannot be handled by the hands or reckoned in terms of dollars and cents. It is a short-sighted policy on the part of any man to be so busy or so absorbed in making a living that he has not made a life; in spending all his time and his energies in making money which he cannot take with him into the other world, instead of giving his time and his energies in making himself the kind of man who will fit into that other world. Material things have a subtle way of blinding men to the abiding values of life. Where a man's treasure is, his heart and his interest and his real life are apt to be.

Seeking First the Kingdom of God.

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." What things? The necessary things of life. Alas, how much of our lives is taken up with anxiety about things that really do not count! How often we are so concerned about the things which we ought to take for granted that we do not have time or energy to give to the things of the kingdom which wait upon our co-operation and service. Here once and for all Jesus has spoken the final and authoritative word.

Things to eat and to drink, things to wear—these are important and even necessary. But they are not primary in the divine scale of values. Furthermore, the fowls of the air and the lilies of the field are the answer to our anxiety and our fears. Personality is the world's highest value. We are of much more value than they. We are to live on the basis of the worth and the possibilities of personality. We are to give ourselves first to seeking the kingdom of God and His righteousness. And we have the promise of Jesus Himself that if we do this, such things as are necessary will be provided. Believest thou this?

This does not mean, of course, that it is wrong to take out life insurance; nor does it mean that people should not lay up for a rainy day, or should not practice thrift. It is a rebuke, however, against that anxiety and worry about things which may never come, or which if they do come, must be borne just the same as if we had not worried today, and against which our worry and anxiety serve as hopeless preparation. The sum of the whole matter is: Do the best you can, and trust God.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, February 2, 1930.

Topic: "How May Endeavorers Crusade with Christ?"—Rom. 12:1-9. (Christian Endeavor Day.)

Some Bible Hints.

Begin the crusade by an act of consecration. Crusade against self-will and selfishness (v. 1).

The work God asks us to do is reasonable in the light of all He has done for us. He gave all. He asks all (v. 1).

Let us crusade for transformed minds. We can accomplish nothing with the worldly spirit dominating us. Seek the spirit of Christ (v. 2).

Place every talent at God's service. What have we to offer Him? (v. 3.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

A crusade is not an individual thing. We cannot crusade alone. Crusading calls for co-operation, for planning, for a long and strenuous campaign. Keep the flag flying.

Crusade—lay plans—to win friends for Christ. Evangelism should begin in our own homes and our own circles.

Crusade for world peace. First, read books about it. Read magazine articles about it. Study plans to obtain world peace. Take a definite stand.

Crusade for a larger Sunday School and society. Make the membership campaign a crusade. Use generalship, planning, co-operation. Give time and energy to it.

A Few Illustrations.

A crusade is based on the cross; that is, it is impossible without sacrifice. It is not a burst of enthusiasm, but a series of battles in the face of all sorts of difficulties and discouragements.

The ancient crusades rooted in enthusiasm, but were poorly planned. They failed. We must have enthusiasm, the steam to drive the engine, but we must work according to definite plans if we would succeed.

After all, the ancient crusades had an unworthy objective, something material and irrelevant, and at bottom contrary to the spirit of Christ. Our crusade's aims are spiritual.

We cannot make others better citizens unless we are good citizens ourselves. Only heat and flame can kindle fires. We lead others to be what we ourselves are.

To Think About.

What is the crusade with Christ chart?
Why is a crusade without Christ fruitless?
Would Jesus join in all our activities? Why?

NEWS ITEMS.

The field secretary of the Southern Christian Convention was in Dayton, Ohio, December 27-30, attending a conference of the leaders in the work of the young people of our Christian Church. Representatives from the New England, the Metropolitan, the Southern, and the Central Conventions were present. Fourteen Conferences of our Church were represented by a total of thirty-six young people. In this, the fifth annual conference of the leading young people of our Church, plans for the work of the young people for the coming year were made. The definite goals for the whole group are: 1,000 young people to join our Churches at Easter time, 1,000 new subscribers to the Herald of Gospel Liberty, a world friendship offering of $4,000, and a gift to our Church of $5,000 (this last goal is to be approved by an adult committee before it is to be in effect).

The reason for the Herald of Gospel Liberty campaign at this time is that our paper and the Congregationalists' paper are to be combined and a new paper, The Congregationalist and the Herald of Gospel Liberty, will appear March 1st. It will be a great help to the new paper if it can start with a long list of subscribers. The young people of the Church are doing what they can to give the new paper a boost.

A few words about the new paper may be of interest. Its name is to be a combination of the names of the papers of the two uniting Churches. The Herald of Gospel Liberty is the oldest religious newspaper in the world, and the Congregationalist is the second oldest. United, they will have a great historical background. Dr. F. G. Coffin, at present consulting editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and Mr. Hermon Eldredge, leadership training secretary of our Church, go to be on the editorial staff of the new paper.

There are many reasons why we should read this bigger and better Church paper which is to be ours after March 1st. (1) That we may keep up with our own work; (2) that we may become acquainted with the Congregationalists; (3) that we may read about every step that is taken in the union of the work of the two uniting Churches; and (4) that we may be loyal to our Church which has just taken such a great step forward.

The regular subscription rate for the new paper is to be $3. A special rate of $2 per year is being made during the month of January on renewals to the Herald of Gospel Liberty (which will be carried over to the new paper) and on new subscriptions. This special rate applies to subscriptions for one year only. Send all renewals or new subscriptions to Mr. Hermon Eldredge, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio, at once.

JEWEL TRUITT.

OLD TIME vs. MODERN PREACHERS.

Of recent months throughout the country there has been a tendency to compare, or contrast, the real achievements of the old-time preacher with that of what most congregations seek nowadays —a "live wire" and a "good mixer." North Carolina to a certain extent took up the discussion after one of the speakers at the recent State Baptist convention in Shelby declared that the modern congregation is eliminating the real preacher by setting up a style-plate of a "live wire" to which prospective ministers must mold themselves.

In connection with that trend, the North Carolina Christian Advocate, Methodist periodical, notes that Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, thinks "that the iron blooded prophets of old were superior to the present mush-mouther peddlers of soft words who keep busy patting folks on the back." Then Prof. Phelps is quoted as follows:

"I wonder what Jonathan Edwards, Cotton Mather, Cromwell, John Milton, and other hearts of oak would have thought of the back-patting gospel? These men were free from the taint of self-pity. They did not have to jack themselves up with signs on the wall imploring them to work or commanding them to smile, nor did they below their courage in the bathroom. They rather said: 'God, be merciful to me, a sinner.' I believe that an acute consciousness of sin is more needed now than an enormous accession of conceit. The old theologians, with all their dogmatism, got down to the bedrock of human nature; they believed in the reality of sin, and they did their utmost to convict their audiences; some hearers walked out of Church, realizing their shortcomings and determined by the grace of God that something must be done to improve the situation." —Cleveland Star.

ON FAITH.

When man attempts God's truths to prove,
And trusts not faith, he hits a groove
That straightway leads into a wall—
Man finds that he, indeed, is small.

I think it was intended so,
That His cause by faith alone should grow;
The fundamental truths divine
Are far beyond man's puny mind.

Yet, the spark within us all, to feel,
Will lead us on if we but kneel,
And trusting ever day by day
His guidance, and His blessing pray.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

MONDAY.

LIVING IN THE IMAGE.

(A story from The Christian Herald.)

Once upon a time I read an interesting story, which keeps coming back to me. I do not remember the name of the hero, but I do remember that he was so thoroughly a rake that his wild oats showed in his face. Presently he fell in love with a girl of pure and stainless character, but, alas! he could not woo her with his vice-marked face. And so he repaired to a wondrous mask-maker and had a mask of virtuous beauty fitted. In this guise he won the maiden of his heart's desire.

They lived in a veritable paradise until an old enemy of his turned up, as old enemies will. This person had seen him purchase his mask, and demanded that he remove it! Trembling, he did so, and lo! the face which remained had the exact appearance of the face which he removed. So long had he been forced to assume the noble appearance that his false face dictated, that it had become a habit. He was the person of the mask forever!

The other day I heard a girl say, "Oh, I could never be as good as Alice. I think she must just have been born good. The way she humors that whiney brother of hers! The way she trots around for her mother! My dear, I just couldn't!"

If that girl were to copy some of the simplest acts of Alice, some of the smallest gestures, I wonder if she might not, after all, grow to be like her, just as did the man who became the mask of what he wanted to be.

TUESDAY.

I DON'T UNDERSTAND.

(By Dr. H. W. Morrow.)

The other day a woman said to me, "Do you mean to imply in your story, "Splendor of God," that Judson was not sure about immortality? Or are you not sure yourself?

Then, without waiting for my reply, she went on, angrily: "If either case is true, I shall do all I can to prevent people reading the book." I stared at her. She really was excited and angry. "Both Judson and I," I said, "believe in immortality. But if we didn't, would that justify your anger? or encourage us toward your kind of Christianity? or help out unbelief? Don't you realize that unbelief is a tragedy in any life? You should be sorry and helpful, not furious and destructive."

"You don't understand," she retorted, and left.

No, I do not understand, and never shall understand, the bitter fury that disagreeing Christians sometimes show toward one another. Did Christ tell us to despise the man who in all earnestness is unable yet to see eye to eye with us? Would Christ have refused to hear the story of Adoniram Judson's spiritual agonies and doubts, and give the astounding reason that He would not hear because Judson had doubts? No! If Jesus Christ did not look on every earnest seeker after truth with an unprejudiced eye, then I don't understand Christianity.

WEDNESDAY.

THE RUST OF DISCONTENT.

"Godliness with contentment is great gain."—1 Tim. 6:6-8.

The Christian Herald brings us a story as follows:

Audubon, the American naturalist, after once visiting a brother naturalist who had every advantage, began to compare his lot with the other man's. The comparison filled him with dissatisfaction. Thinking upon his own imprisoned case, he wrote in his diary, "Poor Audubon; poor me!"

The joy of possession easily turns to the envy of possession, as David Grayson points out, and then its joy turns to dust and ashes. Your little place of a few square yards may seem a land of promise as you enter in, but let envy of another man's acres insinuate itself, and the joy is exchanged for discontent. A blind, unlovely and graceless thing is discontent! Like oxygen turning steel to rust, so is discontent a spoiler. Where it enters, all achievement and privilege are in vain. The best of all antidotes is gratitude—the spirit of appreciation for life's "manifold and great mercies" that come to us often unsought and certainly undeserved.

Prayer.—Our Father, the Giver of every good gift and the Blesser of every soul, make us like Paul, content in whatever state we find ourselves and to have peace forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE STRENGTH OF PRAYER.

"Pray without ceasing."—1 Thess. 5:17.

There is a legend of a plowman of Spain, named Isidore, who went to Church each morning on his way to work. He loved to thus start his day's work with God's blessing.

His workmates were careless, scoffing fellows, and made sport of Isidore's piety. Finding that jeers had no effect, they sought to prejudice their master against him, and accused him of wasting, in prayer, the time that should have been given to work. When the master heard of this, he spoke somewhat roughly to Isidore, reminding him that prayer was no substitute for honest service.

"Master," replied Isidore, so the legend runs in William Canton's "Book of Saints," "what you say is true, but it is also true that no time is ever lost in prayer. Those who pray have God to work with them, and the plowshare which he guides draws as goodly and fruitful a furrow as another."

This the master did not deny. He determined to keep a close watch on Isidore, and on the morrow was in the fields early. The men were at work, yet one and another seemed to have little heart in their tasks. When he came to Isidore's field, there was a difference. Isidore was happy in his task, and as the master looked he saw that three plows were at work in that field, one drawn by horses, the others drawn by angels.

He made no further complaint about Isidore's prayers. They were evidently no hindrance, but a considerable help. The man who started the day with prayer was the best workman he had.

Better work should be one of the fine issues of prayer, and the legend of the plowman puts in pictorial form the helps and aids that come to men through prayer.

It was said of General Gordon, that he prayed his boats up the Nile. That did not mean that he was on his knees when he should have been at work. It did mean that prayer made a difference, strengthening and helping him in the days of his most need.

Prayer.—Dear Father, teach us to pray and to take time to pray and to daily tune our soul to Thine for all the harmonies of love and all the blessings we are capable of receiving. Amen.

FRIDAY.

PLEASANT VOICES.

"Lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice."—Ezek. 33: 23-33.

Investigations of annoying sounds prove that their annoyance does not depend solely on loudness, but often mainly on their pitch. Some noises may be only slightly reduced, and yet a distinct relief is felt at once, while other noises may be reduced far more and yet no relief be gained. Certain sounds, certain musical instruments, and certain voices "rasp on" us, "stir us all up," while others, quite as loud or even louder, are pleasant and soothing.

We need to consider the quality of our voices. This is no small part of the impression we make on others, no small part of the total influence of our lives. And the way to get a pleasant voice is to have regard to our thoughts.

Are we sensitive to the voices of others? We may be sure that others are equally sensitive to our voice. Do pleasant voices fill the world with delight for us? We can produce the same beautiful effect with our voices. Think how blessed it will be if, no matter what we are saying, every word we utter will be a blessing in the lives of all that hear it!

Prayer.—O Thou, that spake as never man spake, put Thy Spirit into our hearts, that we may have Thy quality of voice! Shall not the air vibrate once more with Thy tones? And may it be through us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PLAY THE MAN.

"Be of good courage, and let us play the man for our people, and for the cities of our God."—2 Sam. 10:6-14.

An Indian warrior, who had done many bloody deeds, came to the missionary and said that he wished to be a Christian. To test him, the missionary asked, "May I cut your hair?" For an Indian to cut off his scalp-lock, that hold for his foe—if he can get it, is to declare that he will never go on the warpath again. "Yes," said the Indian, "you may cut it. I throw my old life away." As the shorn Indian went home, he was greeted with jeers all the way, and was hailed as no more a man but a squaw. Almost frantic with their ridicule, the Indian rushed home, burst into tears, and threw himself on the floor. But his wife, who was a Christian, threw her arms around his neck and said: "Yesterday there was not a man in the world who would dare call you a coward. Cannot you be as brave for Him who died for you as you were to kill the Sioux?" The Indian sprang to his feet, declaring, "I can, and I will."

That meant real courage, for there is no severer test of heroism than ridicule. The example of Christ should lead every Christian to bravery.

Prayer.—We pray the Lord our soul to keep. That He may keep it from faltering. That He may preserve it from hesitating. That He may make it steadfast in every trial. Without Thee, O Christ, we shall run from all our adversaries, but with Thee we shall fear no one and no thing. Grant us Thy superb courage, O Hero of heroes! Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The new year has started off very nicely. We have had but few cases of "flu" and only one case of pneumonia thus far. We are hoping and praying that we will not have much sickness this season. In a large family like this we expect to have some sickness, but we have very little compared to the number of children we have, and a very few accidents. For thirteen years we had two broken arms and one collar-bone; yet just before Christmas we had two legs broken in the same afternoon. In handling a crowd of children we never know just what will happen.

We truly hope that the sun will shine brighter during the year 1930 and misfortune will not come our way.

We want to ask all our Sunday Schools to remember the little children in the Christian Orphanage and help us to do a greater work for helpless humanity.

TEN YEARS OF PROHIBITION.

Our good friend, Upton G. Wilson,, "The Merry Cripple," writes thus to the Winston-Salem Journal:

"The inability of any sophistry to justify a traffic that is essentially lawless—whose finished products are drunkenness and crime—is self-evident." Thus spoke Attorney Phin Horton to members of the Winston-Salem Rotary Club, in addressing that body on the subject of prohibition. None can deny the truth of the statement.

It is to be regretted that men get hurt running liquor from one place to another, and it is likewise to be regretted that there are men so base as to attempt to run liquor from one place to another in contempt of law and decency. But if there were no liquor runners, certainly no liquor runners would get hurt. The cause as well as the effect should be considered.

"The inability of any sophistry to justify a traffic that is essentially lawless," is splendidly demonstrated by the very lawlessness of those who engage in the traffic. Liquor has always been lawless. It was outlawed because of its lawlessness. And even after being outlawed it continues to lift its filthy, repulsive claws against those who would suppress it.

Liquor and the friends of liquor are too arrogant. Their effrontery is unsurpassed. They would have the traffic made legal because of its very beastliness, not because of its virtues. The legalizing of liquor would not make it more virtuous but less virtuous. If morals cannot be legislated into people neither can they be legislated into the liquor business.

A time has come in the enforcement of prohibition for absolute firmness. Solicitor Horton says the certainty of punishment is the greatest deterent of crime. He is right. Let the man who meddles with liquor understand that he surely will be punished and he'll let the business alone.

Not the giving of additional license to liquor, but the taking away of the license it now illegally enjoys should be the purpose of the American people in the immediate months ahead. Those who make it their business to dispense liquor should feel the heavy hand of the law.

CHRISTIAN REFINEMENT.

True refinement should be found in every child of God. It is not stiffness and does not make sticks out of people, but rather makes them natural. Gypsy Smith says that if he should walk to the piano for the keynote of success, he would strike "B natural." We would say, that a good mark of Christian refinement is being natural.

Good manners are a mark of refinement. Let us give another man's definition for this. "Good manners are nothing less than little morals. They are the shadows of virtues, if not virtues themselves. 'A beautiful behavior is better than a beautiful form; it gives a higher pleasure than statues and pictures; it is the finest of the fine arts.' No one class has a monopoly in this 'finest of fine arts'; and while favorable circumstances undoubtedly do render good manners, more common among persons moving in higher rather than lower spheres, there is no positive hindrance to the poorest classes practicing good manners toward each other. Manners are not idle, but the fruit of noble nature and of loyal mind."

Many things are included in good manners. Our conversation may tell on us. Talking too much is a fault of a great number of people, yet some go to the other extreme, and do not talk enough. Do not try to do all the talking. Be careful what you say. Thnik before you speak. Watch the tone of your voice. Many young people are careless of this. Discern between foolishness and wit. The former is sin, but the latter can be used to the glory of God if kept under control. Laughter is healthful, but be careful at what you laugh. "When wit," says some one, "is combined with sense and information; when it is softened by benevolence and restrained by principle; when it is in the hands of a man who can be witty, and something more than witty, who loves and honors justice, decency, good nature, morality, and religion ten thousand times better than wit—wit is then a beautiful and delightful part of our nature."—Irene Marshall, in Gospel Banner.

PATHS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake."—Psa. 23:3.

There are two pathways through the world. One is the way of the ungodly. Those who travel it are those who fear not God and care not for their fellow-men. All their thoughts and desires are centered on themselves.

The other way is the path of the righteous. Those who travel this path are those who love God and their fellow-men and who seek to serve both. They are those whom Jesus called the salt of the earth and the light of the world. Their lives are lives of joyous service. Their effort is to be more and more like Him who leads them "in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake."

There is a story of a man who was walking one day in a dark forest not far from his home. Suddenly he heard the patter of little feet behind him, and looking back he found his little daughter of six years following him. Aren't you afraid you'll get lost?" he asked her as he extended his hand. "No," was her reply as she slipped her hand in his. "I am not afraid." "But why?" he persisted. "The woods are dark and you have never been this way before." "I am not afraid," she repeated, "because you are leading me, and you know the way."

The little child's trust should teach a lesson to every Christian. Let no one suppose the path of righteousness is an easy one. It is joyous, but it is not easy. John Bunyan's Pilgrim found his path led through the slough of despond, up the steep places, through dark valleys. There were lions in the way. There were evil men. There were giants of sin. There was Apollyon.

But he was victorious in the end for the same reason that every Christian may be victorious—the shepherd of his soul leads him "in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake."

No matter, then, how difficult the path becomes. No matter how steep. No matter how dark the shadows. No matter how numerous or how strong the enemies of his soul. The difficulties are not there to discourage him, but to "prove" him. The trials are not to weaken, but to purify. And with such a leader, the most difficult path becomes glorious, and there is victory at the end.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

ADULT ILLITERACY DEPLORED.

"American life presupposes an educated public. Government, business, the prevention of pauperism, individual happiness, and self-respect all require that Americans have at least the elements of education. Until this is achieved, neither our government nor our economic system can reach its intended effectiveness," writes L. R. Alderman, of the U. S. Office of Education, in the United States Daily. He continued:

"The problem of education challenges every community. However optimistic the educator may feel over the progress that has been made in the last quarter of a century in the history of American education, he cannot feel complacent.

"Not only do we have with us a problem of illiteracy, sufficiently uncomfortable to give rise to the appointment of a national committee to study the whole aspect of it with a view to its speedy eradication, but we also have an adult population of unpleasant proportions functionally illiterate. It is this latter concourse which should enjoin the discriminating attention of Americans.

"Although illiteracy is proportionally higher in certain geographic areas, the lack of adult education of an elementary character is generally disarming. It is not only an educational problem to be solved, but it is a political obligation to eliminate such a challenging condition in our social life."

"To this fact has been added the review of the tests made by the National Academy of Sciences of the drafted men in the American Army of 1917. This review reported that one-fourth could not read a newspaper or write a letter.

"How large the number of Americans who need the barest essentials of elementary education is has been estimated to exceed $20,000,000. These figures are merely conjectural, having been based upon statistics from the United States Bureau of the Census in its 1920 enumeration, wherein it was reported that 71 out of every 1,000 men and women over 21 years of age could not write in any language.

CONQUERING FAILURE.

"Wait for Jehovah; be strong, and let thy heart take courage; yea, wait thou for Jehovah."—Psa. 27:7-14.

In the city in which I live there was once a public school principal who lost his position. A less courageous man would have given up and have gone into another occupation; but he bravely took a position in a village school for ten dollars a week and made a notable success of his work. Before long he became head of a Boston school at a salary of $3,000, and remained there for thirty years.

That man had courage enough to wait for Jehovah. He knew that no one ever loses time by such waiting. He was willing to do the best he could in a small place, sure that God had waiting for him a place as large as he was able to fill. This waiting courage is a difficult kind of bravery, but it is most rewarding. When the victory comes, it is doubly joyful for the delay.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, we trust Thee for our future as well as for our present. We are willing to bide Thy time. Nay, we are not only willing to wait for Thy will, but we would not have it different if we could. For while we are waiting, Thou art waiting with us. Amen.

CONSERVING HUMAN LIFE.—

Irene du Pont has proposed to the Association of Life Insurance Presidents that they set aside one-eighth of 1 per cent per annum of their trust funds for the financing of a great research organization, which shall have for its purpose the prolongation of human life. Mr. du Pont argued that if the life insurance companies had engaged in such an enterprise twenty years ago that already two years would have been added to the life of the average individual. Mr. du Pont was encouraged to make such optimistic predictions by the experience of his own company, which he declares has reduced the fatalities in its business to one-sixth of what they were fifteen years ago. He also added that his company had reduced the mortality rate from 33 to 15 per cent of those who were afflicted with the disease of tuberculosis among its employees.

The life insurance companies were urged to engage in this great research enterprise in order to reduce the death claims among the thousands whose lives they insure. There is little doubt but that the companies would find such an effort would amply repay them for their investment. And there could be nothing but commendation for them should they enter into the scheme with no other motive save what they would gain in financial returns. The deplorable fact is that there is not a greater concern for the conservation of human life from humanitarian motives. Those who ought to be most concerned are often the ones who are most careless of the dangers which constantly beset them. The automobile fatalities in most any city or State are appalling, and they are steadily mounting.

The time is ripe for a concerted action on the part of the State, religious organizations, and educational institutions to awaken a higher regard for the sanctity and security of human life. Thousands of individuals are constantly placing their own lives and the lives of others in jeopardy, through carelessness which often amounts to criminal negligence.

UNPRECEDENTED GIVING.—

It is estimated that during the year of 1929 that the sum given for the various philanthropic enterprises in the United States amounted to $2,450,720,000, which was $120,120,000 more than was given during the previous year. These figures were compiled by the John Price Jones Corporation of New York City, which business it is to act as fund-raising consultants.

The amount is divided among the following classifications: religious purposes, $996,300,000; education, $467,500,000; gifts for personal charity, $279,760,000; organized charitable relief, $278,710,000; health, $221,510,000; foreign relief, $120,000,000; the fine arts, $40,000,000; play and recreation, $20,900,000; miscellaneous reform organizations, $14,040,000.

No other nation on the earth, during all the years of history, has ever given such stupendous sums for philanthropic purposes as are given by the American people. Back of the giving of such enormous sums is the ever-deepening consciousness of the responsibility of the individual for the welfare of all his fellows. And of course the ability to give such sums comes from the unparalleled returns from American manufacturing and trade. Both the ability to give and the willingness to give are truly remarkable.

The beneficent effect upon the givers is beyond question. But one cannot but wonder as to what effect the giving of so large amounts will have upon the character of the recipients. Is there danger of individual responsibility and individual ambition being undermined by such lavish philanthropy? To raise such a question is not to suggest that less should be given, but it is to emphasize the necessity of giving wisely. It should certainly be possible to furnish every assistance to the sick, the needy, and the under-privileged without developing a spirit of servile dependence. But it is by no means an easy task.

For many years now, teachers of religion and ethics have been insisting that those who prosper in a large way owe it to themselves, their fellowman, and their God to give freely of their means for the helping of their fellows. Last year such teachings bore fruit to the amount of two and a half billion dollars. Now it behooves the teachers to implant in the minds and hearts of the recipients of such philanthrophy a corresponding social obligation. Thousands of young men and women are being given the advantages of higher education made possible by the gifts of others; if they should fail to understand the obligation which they owe to society because of what they have received, not only will the social order be the poorer, but they themselves will have suffered a grave injury to their own souls. The giver of money must needs be even wiser than the giver of advice, for the dangers of ill advice are much more easily detected.

WHAT ABOUT THE MOVIES?—

Most of us are aware that within the period of our memories the movies have come into being and have been developed into one of the world's leading industries. Not all of us are aware of the tremendous social influence which they constitute, either for good or evil. They are a force to be reckoned with. Wholesale denunciation of the movies will accomplish nothing. The number of people who will be deterred from attending them by such denunciation is insignificant when compared with the thousands who will attend no matter what is said. They offer a year-round source of entertainment and amusement, at prices that are within the reach of the average purse. Even if it were possible to put the movies out of business by denouncing them, they offer too great possibilities of usefulness to be thus summarily dealt with.

The average individual who has thought about the matter at all has a vague idea that all is not as it should be. Many of those who should be most vitally concerned as to the influence of the movies have neither the time nor the inclination to make a personal investigation of what is being offered in the movie theaters. There is a realization that something ought to be done; but nobody seems to know just what. Mr. Fred Eastman has contributed two articles to the Christian Century dealing with the subject that are worthy of the serious study of every one who is interested in art, religion, morality, or even the common decencies of life. The first appears in the issue of January 15th, and bears the title, "The Menace of the Movies." The second appears in the issue of January 22nd, under the heading, "Our Children and the Movies." The third of the series is to deal with the effect of the movies upon international relations, and is to appear in a subsequent issue, according to announcement.

The two articles which have been printed bear every evidence of an attempt to deal with the issue squarely and impartially. They represent an honest attempt to face the facts. They cite the findings of many interested religious and social workers who are making a study of the subject. Any one who will take the trouble to secure and read these articles will find them most illuminating and instructive.

It is a problem for the average American citizen and the average American Christian, who is interested in the factors which are helping to mold American life. It is neither just nor reasonable to allow unscrupulous producers and exhibitors of movies to debase and demoralize the minds and morals of youth in order to pile up profits for themselves. It should not be permitted to drag along until it becomes an issue for the fanatic and the reformer. If the majority of the right thinking and right living American citizens who are interested in their children and their neighbors' children seeing the sort of movies that will help to make for clean conduct, clean ideals, and wholesome amusement, will let their wishes be known in no uncertain terms, something will be done about it. The screen actors who have achieved notable success have been those who are of a high type. It has been shown that the clean and wholesome pictures of real merit are money-makers. Public opinion ought to make the other kind impossible.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The First Christian Church, Reidsville, N. C., has issued a "Year-Book and Dictionary," which is informative and appropriate. Besides carrying a cut of the lamented Rev. L. I. Cox, who organized the Church, and a picture of the Church and the present pastor, there is a very succinct history of the Church, to which is appended the names of the present officers of the Church, teachers in the Sunday School, Church calendar, and a list of the names of the entire Church roll, the whole making a brochure of twenty-eight pages, besides the four cover pages.

Evangelists Sam Leonard Davis and Mrs. Davis are now booking evangelistic engagements with the Churches for spring and summer. The work of Bro. and Sister Davis is well known to pastors and SUN readers generally, and if any contemplate having these workers in the evangelistic field, correspondence will be appreciated. Their address is 114 East Fifteenth Street, Norfolk, Va. Bro. Davis plays gospel songs with consummate ability and engaging reverence, and Sister Davis presents the Bible message in a plain, gripping manner. Their services in the past have meant much to the Churches engaging them.

It is a rather hopeful sign that we have a committee of Congress who are charged with the business of trying to keep the air clear of too much "jazz" and nonsense. Recently it was brought to the attention of this committee that some station in Louisiana was broadcasting profane language. Immediately the station entered denial and promised to do better, and not to give the air even words that any well-behaved family would not appreciate. A protest was recently lodged with this committee by a spokesman on behalf of the people, who said: "I do not see any reason in the world why 600 stations should try to outdo each other with jazz." This spokesman declared that it was up to Congress to act and to keep the air clear for music and messages of real worth, or wholesome amusement and entertainment. It is a wholesome sign that when the moral sense of the public is offended or abused, complaint may be lodged and abuses corrected.

Hon. W. N. Pritchard, an honored citizen of Chapel Hill, died at the Watts Hospital, in Durham, on the morning of January 24th, from the effects of a fall, in which his hip was broken, Christmas night. Bro. Pritchard was seventy-nine years old and had been a prominent citizen of Orange County and Chapel Hill for years, serving for several years as mayor of Chapel Hill, and then postmaster for four years, and once representing his district in the State Senate. He is survived by two brothers, Hon. I. W. Pritchard, of Chapel Hill, and Mr. J. J. Pritchard, of Durham. The funeral services, conducted with Masonic rites and ceremonies, were in charge of Dr. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College, educational secretary and lecturer of the Masonic order of North Craolina. We knew Bro. Pritchard as a man of personal piety, of honest, sincere mind, and of Christian attitudes and activities. He leaves, besides his brothers, five sons and three daughters, to whom we extend fraternal sympathy in their hour of bereavement.

Rev. R. L. Williamson, Winchester, writes January 18th: "We plan to begin a series of revival meetings here Sunday, the 26th. Bro. Poythress will be with us. Your prayers and those of the entire brotherhood are earnestly desired for the success of this campaign." In response to a letter as to what can be done to increase the circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN or to improve its management, Bro. Williamson adds: "I have nothing to suggest as to the better management or production of THE SUN. The fault does not lie in that direction. It is a problem similar to which every pastor has to face and try to solve. One of our most faithful and successful pastors told me just a little while ago that the indifference of the people and response to his efforts is just breaking his heart. I am assured that there will be a way out, and that there is a brighter prospect, and I trust nearby. Be assured of the appreciation on the part of the pastors of your efforts and success in giving to the brotherhood an organ of a high type of merit and usefulness. I hope to send some subscriptions soon."

John R. Mott, who has recently returned from an extended world tour, declares that he has seen no greater need than that precipitated by the present famine in China, "which has already cost millions of lives and will possible cost other millions before the coming summer, with its crops and harvest." Dispatches say that two million have already died within the year, and two million more are facing death this winter. This is the worst famine in sixty years, it is declared. One is loathe to believe, and shudders at trying to believe the dispatches saying: "In many places in northern China great common burial pits called 'wan gen,' or 'ten thousand people' pit, deep as the foundation for skyscrapers, have been filled in with famine victims and new ones dug." It is revolting to try to think of burying in one pit ten thousand who have simply perished to death from lack of food of any kind. We, in a land of plenty, cannot grasp horrors of that magnitude. A long time ago it was said that the Sermon on the Mount and the teachings of Scripture, including the laws of Moses, carried the finest principles of economy, as well as morality, that the world has ever seen. However this may be, it is a known fact that wherever these principles have been carried and learned and lived, people have been able to adopt such laws of economy, such rules of production and consumption as would help to ameliorate, if not to overcome, extensive famine conditions. The fact is if the gospel of the Son of God were accepted and practiced in our own land, our penitentiaries would be empty, our jails would remain closed, poverty would be unknown, and mankind would come to be clothed and fed and cared for.

INFORMATION WANTED.

"The Christian Annual" and "The Congregational Year-Book" will be combined this year. It will be published about May 1st. All information for it should be in the hands of the undersigned without delay. The following information is wanted from every Christian minister: Full name and address; date of ordination; date of call to present field or fields. Put it on a postal card and send it today to Warren H. Denison, Secretary, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. Thank you.

RAMSEUR, N. C.

My dear Dr. Atkinson:

Last Sunday was the ending of my first quarter's service at the Bennett Church. There was a nice congregation present, it being the largest since we started services. We have a very good Sunday School, though small. We hope we may be able to grow much stronger this year. Before this they just had to have preaching when and by whom they could get. It is now well understood there will be preaching every third Sunday morning. Wishing you and the cause you represent much success, Yours truly,

T. J. GREEN.

ELON ALUMNI.

The Eastern Virginia Club of the Elon College Alumni Association will have its fourth annual meeting in Suffolk Christian Church on the evening of February 21, 1930, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The executive committee, composed of Dr. N. G. Newman, Dr. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Mrs. J. B. Gay, Sr., and Rev. F. C. Lester, met in Franklin recently to plan for this meeting. Those who have attended in former years have enjoyed a delightful program of fun and fellowship. It is expected that this year's program will be up to the high standard of former years.

Several committees are already at work, getting things in order for this annual banquet of former Elon students and their wives or husbands. All those who have experienced the joy of school life at Elon and who may be in or near Eastern Virginia on that date are cordially invited to attend. Just bring along your dollar for your dinner and a good story for your friends, and we'll be happy together.

F. C. LESTER,
Publicity Agent.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN SPECIAL OFFER.

No business can exist long when its income is only half of its expenses. This is what THE CHRISTIAN SUN is trying to do, and has been trying this method for several years. It cannot be done. The printing and mailing of the paper costs about $7,000 for the 51 issues. The income last year was less than half that amount. Can the members of the Christian Church expect THE SUN to still continue on its present financial basis? The editor gives his time as editor, free. The circulation manager gives his time. No one gets pay except for the actual printing. It seems under this arrangement THE SUN is published about as economically as it can be done. The subscription list is now about 2800 subscribers. Many of these are in arrears. Something must be done! What can be done?

We are going to make a special effort in the month of February for new subscribers and renewals. How are we going to proceed? We are going to ask all the pastors to help us. If all our pastors will lend us a helping hand for at least one month, you will see quite an increase in new subscribers and renewals. To make this campaign interesting, the circulation manager is going to give to the pastor who sends in the largest list of new subscribers or renewals a $15.00 hand bag, provided he sends as many as thirty new subscribers or renewals. The pastor who sends us the second largest list of new subscribers or renewals will receive a $10.00 gold coin, provided he sends as many as twenty new subscribers or renewals.

Let every church organize and get to work and earn one of these presents. Make your pastor happy by helping him. Any church can send a list of subscribers and designate the pastor to whom credit should be given.

We truly hope our people will fall in line and help your pastor by renewing your subscription, and if you are not a subscriber, become one and help your pastor and thereby help THE SUN to make its weekly visits to our homes.

Circulation Manager.

WALKING WITH GOD.

"And Enoch walked with God."—Gen. 5:22.

One day some children were at play, when one of them said, "Guess who I met at Sunday School yesterday?" And none of them could imagine, so little Miss Dorothy said, "I knew you couldn't guess, and I'll tell you. I met a man named Enoch." "Where does he live?" the other children cried. "Why, in the Bible, and he is a wonderful man because he had a son whose name was Methusalia, and he lived to be 969 years old. Enoch never died, 'cause one day God called him and said, 'Enoch walk with me'; so Enoch walked with God and Enoch was not because God took him to live with him." Even a child may remember all the Bible has to say of Enoch, for his name occurs only five times in the Holy Word. But the fact that he constantly walked with God is worth our consideration. Walking with God is wonderful, for when a man walks with God, like Enoch of old, he forsakes sin, loses fear of eternal punishment, and God becomes a personal reality to him.

1. He who walks with God loses fear of hell. The fear of this dreadful place of punishment and suffering ought to be held before us till we all lose fear of going there. A quarter of a century ago, the subject of hell-fire and burning brimstone was preached and discussed much more than during the present day. We need to stop and think of such things occasionally. They are not very pleasant, 'tis true, but they are realities. Just because hell is not preached today is no sign that it does not exist as vividly and as surely as when it was pictured by Jonathan Edwards in the early days of the New England colonies. As to what hell is like unto, we do not know. It is generally believed that it is a place of continuous trouble and torment that is prepared for all who willfully sin against God and man.

The fact that hell is not often preached, and fear of punishment seldom portrayed, has helped bring about a great crime-wave and an increase of lawlessness has come into existence throughout the world. It is true that no one should do right to avoid punishment, but rather because it is one's duty to do right; however, fear of punishment is a great incentive sometimes in stimulating certain people to turn from wrong to righteousness.

He who, like Enoch, walks with God, fears no eternal punishment; however, he is most certainly convinced of the existence of a place of punishment, he knows not what it is like or wherein it exists, but by faith knows that it is. Only a few years ago certain denominations required candidates for membership to subscribe to a personal belief in a future burning torment. Today, one comes into the fellowship of the Church, upon giving satisfactory answers to a few mild questions. The result is that many of our Church members are not walking with God.

Some months ago, a minister friend of mine was asked, "Dr. A, don't you think about half the members of your Church ought to go to hell?" To this question the pastor became chocked, but upon meditation, answered, "Yes, all of them, for just a second or two, in order that they might know the suffering and agony through which the sinner must spend eternity." Hell is so fearful and dreadful a place that none of us should take any chances. Walking with God, as did Enoch, does away with fear of future punishment or burning fire.

2. Walking with God helps one become aware of the reality of God's personal presence. As one travels from city to city and from country to country, the pictures of his mind become the realities. For years you imagined the likeness of the Capitol at Washington. Pictures and descriptions filled the mind's eye till one could almost see that grand building become a reality. In like manner, we have had imaginary pictures of God, but when one, like Enoch, decides to walk with God, He becomes a reality and His presence is certain. As Jesus walked with the disciples to Emmaus, their hearts burned within while He walked and talked with them. When one becomes consecrated to God, the presence of Jesus abides in all of life. His personal presence is sufficient for all of our trials. He guides us over the hard places, enables us to say "No" to temptation, warns us against everything that is wrong. His presence greatly encourages and comforts. It is a blessed consolation to those who hunger and thirst, for they become filled.

There is no denying the fact that God makes Himself real to all those who desire to walk with them. As we walk with Him, He becomes a friend that sticketh closer than hands or feet.

If one would walk with God as did Enoch, he must pay the price. He must obey certain divine principles. One must be obedient to the Christ, whom God gave that His love might be revealed to all who desired to know Him. Walking with God demands:

1. Faith, which Dr. Moffatt says, in the modern English of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, means that we are confident of what we hope for, convinced of what we do not see; but for it, men of old won their record. It is by faith that we understand the world was fashioned by the Word of God and the visible was made out of the invisible. By faith, Able, Enoch, Abraham, Noah and Moses, all walked. So by faith we must see Him who is invisible. By faith we must learn to walk. But, thanks be unto Him for the gift of faith, which He supplies for these weak lives of ours. Every Christian needs an abundance of Divine faith in the unseen reality of God. Without it, he cannot walk with God. Even though God is a spirit and no man hath seen Him at any time, all men may know that He is real, for He is from everlasting to everlasting. His Son Jesus Christ, we learn by faith, is just the same today as He was yesterday, and will be the same good Friend tomorrow as He has been today.

2. Walking with God demands personal prayer. Unless we daily and constantly pray without ceasing, we may lose consciousness of His companionship. If it is possible for me to turn the dial of my radio and hear a man talking to me across the distant ocean or even across the continent, then it seems reasonable that through the space of unlimited miles above, I might hear the voice of my Father in heaven. If man can talk to man without any mechanical device, and God cannot talk with him, then man is greater and more wonderful in his power than God. Let no one deny that he who walks with God talks with Him. The prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Prayer is the outreaching of the soul for the presence of God. It is man's way to God and God's way to man.

3. Walking with God means serving God. He has no other hands with which to do His work; no other lips but our lips to tell others of His love; no other way but our way to help people in time of trouble. Life is never complete, nor character completly formed as long as God has anything to be done. Inasmuch as we minister unto others, we render Him service. By serving Him we walk with Him and He shares the joys of service that come to us.

THE POWER OF THE SPIRIT.

The gift of the Holy Ghost as the source of effectiveness is not only an emancipation, but it is also an endowment. It is the triune gift of power, and of love and of a sound mind. Let us notice specifically the elements of this endowment:

1. "It is a divine energy in the soul. "The spirit of power." Jesus said to the disciples, just before His ascension, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Then He added, as a resultant, "Ye shall receive the power, the Holy Ghost coming upon you" (R. V.). Here He declared the nature and secret of spiritual power; it is the Holy Ghost in the believer, and coming upon him as he shall be depended upon, in life and service.

The power of the Spirit is a greatly misunderstood subject. There is no gift of power as such disconnected with the indwelling of the Holy Ghost Himself. Power is not some new faculty, capability or attachment put on to the spiritual life. It is God Himself in us by the presence of the Holy Ghost, imparting to us the divine energy, which works through our personality whether it be great or small. The divine energy of the indwelling of the Spirit, modified by the intervention of human personality adapting it to impress and help our souls, is power. This freights our works, our manner, and our activities with a spiritual avoirdupois. It is that breath in prayer, in testimony, invitation, exhortation and preaching which awakens, comforts, illuminates and blesses souls—one word in the power of the Spirit is worth more than a hundred without it.

A Christian woman said to a worldly man, "Albert, you ought not to lose your soul." He could not get away from these words; they weighed upon his heart until he broke down into contrition. Like words had been spoken to him before, but she said them now in the power of the Spirit. There are repeated instances of those who have been brought to Christ by a single line written, a few words spoken, a simple testimony given or a short prayer offered. What accounts for the unusual power of these small things except the divine energy of the indwelling Spirit in the souls, whence they emanated? This divine energy often works through the very presence of the child of God.

The cultured and skeptical Lord Chesterfield said to Fenelon, in whose company he had been thrown, "He will make a Christian of me in spite of myself, if I stay long with him."

Operators in a mill in New York State quit their lathes, fell to weeping and praying, as Chas. G. Finney simply walked about the factory. A look, a tone, a gesture, has often had the power to smite down souls into penitence, or lift them into life.

A preacher in early Methodism, while discoursing on the story of Gideon's victory, "The sword of the Lord—and Gideon," swayed his hand to the right, and people fell by the score to the ground; he repeated the words, swayed his hand to the left, and they fell in like numbers in that direction. There is such a thing as the power of the Holy Ghost.—Methodist Advocate-Journal.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A SOUTHERNER LOOKS IN.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

En Route Ex-Chicago, Ill., Jan. 24.

An editorial letter in last week's Sun left the writer in Chicago at the "midwinter meeting" of the Boards of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches. This being an initial meeting, and engaged almost solely in Congregational activities (the Christian Boards having met in Dayton for their activities in December), a novice could only look in and "see what he could see" and hear what he could hear. The fact is, those of us attending the meeting from the Christian Churches are yet corresponding members, being allowed to deliberate and to enjoy all the privileges of the meeting, except that of voting. This arrangement abides until there are vacancies, which vacancies are then to be filled by electing the members from our Convention. In the case of their General Board, known as "The Commission on Missions," there was already a vacancy, and our Rev. Raymond C. Clarke, Piqua, Ohio, who was elected by our Convention at Piqua, was duly elected to this Board, with all qualifications. However, the greeting, introduction and fellowship were so cordial and markedly sincere that corresponding members could and did feel at home in all the deliberations.

One thing is apparent: the organization of the Congregational Churches reminds an onlooker of Herbert Spencer's definition of evolution: "A change from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a more definite, coherent heterogeneity," by which one presumes the Spencerian definition to signify that the thing thus spoken of was not made so out of hand, but came to be what it is by a process. When little Willie, who had never attended Sunday School, was asked one day "who made him," he replied: "Nobody; I just growed."

The Congregational form of government is a growth, a development, a process, and has come to be what it is through an ever-guarded effort to make it thoroughly democratic. There are committees within committees, and boards within boards, and "groups" inside and outside of both. This writer was elected by our General Convention to go to the Foreign Mission Department of the Congregational Church when he should be invited and received. The invitation came, and he went, and on arrival found himself first introduced as a corresponding member to "The Commission on Missions," a large body which he afterwards learned comprised practically the whole outfit of the other committees and commissions. Later, he was introduced to and declared to be a corresponding member of the "Prudential Committee," which is a part of (or all) the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Though, as far as he knows, he landed finally at the right place and was duly labeled "a corresponding member of "The American Board." This American Board, however, is a short name for the Board of Foreign Missions, since it has nothing to do with missionary activities elsewhere than in fields afar. However, the information was picked up that a lady sent a donation some time ago to the American Board, accompanying the donation with an explanation that she did not believe in missions elsewhere than here in America, and hence was sending her money to "The American Board." She missed the mark completely, since the American Board has nothing to do with missions in America. By the way, this is the oldest foreign mission board in any denomination in the United States, having been organized in 1808 and incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts in 1812, and has been constantly engaged since in promoting missions throughout the world. The corporate name is "The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions," and is called "The American Board" for short.

It was exceedingly interesting to this writer to hear the discussions of this board. It is a small group of men and women (thirty-six in number, to be exact) of international and interracial mind and management. It has to do with missionary enterprises, activities and projects in India, Africa, China, Japan and in practically all countries of the world. Its budget of expenditure for the fiscal year '28-'29 was $1,819,614.35, and in the fiscal year '29-'30, $1,830,834.61. Its actual receipts in the fiscal year '28-'29 were $1,769,-410.07, and the fiscal year '29-'30, $1,813,256.94. However, it was discovered that the net income to the boards had been shrinking, both for the past year and the year before, and this necessitated "a cut" in appropriations, both for the present and for the fiscal year 1930-'31. The cut, as finally agreed upon for these appropriations, was 5 per cent. This was the depressing and distressing note of the meeting.

Conservatives and "economists" on the board declared that the cut must be strictly adhered to, and possibly further cuts be made, since there was little prospect of increased income for the current or the coming year, and that the only hope of the board in keeping out of despairing indebtedness was curtailment in schools, colleges, hospitals, ministers' salaries on the foreign field. One thing was very noticeable in the meeting, viz: that, as a whole, the women were more determined, optimistic and forward-looking than the men. The writer will not forget with what ringing voice and deep heart-agony one woman member of the board arose and cried out, "My heart is sick of cuts, cuts, cuts! and I think the next person who arises on this floor and employs the term 'cuts' in the salaries and donations to our missions and missionaries should be fined for the offense." That was the feeling of many, but the next speaker who arose, being of the conservative and matter-of-fact turn of mind, said: "I am ready to pay my fine, for I shall talk of more cuts. I think those missionaries on fields afar should count themselves happy that the cuts are no greater, and that we are in distress ourselves and they should share the distress with us," etc.

Well, it all sounded very natural, and made a Christian, who is used to such pleadings and discussions in board meetings, feel quite at home, even if laboring under anxiety in a Congregational board meeting. It is strange that while expenditures by the Churches of the various denominations have increased in the past two or three years for current accounts and local extension and development, the gifts to foreign missions have fallen off. Churches in the United States have spent millions in the last two or three years improving their own plants, adding Sunday School rooms and equipment for home use, and at the same time they have curtailed their gifts for others. The foreign mission boards of the major denominations are passing through strenuous, heart-rending times and are seeking to stem the tide that has set in against the foreign mission enterprise. As was pointed out in The Christian Sun recently, Rev. Stanley High, from a recent trip around the world, declares that "If we class foreign missions among the benevolences and charities, then foreign missions will die with this generation." "However, foreign missions are not a charity or a benevolence," declares Dr. High, "but are the activities and attitudes undertaken and assumed in the name and for the sake of our Lord, who instituted the foreign mission enterprise, and which enterprise the Church alone undertakes to promote."

The Congregationalists are making a desperate effort to overcome the seemingly growing indifference to missions, since it means safeguarding the spiritual life of the Church. The final percentages of distribution agreed upon for the coming year by the Commission of Missions (the inclusive boards) were as follows: To State work, 27.5 per cent; to home missions (including Church extension, work among the negroes and Indians, etc., education, including schools and colleges, and ministerial relief), $35.5 per cent; foreign missions, 37 per cent. That is to say, the estimated budget and distribution upon which our Congregational brethren work is that of giving to foreign missions more than one-third of all funds raised for promotional purposes.

This writer cannot give in detail the work of the other boards than that of the Prudential Committee with which he sat, and the conclusions of the Commission on Missions, which legislates and correlates for all the subordinate and constituent boards.

Go to our legislative and congressional halls of State and you will find men grappling with propositions and problems that have to do with politics, statecraft and our government. Go into a meeting of boards of the Church and you touch the mind and outlook of men and women concerned not merely in the political welfare of a nation, but in the religious and spiritual welfare of a world. It is glorious, indeed, to have the fellowship for a few days of men and women who, in the fear of God and in the love of their fellowman, are seeking to promote the cause of righteousness and build up the kingdom of God on earth.

It was cold weather in the West, registering far below zero for the few days we were together, but comfortable quarters protected against the shivering temperature without; and great sermons, noble utterances, heroic adventure and endeavor, and the sweet fellowship of the saints engaged in the work of God, made the days of the "midwinter meeting" in Chicago days of delight and now of sweet and sacred memory. SENTIMENTALISM AND REALITY.

By the flaming headlines in the newspapers, a minister of the gospel in a New York Church last Sunday declared "that the time had come for the Church to lay aside sentiment and grapple with realities." Among the items classed as sentimental was the singing in the Churches of such songs as "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages, Cleft to Me," "nearer, My God, to Thee," etc. Another item classed as sentimental by this clergyman was that of preaching about redemption and salvation through belief in a person who, they say, was crucified some nineteen hundred years ago. This clergyman would have the Church relegate these historical facts to the scrap-heap of unrealities, and an inglorious past, and give itself to grappling with problems of the present need and want and distress, and the uplift of human beings who are sinking from lack of such help and sympathy and support.

The utterances of this metropolitan clergyman could be ignored, if they were not representative of the type of preaching and Church utterances now abroad in the land. Confronting this type, and having in mind the excrescence of this superficial thinking, one is driven to inquire what is "reality" and what is "unreality"?

To declare a thing sentimental, by no means relegates that to the obscure heap of unreality. One of the truest, most real, most abiding, most eternal realities of this world is sentiment, or sentimentalism, being classified and recognized as such. Take the single item of such songs as this clergyman named. It may be easily said and defended that the three songs mentioned, to name no others, have moved more hearts, reached more lives, brought living reality into more souls than this deluded clergyman and all his kind will ever be able to reach or influence in all their days. When this writer was in Porto Rico, he chanced to meet a deacon who was also a Sunday School superintendent in one of our Churches, who on inquiry declared that the first thing in Christianity that touched his life and reshaped his destiny and brought him to the acceptance of high and useful citizenship in the city of Ponce, was the singing of the one song, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Sentiment or no sentiment, it opened that heart for the reception of the truth, which truth, when received, was so real that it changed the man's method of thinking and activity, and in that changed relationship he sought and acquired an education and had become one of the outstanding factors and forces for righteousness and good citizenship in his town. Instances can be repeated throughout Christendom. Than this, and such as this, there is nothing more real in this universe.

There are tens of thousands, not to say millions, of redeemed and happy souls in the world today whose outlook on life and whose present achievements in the world have been brought about by first having heard and learned such songs as this modern-day clergyman is classifying as "unreal" and as sheer appeal to "sentimentalism." That clergyman, evidently, himself needs to study his dictionary, his psychology, and most of all his Bible, to learn the distinction between the real and the unreal, and to be able, in the light thereof, to discover the only reality that is worth discovering in this world.

Our Saviour said, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul (or life)?" And no man has found or even touched the deep realities of his own life and soul, nor has he discovered the realities of earth nor the glories beyond until the deepest sentimentalism of his own heart and nature has been stirred and his soul has found rest, refuge and reality in Him whom, not having seen, we yet know and may love and serve. IV. LONGSUFFERING.

Many truths and experiences are too large for exact definition. "Longsuffering" is patience in the endurance of injuries; or, bearing, with evenness of soul, toil, pain, affliction, provocation. When Moses was called up into the mount a second time, with the two tables of stone, to receive again the words written on the first tables by the Lord, the Lord descended in the cloud and passed by before Moses and proclaimed: "The Lord is longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression." The psalmist says: "God is longsuffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth." Suffering long is the idea that finds its divine climax on the cross. "Because Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that He might bring us to God." "Love suffereth long." The fountain of patience is in the divine heart. Wars between nations show the absence of this grace from the heart of the world. Longsuffering is the fourth fruit of the Spirit. This fruit is most conspicuous in lives naturally most petulant. If we graft a good twig into a limb of a crabtree and it finally bears luscious fruit, then we know that the good life has rooted itself into the bad life; if good temper grows out of one that was bad, then we know that the divine life has entered our own. Let us assume, then, that longsuffering bears with patience.

1. Toil. Toil comes to man because of sin. Sin changes man's relation to the world. It breaks the poise of human nature. It disorders all things. Man in a world of sin must "strive for the mastery." Jesus saw His disciples "toiling in rowing: for the wind was contrary." It was a struggle between man and natural elements. Jesus said, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not." Man is the great toiler. The great labor unions, strikes, lockouts, magazine discussions of capital and labor, the political agitation, the homestead episodes in the progress of society, all indicate what toiling millions think and feel. Individuals feel it in the unrest that seizes them, a sort of rebellion against this stream of necessity that forces man into perpetual struggle. Christianity patiently bears constant toil in field, mill, shop, and office, and in content with its wages.

2. Pain. That is, discord in our being. "Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh." "Christ is the Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world"; but His physical pain was in the flesh. This all embraces the suffering of love, which is the greatest suffering known and the most patiently borne. The capacity for longsuffering is a mark of love, and the fruit of the Spirit. Brute beasts do not suffer as much as men, and men do not suffer as much as Christ; for the ratio of suffering is the measure of love. Hence, to suffer in patience allies us to Him. "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me! Nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt." Longsuffering is seen in mother and Christ.

3. Affliction. This may be personal or sympathetic. The Lord said, "I have seen the affliction of my people in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters." On their part, it was personal; on His part, sympathetic. "In all their affliction He was afflicted, and the angel of His presence saved them." The world of sin afflicts God's children. "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed." The aim of the Christian is not to escape affliction, but to manifest longsuffering under it.

4. Provocation. "When Christ was reviled, He reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not." Paul said of Christians: "Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it." Here is the great principle of Christianity actually existing in Christ, and wrought into His followers by the Holy Spirit. Petulance, ill-temper inheres in human nature, and when it is supplanted by patience that thinks no evil, resents no evil, but has a blessing for a curse; that does like the rose that sends out sweetness to him who crushes it; or like Christ, who saves a world that rejected Him and nailed Him to the cross—then we know that life is bearing new and better fruit.

There are three classes of injuries that longsuffering covers with silken folds: (a) imaginary injuries. They are legion and are creations in an evil life. Spiritual minds do not cultivate them. (b) Unintended injuries. These are common and only longsuffering can pass them over in peace. Love, joy, peace can not exist in the soul unless there is a patient endurance of unintended wrong. Love places the best construction on the words and actions of all, and suffers long any wrong or injury, apparently done. (c) Real injuries are endured and overcome by good. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him," is accepted and acted out in the child of God. Christ suffered for us while we were His enemies. He suffers long with sinners, because He loves sinners; we can be like Him only when we possess His Spirit. W. W. S.

THE DEPARTING SOUL OF RUSSIA.

Ivan the Terrible, who governed and afflicted Russia hundreds of years ago, is still looked upon by peoples and historians alike as the very embodiment of cruelty. Ivan the Terrible was the Nero of Russia. But Ivan the Terrible attacked and destroyed only the bodies of his victims; and in the national sphere he robbed his country of the garb of civilization. But Soviet Russia is crucifying the very heart of Russia and banishing the soul of a great people. The Soviet government at Moscow is doing something vastly more hurtful to civilization than the propagation of Communism; some thing more fatal to the future of the country of Peter the Great than the forcible stealing of the farm lands from their individual owners. The Soviet government has become the world-champion of atheism among the nations; and the order forbidding the celebration of Christmas is but a signal of oncoming desolation to the Eastern Church of today, with its tens of millions of adherents. It is not to be denied that the Greek Catholic Church, otherwise called the Eastern Church, which has for centuries been the established Church of Russia, has been all too intimately akin to the pagan superstitions of the dark ages. The heart of Imperial Russia, however, from the day of her conversion to the close of the World War, has been passionately religious; passionately Christian. And if the cruel and wicked tyranny which now seeks to crucify faith and hope at the very altars of the sanctuary can be displaced by religious freedom, the Christ will become more truly than ever the Teacher and the Saviour of that misguided people.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

The "Official Proceedings" of the General Convention and the Christian Publishing Association as held at Piqua, Ohio, is on the press. Only a limited number will be published. It will contain all the reports, proceedings, roster, official actions concerning the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches. It was the most remarkable, largest attended, and greatest Convention the Christians ever held. Order your copy today. Send one dollar with order. It costs more than that. You will want this copy in your library for reference, or on your desk. Order from Warren H. Denison, Secretary, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The twenty-fourth national convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America was held in the ballroom of the Statler Hotel, Detroit, Mich., on January 16-19, 1930, with delegates from all the States and speakers from all lines of human activities—ministers, lawyers, professors, doctors, business men, State and national members of Congress and legislatures, ministers and women. The forenoon and afternoon sessions were held in the ballroom, and night meetings at Central Methodist Church, near the hotel. In addition to men and women, more than a hundred students from five States were there committed to prohibition, with optimistic enthusiasm. These young people from colleges and universities not only pledge their loyalty to the eighteenth amendment, but have started an organization that will get into all the educational institutions of this country, and that means a new generation to support and "carry on" the temperance cause until prohibition is not only rooted in the thought and life of this country, but into other nations. Such a temperance organization should spring up in Elon College, and the method can be learned from Western colleges and universities. The addresses, the songs, the rah! rah! of the young people put a note of cheer into the great convention of more than five hundred leading men and women of the nation.

The sessions were all serious efforts to find out the facts as to the history and results of prohibition as operated under the eighteenth amendment. The findings all made good evidence to support the belief that prohibition has been a marvelous success and that the way is open for a really dry nation.

It was revealed from history that ministers of the gospel did more to quell the whiskey rebellion than the militia. The Church is behind the prohibition movement and progress goes on gradually toward increasing the number of abstainers of alcoholic beverages. The Congress of the United States is 80 per cent dry, and the votes are dry enough to keep them dry. It may be true that some members of Congress drink, but most of them know that to advocate wet methods would mean the loss of position at their next election. A politician might be personally wet, but politically dry; but a statesman will be loyal to the Constitution in spite of his appetite and associations. Some people make local conditions the basis of judgment on the temperance question. This is a Christian nation, but all the people are not Christian; this is a temperate nation, but all the people are not temperate. The nation believes in and will maintain prohibition, but all the people are not supporting prohibition.

The following supporters of prohibition may be named without fear of contradiction: railroads, insurance companies, schools, big industries, Churches, governments, banks, doctors, housekeepers, women in general—all these are back of the eighteenth amendment. Some people blame the press for seeming to discredit prohibition; but their criticism arouses the temperance forces to greater effort. It is opposition that stirs up the best in men. Adverse criticism is free advertisement in any field of endeavor. The celebration of the tenth anniversary of prohibition on the 16th by the convention was a great day for the eighteenth amendment.

ELON LETTER.

The popes of the Roman Catholic Church are thoroughly consistent, So are dead men.

The Pope's recent encyclical on education is evidence of several things. Among these one may first catalogue the fact that the Catholic view of education has not changed one iota since Martin Luther's day. We Protestants spend much time writing books on education and discussing its problems. To no purpose, says the pope. Your whole idea of education is wrong. Education is indoctrination. The teacher is the indoctrinator and the Church through its agents is the teacher. The discovery of truth is a fruitless quest. The Pope knows the truth and it can come from no other source.

We also learn from this encyclical that the three teaching groups are the Church, parents and the State. The primary authority rests with the Church, parents come next, while the State is properly limited to teaching for purposes of the national defense, but must not devote too much time to it. You see what would happen to our public schools, if the Pope had his way.

Co-education comes in for a heavy castigation. The sexes should be kept separate. Co-education releases the passions rather than controls them. Monastaries and nunneries would be in order. Nature never intended men and women to associate together.

The Protestant appreciation of the inate abilities and aptitudes of the child and its desire to give such individual opportunity for free expression of his personality is wholly beside the mark, says the Pope. There is nothing good in human nature. It is evil and wicked altogether. To develop an individual's native abilities will be to make him a more skillful demon.

Isn't it a shame to see the extent to which we Protestants are deluded? Isn't it kind and generous of the Pope to point out to us our frailties?

And yet, can we forget that Man of Nazareth who said one single person is of more worth than all the earth's multiplied millions?

Shall we follow Jesus or the Pope?

DR. S. Q. HELFENSTEIN.

Dr. S. Q. Helfenstein, who went to Europe, Egypt, and Palestine last year at the age of eighty-one years, tells us now that he has finally decided to live to be one hundred years old. He has been asked about his way of living, and in reply gave the following answer to the question:

"I have been asked to give a statement as to what I attribute my state of health. Briefly, it is to biological living; but to many that statement means little or nothing, so I shall be more explicit.

"When I began to prepare for the ministry, one of my textbooks in Dr. Axline's college was Calvin Cutter's 'Psysiology and Hygiene,' in which he stated that pork, tea, and coffee were injurious to health. I believed what he said and stopped using them. That was fifty-five years ago, and I was fond of coffee. I think my course was a wise one as results have indicated, for my nerves are as steady now as they ever were. From that time on I have had a growing desire for good health. I began to practice self-denial and self-control—two requisites to jubilant health. I have no use for condiments and confections. I eat very little ice cream, especially since Dr. Lochran told us that frozen fat and seared fat are indigestible. He said if we wanted to enjoy good health, we must give up the ice cream freezer and the frying-pan. Man has power to put things to the test; and when by trial he learns helpful facts, he should put them in practice. In health as well as in religion we should prove all things and hold fast that which is good.

"When seventy-five years old I ceased to eat dead foods, and began to eat more unfried foods. Since then my health has constantly improved. For two years I have eaten an uncooked breakfast, and for lunch a couple of apples and two to four whole-wheat crackers. My evening meal is composed of fruit and vegetables.

"I am led to believe that one can have the grade of health for which he is willing to pay. Let people get away from the old idea that a mysterious providence drops on one the blessing of health and on another ill health independently of how they live or what they do, and adopt healthful methods of living, and they will soon find that they are the ones on whom the blessing of health rests. In the main, colds are needless. Usually they can be prevented by the quantity and quality of food taken. If, when a cold is threatened, one, two, or three meals are omitted and an orange and a lemon are eaten once or twice a day, a severe cold will be avoided. I think my two to four miles' walk each day has much to do with the state of health I enjoy. I respect the health laws of the Pentateuch, and still think God knows what is good for man and that He is interested in man's health. I have never eaten shell-fish. By trusting in God I am able to keep joyful in spirit, knowing that contentment with godliness is great gain."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

WHAT DOES A CHAPLAIN DO?

Our caption is a question which has been asked of me in every place I have been. My only apology for writing about how much work I do is in the belief that a statement of these duties through these columns may be informing to a large number of readers and may win a larger appreciation of a chaplain's calling in the navy.

During the past seven days, since leaving Norfolk, the following duties have engaged me: thirty minutes' devotions each day; prepared two periodic news letters in mimeograph for the men of the ship to send to their homes; arranged the supply and directed the exhibition of motion pictures for the crew every night; conducted one mass-sing; issued 125 books and twenty-five magazines to the crew; prepared three issues of the "Family Altar" page for The Sun; prepared one sermon on "The Price to Pay for Genuine Christian Living" (notes previously gathered); read two books and the best selections from many magazines; held over a hundred personal private religious interviews; witnessed the renewal of faith of more than fifty per cent of these; received six applications for Church membership, and many inquiries of others; wrote 122 letters (mimeographer) to every mother or next of kin of new men who have joined the ship, and held divine services on Sunday.

It sounds ridiculous, and I am afraid you will laugh. Therefore, I refrain from those many other details that come normally in every one's life, as contact is made with folks; details which must take time.

It is not to be understood that this high state of activities goes on all the time. In the first place, it isn't possible constantly, with special reference to the extent of interviews and reading, but it does represent those periods of a chaplain's life which come with seagoing when all are aboard and nothing from the outside interferes with concentration; and it does represent the character of work that is being done all the time.

If this seems to you like a little of "bally-ho," as if I were saying, "See here what I am doing," please forgive me. I will not do it again. I am not conscious of such a motive.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

THE NEEDED EMPHASIS.

While the minds of our people are being drawn so largely toward shaping the program which is to command future activities in the union with our brethren of the Congregational Churches, there is danger that immediate requirements upon which plans for future success must be based may be overlooked. The most important item in our whole pending program is the maintenance of our present work at its maximum in every way. No hiatus should be experienced. In the new arrangement a program which has been constantly increasing should go on in the same way. Every enterprise now maintained by the Church should be advanced in efficiency and usefulness or at least kept up to its present standard. No diminution of effort or support for our distinctive Church projects should be tolerated. In fact, the constantly developing union should stimulate a larger effort everywhere. The larger possibilities which it reveals should challenge every one to a greater service. Increased demands are upon us in many ways. To fail to meet them is to abuse our opportunity.

All of the special periods of the Church program should be promoted in the local Church with great vigor. Both the educational work which they include and the support which they are presumed to stimulate should be increased. Pastors and Churches should observe these periods with great fidelity.

As a case in point, the Secretary of the General Convention is just now reminding us of the Convention period and the great necessity for its support by all. It may not be generally appreciated that the greatest demands ever put upon our Convention office up to the present time will come this year. The expense involved in perfecting the plans and details of the union will require a much larger budget in office and travel for officials, committees and commissions, printing, etc., than heretofore. Our membership in the Federal Council must be supported. Our own enterprises must be promoted through the Convention, as formerly. All that we do is likely to require greater outlay, but it is worth it. A reduction of support to the Convention can mean nothing but a crippling of efficiency.

Our Jubilee Year, emphasizing the Pentecostal observance, has not taken hold of our people as it should. This should enlist widespread sympathy and effort and become a history-making event in the life of the Church. Like observations as to our duty to all other enterprises of the Church might be made with equal appropriateness if space permitted. For all items of the Church program there should be "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull together."—F. G. C., in Herald of Gospel Liberty.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

We have too many young people here and there who are outright slackers. Just where their parents, teachers and friends stop doing for them, there they stop. They seem to have never gotten any inspiration to do for themselves. Just little spineless, animated, conventional creatures they are, with no thought of their responsibility in life. Some of them manage to drag through high school, but that seems to be about the end of their flimsy pursuit for an education. In conversation with a well-known Florida teacher recently, she said, "O they take everything as a joke." Now, who is to blame for this slack-mindedness among so many young people in certain localities here and there? Acquaint yourself with the conditions which exist in the making of their environment and you will know.

A few weeks ago, while awaiting a train in a little town in South Georgia, I was approached by a so-called Holiness minister, who was making himself very noticeable about the station. "Brother," said he, "I have a question to ask you." "Well," said I, "I will give you an answer if I can." "Can you tell me," said he, "who Cain married"? Said I, "Brother, I have never had a wife of my own to worry over, and I certainly am not going back six thousand years and be worrying over Cain's wife; and my advice to you is to take care of your own wife and leave Cain's wife alone. There are some people who are always trying to find out what God never meant for them to know, but they live and die ignorant of the little worth-while things that are near at hand every day."

Say, brother, if you want to hear some good song service, just come to Florida and listen to the robins; but you will have to get out in the open country to find a good choir.

A. R. FLOWERS.

DON'T LET THAT STOP YOU.

A few days ago, one one of the loveliest drives in this vicinity, along a winding creek, a man lost control of his car. He, his wife and child, auto and all went into the water, and the folks were pulled out nearly drowned, but other folks keep driving along that road just the same.

Many have been the accidents of auto, railway trains, and airplanes, and yet men and women trust their lives to all those conveyances. A scoundrel appears in town. He masks as a member of some fraternal or benevolent organization; he is found out. It is a horrid thing, but the club or society usually receives but little harm from the fraud.

Not so with the Church, and its various activities. Once a person is wronged by a member of a Church he proceeds to broadcast the fact far and wide, and to shun the Church as full of deadly poison. Why the difference?

In my life there have been several sad occasions when those I had trusted failed me, and for years I worked with all my might to make up for the "let down," but does that give me a license to "do evil," to cheat my fellow-men, to forget the Church of my sainted mother, grandmother and great-grandmother? No, it does not! These unfortunate meetings with "professors of religion" didn't stop me, and my advice to any one is: "Don't let that stop you."

When I wrong any one, and I find it out, I ask their forgiveness. That has been my teaching in the Church and Sunday School. Others may get off easier, but I can't, and I will not moan away my earthly joys on their account; and if your conscience, or your "still small voice" tells you to do a certain thing and some one else doesn't do a like duty—"don't let that stop you;" just keep on keeping on.—Wesleyan Methodist.

"The foundation of our society and our government rest so much on the teachings of the Bible, that it would be difficult to support them if faith in these teachings should cease to be practically universal in our country."—Ex-Pres. Coolidge.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x3¼ inches x¾ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x3¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE SPIRIT OF MISSIONS.

Would it not be a fine thing if all our Churches would undertake to do some special mission work this year? In the Alabama Conference we have quite a few Woman's Missionary Societies. They are doing wonderful things for the Church and the Lord. We are making a special effort to get our good women organized in every Church for missionary work. The work in the Georgia and Alabama Conference is just now being organized, but we are expecting these dear sisters to do a great work this year. They are undertaking some specific work for the Lord, and He will make it possible for them to do the work.

The mission work of the Church of Jesus Christ is the most unselfish service that can be rendered to our Lord, in honor of which He gives His beloved larger opportunities and greater visions. Through the faithful performance of our mission task the Lord reveals to us sweeter and richer experiences. Through missionary effort, great souls have been saved. Through the salvation of great souls, God has secured great service, and great gifts have been laid upon His altar—Churches have been built, schools and colleges have been founded and supported, orphanages have been established, and the world is better for its being so. No Church can prosper or be happy that is not missionary.

We are praying daily that our Church shall be baptized with the spirit of missions. We must prove our loyalty to our Christ by lifting Him up, and He will draw all men unto Himself. The success of every enterprise of religion depends upon our attitude to missions.

I wish I might be able to enlist our strong, stalwart men in the program of God. God wants our women, with their sacrificial spirit and effort, but He needs our men with their strength and ability consecrated to Him, and He will add to our strength and efficiency in all other lines of service. Men grapple with every great problem. Men decide all great issues. Now, men of our Church, I plead with you to help decide the issue of salvation. Let us men undertake for God this year.

A PRAYER FOR JANUARY.

O God, our Father, Thou who art Creator and Preserver of the whole universe of matter and man; Thou who hast provided for and dost extend to every member of the human family privilege, power and place to glorify Thee through a service of love in the name of Jesus, who brought to the world the eternal gospel of love and light: teach us, Thy disciples, how to embrace and possess it; for we are Thine, and we desire to be used of Thee and for Thee until all hearts shall come into the fellowship of Thy company. Amen.

THE DIFFERENCE CHRIST HAS MADE.

If one is hardheaded and does not like the sentiment, the glittering trees, the bright lights, the enchanting music, the colorful cards and pictures, the home-comings, the memories, and the messages of Christmas he may look across two millenniums through the telescope of history and have a Christmas of stiff rationalism that will stir his soul. Certain books have gathered up many facts on the subject of Christ's influence, and they stand like mountains lifted in beauty and sublimity above the valley. One recalls the words of Renan, French stylist and humanist, who speaks of Jesus as "this sublime person, who still presides over the destiny of the world." We who look around us know how grandly that is true.

In his day, Peter wrote to "sojourners of the Dispersion," having Christ in mind, "whom having not seen ye love, on whom though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice greatly with joy unspeakable and full of glory." This is one of the most marvelous phenomenon of history, and it is the very secret and spirit of Christmas. The far-flung celebration of this anniversary is in itself an illustration of how truly, how widely Jesus Christ "presides over the destiny of the world."

We have just read Glover's new book, "The Influence of Christ in the Ancient World," in which he shows how Christ revived the dying life of the world and gave a new meaning, power and form to society, to thought, to morality, to character and to the knowledge of God. In connection with this new book we turned again to three or four old ones and read with delight the strong intriguing pages of "The Influence of Jesus," by Phillips Brooks; the radiant delightful chapters of "The Influence of Christ in Modern Life," by the late Newell Dwight Hillis; and again we looked over certain chapters of "Christ in History," by Principal Fairbairn. We might have added many others. We were thrilled again as we were the first time we ever read these mravelous lectures. Our last brief study was "The Christ of the Indian Road," by E. Stanley Jones. Jesus Christ came upon us with greater force than ever. He is the Master everywhere. He is making the minds of the real leaders of the world.

It should make us pause with wonder when we note that this Christ who started His life on earth in a stable, and was always without a place to lay His head, without "learning" and without "influential friends," without an army or a State behind Him, still through the power of the manger and the glory of the cross has risen to a place among men where He has 700,000,000 followers. More than one-third of the entire human race wear His name.

We could not destroy Christ's name without the destruction of our environment.

Dr. Sidney M. Berry, of England, tries to imagine a world without Christ, and writes:

"I confess quite frankly that it is beyond the power of my imagination to conceive it. When we try to imagine a life suddenly emptied of meaning and hope, we say to ourselves, 'Suppose it is all a dream, and all this structure of faith rests upon a great illusion.' But shudder as we may at such a blank prospect, we have hardly begun to realize all that the world would lose if it had to lose Christ. He has woven Himself into the whole fabric of things until He is as real a fact in the spiritual universe as the sun and the stars in the material one. To suggest losing Him is like suggesting the falling to pieces of things which have taken centuries to build up—the blankness of discovering that we were left without guidance and resource in a life which was a mystery without a clue. In the realm of man's spirit, such an upheaval would be akin to one of those cataclysms in the natural world which change the contour of a whole countryside. It would be a different kind of world we should live in—a world where the old familiar things were taken away—a world in which we should all have to begin over again."

Christ's influence is at work in the spiritual nature of man as the sunlight is in the world, as air is in the lungs, as the blood is in the veins, as that subtle thing we call life is throbbing in every sentiment thing. Jesus Christ has changed the world's ideals of right and wrong; He has lifted its sense of values; He has made it believe in the depth and greatness of nature and life, and so created science; He has exalted and endured the estimate of man's worth and so made him believe in and struggle for his own greatness in this life and the life to come; He has pledged to remake humanity, and cares for the broken and ruined. Who but Christ cares for the "down and out" men and women of the world? He has made service the test of greatness; He has cleansed the mind of man, and touched his heart. All this influence may be traced through art, science, philosophy, society, the State, politics, and the courts.

He has, and is, reorganizing all life from the heart, from love, instead of from pride and power. He has substituted regeneration for culture, or rather produced culture by regeneration, thus giving reality to change and permanency to reality. His teachings have made us believe in the reality and glory of the unseen world. He has revealed to us a boundless universe, the Father's house of many mansions. There is room for angels, for heaven, for God and for all who shall ever come.

This vast universe full of light and song, with love and truth everywhere, is the secret of Christmas. It is Christ's influence. The songs of today were waked by him. He kindled the light that shines in every heart and face and home. The difference His coming has made is as great as the difference between darkness and light, and infinitely more meaningful.—The Christian-Evangelist.

HOW THE TELESCOPE WAS DISCOVERED.

(A Story for the Children.)

Little things and little people are often responsible for great results, and maybe you do not know that the discovery of that important instrument, the telescope, may be traced to the curiosity of a boy: and this is how it came about:

The little boy was the son of an optician who lived in Holland. He and his sisters loved to play about their father's work-bench, and often they amused themselves by looking at the sea through the little smooth concave glasses which their father used in his work.

Now, one day it happened that the boy, while playing with two of those glasses, chanced to hold them before his eyes in such a way that the face of the cathedral clock seemed very near.

This surprised him greatly, for the clock was so far away that he could scarcely see the hands with his naked eyes.

For a while he stared at the clock, and then at the glasses, each of which he tried in turn, but the clock was as far away as ever, and so it remained, turn them as he would, until by chance again he held both up together, when, lo! as if by magic, the Church stood beside him.

"Oh, I know!" he cried aloud; "it's the two together." Then in great joy he ran to his father and told him of his remarkable discovery.

The father tried the glasses in his turn and found that the boy had spoken the truth, when he said he could bring the great Church clock nearer.

So this was the way the people learned that putting a concave and convex glass together, in just the right position, would make distant objects seem near. Without this knowledge we should never have had the telescope, and without the telescope we should have known little of the sun, moon, or stars.

So if you ever have a chance to look through a telescope, and see the wonders it has to reveal, just remember the little boy who once lived in far-off Holland.—Brooklyn Eagle.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VI—February 9, 1930.

Warnings and Promises.

Golden Text: "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire."—Matt. 7:19.

Lesson: Matt. 7:1-29.

Jesus tried to play fair with men. He wanted them to know that His religion was not an easy thing. He always gave them an insight into its demands upon them. He also warned them against some of the dangers to which they were perhaps not alive. But He emphasized the fact that in spite of the difficulties and the dangers, men could triumph by virtue of the promises which He gave.

Warning.

1. Against judging others. "Judge not." We ought not to sit in judgment upon others, for we do not know all of the factors and motives that enter into the actions of others. Indeed, we are not to be judges of others, but helpers of others. Furthermore, in judging others, we are often revealing and condeming ourselves. The ultimate standard and measure by which we are judged and measured will be the standard and measure which we use in dealing with others.

Jesus introduces an element of humor at this point. He pictures a man with a long and heavy beam in his eye, trying to find and to get out a mote from another man's eye. One can, of course, see the humor of the situation. But Jesus suggests that that is usually what happens when we sit in judgment on others. Our own eyes are so distorted and blinded by the wrongs in our own lives that we are in no position to deal with others.

2. Against false prophets. There were in Jesus' day, and there are in our day, those who disguise themselves in the garb or profession of religion. The fact that a man wears a clerical garb, or the fact that a person is a Sunday School teacher or an officer in the Church, that fact that a man observes punctiliously all the forms and ceremonies of religion is not absolute guarantee that such an one is genuinely religious. Wolves have come, and do come, in sheep's clothing. Men can pretend at religion, but not always. Sooner or later, men are found out. Their lives ultimately bear fruitage which is unmistakable. In the long run, a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, and vice versa, a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit. "By their fruits ye shall know them," said He who really knows. It must be said, however, that the large majority of ministers and Sunday School officers and teachers are good men and women. And the average Church member is trying to lead a good life. It is an unfair and untruthful criticism that brands all Church members as hypocrites and all ministers as lazy and inefficient.

The Golden Rule.

"Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." The ultimate purpose of law, and the emphasis of prophetic preaching, says Jesus, was to insure that action toward others that a man would want others to practice toward him. It is a very simple rule to be the summary of all the law-givers and all the prophets, but it contains all that they said and wrote. It is the solution to all of the world's problems. When men apply the so-called Golden Rule to all the relationships of life, the kingdom of God will have come. One of the most promising signs of the times is the fact that the world is beginning to take Jesus seriously at this point. Big business and even government have actually begun to interpret their problems in the light of this principle.

Life's Highways.

Life has two great highways—the broad way, the way of least resistance, the way that ultimately leads to destruction, and the narrow way, the way of struggle and effort that leads to life itself. Jesus solemnly warns men at this point. His religion is not primarily a mass movement. It is not always safe to go with the crowd. Straight, narrow, compressed is the way that leads to life. If any man's religion is giving him a sense of ease, and a minimum of effort, let him beware. The way to life is upgrade.

Saying—Hearing—Doing.

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." It is an easy and a cheap thing to profess allegiance to Jesus. It is not at all difficult to give Him lip-service. But Jesus suggests that in the final day when all stand before Him there will be those who have been speaking all the time in His name who will be cut off from Him because they had not had His spirit, nor obeyed His voice.

"Whosoever heareth these words of mine and doeth them not." It is not the most deadly, dull and unprofitable thing in the world to attend services of worship and to listen to sermons as some would have us to believe. But the end of services of worship and of preaching is not to entertain people. Sermons should have objects as well as subjects. And people who attend services should practice service. Religion never comes into its own until hearers become doers. Nor will happiness ever come until we try to do the things we hear and know. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." There is a disturbing recurrence of the emphasis on doing in Jesus' teaching that has tremendous significance for those of us who call Him Lord.

Asking—Seeking—Finding.

Religion has its active side. God rewards diligence here as elsewhere. There must be persistence in spiritual quests as in other things. And we can be sure of one thing—God is more eager to give us good things than we are zealous in seeking them. "We have not because we ask not," or because we ask amiss.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, February 9, 1930.

Topic: "Ways of Studying the Bible."—2 Tim. 3:14-17, 2:15.

Some Bible Hints.

Stick to the Bible. It is more important to study it than to study other religions (v. 14).

We have known the Bible since childhood, but we need a fuller and deeper understanding of it than we have (v. 15).

The Bible is shown to be inspired because it inspires us as no other book does. It is profitable to lift and cleanse the moral life (v. 16).

The Bible is not a textbook of science, but a spiritual light and revelation of God and of the way of life (2 Tim. 2:15).

Suggestive Thoughts.

The simplest way to begin the study of the Bible is to read it. Read the New Testament books, one at a time, again and again. In this way get acquainted with them.

After mastering the contents of the Bible, book by book, study it slowly, using a good commentary. But do not forget to practice the truths you learn.

Study the Bible prayerfully. It is far more than literature. It is a revelation of God. Seek to read it with spiritual understanding.

The Bible may be studied as literature, but that will not feed the soul. Only as we seek in it the bread of life are we fed and satisfied.

A Few Illustrations.

Food must not merely be eaten, it must be digested and become part of ourselves. So the Bible must be mulled over and practiced.

Study the biographies of Bible characters. They are real people, with serious faults as well as great virtues. They are warnings as well as examples.

Do not worry over Bible difficulties. Leave them for later consideration. You do not refuse to eat meat because you come upon bones and inedible sinew.

Bible study calls for application. Knowledge is a slow growth. No science can be mastered in a few weeks. The Bible is like a bottomless sea, as all true science is.

To Think About.

What good do we get out of Bible study?

What system of Bible study or reading do you follow?

How might our Church help our Bible study?

NEWS NOTES.

January 26th to February 2nd is "Christian Endeavor Week." Christian Endeavor Societies in most of our Churches will plan a special program for February 2nd, which is the forty-ninth anniversary of the beginning of Christian Endeavor. Many societies will use this time as a "check-up" time to find out if their society is rendering the service that it should render.

During the month of February, Christian Endeavor topics will be based on the theme, "The Bible." This period is intended for a month of real Bible study. A study of the epistles of the New Testament by the society as a whole has been suggested.

The idea of Bible study in Christian Endeavor Societies is not exactly a new one. Some societies have already done some Bible study. For instance, one of our senior Christian Endeavor societies conducted a very successful Bible study last year, furnishing questions and comments with each weekly assignment. This society read the entire Bible. This year they are at the job again, and they have some friends reading with them. For this year there is a total of about 170 members of the society and friends reading the Bible. The superintendent of that society is largely responsible for the promotion of this good piece of work, and he says that the Bible study during last year and this year has been a real blessing to the society. There are but two freedoms: the false, where a man is free to do what he likes; the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.—Charles Kingsley.

A YEAR OF NOTABLE ANNIVERSARIES.

These are the days of great anniversaries, and each anniversary becomes a landmark in the progressive development of our American civilization. We have at once the tenth anniversary of the League of Nations and the tenth anniversary of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, both the cause of permanent world-wide peace among the nations and the cause of temperance and righteousness in our own country, have risen to heights of great importance in the minds of the nation and in the minds of the world.

This factor is all the more significant because the enemies of national prohibition and the enemies of international peace have become suddenly active and belligerent to an unusual degree. In America we have the anomalous situation of a real conflict between the foreign element of our American cities and the unquestioned sentiment of a vast majority of the American-born citizens of the republic; and these foreign elements are not belligerent on their own behalf, except in so far as personal appetite momentarily overcomes the sentiment of obedience to the laws of our country. But these foreign elements of the cities along the Atlantic seaboard, and in the cities bordering the Great Lakes are the constituency of widely circulated newspapers who find it to their own personal interest and profit to champion the cause of the vanishing liquor traffic, being at once unmindful of the sovereign sacredness of constitutional law and unmindful of the universally recognized evils of the traffic which they are striving to re-establish over against the homes and schools of their own country.

The real truth of the matter is, however, that the passionate outcry of these metropolitan papers is a despairing cry, uttered with a last lingering hope that the outcry in itself may strike panic to the hearts of the timid in the armies of righteousness. The proprietors of these papers, which constitute, at least constructively, an organized sedition against the constitutional government of our country, are keenly alive to the fact that their cause is not only in a hopeless minority, both among the people and in the two houses of our national Congress, but that this minority is continuously shrinking, while the vast majority of supporters of national prohibition is constantly growing. They also know perfectly well that the intellectuals of America, in every zone of our civilization, are always unanimously in favor of the eighteenth amendment and are insistently anxious for the more efficient enforcement of the law.

There have been certain manifestations among the liquor dealers of the past which become in themselves eloquent defenders of national prohibition. In the city of Chicago, and in other of our great centers of population, it was a usual circumstance that the saloonkeeper moved his own family into some part of the city which enjoyed local prohibition. In other words, they despised the very business in which they were engaged, and possessed such a degree of paternal sentiment that they did not permit their own children to grow up in the environment of the saloon. The impulse which led to this discriminating wisdom was certainly noble indeed, and it only required the broadening of this noble sentiment to lead these masters and servants of the business to desire its utter banishment from the arena of our civilization. And thousands and tens of thousands of men, formerly pursuing the business, are happy beyond expression in their emancipation from its thraldom, and have become earnest and enthusiastic supporters of the eighteenth amendment and of the Volstead act.

What we still need in America for the final triumph of law and order, and the final establishment of prohibition on sure foundations in every quarter of our great cities, is simply honest and righteous government in every department. We are not indulging in an outcry against foreigners in Amercia, for once upon a time all Americans were foreigners; but we do protest on behalf of the homes and schools of America against the surrender of law-making departments of our country to a minority, whose hearts are totally alien to the ideals of the republic to the higher principles and purposes of our Christian civilization.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

ORATORY CHAIR TO BE DEDICATED.

Formal dedication of the Depew chair of oratory in the George Washington University will take place January 24th, it was recently announced by President Cloyd Heck Marvin. The chair was endowed by Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew in memory of her husband, the famous orator. The gift has made possible the establishment of a department of public speaking which offers courses in all branches of public speaking, with especial attention to the training of government officials, business and professional men.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE DRAG CHAIN.

"Pour out your heart before Him."—Psa. 62: 1-8.

In some places, as in the District of Columbia, trucks that haul gasoline are required by law to have chains dragging on the ground behind them. The reason is that the movement of the gasoline in the tank and the friction of the brakes and other causes produce statis electricity, and a spark of that electricity might set fire to the gasoline, producing a terrible explosion. The chains dragging on the ground is supposed to conduct the electricity away.

In similar fashion, every human being is likely to generate electricity as he moves through life. We must move swiftly nowadays. There is much friction within our complicated activities, and where they impinge on the activities of others, electricity is sure to form. Sometimes we are heavily charged with it. Any one who approaches is likely to get a shock of irritation. Often we explode in a fit of anger.

We are in sad and continual need of drag-chains to conduct away this disagreeable and dangerous electricity, and every one of us should be thus provided. By this time, you have guessed what the drag-chain is, the means of drawing away our passion and crossness and worry and irritation and leaving us calm and confident and loving. It is the golden chain of prayer that binds us to the throne of God.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thou hast given us the endless resources of prayer. May we make the fullest and best use of it, in the Spirit of our Master and Saviour. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE REMNANTS OF GOODNESS.

"A bruised reed will He not break, and a dimly burning wick will He not quench."—Isa. 42: 1-9.

Isaiah pictures for us God who will cherish and make the most of all expiring remains of goodness in us. We may have bruised the reed of our goodness, but He will not break it in His despair and throw it away; on the contrary, He will bind it up and strengthen it. We may have let the lamp of our goodness die down till the wick shows only a flickering red flame, about to go out; but He will shelter it with His hand, He will pour new oil into the lamp, He will trim the wick, He will nurse it back to a bright shining again, if we will let Him. Some of the best work ever done in the world has been done by men like John B. Gough, a drunkard, whom the patient Saviour would not give up to the gutter.

And if the Lord will not despair of us, why should we despair of ourselves? Never say die to the goodness within you. If the banner of your high ideals lies trampled in the dust, pick it up and step forward. With God's help it will yet fly in the van of a victorious legion.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, Thou hast been tempted in all ways as we are tempted, and Thou dust know the devil's urgings to give up. Help us to defy him with new courage. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A TIP FOR PREACHERS.

"Let me not, I pray you, respect any man's person; neither will I give flattering titles unto any man."—Job 32:20, 33:7.

Once an English clergyman volunteered to conduct the service in a distant chapel, and as the rain was pouring on the appointed day, he hired a cab to take him across country. Arrived at the little Church, he found no one there, not even the sexton, so he himself rang the bell, leaving the cabby outside in the cab. At last a solitary individual appeared and sat in a pew near the door, so the clergyman went through the service; but when it came time for the sermon he said he would omit it, as there was only one person in the congregation.

"Oh, no, sir," came from the pew; "please go on with the sermon." When the preacher was half through his discourse, he expressed the fear that his audience was tired. "Not at all, sir," came from the pew. "I would gladly listen to you for hours." So the preacher extended his sermon to an hour, and finally concluded the service. When the clergyman came down from the pulpit to shake hands with his flattering auditor, he discovered—what his near-sightedness had prevented his perceiving before—that the solitary listener was the cabman, who was charging him for the use of his vehicle at a goodly sum an hour!

The clergyman received a pointed lesson in the worthlessness of flattery, a lesson we all need. We are not to be cynical, and set down all words of praise as empty lies. We are not to be suspicious of all kind commendations. But we must learn to conduct our lives quite apart from the praise of men, looking only to the favor of God. If our heart tells us that we have His "Well done," let that suffice us.

Prayer.—Dear Jesus, make us independent of all praise but Thine, and of that praise we know ourselves to be all unworthy. Our Father, who art in heaven, etc. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"EVEN AS GOD."

"Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you."—Eph. 4:25-32.

Paul is very bold in setting up God's forgiveness as the measure of ours. How can we ever approach, still less equal, this divine quality? But Paul commands us to, as directed by the Holy Spirit.

That noble Christian poet, Christina G. Rossetti, once wrote an exquisite two-stanza poem:

"My God! my God! have mercy on my sin,
For it is great; and if I should begin
To tell it all, the day would be too small
To tell it in.

"My God! Thou wilt have mercy on my sin
For Thy love's sake; yea, if I should begin
To tell this all, the day would be too small
To tell it in."

Our sin abounds, but God's grace superabounds. Our forgiveness is frail, but God's forgiveness makes amends for our weakness. Yes, God can even lift up our forgiveness to His own divine measure of love and mercy, and will do so, if we ask Him.

Prayer.—Jesus, our Redeemer, pardon the hardness of our hearts. Wherein we lack in mercy, make amends by Thy mercy. If we lack in love, fill out the lack with Thy love. We beg in Thy glorious name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FREEDOM BY SURRENDERING FREEDOM.

"As free, and not using your freedom for a cloak of wickedness, but as bondservants of God." —1 Peter 2:11-17.

God gives us our freedom, but rejoice when we find our highest freedom in serving Him. When we take our freedom in our hands and go over to the service of Satan, we lose our freedom and become slaves indeed. When we take our freedom and gladly lay it at the feet of our crucified Saviour, we take it up again glorified and enlarged. We then have the liberty wherein Christ makes us free, and He alone.

"As soon as man, by an act of the highest freedom, surrenders and lays aside his personal, individual freedom and independence, he becomes a partaker of the only true Being, the Divine, and all the blessedness that is contained therein."—J. G. Fichte.

Prayer.—Divine Father, we pray Thee to guide us into Thy freedom, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE LEGACY OF FRIENDS.

"Thine own friend, and thy father's friend, forsake not."—Prov. 27:7-12.

The will of Justice Lamar, of the United States Supreme Court, contained these striking and memorable sentences: "My friendships, many and precious, I leave to my family, in the hope that they will be cherished and continued. I know of no enemies, but if such hereafter unhappily arise, let them be forgotten."

That is the best bequest that parents can leave to their children—a goodly number of precious friendships. They will be a refuge in time of trouble, they will surround one's home with loving memories, and every such friendship continued will be the perpetuation of the lives of the dear father and mother.

So that the making of friendships, blessed as it is for one's self, is equally blessed for those that come after one. And, we may be certain, the friendships will not end with this world, either for our children or for us, but will be extended into the next world, and will last through a happy eternity.

Prayer.—Our Friend of friends, teach us the meaning of friendship. Admit us to Thy friendship, and there may we meet all our friends. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE ONE STRING.

"Not moved away from the hope of the gospel." —Col. 1:9-23.

There is a famous painting of "Hope," by G. F. Watts. The artist represents "Hope" as a woman sitting above the world. Her head is bowed, and she is playing on a harp, all of whose strings are broken except one.

It is a faithful picture of what Hope does for mankind. The harp of life may be almost a wreck. Nearly every one would throw it away and give up life as a bad job. But Hope never gives up. When affairs are darkest, she wears a glorious smile. She makes the most of what she has. A harp with only one string remaining will suffice her, and from it she will draw entrancing strains.

But Paul speaks of "the hope of the gospel." That is a hope far above all that the world can

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

As the weather gets better and people can get out to Church, we hope that the collections for the Orphanage will be larger. Our Orphanage family generally has from one hundred and ten to one hundred and twenty, and the per capita cost per child last year was 66 cents per day. This includes food, clothing, schooling and overhead expenses; in fact, all the expenses except new land or new buildings are included in this cost. When the income runs short, we cannot cut the expense account from the fact the children eat food and wear clothes every day. The helpers have to be paid because their work goes on every day. We want to appeal to all the Sunday Schools to feel an interest in the little children at the Orphanage, and make it a point to do something to help them.

A good lady visited the Orphanage last week and looked it over. When she was ready to leave, she said to me, "If our people would only visit the Orphanage and see what it is really doing for the fatherless and motherless children, they would want to give to help it in its work. We find this is true. We have noticed time and again when people visit the Orphanage and see what it is trying to do for little children, they become interested and are glad to help us by their contributions.

The work is more worthy because of the fact that the Orphanage takes and trains children who are helpless in most cases and gives them an opportunity to make good. It is a real joy to those who work here from day to day and year after year to see some child who came here when a little, helpless tot develop into a splendid young man or woman, as the case may be, and hold some responsible position of service to mankind.

A well person needs no physician. It is the sick, the afflicted, the lame, the blind who need assistance of a physician. People in good financial circumstances need no help. They can help themselves. It is the poor and the needy, the fatherless and the motherless, the homeless and the helpless who are looking to those who have plenty to aid them in their misfortune.

I am pleading for the orphan child because it needs your love and your sympathy, your prayers and your contributions.

furnish. It is magnificent to hope on and on in the face of despair, and but few can do it unaided. Most of us give up, break the one string that is left, and throw the harp away.

When human hope fails, the hope of the gospel does not fail. That hope brings all the heavens to the aid of the earth. That hope conquers despair. That hope substitutes for the deepest gloom the ever-shining light. For that hope of the gospel is Jesus Christ!

MAKING MEN OF THE CHURCH POWERFUL.

Men of our Church want to be powerful. They want to be willing, energetic, practical workers. That bunch of fellows who so often sit huddled together like a flock of storm-beaten sheep, manifesting an attitude of unconcern, unrest, hopelessness, and wretchedness is a common sight to us all. We can almost hear them think, "Well, what are we good for, and why are we here?" They are conscious of the lack of personality, ability, and achievement in their lives.

How can men become powerful? Hamlet, fired with a sense of obligation to his father's spirit, thundered to his captors, "Unhand me, gentlemen; by heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that holds me. I say, away!" And, "It calls me still, Go on, I'll follow thee." An enraged beast of a barnyard charged at a boy who, in his efforts to escape danger, broke all his former speed records, leaped across a wide ditch, cleared a high barbed-wire fence, and never got a scratch. One who knew he could not stand became thrilled by the excitement of a baseball game and he stood. Soldier boys during the World War multiplied the world's miracles in physical endurance and moral bravery. A mother did the impossible by not sleeping for days to keep a sick child from dying. Jesus Christ "steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem."

All these illustrations have one thing in common. One idea of great worth had seized the mind; it had become the impelling motive. When a condition like that exists, men become powerful beyond their own recognition. "Strong reason makes strong action." Being possessed with a great sense of duty, men become energetic; they seek to find a method of accomplishment; their initiative ventures and their courage becomes bold. In every case it takes the power of an idea to make men powerful.

A leader's task in the Church is to make the men heroic and intelligent followers. The very thought of that is enough to endow a leader with power. Our men will become interested, energetic, and seek to become capable whenever the idea of human brotherhood and partnership with God in making a good world takes hold of them. Perhaps this has been our frailty. We have not gotten the idea across. Four elements are worth considering:

First—the idea must be made pointed. Blunt ideas are like blunt spikes; it takes a lot of pounding to drive them in. The idea must be driven so deep it will pull the man. It must be made clear, which means that the nature of the men whom we wish to make powerful is of first concern. Somebody asked, "What is the best way to teach stewardship to men?" The answer is, make men want something until they will surrender their lives to get it.

Second—the duration of an idea. It takes time to make impressions. It takes time to be holy. It takes time to be powerful. Ideas do not drop into men's souls, or if they do drop in they are easily pulled out. Ideas that take possession of men through a long period of growth are the hardest to uproot—they are the abiding ones. A woodsman may drive a wedge into the trunk of a tree and pull it out with but little difficulty, but who ever heard of a woodsman trying to pull the main branch out of the trunk of a century-old oak? Get a big idea before the men of the Church and hold it there. Steer them above the insignificant. Jesus said, "Tarry ye." We do our men an injustice, and the kingdom a greater injustice by trying to crowd them into action too soon.

Third—the size of the idea. A little idea may be sharpened and driven deeply into men's lives, but men always act like the ideas that possess them. A twenty-two caliber bullet may have speed and it will cut hay, but he who has a broad field to harvest will get a machine that will cut a wide swath. Men who are moved to action by little bullet-like ideas and motives are narrow and dogmatic and quickly run their course. The Church that is holding its men and keeping them energetic has a heavy program of far-reaching importance.

Fourth—variety. Duration of attention and interest depends upon variety. Stability is the fruit of variety. Variety is the law of growth. Variety makes power. The same program or the same task may be viewed and approached from different angles. God's program for men should be both constant and variable, just as God Himself is both changeable and unchangeable, and therefore wholesome and dependable. The animal whose nature and instincts are most variable is capable of greatest intelligence and power. For this reason, man is the peer of animals. Therefore, any program for men must be capable of change to meet the needs of the ever-changing, aspiring men. Programs must bend themselves to meet men rather than having men bend themselves to meet a static program. Men are more important than programs.

How much are we willing to vary old dogmas, old creeds, old customs, old ceremonies for the sake of our men whose very souls rebel when they are asked to continue them unaltered just because the ages have made men heirs of them, but in which they have not been led to see practical values? Education is more than transmitted facts. So Christianity is more than mere empty vehicles or vessels of the past. It is not good logic to conclude that a man is carrying refreshing water just because he happens to be carrying "the old oaken bucket."—Rev. Raymond G. Clark, in Herald of Gospel Liberty.

NO TRUCE WITH THIS.

It has been our opinion for many years, perhaps as long as we have taken notice of the question, that there is not that there cannot be a conflict between science and Christianity. There could be a conflict between the theology of Christianity and the philosophy of science, but the realities themselves could not be in conflict. When the full idea of Christianity is set forth we shall see that it embraces science.

Prof. Kirtley F. Mather, of Harvard, however, speaking in Chicago to 500 ministers on the theme "Science in Search of God," declared that the battle between science and religion (he did not say Christianity, which is a very different thing) are rapidly approaching a truce. Among other things, he is reported to have said:

"I don't see anything necessarily supernatural in the origin of man. It is perfectly logical to me that out of the inorganic things of the world emerged conscious living beings, and that out of the conscious living beings only yesterday in the geologic sense, emerged self-conscious man."

He defined his personal belief in God as embodying "not a person, but some qualities of personality."

We confidently say, and on this ground we take our own stand, that there will never be a truce between Christianity and such statements as these. Man is of supernatural origin. He is the creation of God. We shall fight unbelief and every form of thought which denies personality to God; that is, which really denies God, for He is a person or He is nothing.

But to say this is not to say that we are fighting science, because the greatest scientists today are among the greatest Christians. We have but to mention the name of Prof. Arthur Stanley Eddington, F. R. S., University of Cambridge, who said, "It is I think of the very essence of the unseen world that the conception of personality should dominate it."

Prof. R. A. Millikan and Michael Pupin certainly do not seem to feel that it is unscientific to call the name of "God" nor un-Christian to believe in the orderly procedure of all things according to law. But we shall make no truce with a science that denies man divine origin and tries to put God out of his own universe.—Ex.

LIGHT BEYOND THE CLOUDS.

There may be those who are standing in the shadow of great afflictions—loss of property, the death of loved ones, the coldness of poverty, loss of health, broken friendships—who feel that this era "of peace on earth and good will to men" must of necessity be sad. But to grasp really and experimentally the religion of Jesus Christ will undoubtedly bring gladness, despite such experiences.

The supreme question is to have experience of God's presence. Assure one of that and everything else is made right for him. If we seek Him we shall find Him, for He also is seeking for us. Where love is, God is. "If a man loves me," said the Master, "he will keep my word: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him."

Those who know God should teach those who do not know. A man who carries the torch of God in his soul will light the way for others. Human kindness is a glory kindled in the world by the power of God's goodness. Room in our love will teach others the roominess of God's love. That is the light beyond the shadows.—Christian-Evangelist.

THE ELON PLANT.

Years ago Dr. Robt. L. Kelly declared he had never seen a more complete small college plant than the one that houses Elon. He has now asked for exterior and interior views of its auditorium, selecting this beautiful and inspiring place as one among fifty outstanding college buildings of its kind in America. These views, with accompanying descriptive material, will shortly appear in the Bulletin of the Association of American Colleges.

Another very appreciative word has just come to us from State College, Pennsylvania. A graduate student in that institution who has been devoting himself to college architecture, writes that he has selected the five buildings of Elon's administrative group as an ideal group of college buildings. He will give them full and ample illustration in his thesis.

But the chief value of these buildings is not that competent critics approve them, but that students live among them, and by their beauty are inspired to strive for the good, the true, the beautiful in life and in thought. W. A. H.

OBITUARIES.

BARLEY.

Mrs. Betty Elizabeth Bailey was born March 10, 1867, and departed this life December 27, 1929; age 62 years, 9 months, and 17 days. She was married to John W. Still in 1882, who died in 1886. Eight years later she married Henry H. Bailey. Two children were born to the former husband and three to the latter.

Sister Bailey was a loyal member of Bethany Christian Church and a true Christian indeed, and will be greatly missed. In spite of bad roads and disagreeable weather, there was a host of people present as an evidence of the high esteem in which he was held. Services were conducted by the writer at Paran Baptist Church, near her home, and interment was in Paran Cemetery.

May the bereaved ones find very great comfort in the thought that there is a time coming when there shall be no more death, neither sorrow.

BETTER THAN BAD CITIZENS!

It is of course better for any city to be governed by good strangers, rather than by bad citizens! But the sole responsibility for American cities rests with America; and it is therefore a political blunder and moral absurdity to surrender any American city to alien control or to alien ideals. The whole civilized world will hold us accountable for the social and moral destiny of our cities, and for their international influence; and the one natural and providential evolution of the American city is to make it the full-blown flower of our American civilization, even as old Karnac was the native flower of Egypt, and ancient Rome the native flower of Italy, and old Babylon the native flower of Persia; even as London is the native flower of England; even as every land represented in this great assembly has its social and moral harvest in its great cities. And if the thorns of our civilization appear also with the flowers, let us take the responsibility for these also, that we may know at once the fragrance and the pain of what we are doing here among the nations of the earth.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

GREAT EDUCATORS.—

The death of Dr. William Faunce, president-emeritus of Brown University, which occurred on January 31st, marks the passing of one of the country's great educators. Dr. Faunce was seventy-one years of age, and had served for thirty years as president of Brown University, having resigned that position less than a year ago. The man who rises to the highest rank in the educational profession must be possessed of unusual ability in many lines. There are men who win a place in the heart of their country by their service in the field of education, which is absolutely unique. It is hardly possible to analyze the influence of such men as was Dr. Faunce. Only the scholar can hope to achieve such a place, but scholarship alone cannot achieve such an influence. To fill such a position successfully requires executive ability in a marked degree, but such a man is far more than an executive. It requires rare ability and perfection of the qualities of mind heart and soul, each blended in just the proper proportion. If it is impossible to analyze such a character, it is likewise impossible to measure the influence which it exerts.

COMMUNICATION PAVES WAY.—

The world is investing high hopes in the outcome of the London conference on naval limitations. Whatever may be the results achieved, the conference will bring a step nearer the day when nations shall dwell together in peace and mutual helpfulness. It will be a grave misfortune if the conference should not arrive at some understanding which will reduce the armaments of the nations. But even should it fail in this, there will be other efforts backed by a more determined and a more understanding spirit that will bring results. For the nations are earnestly seeking a better basis for international relations, and will not stop unail such a basis is found.

To many of the radio listeners who heard the address of the King of England as he opened the conference, it was only a most interesting and novel experience. But the fact that American citizens can sit in their homes and hear the remarks of King George V as he opens an international conference in London, means that a new day has dawned. Civilization is possible only where there are quick and adequate means of communication and transportation. These are the factors that are bringing the entire world into one compact unity of interests. Thousands of radio listeners are daily hearing what is transpiring in London, and are thereby realizing as they could in no other way how vitally they are a part of what is going on. We no longer must needs be told by others, who can color and interpret the facts as they wish, what the world is doing. We may hear and interpret for ourselves. The world not only has its eye on London; its ears are there also.

THE CHURCH TREASURER.—

There is no individual connected with a modern Church organization who has a more important and a more thankless job than the treasurer. In a civilization that is primarily industrial and commercial, money is a most important, even an indispensable, article. This is as true of the Church as of any other organization. In most Churches, the treasurer is the one individual who is held responsible for the necessary funds with which to meet expenses.

He must be a man of strict integrity and promptness in his own business affairs if he is in any sense to measure up to what is expected of him. There can be no greater mistake from the Church's viewpoint, and no graver injustice to the individual than to elect some one who is a failure in his own financial undertakings to handle the funds of an organization. The fact that he has the habit and a sense of obligation to meet all indebtedness promptly is bound to cause him no end of worry if he does not have the funds with which to meet the expenses of the Church.

If he does not bestir himself in raising money promptly, he comes in for some severe criticism for not being as interested and as efficient as he ought to be. If he takes steps to keep the facts as to the financial situation of the Church before the congregation, some one is certain to raise objections to so much talk about money. If he adopts the methods of modern business and sends out statements systematically, it will not be long before somebody is disgruntled over being 'dunned" for their pledges to the Church. And if some one who has received a financial statement from the Church treasurer can find an error of a few cents in the records, listen for a howl that can be heard all over the neighborhood. For there are some Church members who keep no system of records as to what they pay to the Church, and who pay irregularly and never by check, who would back their memories against the most elaborate system of bookkeeping and the most exacting accountant to be found anywhere. Until all we Church members get a double portion of grace in our hearts, the Church treasurer must needs have the tact of a diplomat, the patience of Job, and a burning interest in the welfare of the Church if he keeps both his religion and his official position.

HALF CHRISTIANS.—

In Arnold Lunn's delightful biography of John Wesley we found the highly suggestive phrase "half Christians." The author used it to describe that large group to be found in every age and Church whose lives but imperfectly represent the things which they profess. Attention is called to the fact that it was Wesley's purpose to organize societies from which the half Christians should be eliminated; but he makes the point that in his later years Wesley learned to appreciate these half Christians which he had passed by in his youthful enthusiasm.

Wesley's attitude is not unusual. Both Churches and religious leaders are prone to disregard the half Christians until it is too late. If we correctly interpreted the meaning of the author by half Christians he meant those individuals who because of some weakness of the will or of moral fiber were unable to live up to the lofty ethics of Christianity.

We do not need to elaborate upon the meaning. The term carries conviction, or ought to, to our own individual hearts. As we look back over our past lives we can see that there was a time when our own lives were little better than half Christian; and it may be that future vision and a higher development of religious conscience shall make our present state of grace seem but little more than half Christian. Half Christians—they constitute both the weakness and the challenge of the Church of today.

It was this challenge that Dr. John R. Mott had in mind when he recently defined "the larger evangelism" which is needed in our day, "as making Christ known and loved and trusted and obeyed in all ranges of life by individuals and by society; and an intense passion to have Christ's kingdom widened, to call out the best in personality, to share with others, to be unselfish, and to give to others those things of Christianity that have helped us."

It is time that we should be thinking, praying, and planning for this larger evangelism. It is doubtful if there can be another great ingathering of those who are not now interested in and sympathetic toward the Church until much has been done toward bringing about this larger evangelism of which Dr. Mott spoke.

This larger evangelism is not so spectacular as the other type. It represents a gradual work of grace. It is what the Bible calls "growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." It is going to require infinite patience on the part of both preacher and people. It is going to demand a larger faith than we have been accustomed to exercise. I say a larger faith, because it seems to me that before we are equal to the task, we must not only have faith in the power of God, but we must also have faith in the possibilities of human nature. This present age is pitifully lacking in faith in human nature. Human nature standing alone is weak, but human nature quickened by the grace of God and led by the Spirit can make half Christians whole.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Sunday School orchestra of First Church, Richmond, Va., under the direction of Mr. Ernest G. Carr, will resume its Sunday evening musical programs on the 23rd of this month.

Rev. W. T. Meacham changes his address and place of residence from Wadley, Ala., to Roanoke, Ala. "I am happy in my new home," writes Bro. Meacham, "and my work is going nicely. Just recently organized a Woman's Missionary Society, and it is growing continually."

Why not do your Church and some friend a real favor by getting that friend to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN? THE CHRISTIAN SUN needs subscribers and renewals, and these should certainly be gladly forthcoming, since the paper gives itself unreservedly to the Church and to every enterprise and individual in the Church.

Bro. C. D. Johnston, circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, says that accounts are running behind, and the amount to pay the publisher is a long way on the wrong side of his ledger. Surely, there are enough loyal subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN to change this situation by sending in their renewal and by getting some who are not taking the paper to do so.

Bishop Beverly D. Tucker, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese, Southern Virginia, died at a Norfolk hospital on January 16th. Bishop Tucker was eighty-four years of age, and had served his Church and the Episcopacy through a period of long and active years. He was much esteemed by all communions. He is to be succeeded by the Rev. Arthur C. Thompson, Portsmouth, Va.

The editor of THE SUN wonders why more of our pastors who are helped so much in their field by THE CHRISTIAN SUN do not in turn do more for their paper, both by writing to it to make it more interesting and valuable, and by securing subscribers for it. Bro. Jonston, circulation manager, says he never felt more keenly than now the need of the active assistance of the pastors in helping to increase interest in and the income to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Miss Victoria Adams, one of our very efficient, loyal and consecrated missionaries in Porto Rico, sends her renewal to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, with these words of encouragement: "I have appreciated and enjoyed THE SUN to the fullest, and I am enclosing the amount of renewal to this faithful and inspirational friend. While the amount enclosed only covers six months' subscription, the other dollar will be mailed next week when I receive my salary." If our missionaries, living on meager salaries, can subscribe for and promptly renew their subscriptions to THE SUN, surely the thousands in the homeland, with better surroundings and salaries, can well follow the lead. Now is the time for all good CHRISTIAN SUN subscribers and friends to come to the relief of their paper.

By recent vote of First Congregational Church, Salisbury, N. C., that Church changes its constitution and name to become "The United (Congregational-Christian) Church, Salisbury, N. C." Rev. W. T. Scott, a graduate of Elon College, assistant pastor for a time to Dr. L. E. Smith, Christian Temple, a graduate of Yale and now pastor of Walnut Hills Christian Church, Dayton, has been called to the pastorate of our Salisbury Church and has accepted the call, and is to begin his work in Salisbury in April. The Congregationalists had thirty or more members with a substantial brick building, adequate Sunday School rooms, etc. (a parish house), with regular preaching and an active Sunday School. There are quite a few members of the Christian Church in Salisbury, and it is believed that under Bro. Scott's devoted and capable leadership a large congregation and membership will soon be built up at Salisbury. Bro. Scott will have a great opportunity as pastor and leader of the United Church, and those of us who know him feel that he is just the man for such a task. He is one of our very capable and competent young men, with an experience already that guarantees such success in any task of divine calling to which he devotes himself. Bro. Scott came from our Greensboro First Church, of which at present Dr. C. H. Rowland is pastor, and we of the South will be happy in welcoming him back to his home.

It is learned with regret that Hon. Samuel L. Adams, South Boston, Va., died Tuesday morning, the 21st of January. Mr. Adams lived at Elon College for several years, and he and his family made a host of friends while living here. It was through him and family that the Stanford orator's medal was established and is given to the member of the graduating class delivering the best oration on graduation day. The South Boston News, which carries the account of Mr. Adams' death, says: "Col. Adams was the scion of an old Virginia family. He married in early life Miss Alice Mitchell, daughter of Col. and Mrs. John A. Mitchell, of Alchie. Five children survive from this union—John, Philip, William, Gus and Mary. After the death of his first wife some years ago, Col. Adams married Miss Julia Crafton, sister of Mrs. W. B. Pettus, of South Boston. One child, who survives, blessed this union, Harry Flood Byrd Adams. Col. Adams had been for many years prominent in the Church and fraternal life of the county. He was, perhaps, the leading layman in the Halifax County Methodist Churches. His service in several high offices in the Sons of Confederate Veterans also brought him recognition, as did his untiring efforts toward the relief of veterans and their widows in securing for them pensions and other aid. At the time of his death, Col. Adams was serving his third term in the Virginia Legislature, where he had been an important factor, serving on some of that body's most important committees, notably that on general laws."

A WORD FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

When I receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week, the first thing I look for is the Orphanage report and Dr. Atkinson's report on missions. I am more interested in these two departments of service than any other of our Church, because they have to do with the bodies, minds and souls of men, women, and children.

In Dr. Johnston's last report for 1929 he gave as grand total $26,694.59. This lacked $3,305.41 of reaching the goal that so many of God's children with Dr. Johnston had been praying for. This shortage vividly brings to my mind a principle among the members of our Church that I have never been able to unravel: Why is it that the Orphanage, the most worthy institution we have to consider, should fail so deplorably to appeal to the very best there is in us as followers of the Lord Jesus Christ? We have in the Southern Christian Convention 227 Churches, and I suppose there are that number of Sunday Schools. If so, these schools ought to make the report $500 each week for the Orphanage. Each school would have to raise just $2.20 per week, or $8.80 per month, or every four weeks. Then every soul in every one of these Sunday Schools would be happier and richer in soul, mind, body and pocketbook. In the first week's report this year we had a good, pleasing amount brought forth—$528.41; but the next week there was a sad falling off—only $106.23.

Brother, sister, are you a member of a Sunday School? If you are, next Sunday broach the question of the Orphanage to your school; tell them of its needs and of the importance of getting busy in regards to helping to take care of the 120 little children there under the loving care of Mr. Johnston. Brethren, I want 999 of you to join me this year in giving ten dollars to the Orphanage. Then I want another 1,000 to join us in giving five dollars. That will make $15,000, or half the goal that has been asked for in the past.

Brother and sister, in our loving Master's service I am appealing to every one of you for Jesus' sake, and beseeching you not to throw this letter aside and never think of it again, but keep it and cherish it as you would a letter from your lover, and so meditate over its meaning that it will awaken and arouse the very best sentiments of your being and make you restless until you nobly respond to the pleading herein set forth.

As I write this epistle there is welling up in my heart and soul a prayer to God that this year may be the best that our Orphanage has ever known, and that Mr. Johnston may be able to take more little tots under his loving care and do a greater work than ever before.

VALLEY LETTER.

During these winter months I am trying, as my custom is, to stay in my study as much as I can. Of course, there are many duties that call me away from home, so that as the days go by I cannot see very much that I have done.

Newport and Timber Ridge have recently shown their appreciation of what little I can do for them by giving me an old-fashioned pounding. Other Churches have been doing the same thing, but in a different way—by administering smaller doses, but repeated much oftener, and without any particular organized plan. All these evidences of good will are very much appreciated by the entire Andes family.

When spring opens up, I shall have to get into revival meetings again. The Master's service affords me plenty to do at all seasons and in all kinds of weather. I am glad for it, however, and thankful for good health and powers of endurance, and what little ability I have to give to that service.

A. W. ANDES.

BELEWS CREEK.

This Church, during the past year, has been doing good work. The revival resulted in the addition of twenty members. Rev. O. D. Poythress assisted in the meeting. We are planning to build a new house of worship soon. The Church has already purchased some of the rough lumber for the building. The plan is to construct a brick-veneer building with auditorium and four Sunday School rooms, providing for young people's chapel and rooms in the basement. The Sunday School is doing good work and the congregations are fine when the weather is favorable for attendance. We held Memorial Day in the spring and "Home-Coming Day" in the fall. The attendance was good at both these services.

WHAT YOUR HANDS REVEAL.

BY W. J. THOMPSON.

"Behold my hands."—Luke 24-39.

A physiologist of the first rank(Dr. A. Keith) tells us "While many members of the lower orders surpass us in keenness of sight and hearing, in swiftness and strength, there is not one that possesses an instrument so perfect or so wonderful as the human hand."

Another tells us: "The human hand has been pronounced both in nerves and mechanism the most wonderful organ in the entire system, and it has the most intimate connection with the brain."

The development of this amazing and beautiful tool, made up of four fingers and a still more wonderful thumb, with its marvelous flexibility from the wrist and great power from the arm, is one of God's greatest gifts to the human race. It is wonderful enough for the ordinary man if he reflects on the part it plays in his life. But in the artist and sculptor and musician, what a miracle of ingenuity it can be!

There are those who insist that the hand is a key to character. It is interesting to read that, "people with large hands, as a rule, do very fine work, while people with small hands, as a rule, go in for larger things, and dislike detail in employment."

Also, "when the finger-nails are broader than they are long they indicate a pugnacious disposition, and a tendency to meddle with other people's business!" Whatever we may think of all this, it is beyond all question that we can establish the identity of an individual from the patterns made by the lines on the finger-tops. On the ends of your fingers there are forms made by the lines there that cannot be duplicated anywhere. Dr. Keith rightly declares: "Any one who has left his finger-prints has left an unmistakable signature behind him!"

It is also beyond dispute that the hand can express almost as much by its gestures as the lips can by speech. Long ago Quintillian pointed out: "Other parts of the body assist the speaker, but the hand speaks itself! By the hand we plead, promise, invoke, invite, dismiss, threaten and deprecate. By the hand we express fear, joy, grief, doubt, assent and penitence."

The Bible emphasizes the importance of the hands, and uses the symbolism of the hands when referring to character.

"Who shall ascend the hill of the Lord? He that hath clean hands." In Bible lands, hands stretched upward suggested prayer; hands smitten together suggested anger. To pour water on another's hands was to be his servant. To pour water on one's own hands was a declaration of innocence.

In Luke 24:39 we read: "Behold my hands."

Studying the most wonderful hands in history, we learn that they are—

Hands of Toil.

Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, declared: "All forms of labor which require physical strength are degrading."

Cicero, the Roman orator, affirmed that: "The workshop is incompatible with anything exalted." Yet the greatest figure in history entered a carpenter's shop and became the brother of all who labor.

"Our Master was a worker, with daily work to do,
And he who would be like Him must be a worker, too."

The man who is lazy will discover that the world is not running after him with invitations to any worth-while positions.

"Thank God every morning," said Charles Kingsley, "that you have something to do that day, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and contentment, and a hundred other virtues which the idle never know."

Dean Charles R. Brown tells us: "We have too many people who live without working, and we have altogether too many people who work without living." Susan Coolidge indicates the right view:

"We must buy and sell in the markets;
We must earn our daily bread.
But just in the doing these usual acts
May the soul be helped and fed.
It is not in keeping the day's work
And the day's prayer separate so,
But by mixing the prayer with the labor,
That the soul is taught to grow."

Long ago a great musician translated the blows of the blacksmith's hammer into music! And Christ translates our common toil into the music of heaven as we work together with Him and find the humblest source related to the highest joy.

This is the gospel of labor:
Ring it, ye bells of the kirk;
The Lord of Love came down from above
To live with the men who work.
"Behold my hands," says Jesus;
And looking again we see they are—

Hands of Tenderness.

In Mark 1:41 we read: "And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth His hands and touched him." Oh, the tender touch of those healing hands! In Mark 1:30 we are informed: "Peter's wife's mother lay sick of a fever. They told Jesus, and He came and took her by the hand, and immediately the fever left her."

"He touched her hand, and the fever left her!
He touched her hand, as He only can;
With the wondrous skill of the Great Physician,
And the tender touch of the Son of man!

"Whatever the fever, His touch can heal it!
Whatever the trouble, His hand can bless;
Whatever you need, you'll find Him ready
To touch with hands of tenderness!"

Dr. M. J. McLeod tells us that Sir Walter Scott was shy and sensitive as a boy, and even regarded as stupid at school. But one day he met Burns, who had read something Scott had written, and patting young Scott on the head, Burns exclaimed: "Ye'll be a man yet, ma laddie!" Walter Scott went home and wept for joy, feeling that nothing could hold him back since Burns had praised him. And that helped to shape his future. How true it is that—

"The kindly word, the friendly smile,
The helpful hand, make life worth while!"

Bishop Locke declares: "I come more and more to believe that if any person would be a good Christian, and a good American, he must first be a good Samaritan!"

Dr. George A. Gordon once said: "We need better business, and more of it; we need more knowledge, and we need a deeper appreciation of beauty; but, above all else, we need good will—good will that is not a mere fleeting mood among men, but one inspired by our nature as social beings, endorsed and supported by the Eternal Good Will." And all this we find in Him who said, "Behold my hands," for the hands of Christ are hands of Divine tenderness.

"Then, let us follow the Saviour's plan,
Love unstinted to every man!
May those who know us gladly say,
'He helps his brothers along life's way."

And now, in conclusion, as we look at the hands of our Lord, we see not only hands of toil and tenderness, but also—

Hands of Triumph.

"I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand" (John 10:29).

This gives us wonderful confidence and security. Dr. Daniel A. Poling tells how a grip saved him in Colorado. He was on a mountainside, and had ventured on a shelving rock, when he found himself sliding toward the brink of a precipice. His frantic efforts to stop only hurried his downward course to disaster. As he drew near the edge he saw a silvery stream among the rocks hundreds of feet below him. Just at that instant he observed a small pine tree nearby—the only one in five miles! In desperation, he flung out his hands and gripped it! It saved him from being dashed to death over the edge of the precipice.

Many can gratefully testify that in the hour of crisis, finding themselves slipping toward the brink of a terrible precipice, just one thing saved them from disaster—the grip of Christ! "Behold my hands," says Jesus. And obeying the Divine call, we see the hands of triumph. We hear Him say, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth"—power to save; power to keep, and power to bless forevermore!

"May you find rich blessing
As your soul understands
This message of the Saviour—
'Behold my hands.'"

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The drive for renewals and new subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN during the month of February is now on. We want to enlist the assistance of all our pastors in this campaign. We want to enlist every member of the Christian Church to assist them. Let us all do our best during the month of February to make THE SUN shine in more homes in the Southern Christian Convention.

First prize: A fifteen-dollar handbag is to be given to the pastor who sends in the largest list of new subscribers or renewals, provided he sends as many as thirty.

Second prize: A ten-dollar gold coin for the second largest list, provided he sends not less than twenty new subscribers or renewals.

Let every Church help its pastor to send in a large list. It will help him to win the prize. He will be happy to receive it. You will be happy because you made your pastor happy, and the circulation manager will be happy to get the subscriptions. We will all be happy!

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

"AMERICA'S GREATEST SIN."

Mr. Fred B. Smith, moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, delivered an address in Chicago Sunday night, January 19th, which attracted a great audience and was broadcast over a hook-up of radio stations throughout the country. His subject was "America's Greatest Sin." It was the writer's privilege to be one of the great audience present, looking up into the face of Mr. Smith, as he told what America's greatest sin is. His remarks were based on chapter 8 of Deuteronomy, which chapter, Mr. Smith declares, carries one of the most powerful orations that ever fell from the lips of man. He said that Moses, at the beginning of his ministry, claimed that he could not speak in public because of an impediment, but that this same Moses, in the hands of God, lived to deliver some of the mightiest and most moving orations ever uttered, and possibly the noblest of these were recorded in Deuteronomy 8.

Mr. Smith declared that the heart of that oration, and its subject, were found in verse 11 of Deuteronomy 8, which verse and which subject apply to our own time with even more emphasis than it applied to the time in which Moses lived. America's greatest sin, according to Mr. Smith, is the very sin against which Moses, with such eloquent voice and utterance, pled before the Jews to whom he was speaking.

Mr. Smith said that Moses' greatest fear was that Israel would forget God, and the greatest sin that besets America today is just that: "We Americans, rich in luxury, plenty and possessions, are forgetting God." "Yes," said Mr. Smith, "drunkenness is a great sin, and is to be deplored; the divorce evil is a crime rampant in society; gambling is a peril deadly in its practice and universality—but neither one of these, nor all of them together, constitute our greatest sin. The sin which we Americans stand in deadliest peril of is that of forgetting our God. The nations of the earth who have perished, with their civilization, through want and poverty, can all be named in a very short list, but the nations and civilizations which have perished through plenty, ease, comfort and riches are as the sands of the seashore and cannot be numbered. The greatest threat that stares our civilization in the face is not of want, poverty or need, but that of luxury, abundance, riches, which so easily help men forget their God.

There is some force to what Mr. Smith says when connected with the fact that, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research, the total income of the people of the United States has increased by the unbelievable sum of twenty-three billion, four hundred and seventy million dollars in the past ten years. While the wealth of our people has been piling up in such abundance, philanthropists have also increased, benevolences have multiplied, and charities have grown apace. But none of these have increased in any manner proportionate to the increase of wealth, comfort and luxury.

During the last two or three years the increase in our national wealth has piled up by the millions, and yet one cannot go to a Church board meeting, nor to a group who has the kingdom of God at heart but that he hears a plea for curtailment in output because of decreased income. Everywhere we are hearing that appropriations to missions must be cut off; that missionaries must be called home; that missionaries' salaries must be cut down; that missionary equipment must cease; that Christian educational institutions and enterprises are suffering for lack of funds—while at the same time, houses and places of amusement are crowded, and expenditures for luxuries and indulgences mount up and up.

No wonder William Adams Brown, in opening an address recently before a great audience, declared: "America is becoming pagan." Surely there were grounds for Mr. Fred B. Smith to stand upon when he said that "America's greatest sin is that of forgetting God, belief and faith in whom have made us what we are and gotten us our riches." J. O. A.

WAR LASTS A LONG TIME.

Maybe some day the nations will quit warring. War costs! In fact, getting mad and fighting, killing and destroying constitute about the biggest expense and the most inexcusable procedure of mankind. It costs to get mad and fight.

They tell us that Europe is still paying obligations entailed by Napoleon through his wars.

In 1846, President Polk of the United States called for troops to fight the Mexicans. Seventy thousand answered. Only last year the three last survivors of those troops passed off the scene of action. They remained on the pension roll of the nation to the day of their death. The Commissioner of Pensions of the United States, in a report recently made, points out that the last survivor of the Revolutionary War died in 1869, while the last of the men who fought with Andrew Jackson in the War of 1812 died in 1905; and while that war (of 1812) was ended 114 years ago, there are yet nine widows of soldiers of that conflict receiving pensions. The commissioner says further: "If history repeats itself, at least a quarter of a century will elapse before the death of the last survivor of the Civil War ('61-'65), and the twentieth century will be drawing to a close before the last widow of a soldier of that war will have passed away. Civil War veterans are now receiving in pensions well above fifty million dollars a year, and widows and minor children of veterans of that war receive pensions totaling $86,474,399. Spanish War veterans were paid last year by the government above sixty-five million dollars."

The commissioner's report makes interesting reading and gives occasion for meditation on the tragedy, the cost and the awfulness of war. A recent writer pointed out that in the brief period of our recent World War, the nations of Europe spent enough on that war to build a Church, and a school-house, too, within the reach of every man, woman and child on earth and still have a goodly sum left over.

All of this tells nothing of the cost in human life, the pain and the suffering, and anguish and agony entailed on the battlefield and in the hospital. Surely, man in his madness, and Satan at his worst passed beyond all rating and reckoning when they inflicted war among men.

Only the spirit and leadership of the Prince of Peace can abolish war, and as we exalt Him and live up to His ideals can we hope for this saving of treasure and lives which will enable the world to mount to higher planes of living and of activity. God hasten the day when the spirit of the Prince of Peace will prevail among men and will have put down war forever! J. O. A.

"A CREED FOR A UNITED CHURCH."

The Christian-Evangelist suggests editorially that if the Churches unite they must have a creed. And then the same paper points out the fact that Rev. J. H. Glover, out of far-away South Africa, said recently in an address that was broadcast far and wide: "I offer this as a new type of creed for a united Church: 'I believe that God was in Christ, that through faith in Christ I am brought into communion with God, and that I am bound to acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and to fulfill His will in my daily life. So help me God.' "

Then the Index further states that this would serve as a very good creed if the Bible itself had not offered a better one and a shorter, in these words (Matt. 16:16): "And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

It will be recalled that this is the creed on which our Lord Himself said He would build His Church. It is simple, it is safe, and it hath foundations. God, and not man, discovered the value of that creed and gave it to the world. Flesh and blood did not bring it to man, but the revelation of the Father. This is a considerable shortening of creeds, and statement of creeds, as the world undertakes to formulate them. The united Church could go a long way and face worse in trying to improve upon this creed.

And it was this creed that Paul believed in and explained with the following words (Col. 1:18): "And He is the Head of the body, the Church; who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things He might have the preeminence." If we put Christ first and foremost and keep Him there, and, with Simon Peter, say: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," we are not apt to go wrong, so far as a creed is concerned. J. O. A.

V. GENTLENESS.

Good manners would fairly define gentleness; though one interpretation of the word in this place is kindness or usefulness. Paul says to Titus, "To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness to all men"; and James says, "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without hypocracy and without partiality." Addressing servants, Peter says, "Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward." These passages indicate the pliant or yielding disposition. As one has said, "That considerateness for others, not urging one's own rights to the uttermost, but waiving a part, and thereby rectifying the injustices of justice."

The archetype of this grace is God, who presses not the strictness of His law against us as we deserve, though exacting the fullest payment for us from our divine surety. "If thou shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? but there is forgiveness that thou mayest be feared." Mildness is another meaning of this term, as used in the Bible. "But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherishes her children." That is mild in bearing the faults of others, even in reproving others: "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient."

The word may also embrace the idea of humility, as seen in David's thanksgiving psalm: "Thy hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleness hath made me great." (R. V.) "Thy condescension hath made me great." The humiliation of Christ among men has exalted man to the highest point of greatness; and Jesus said: "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Humility is a Christian grace, and when it dominates the life it works out greatness of character. The humblest character on the stage of action was Jesus, and yet He was the greatest of all. All great characters possess the grace of humility. Paul pleads with the Corinthians on this principle: "I beseech you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ"; and there could be no stronger plea. But, as said in the beginning, some interpret gentleness in this passage to mean kindness or usefulness; but good manners seems to be the divine meaning. Good manners may exist outwardly without the Spirit, but the disposition to exercise it toward inferiors, to be affable and courteous, easy to be entreated when others have wronged us, is a fruit of the Spirit. Christians should not be unfriendly, but mild, courteous, friendly, such as every one loves to consort with, who bear with others' faults, easy to give way to others, and can put up with the whims of others. Such a courteous, friendly person was Jesus Christ, as we see Him in the gospel. Christianity is not a system of sternness, rudeness, or devilishness. It is not a system that simply condemns what others say and do. It is not a solemn pose on the Sabbath, with set lips and fixed eyes, as if gazing into space, indifferent to the people. It is soft, easy manners, making one's presence a pleasure and his words a benediction. Religion recognizes the social element in man and the Spirit generates its right exercise through the grace of gentleness.

The cultivation of the social nature as a test of religion. Asceticism and monkey were deceptions. "It is not good for man to be alone," is as true in philosophy as it is in Scripture. Association is the law of love, and gentleness characterizes such association. They react on each other and develop sweetness of disposition and gentleness of manner. Coarse speech, harsh replies, and sharp words indicate a lack of breeding and of the Holy Spirit's presence. When Jesus "was reviled, He reviled not." His words contained dignity and kindness. His bearing was grace itself in any company.

Charity "doth not behave itself unseemly." Bad manners is never good religion. The profession of many is vitiated by sharpness, by rudeness, by an unpleasant disposition. The self-willed spirit is Satanic. That spirit made war in heaven, and it keeps up discord on earth. "In honor preferring one another," is the Christ-temper, the fruit of the Spirit. Such a spirit would sweeten domestic experiences, heal social discords, increase the influence of the Church, and convert and save social conditions ruined by artificial shams in ball rooms, billiard rooms, and drink rooms. Snappish, churlish, selfish professors, who exhibit no sweetness, never help others to be happy and useful, but keep people out of the Church. They are tombstones set to dead piety, monuments to all that is cold, sour, and repulsive in the Church. The Spirit takes all bitterness out of the social nature, and produces gentleness in the child of God.

All the arts and graces of artificial society cannot equal the genuine sweetness and gentleness generated in the heart by the Spirit and expressed by Christian kindness. Suavity rooted in love, working at all times in sincerity, gentle toward inferiors, respectful toward superiors, and courteous toward all, is manifestly the work of the Spirit. Gentleness bears the marks of Christ's own presence in the soul, and sings of peace, perfect peace, the gift of God.

As mother is gentle toward the child she loves, so God comes down in Christ to "Lead us gently home." Great physicians are gentle as women, and gentleness is one of the fruits of the Spirit. whittier's poem, "The Female Martyr," tells of a Sister of Charity, eighteen years ago, who lost her life during the prevalence of the Indian cholera in one of our Atlantic cities. In the stanza he says:

"For thou wast one in whom the light
Of Heaven's own love was kindled well,
Enduring with a martyr's might,
Through weary day and wakeful night,
Far more than words may tell:
Gentle and meek, and lowly, and unknown,
Thy mercies measured by thy God alone."

THE RURAL CHURCH.

In our denomination, the rural Church has held an important place from the beginning. Until recent years we have neglected our opportunity in the centers of population and have built only a small number of city Churches. For this reason, the rural Church has been and is yet an important unit in our denomination. It seems that many of our rural Churches might be better organized and accomplish more than is being done with the present methods of Church work. We are not under the present method, utilizing all our resources, in many of the Churches, for the simple reason that we are not using a systematic method of Church work.

Pastoral work is neglected in some fields for want of time on the part of the pastors. They are forced to engage in other work to supplement their small salaries, or think they must do so, and have little time to do more than visit the Church once a month and preach on Sunday. This small amount of service is not sufficient to enable the Church to grow and keep pace with the aggressive and progressive activities of other organizations, and the interest in Church work wanes. Churches would do well to increase the number of services when it is possible to do so, but this would entail an equal increase in financial support of the pastor.

Churches frequently have trouble in meeting their financial obligations largely because they fail to utilize their resources for want of system or efficient financial plans. There is no better plan than an every-member canvass at the beginning of each year to secure the co-operation of all the members of the Church in systematic contributions. Envelopes could be provided, and where the Church has only monthly services the contributions could be made on a monthly basis. This plan would secure small contributions at least from practically all the members, and would make all feel the responsibility for the financial support of the Church, and would be of great educational value by training the young from childhood to feel their financial obligations for the support of the kingdom.

The older people, as a rule, where system is not used, have most of the financial burden to carry, and frequently after they have done their part, at the close of the year they contribute again to make up the deficit rather than see their Church report to Conference in arrears. It is true that it is rather difficult to induce the older members of many of our rural Churches to change their customs in regard to financial matters simply because custom is more easily followed than any new plan, but in many cases a change of custom and the adoption of a financial policy that would be thought out by the best members of the Church together with the pastor, would result in greater things for the kingdom and have an educational value for the future growth of the Church.

In connection with the every-member canvass for the financial program, there should be a complete survey of the Church community in which a complete record of every individual in the Church community should be made. This survey should contain complete information as to age, time of conversion and uniting with the Church, the special kind of Church work for which each member is fitted, Church preference, Church affiliation, and, if not a member of the Church, any information of importance that might lead to the spiritual interest and salvation of the individual. With this survey, the pastor would have a complete understanding of his field of activity, responsibility, and pastoral service. With this survey, the field could be worked by the pastor and his co-workers, by the Sunday School superintendent and teachers with definiteness and successful results. It is true that such a survey will require work and time in the making, and more work, time and effort in working the field, but the results for the rural Church and the community, and more especially for the individuals, would justify the effort. ABOUT THE SUN AND PASTORS.

(The following is typical of many letters now coming in. So it is given without signature.—Ed. Sun.)

In your letter you have asked some pertinent questions. Also you have asked for frank, confidential replies. These replies are made without hesitancy.

So far as I am able to discover, the editorial policy of our paper is second to none; and, therefore, could not be the cause of its not being received in as whole-hearted manner, as should be. A great part of the trouble lies in the fact that many of the ministers pass the matter of securing subscriptions complacently by, never mentioning or urging upon the people the fact that they should be acquainted with the activities of the Church.

I rather suspect that many ministers, as is the case with myself, hold aloof from writing Church news because they wish to leave the space for their elders. They do this, I think, and patiently await the time when that which they have to say will be recognized as of worth because it came out of vast experience.

You are doing as well as any one could with the same support you are receiving.

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

A Pastor.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Hard times may be called financial sickness. The nation is laid up with that disease at the present time. Personal sickness is often caused by overeating; hard times by overdoing business. Prosperity cannot go on without interruption. Had there been no sickness there would be no doctors and no medicine. Hard times bring people to a new estimate of life and values. If prosperity went on uninterrupted, people would go wild and heartless. There is more heart in hard times than in prosperity. The cause of hard times may not be fully defined; but it makes people consider. It has been reported through the press that the present hard times was caused by the slump in the stock market; but that slump was caused by the bad conditions of business throughout the country. Business had gone to such credit extremes that it made speculation a crash. The nation was in debt. Chicago illustrates the situation in the whole country. The nation is in debt, and that caused financial sickness. The nation is on a bed of affliction and must take medicine. The psalmist said: "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept Thy word" (119:67). It is true in business. Before hard times the world goes astray in business; but when panic comes, men return to sane business.

What is the remedy for hard times? The recognition of God in human affairs is essential. He rules in heaven above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth. His providence is over all His works. That is the first step toward recovery. A proper consideration for others is a second remedy. No man lives to himself, and no man can be a good business man, much less a good Christian, unless he is willing to do unto others as he would have others do unto him. That is fundamental in human progress. It is essential to individual and social prosperity. We are members one of another, and co-operation unites men in business and religion. Moses set a good example for progress. He chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; and he led a nation to freedom and a land flowing with milk and honey. What this nation needs is the guidance of Him who says to the sea, "Thus far shalt thou come, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

A third remedy is for men to labor diligently, to be honest in the payment of debts, to live within their means, and to live peaceably with all men. Gambling is dishonest, and fortunes made in that way are misfortunes to individuals and society. Honesty is the best policy, and honest work and living within one's means will stabilize business, make stocks safe, and the nation prosperous. Speculation, gambling, extravagance in living, neglect of honest work, will produce panics, ruin credit, and make hard times; but the world needs such experiences to make men think and correct the evils of fast living. This is a time to learn a good lesson.

The colored sunsets and starry heavens, the beautiful mountains and the shining seas, the fragrant woods and the painted flowers, are not half so beautiful as a soul that is serving Jesus out of love in the wear and tear of common, unpoetic life.—Faber.

ELON LETTER.

The question of the relative value of the small college and the great university for educational and character-building purposes is a perpetual one. Just at this time the pendulum is swaying in the direction of the small college.

Harvard, the oldest university, and Yale, our next oldest, have embarked upon a program of small colleges within the larger institution. This is the practice of Oxford and Cambridge and has been from the beginning. A series of colleges do the work of education in three great English universities. The university looks after the library and the work of conferring degrees.

Yale and Harvard do not propose to have separate faculties for their smaller units, but dormitories in which instructors and students will room together, limited in number to 250. The university will employ a common faculty for all and carry on extracurricula activities, such as athletics for all. In these regards, the American plan will differ from the English.

The point is that our two oldest universities feel the sting of the criticism against their inefficiency, because of their largeness, and are planning to offset it by providing these smaller groups for mutual co-operation and closer living.

In this connection, an editorial from the Saturday Evening Post is straight to the point. This editorial reads as follows:

"It should never be forgotten that the small college, rather than the great university, is the backbone of higher education in the United States. In graduate, professional and highly specialized studies, the small college cannot compete with the great universities; but in laying the foundation of a liberal education, in forming character by benign human contacts, in fitting the student for life itself rather than the job that is but a part of life, the small college stands without a rival.

"Its very smallness encourages individuality rather than standardization. The human contacts are closer. Men play a larger and freer part. There is as much to be said for the simple life in education as in the world at large."

NEWS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

The most interesting news in time of warfare is from the firing line of battle. Victories inspire to greater activity, greater enthusiasm, finer morale, and more determination for a final triumph. In Church work, the activities, the successes, and the achievements of the local Church inspire to greater undertakings in every enterprise of the organization. News from the field reporting the progress of every part of our Zion enhearten and stimulate all the workers to new undertakings, and develop a consciousness of power in the entire brotherhood.

Nothing would inspire greater interest in our Church paper on the part of the constituency of the Church than flashes of news from all parts of our work. The ministers will become more interested because of their contributions, members of the Church will become more enthusiastic because of the report of their service and sacrifices, and subscriptions to the paper will multiply because of intimate interest in its vital contents. As the contributers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN multiply and report news from every part of our work, readers will become more numerous and subscribers will increase.

It is a fine thing to have scholarly editorials from a few excellent writers. They are needed to give tone, inspiration, and literary standing to our religious journalism. We need constant emphasis upon our general enterprises and institutions. The reading public is anxious to know what their contributions are doing for the promotion of missions, educations, the Orphanage, and Christian charity and benevolence, and no Church paper would fulfill its true place and missions without constantly keeping before the public the great objectives of the denomination. Such information is always informing, inspiring, uplifting and constitutes the best means for the development of sentiments of loyalty, devotion, and appreciation for our greater group undertakings.

The things of greatest interest, however, to the greatest number are the things that come into vital intimate touch with the spiritual life and needs of the individual. Our ministers would make a great contribution to the entire Church and all its enterprises by keeping before the entire Church through our Church paper all the interesting activities of their respective fields. Such information creates a sense of solidarity, a consciousness of group movement, a realization of denominational power, a familiarity with common problems, and a dynamic of the spiritual power of co-operation.

Monthly reports from all the pastors of the Southern Convention concerning the most vital things done in their fields during the month would create one of the most interesting departments of the Church paper, and the editor of the paper has requested me to conduct such a department and call for such reports from all the pastors. Who will assist in such an undertaking? This is a call for your reports and co-operation in creating such a department in the future. Reports should contain about two hundred and fifty words, as the space is limited and brevity is the spice of a good article and the soul of wit.

THE MEANING OF SUFFERING.

BY CHAPLAIN H. E. ROUNTREE, U. S. N.

My dear readers,—In presenting this subject to you, I am not so much concerned about being original as I am that you should know the truth about it and that your minds and souls should be illuminated in the meaning of sickness, suffering, sorrow and death, and the service which it renders our souls through life. This is a question which concerns everybody, and a lack of a knowledge of its mysteries drives many to doubt and some to atheism.

Therefore, if there is any light handed to me which will be a blessing to you, and make life's burdens lighter and fuller of meaning to you, I feel that God ordains that I should pass it on to you.

I am indebted to Prof. Bernard Iddings Bell, of Columbia University, in his discussion of "Dying and Yet Living," in his recent book on "Beyond Agnosticism," for this passage. His ideals and my own understandings and criticisms of them are ordered together here in an effort to make the applications more poignant and life-giving to lay readers. So much by acknowledgment and apology.

We all ought to know that Christianity means nothing to us unless it enables us to face with conviction and courage the realities and problems of every-day life. Every-day life brings to us two great problems which have in them the acid test of Christian experience. One is suffering and the other is death. Why do we have these? The question is asked universally, "If God is eternal

Father and loves us, why does He permit sin, sickness, suffering, sorrow and death? It is our purpose here to answer that to some extent and to determine what religious bearing these tragedies have on life and what should be our attitude toward them.

There is a lot of suffering in the world, and it seems that no one can offer anything to help it. It comes to the most pious of people, and it has no respect of persons. Man has discovered much that is paliative to it, but there is no cure for it. In the case of death, the greatest tragedy we have to face, man has been able to stay the hand of it and prolong life, but the fact remains unchanged that man must die. Even when life is prolonged, it is with a strain and disappointment, and a certain anxiety of failure seems to add to mental anguish. Love itself which endureth all things, never faileth, and is the greatest of all graces; the balm of all hearts and the throne of eternal life, has its tribulations. Even with it there are the haunting woes of loneliness and the yearnings of comradeship which one never adequately finds. They who love most may become homesick and forlorn, and may suffer the consequences of the errors and sins of those whom they most love. To many, if not to all, life is a composite of complex sorrows a part of which every one has to face at some time or other, and none of us escape the desire for an explanation.

In the outset, let it be understood that there is no explanation which takes us all the way. But it does occur to us that there is enough explanation to be illuminating, and, like a lantern by night which lights our path each step of the way through the darkness, by it we may find our way home. There must be enough to enable us to understand, to that extent we shall gain an attitude gratifying and contributory to our faith and the enlivening of our hopes, and the strengthening of our endurance.

The first explanation that offers itself is that which is the easiest one and the one which most folks take, especially young people; that is, ignore the question entirely; forget it, and take things as they come without bothering about them. We young people are virilent, healthful, hopeful and full of pep. Life to us is a dream of wonderful possibilities and successes. Experience has sifted into our hearts none of its problems, neither has it introduced the difficulties that are encountered when we launch out to make our way in life, seeking to make our dreams come true. It is probably well that it is so. It is good that youth is blind to the darker side. If it were not so, life would have a hopeless outlook. Many a one would never be able to bear the discouragement which would come as a consequence. There is no doubt that the biggest successes of life have been made because the challenging spirit knew no obstacles when he dreamed his dreams. Through sheer hopefulness and stick-to-itiveness, he won success in spite of obstacles. To be blind to troubles in youth, then, is no fault of our natures. God must have seen it all, and so ordained it. We may pause here to honor Him for it, and to thank Him that we do not have to stop to think of suffering and death. We would accomplish less if we did, and probably lose our good minds.

However much that this is true, we must recognize some facts about this tragedy that we may be somewhat prepared for the emergencies when they come. Whether younger or older, our insight into life and the knowledge we may draw from others, more experienced, teach us some things about them. One of these facts is that by removing the agonies of life from our thoughts there is a chance that our optimism may make the mistake of forgetting the meaning of them. For instance, when we picture life with flowers, minus all the heart-rending things; when the buoyancy of health and happiness takes us on down the stream merrily, we are apt to be so complacent about it that we leave some of the real problems out of our calculations and consequently are unprepared for the demands of the troubles when they come. We should be aware of these tendencies and their dangers. We should, before meeting troubles, know that there are such things, know how to meet them rightly, how to triumph over them securely, and fortify our souls with a preparation for the emergency with a dauntless spirit. Many a one goes down when lacking such a preparation. If this be true, it is quite unsatisfactory to ignore it.

There is another explanation which we often hear. It is heard in every walk of life. It is the brazen declaration that "there is no God." They say, "If God presides, if He is on the throne, how can there be so much suffering, misery, pain, sin and sorrow?" Can He be a loving Father and stand by and see and be satisfied? Many witness the misery and injustice of this world and feel that they themselves have a better heart than that. They say, "Surely God must care. And since He must know and does nothing about it, can it be that he is a God?" Without attempting to study the question and endeavoring to see through, they conclude that there is no God.

Let us think about it a little just here. To say that there is no God may explain the existence of pain and suffering, sin and misery. If that were all there is to life, we might let it drop at that. But there is another side of life which is far bigger than the miserable side, and that is the good side. What shall we do with all the goodness there is in the world? Think of all the goodness there has been throughout the history of mankind. Is it to be accounted for in anything else than in the existence of God? Think of all the good things in the future to which mankind aspires; can such an aspiration be accounted for in anything else than the promptings of a Supreme Being? We may not be able to explain why this is so, but is it not so just the same? To hasten to a conclusion that there is no God because of the ills of the world means to leave ourselves with nothing to live for. It makes life nothing but a floundering nightmare without a hope. It makes life one of misery and woe without a cause. It makes the ignoble better than the noble. It makes falsehood better than truth. It makes injustice better than justice. It makes dishonesty better than honesty. It makes misery better than happiness. It makes death better than life.

That is not true. Every one recognizes the realities of faith, truth, honesty, love, joy, peace, etc., and that these are as real as anything else there is in the world; and we cannot make such an admission without acknowledging that there is a God. It is "the fool who hath said in his heart, there is no God."

Whatever other explanations there may be, we will hasten to the most satisfying one; that is, Jesus. In all the promises of salvation, Jesus has never said that we should not have trouble. But amidst all the troubles He has promised to be present and, to them that love Him, to never forsake us. In all of His ministry He made it plain that He had a plan for an eternal kingdom and that He was dependent upon His people to carry that plan into fruition. In all His teachings He recognized the frailties of man, but He assured them that He had faith in them, and that He had endless patience and love for them to the end. He

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A MORNING PRAYER.

(February.)

O Loving Father, Thy guardianship is our security. Each morning Thou givest rest and revivification. Grant that, with the constancy of recurring light, our little "taper of desire" may burn and glow until at the light of Thy great fire it shall ignite into a glorious, consuming flame for Thee. Morning breaks, the soul awakes, May it be to a sense of service such as Jesus would have us render—a service of sacrificial living and surrendered will. As conscious, actual stewards of our Lord in the spirit of praise and exultation, O Holy Spirit, lead Thou us on. In Jesus' name. Amen.

POSSESSIONS.

We have not possessed our possessions. While the years of the Christian era have gone by, God has been waiting to be honored by the faith of a generation that would call upon Him for really large outpourings of His power. Our fault has been that we have limited God by the trifling dimensions of our undertakings, by our failure to appropriate more than a meager supply of the superhuman resources that are unlocked to the faith of human agents, and by our unreadiness to throw ourselves into the ministry of intercession in the world's behalf.

God has honored this generation as He has never honored a generation before. He has thrown dazzling opportunities before it. He has flung wide open for it the doors of access to all parts of His world and has laid at its feet every possible advantage and facility. Through the significant happenings of the recent years, through the break-up of the old civilizations, and even through the shock and the noise of the world's armed strife, His voice comes to us, "Remember ye not the former things, neither consider the things of old. Behold, I will do a new thing." "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations . . . I am with you." In His unerring wisdom, He has chosen our generation of Christians to face the responsibility of this decisvie hour in the development of His program for the world. Was ever a Christian generation trustee of an opportunity so great? The mystery of this confidence we can never understand. But we can and must act on it. We must prove worthy of it. And for this we must possess in fact what is ours by promise. We must supply the conditions whereby there may be communciated to us those living energies that are our only confidence for so overwhelming a task. If the Christian Church of this generation would by faith lay claim to those dynamic forces and by obedience open her life for their coming, nothing could resist the triumphant sweep of her campaign of love among the needy nations of the world."—"The Call of a World Task," by Montgomery.

GOD'S WAY IN MISSIONS.

God, and not man, is the Author of the missionary enterprise. Man never would have chosen and adopted the plan for missions that God chose and adopted. And had the plan been otherwise than of God, it would have been given up long ago. Think of the early missionaries going out and preaching, as many of them did, for as much as seven years before they could count a convert for each finger of one hand. But God's purposes and plans, though seemingly slow of movement, have a power that will not let them fail. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, of the Presbyterian Board, reminds us that—

"Only a handful of converts had been gathered when Carey, after forty years of toil, died in 1834. Twenty years later a missionary said that he had faith to believe that the time would come when a hundred converts would be baptized in a single year. Now we are told that three thousand a month are being baptized, that four million people told the government census-takers that they were Christians, and Stanley Jones says that 'Jesus is being naturalized in India in an amazing way.' When Dr. and Mrs. James C. Hepburn went to Japan in 1859, their only opportunity was to teach two little boys the English language. But one of those boys became prime minister of Japan and never ceased to honor the great missionary who molded his earlier years. Today there are 164,700 Christians in Japan."

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

The Woman's Missionary programs have been most interesting and helpful this year, and much praise is due our faithful and efficient Mrs. Alice Morrill, who gives us such wonderful helps and explanations in the Herald of Gospel Liberty magazine number to carry out these programs.

Follow these programs with the aid of the envelope of helps and Mrs. Morrill's suggestions and you will surely have a fine meeting.

The program for February is based on "Faith."

"What's done for God will never die."

Song.

Prayer.

Business.

1. Devotional period—The fifth pillar.

2. Current news is found everywhere in this month's magazine number of the Herald of Gospel Liberty.

3. Story, from "Friends From the Land of Cherry Blossoms."

4. Heart-to-heart message.

Young People's Society.

Purpose—To help us to a better appreciation of the best in other religions and in our own.

1. Special instrumental prelude (sacred).
2. Project committee report.
3. Leader's presentation.
4. Illustrations.
5. "Mohammedanism and Buddhism, and why I Prefer Christianity."
6. Discussion.
7. Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' name."

Scripture (Matt. 7:7-12; Matt. 7:16-20).

A prayer poem.

Sentence prayers.

One verse of "My Jesus, I Love Thee," sung softly as benediction.

"Lest we forget"—These programs are based on a small booklet, "Youth and the World Outlook," by J. L. Lobingin, and may be purchased for 35 cents from C. P. A., Dayton, Ohio.

Be sure to follow the articles by Mrs. Marian M. McCord on these programs for helpful suggestions.

Junior or Willing Workers.

Theme—"God's Other Children."

Song—"I Am so Glad that Our Father in Heaven."

Call to worship and prayer same as last month.

Song.

Prayer. Lead the Juniors in thinking of things for which they themselves will wish to thank God, or things for which they wish to pray.

Offering song—Tune: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Father, to Thy loving kindness
Never failing us we owe
Homes, and friends, and schools, and teachers,
All the pleasures that we know.
So if boys and girls are churchless,
Homeless, friendless, anywhere,
Use, O Lord, these gifts we bring Thee
For Thy needy children's care.

Since this is the month of preparation for the foreign mission offering, it would be well to be clear and convincing in your statements about the needs of and for the work. Use leaflets from foreign mission boards or from the Woman's Board (Mrs. Emma S. Powers), C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. If you are not using the book, "The Jewels the Giant Dropped," use some of the older mission study books. "Kin Chan and the Crab," "Our Japanese Friends," etc., have splendid Japanese stories, and "The Land of the Golden Man" or the home mission book, "Jumping Beans," deal with Spanish-speaking peoples in the Caribbeans and in America. "The Land of Cherry Blossoms," costing 10 cents, contains stories of our own missions in Japan. Continue the project suggested last month for the Philippines if studying that book. Or a similar picture map of Japan may be procured and used in the same way.

Closing song.

Miss Carrie Robison has some splendid suggestions in the Herald of Gospel Liberty this month. Read them. Encourage the boys and girls to join the wide-awake club which is found each month in the Herald.

This is not a program, but my, oh my! how we would love to have a news item to put in this department from your society. Tell others what you are doing, and maybe it will inspire some other society to try harder. Who will be first? Eastern Virginia societies send their notes to Mrs. J. M. Fix, Franklin, Va.; North Carolina societies send notes to Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, Elon College, N. C.; and Georgia and Alabama and Valley Virginia Conferences send directly to me if you do not have a Conference editor.

MRS. W. M. JAY,
Convention Editor.

NEWS NOTES.

One more important thing as to the programs for February. Of course, you have all been reading about the "World Day of Prayer" which will be observed this year on Friday, March 7th, and it will be necessary to make your arrangements for this service at your February meeting. The program was prepared largely by a young woman of Korea, and is called "That Jesus May be Lifted up." Copies may be secured from Mrs. Emma S. Powers, Dayton, Ohio, C. P. A. Building, for 2 cents each or $1.75 per 100. The "Call to Prayer" should be circulated in all Churches at once, and society members are urged to use the cycle for daily prayer. It may be secured free. There is also an attractive poster at 10 cents each, and seals at 25 cents per 100 or $1.75 per 1,000, which should be widely used in giving publicity to the day.

A very helpful service of consecration has been prepared, entitled "Looking Unto Jesus," which is fine to use as a preparatory service to the "World Day of Prayer" service. This is 10 cents.

Since we are observing the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost, wide use of the leaflet "The Birthday of the Church," by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, will help to inspire and aid the service.

This may be made a union affair with other denominations if preferable, and may be observed any time in the day.

Let us all join our hearts in a great chain of prayer when our main object will be to pray that Christ may be made known to the people of the world.

Well, here is a news item at last, and it comes from the Woman's and Young People's Societies of Hopewell Christian Church. They gave an interesting thankoffering service on a prayer-meeting night near Thanksgiving to a splendid crowd. Their pastor, Rev. J. W. Barrett, gave a missionary address, and a splendid service is reported as well as a splendid offering.

At Christmas time the Willing Workers dressed some dolls, which they sent with some clothing, etc., to the mountain work at Fancy Gap.

These societies are planning to do a greater work this year than last, and are working with a determination to win.

Stewardship Statistics.

The United Stewardship Council has gathered the stewardship statistics for 1929 from the twenty-five communions in the council. A copy will be furnished any one interested. Our per capita giving for denominational benevolences was $3.48, which is less than 1928, when we reported $3.78. This $3.48 places us number 16 in the list of twenty-five denominations. The per capita giving for that number of denominations for denominational benevolences was $6.72, so our $3.48 is but a trifle over one-half of the average giving to denominational benevolences. Our per capita giving for local congregational expenses (current expenses and buildings) was $10.62. In 1928 we reported $12.39. We are number 22 in the list of twenty-five. The average giving per capita in the twenty-five denominations for current expenses was $17.38. Our expenditures are less than two-thirds of the average. Our giving for all purposes in 1929 was $14.20 per capita, while in 1928 it was $18.11. The average per capita giving in the twenty-five denominations for all purposes was $22.04, while ours was only a little more than one-half of that—$14.20.

The Christians of our Church are capable of better things. God will hold us responsible for our accounting. We are capable of giving as much as the average Christians of the United States. We are not poorer than the average followers of Christ on all sides of us, yet we give but half as much for benevolences and half as much for local Church expenses as the average Christians of twenty-five denominations in the United States. This anniversary year of Pentecost should see us on our knees in penitence, and cause us to pour out our treasures on His altar. "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly." These statistics make the mightiest appeal possible for our pastors to begin a stewardship campaign. There is no other solution.

At Chicago.

Your secretary attended the Congregational midyear meeting at Chicago. It corresponds to our General Board meeting. There, one is right up against all the problems of the denomniational program. We spent all the time possible in the meeting with the State superintendents, where we were working out the plans of union down in the local communities. Those superintendents have that task in large manner and they are desirous of uniting our forces wherever possible. After discussing ways and means of bringing a complete union, they adopted the following resolution: "We have heard with pleasure the report of the Advisory Commission of the Congregational and Christian communion, charged with the responsibility of working out the details of the merger, and we hereby desire to express to them our purpose to assist the bringing of their plans to a speedy consummation."

NOTICE.

The Waverly District Missionary Rally will meet in April with the Christian Church at Dendron, Va., instead of the Hopewell Church, as we first printed. The exact date of the rally will be given later.

THE COMPASS OF PENTECOST.

Henry Van Dyke wrote a surpassingly attractive stanza on "The Compass of Life." It is to be admired and quoted:

Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-men sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and heaven securely.

There is also the compass of Pentecost—vastly larger, truer, and more wonderful. It is in Acts 2:42:

And they continued stedfastly:
In the apostles' teachng,
And in the fellowship,
In the breaking of bread,
And the prayers.

This is a vast, confusing universe, in which the light blinds and the darkness paralyzes us, but whoever guides his life by the Compass of Pentecost will never be lost.—Christian-Evangelist.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VII—February 16, 1930.

Jesus Healing and Helping.

Golden Text: "Himself took our infirmities, and bore our diseases."—Matt. 8:17.

Lesson: Matt. 8:1-9:34.

Devotional Reading: Isa. 35:3-10.

A gentleman was expecting a friend, but on account of illness he was unable to go to the station to meet him. He dispatched his servant to meet his friend, and when the servant asked him what he would look like or how he would know him, the gentleman said, "Look for a tall man, who will be helping somebody." That was perhaps the highest compliment that he could have paid his friend.

Now, that is perhaps the best way to describe the life and ministry of Jesus. He was a tall Man, so far above us in moral idealism and in qualities of character that we have only begun to realize his supremacy. He was the Perfect Man. He reached heights that it will take us an eternity to reach. In so many senses, He was a tall Man.

And yet, or perhaps it would be better to say, because of that fact, He was always helping somebody. His characterization of Himself was that He was among them as He that serveth, and He made this willingness to do humble and loving service not only a prerequisite for discipleship, but the ultimate test of greatness. Whosoever would be great according to the divine scale of values was to be the servant of others, was to go about doing good.

When one reads today's lesson in its entirety—the lesson includes all of chapter eight and nearly all of chapter nine—he sees something of the Master's readiness and ability to meet diverse and deep human needs. He sees why Peter, in summing up Jesus' life, said, "He went about doing good." Only a brief reference can be made to each of these incidents which are worthy of an entire lesson period.

The Leper Cleansed.

The man was in dire need. He came worshiping; he had a sense of reverence; he believed Jesus could heal him, but he was not sure that Jesus would heal him. Jesus had both the willingness and the power. He touched the man—there was always the personal interest—and He made the man act upon faith: He sent him to the priest for a bill of cleansing.

The Centurion's Servant Healed.

He was a soldier and a foreigner, but he had a sense of sympathy and the spirit of humaneness. He had faith in Jesus, a faith that exceeded the Jews, the chosen people. He was humble, he had a sense of unworthiness in the presence of the Master. His servant was restored, although Jesus did not go near him. Both of these instances shows Jesus' power over disease.

The Master's Power Over Natural Forces.

If one thinks clearly about the place of Jesus in history, and looks clearly at the portrait of Him as painted by the gospel writers, it is not hard to accept the account of the miracles. It was more than coincidence that the waves subsided and the wind ceased when Jesus spoke. It was an evidence of His power over physical forces. Spirit is ever master over physical forces.

The Master's Object Lesson on Value of Man.

There were two poor, mentally unbalanced, demon-possessed men in the country of the Gergesenes. They did not have much value in the eyes of the people living in that section. In fact, they would have liked to be rid of them. When the evil spirits left them, they entered into a herd of swine, which ran headlong down into the sea and were drowned. The people came out and besought Jesus that He might depart out of their coasts. There are many today who put material values ahead of human values.

Healing of Body and Peace of Spirit.

A man with the palsy, who had some faithful and full-of-faith friends, was brought before Jesus, who healed him of his bodily ailment. When the Pharisees criticised Jesus—He discerned their inner thoughts—He gave evidence of His power or authority on earth to forgive sins. There are many today who are more concerned with physical well-being than they are with soul health. The Church and Christians will do well to keep in mind also Jesus' words to the effect that they that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. Too much attention and too much effort is often spent on those who do not need it as much as those at hand who are sick morally and spiritually.

Jesus, the Great Discoverer.

"As He passed by He saw a man—others saw only a hated tax-collector—sitting at the receipt of custom; and He saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed Him." It was an unlikely place to find a man, and it was an unpromising piece of material from the human standpoint apparently. It was this fellow Matthew, however, who gave us the basis for the gospel according to Matthew. Jesus and life's unsuspected possibilities.

Jesus Healing and Helping.

And so it goes on, verse after verse, chapter after chapter. If He is not healing Peter's wife's mother He is healing the multitudes which are brought to Him. If He is not healing the woman with an issue of blood, He is giving His friendship to the publicans and sinners. He is always helping or healing and helping by healing.

Jesus and Death.

In the story of Jesus raising the daughter of the Ruler, there is promise and the assurance of Jesus' power over death. He is Life, and that Life is the Light and Life of men.

Increasing Moral and Spiritual Supremacy.

"And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land." And it is going increasingly abroad into all lands, and wherever it goes Jesus lives up to expectations.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, February 16, 1930.

Topic: "Lessons from John's First Epistle."

Below is given an outline for this Sunday night's Christian Endeavor program that some societies may find of use.

Prelude: "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah."

Hymn: "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus."

Prayer: "Father of mercies, in Thy Word what endless glory shines; forever be Thy name adored for these celestial lines. Divine Instructor, gracious Lord, be Thou forever near; teach me to love Thy sacred Word and view my Saviour there. Amen."—Anne Steel.

Prayer hymn: "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" (one stanza).

Scripture reading: 1 John 1:7-10, 3:1-3.

Leader's talk.

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Talks on the following subjects:

1. "The Historical Background of the First Epistle of John." (Material for this talk may be secured from your pastor if you do not have it in your own home.)

2. "The Teeahings of First John, and How They Compare with the Teachings of Jesus." (Read the book of First John. What is the outstanding idea of chapter 1? What is the key verse of chapter 1? Why do you think so?)

3. "Lessons of Love in the New Testament." (What quality among Christians does the author of 1 John stress? What other N. T. writer, or writers, stresses this quality? Read 1 John 2:1-17. What is the outstanding idea of this passage? What is the most important verse in the chapter?)

4. "Our Responsibilities." (What does the author of 1 John say is our duty toward our fellow-Christians? How do the rules which he lays down conform with our practice today? How do they differ? Read 1 John 2:1-17. Do we accept the main idea of this passage today? Really, do we? Do we live by it? What do you say?)

Prayer: "I would be learning, day by day, the lessons my Heavenly Father gives me in His Word; I would be quick to hear His lightest whisper, and prompt and glad to do the things I've heard." Amen.

Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee," or "Saviour, Thy Dying Love."

Mizpah benediction.

A poem that you may like to use:

A wondrous tree I find God's Word, and 'neath
it day by day
I take the fruit that gives me strength to bear me on life's way;
A stately tree so large and tall there's shelter, rest, and food for all.

A telescope I find God's Word; and, be skies dark or clear,
This trusty instrument reveals God and my Seviour dear,
While mirrored daily on my heart are splendors that can ne'er depart.

A treasure-house I find God's Word, with all its contents free;
And, reaching forth, I take, and say, "The Lord meant this for me."
And for my faith what joys are given, true peace and love and life and heaven!

I find God's Word a river deep, no ripple, yet a tide;
I launch my bark and glide away, my Svaiour's
e'er my guide;
And sweet the comfort, sweet the rest, while sailing toward the haven blest.

—Geo. Whitefield D'Vys.

"Never hesitate to promise large things to God, for thus you make God your Partner, and He will reward your trust."

LACK OF KNOWLEDGE.

Having desire to do our best for the youth as to right purity teaching, we have made research to learn somewhat as to existing conditions, and now we plead with parents, pastors, teachers and physicians to face conditions and then, by God's grace and help, to do their utmost for the safeguarding, body and soul of the rising generation.

There are hundreds of thousands of persons in every large nation who are infected more or less with the terrible plagues resulting from impure life. Many of these persons are innocent themselves, having by inheritance or otherwise been made to suffer. There are perhaps only two other ailments that cause more deaths than do the plagues mentioned; though not often thus mentioned, they weaken the body so that other diseases finish the work. Nothing, perhaps, causes loss of more souls than does immorality. The impure in heart, without deep repentance, cannot have a home with Christ. He demands, penitance, self-denial and faith. Then He will cleanse. Again He says: "Participate not in her sins, that you receive not of the plagues."

We are endeavoring to prepare for sake of the youth, by Christ's help, the best purity booklet yet published. Others may do still better later, we trust. We now are doing our best to give much-needed help not heretofore given. It will be of great value to teachers and careful readers. Our work is free, but paper and type cost something. The booklet can be obtained for less than 20 cents if the edition is not too small. We make no money profit. We all are responsible for the safeguarding of many.

Editors have a duty to help make known widely this work of love for humanity; parents, pastors and doctors should faithfully teach. They terprise, is to be merged with the Herald of Gos- who give to help publish may have booklets in return if they present their desire.

WORLD-WIDE PURITY LEGION.
Tenafly, N. J.

ANOTHER ADVENTURE IN UNION.

We have in America no recent achievement in the organic union of kindred Church bodies equal to the merger of the Presbyterians, the Methodists and the Congregationalists in Canada, and none approaching the great Presbyterian merger in Scotland. But a highly important series of negotiations between the Christian Church and the Congregationalists of the United States are now very close to final consummation. The two Church papers, the Congregationalist, of Boston, founded in 1816, and having to its credit a noble career of literary excellence and newspaper en- pel Liberty, of Dayton, Ohio, which claims to be the oldest religious paper in America.

The three meeting streams that finally became the Christian Church, in 1805, had their rise in the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Baptist Church and the Presbyterian Church. Separatists from the M. E. Church based their grievance upon the failure of the rulers of that body to grant the right of appeal in pastoral appointment from the presiding bishop to the annual conference; the Baptist tributary was caused by dissatisfaction with the rigid Calvinism of the parent body; and a disciplinary controversy swelled the final current by bringing many Presbyterians of the Middle West into the Christian organization.

The Congregationalists are equally famous in the old world and in the new, and on both sides of the Atlantic they have made noble contributions alike to the higher foundations of civilization and to the Christian Church universal. Dr. Fred B. Smith, well known in all the Churches, is the chief executive officer of the Congregational Church, being moderator of the National Council; and Rev. Frank G. Coffin is President of the General Convention of the Christian Church.—Methodist-Protestant (Baltimore, Md.).

THE WAY COMMUNISM DOES IT.

Quite a lot of folks who live in the United States are looking toward Communism and its way of doing things. We suppose this is because they think there would be fraternity, equality, and freedom in the system. But most of us do not believe a single one of the items in this slogan of French Revolution exists in or can be made to exist in Russian Communism. You cannot trust any system of any kind that is based on atheism.

Carroll Binder writes to the Chicago Daily News in a copyrighted article that Russia is about to deprive 3,500,000 persons of home, work and food in order to carry out communistic ideals and nationalize the land. The rich peasants, known as Kulaks, who are poor themselves, yet considered rich because they hire help to gather in the harvest, are to be dispossessed. They are charged with having rented their horses to neighbors, some own mills, a thresher, or dairy apparatus from which profit is derived. So it comes to pass that in order to nationalize the land by 1932 seven hundred and fifty thousand families, comprising 3,500,000 persons, are faced with ruin, if not starvation—will be without homes, work or food —if the Soviet union puts into effect the policy of exterminating the Kulaks, or rich peasants, which is heralded in the Russian press.

Communism is a kind of madness, and atheism is vacuity of intellect and heart.—Christian-Evangelist.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

A PRAYER TO HEAR.

Lesson: Isa. 60:1-6.

If you think that Isaiah was a fanatic and a mere dreamer, read this entire book, and you will see that he has a sober view of things and sees the bright side as well as the dark. The main thing is that he tries to hear the voice of God and he is moved by the Holy Ghost.

Our lesson is: Let the Word and the Spirit of God govern our thought, and not our gloomy forebodings. If the Christian world would do this they would astonish the world. Make yourselves ready. The Lord is coming to you.

Prayer.—Lord, speak, and grant that we give ear to Thy voice. Give us eyes to see and grace to believe Thy Word, to hold Thy standard high and hope on to the end. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WALKING BEFORE GOD.

"Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord."—Psa. 119:1.

What God did for Abraham He will do for us, and that is His covenant with us in the faith, and our part of that covenant is to walk before Him. He promises us all the protection if we will do this. He is our Commander and Father, and He orders us to be perfect in the way; that is, honest of purpose, wishing to cater to no sin, and in so walking before His face there is happiness forevermore.

Prayer.—Gracious God, give us faith and help us to walk before Thee. So fill us with Thy spirit and light that even in times of no hope we may hope on still and realize Thy promises. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GOD, THE AUTHOR OF ALL THINGS. . .

"I am the Lord, and there is none else."—Isa. 45:4-8.

Every good gift in the world comes from the Lord, so our lesson teaches today. Kings and nobles, and men of learning and wealth; yea, whatever position and talent which one may have is given him that he may serve all righteousness. A great many people have believed, and there are a great many who believe this day, but sooner or later we are told, and experience teaches us that every one will change his mind about that and bow the knee to Christ.

Prayer.—Let us pray that the heavens may drop down in blessings, and the skies pour down righteousness and fill all the earth. The name of the Lord be praised. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HARD-HEARTED.

"I have loved thee with an everlasting love."—Jer. 31:1-4.

Is it possible any one can continue to live only to be a curse? However much it may be possible, you and I are baptized in His faith and are members of His Church, and God says to us, "I have loved you with an everlasting love." One's heart must be harder than stone if this does not cause him to melt. What the Christian world needs is to believe that these words apply to them. With fewer non-believers in the Church, there will be fewer outside the Church, and God is depending on us for this.

Prayer.—Blessed Lord, who art our unerring Light, may we rely our feeble selves on Thee to guide us right. Let us never leave Thy side. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FAITH AND ASSURANCE.

Lesson: Isa. 45:22-25.

This is a passage that greatly strengthens one's faith. We are assured that the Lord will gather unto Himself all His own, and as many as believe on Him and keep His statutes shall be His own.

In what manner every knee shall bow to Him we do not know, nor does it matter to us; but we do know something about who are the children of God, and that all the blessed shall be knit together in the unity into the Lord, and sin shall divide them no more.

Prayer.—O God, quicken our faith, and make us feel assured that our labor is not in vain in the Lord; and grant us to press on until the whole earth is filled with Thy glory. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHEN LAW MEANS NOTHING.

Lesson: Rom. 10:4-10.

Paul is exceedingly zealous for the justice of God. There can be no abatements of the law's demands. Christians will do all that the law demands with a full sense of its blessings upon all. When so done, the law justifies us, and it has no application to him. It is only he who falls short who is condemned and feels its might. Such an one is a sinner.

But a Christian does more than keep the law. God has imbued him with the spirit of righteousness, and the law is fulfilled in him without his thinking about it. Christ in the souls of folk perfects their hearts unto all righteousness, and by their good conduct the law is made of none effects. Christ is the end of the law to every one that believeth.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, not only give us the power to see the just demands of the law, but give us hearts to feel our sin in not taking Jesus in our lives to make all things right without a thought of the law. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"Let thy work appear under thy servants, and the glory unto their children."—Luke 2:42-52.

Jesus grew up in the same way other children do. Our children grow up and increase in wisdom and stature, and, it should be, in the favor of God and man. But parents are to be the servants of the Lord in furthering that work of grace. That means to be diligent in prayer for them. If prayers cover them at all times, they have a rich legacy.

It means to begin with them in their earliest life to teach them to observe all things whatsoever he hath commanded us. To leave them until they are adults to form their own opinions and to act upon their own desires, or to leave them to the schools merely, means to leave them to atheism. The world is suffering from this very condition today.

It means that correction must be administered. Their new life is like a tender plant needing support, and this must be given by timely corrections in order to train them in self-denial and obedience. It is not necessary to scold or threaten or exasperate; but be true and firm.

It means to set a good example in words and deeds. Take care of speech that it is right toward both man and God. Take care of your actions that you walk before God, and let the children breathe the atmosphere of piety. Live in the covenant of your baptism and renounce the devil all the time, and God will help you. It is sorry and tragic to see children exhorted to that which is good, and punished for doing wrong, and at the same time to see the parents living in sin. God pronounces woe unto him who so offends (wrongs) one of these little ones.

Prayer.—Help us, dear Father, unto this end. Amen.

PREPARATION.

The Jubilee Year Committee having charge of the direction of the program suggested by the General Board, covering the period from the present to Pentecost, June 8th, has held its first meeting, and it is very anxious that the next four months shall be full of power and spiritual life to the Church, to our homes, and in our personal lives. The committee is fully aware that this will not be merely a matter of program, except as a guidance that we may direct our thoughts and plans along similar lines, but one of spirit and atmosphere, and to that end your committee pledges its best effort to suggest a program by which we all, working together, may bring new spiritual tide of life and power to our brethren.

We bespeak the heartiest co-operation of our pastors, boards of deacons, Sunday School councils and teachers to make these spring months mean more than we have dreamed for them. We are approaching the annual observance of our Lord's sacrifice, death, resurrection, and ascension. We are nearing the nineteen hundredth anniversary of Pentecost, the beginning of the Christian Church.

As we read the books of Luke and Acts, may our hearts experience a new strength and vision. Scores of denominations are emphasizing this Pentecostal message. All religious newspapers are giving it large space, challenging their membership to enter into its spirit. The Ohio Council of Churches entered the whole thought of its pastors', laymen's, women's, and young people's conferences, numbering thousands in attendance, for a whole week around the subject of Christian unity as taught by the events of Pentecost.

Naturally, in a proper observance of such an event, the mind turns to the outstanding messages and experiences. Certain great words stand out, around which the thought of our pulpits, prayer services, family altars, and Church bulletins may well center: they are expectancy. The followers of Christ, though few in number, were expecting something. They did not know just what or how, but they were anxiously expecting something good to occur. We may well follow their example. Then there were other great words, such as power, prayer, sacrifice, evangelism, that must stand out in any fitting observance of these great Christian events.

We have thousands of men and women, boys and girls, who believe in prayer, and who pray. Many of them are obscure workers as far as the world is concerned, but they know how to get hold of God and get answers to their prayers. We have had leaders who have had hard problems, and they, too, know how to pray and have experienced the marvelous power of prayer. May we of the committee ask you to faithfully join us each day in most earnest prayer that this foreign missionary period, this resurrection time, this Pentecostal observance may result in a new sense of spiritual life for each one and for the whole Church.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We take a number of papers gotten out by the larger orphanages. We do this to keep in touch with larger institutions and their activities. While we cannot do work on so large a scale, we do want to do as good work so far as we can on the income we have to do with.

In reading these several orphanage papers, we often see where some good sister or brother has passed away and in their last will bequeathed to their orphanage a sum of money for its use and purposes or for some special building. I feel sure that these same individuals were loyal supporters of the orphanage during their lifetime and they wanted to continue the good work after their life's activities had ceased. Only a few have so remembered the Christian Orphanage during our thirteen years of service.

We wonder how many of the members of the Christian denomination have remembered the Christian Orphangae in their will! If you have written this important document and have not remembered your orphanage with some amount, don't you think you ought to? A few hundred dollars, or a few thousand dollars would help to give some little helpless, fatherless children a home, training and education.

After you have gone home, your money that you had accumulated during your lifetime would be feeding and clothing little children as years would come and go. If you have not remembered the orphanage, won't you add a clause like this: "I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., the sum of ..... dollars for its uses and purposes."

A CALL TO PRAYER.

The following subjects for prayer, which were outlined for us by a young woman of the Philippines, may well claim our waking moments each new day:

Sunday: That all those in the Church of Christ may, in preparation for the "World Day of Prayer," March 7, 1930, give themselves earnestly to the ministry of intercession.

Monday: That we may be filled with the spirit of the Master, and may manifest the devotion and sacrifice of the early disciples, among them, women, who followed Him.

Tuesday: That the light of God's Word may dawn upon the minds and guide the lives of all earnest seekers after righteousness.

Wednesday: That there be an awakening among Christians to their opportunity to witness for Christ, and that those who have not yet come to know the Lord may find Him through a vital Christian experience.

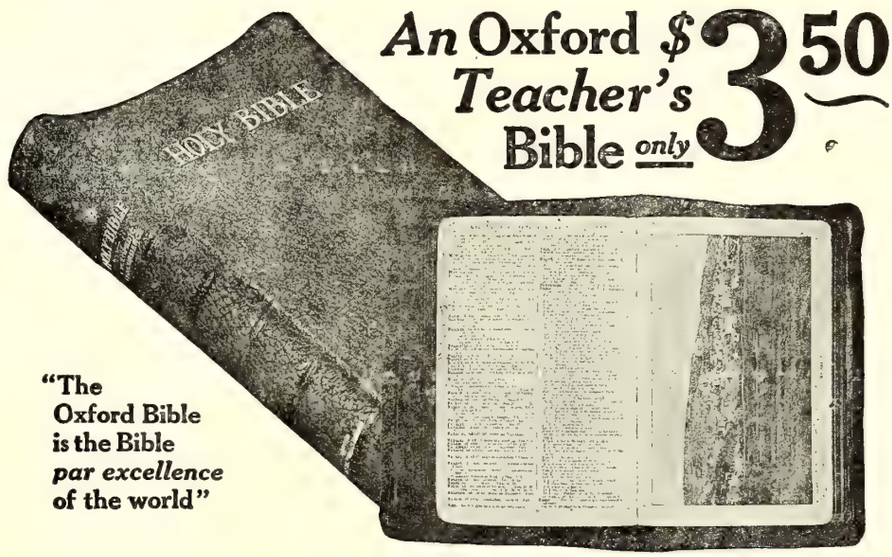
Thursday: That the youth of the world may consecrate all their powers to the building of God's kingdom and may with rejoicing testify to Him and His power through their lives and message.

Friday: That the spirit of love may rule in the affairs of men, and that through a better understanding all races may be drawn into a universal brotherhood.

Saturday: That in 1930, on this 1900th anniversary of Pentecost, the Christian Church in all lands may experience anew the power of the Holy Spirit, and that Jesus may again be lifted up through a revival of the simple daily witnessing of His followers.

The program, "That Jesus May Be Lifted Up," is 2 cents, $1.75 per 100. A service of consecration, "Looking Unto Jesus," is 10 cents. The "Call" is free. The poster (14x22 inches) is 10 cents. The seal (1x3-4 inch) is 25 cents per 100, $1.75 per 1,000. Supplies should be ordered from denominational headquarters of mission boards.

OXFORD BIBLES



An Oxford Teacher's Bible only $3.50

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

The best recommendation of the OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLES is the fact that over 3,000,000 copies have been sold. The wonderful helps they contain save your time because they are alphabetically arranged, making reference easy. They take the place of many books about the Bible, and can be depended upon, being written by eminent scholars. The Helps contain 32 graphic illustrations, besides 15 beautifully colored maps. The text is the Authorized or King James version, with over 50,000 centre column references.

THE MEANING OF SUFFERING.

moves along the Galilean highways and the despised Roman provinces, touching all sorts and conditions of men, and He made all of them feel that troubles and sorrows have their meaning in a personal impact for holiness. It was endurance to the end that wins the crown.

The life of Jesus Himself is a shining example. He endured the cross and despised the shame for our salvation. That He was "a Man of sorrows and acquainted with griefs" brought Him heart to heart with humanity that He was one with them. If He had had comforts all His life He would have been entirely removed from humanity. May we inject here that it is to be feared that the comforts of this most comfortable age are hindering the progress of religion and the Church in finding its way into the hearts of the people. But by His suffering with humanity, it is made one with Him in that suffering, and it is in this light that the cross has become the symbol of suffering—the symbol of our crosses.

It is fortunate for us that Jesus was a "Man of sorrows and acquainted with griefs." It was by such contact that it was made possible for the Father to enter into all the world's agonies and transform them to triumphs. It is hard for us to see the truth of this, at least the reason for the truth. But see the picture: Jerusalem at the time of the crucifixion was a prosperous city. Even evil within her was rewarded with prosperity. Their spirit was "On with the dance"! While just outside the city gate the best Man of the ages, one who embodied in Himself all of heaven and eternal life, and gave it freely for the asking, hung upon a silent cross alone, persecuted and rejected by men. No one can deny that it is the greatest drama of the ages—great because it is a picture of life. Our external world is a maze of dazzling glory. A thousand smiles sweep everything on with giddy delights. But inwardly a thousand hearts may be breaking. A thousand souls scorch in the crucible of sorrow. But this is not without meaning. In the crucible, the dross is burned off and from it comes the refined gold. From the thousand sorrows emerges the soul's eternal values. From every bitter cup something is created for the better. And as from experience to experience we go, completeness leaves its deposit and the ultimate happiness seems nearer our rach. Is it any wonder that the crucifixion is the holiest symbol of life? Is it any wonder that the Holy Communion si the supreme symbol of His sustaining grace and power?

In conclusion, let us summarize some of the very poignant meanings of these things which we may carry in our hearts.

In the first place, suffering often aids us to see ourselves. It was the suffering of the prodigal son that brought him to his father. It was the suffering that came by the unjust steward that awakened others to a sense of righteousness and justice. It was the unwillingness of the man with one talent to work with what he had, choosing rather to be as comfortable as possible without "putting out," as we say, that brought upon his head the loss of his own soul. It is the endurance of revilings and threatenings that is the fertile ground of meekness (1 Peter 2:23). It is poverty that often enriches brotherhood and fellow-feeling (2 Cor. 8:7). It is the withstanding of temptations that give firmness of character and submission of will to God (Jno. 18:11). Sickness creates sympathy and death enables us to "weep with those that weep."

None other than God's Word teaches us that sorrow is better than laughter, for it is by this experience that the heart is made better (Eccl. 7:3, 14). It is from the Master's lips that adversity is set over against prosperity, that man should profit by it; that afflictions work an exceedingly greater weight of glory (2 Cor. 4:17). So it seems that there is a dynamic about suffering and sorrow which lifts man from the level of beasts to the level of gods.

In the second place, it means that there is no defeat. Through Him by whom all things are possible, it is not impossible for every agony of man to be an agency for good. It means that there is grace sufficient in any emergency to perfect our strength when it needs it. This is just how Paul gloried in his infirmities. In this we can go forth through thick and thin, knowing that he whom God has made the "Captain of our salvation" will destroy him who has the power of evil and death—the devil. And he who is faithful to the end may rejoice to be partakers with him in that task. So long as we realize this and offer it as our reason for throwing our weight on the side of righteousness and human happiness, so long will we be enabled to endure our crosses as our bit of service, and will realize that human value and soul-enrichment will prevail. To the degree that one may help weaklings be strong, make brave men out of cowards, and help all to be folks worth while, to that extent one finds himself happy in spite of misery, and a co-creator as well as a co-worker with God.

In the third place, it means that transformation of purposeless misery to a sensible working out of plans to happy ends. We are told of a woman who, after twelve years of marriage, discovered that she had made a ghastly mistake and that she loved another man and not her husband. She thought of the easy way out of it by dodging the question, covering up and getting a divorce on false pretenses. But that was impossible, not because she was a Christian merely, but because her husband loved her and he deserved and had a right to consideration. So, like Jesus who always faced His problems squarely, she faced hers with all of its implications, and settled it in a sensible way. It was a new calvary to her, but as long as she dodged the issue she suffered intolerable purposeless pain which accomplished nothing. Once faced, the agony was used to a better and a higher end.

Perhaps we have not the same problem, though there may be many more than we think. But we have problems just as grave, and so long as we dodge the issue nobody is the better for it. Only when issues are faced frankly, and worked out sensibly, does agony become a virtue and a means to an end. Jesus could have avoided Jerusalem. But He had to go there, that all righteousness might be fulfilled. We have our Jerusalems, and if we would only undertake to settle them with the idea of fulfilling all righteousness, much of the world would be better than it is.

In the fourth place, it means life without complaining. Jesus "took His medicine," as we say perhaps vulgarly, without a word of complaint. When He was reviled, He reviled not again. In reality, we are not that way. We like to be pitied, sympathized with and helped. We work long and hard for something, only to find that we shall never have it. Then we are apt to think that the world is unjust and we complain. That is not Christian. The right spirit is in Jesus. As He prayed that the cup might pass from Him, He said, "Not my will, but Thine be done." If we can just see this, the least we can do, when we seem to have failed, is to leave it with the Lord. When so done, we are more than conquerers through Him that loved us. That may not be a logical way out; but Prof. Bell calls it a "superlogical" way out. It is Christ's way and our hope.

Lastly, it means keeping in view the ultimate of life—everlasting life. Of course, it cannot be proved by mathematical or scientific demonstration that there is life after death, but there are a thousand good reasons that life goes on. Surely the good of the world which has been wrought out by our very struggles will not cease with our demise and leave us without the perfection of that which in our lifetime we have sought. Nobody has ever yet believed that man is a mere meaningless nonsense. From childhood to the end of life we press on, looking for and expecting something better. Though better we grow, better still we expect to be. Ideals lead on until the old man leaning on his staff comes down to the brink of the river of death believing that life is still ahead of him and the good of this world will find its perfection beyond the river.

Prof. Bell says, "When a man says, 'Padre, I do not believe in the future life,' I always counter by saying, 'Then, what in the name of all that is true, do you believe in? The only thing that matters is what you do believe in.'" It is impossible to put our worth in the span of a lifetime spent in a fruitless search for something better, which we know will never come. If we have a half-sense of true values, we are compelled to know that life cannot end merely with disease and decay, and call that all.

After all that is done and said, it is the inner life that matters most. Is not life's highest values in the pursuit of truth? Does it not lie in trying to bring forth the beautiful? No man knows beauty by merely looking at it. It is when he tries to create beauty that he knows something about it. That is inner life. That is not done without self-denial, suffering and impoverishment. It takes a lot of chiseling to transform a piece of rough granite into a Sistine Madonna. Likewise, it takes a lot of chiseling and cutting to transform a character from what it is to what it ought to be. And chiseling is painful. But this we know that every act toward the beautiful, every prompting for the sake of righteousness, every sacrifice for human betterment, every kindness wrought by the spirit of man contributes more and more to the perfection of the life beyond and the enrichment of things both here and hereafter.

The whole matter is summed up in the commandment of love. Not the "amative" or the "true story" kind, but the love that has its triumphs in seeing things become what they ought to be; love that is born of the desire to give that some one else may have; love that suffers that some one else may be happy; love that dies that some one else may live; love that expects nothing in return for the giving; love that death, or any other creature cannot destroy. This is the essence of life and religion.

Thus, man labors from the morning until the evening of his day. If it is for the eternal and the selfish merely, what then? But if it is in the pursuit of truth, the creating of the beautiful; if it has been an honest venture of love reaching out for God; if it has been patterned after the example of the Lord Jesus Christ, stealing through hardships to the higher ends—then, at "eventide it shall be light."

OBITUARIES.

DANIEL.

Mrs. J. R. Daniel departed this life at her residence, near Sunbury, N. C., January 20, 1930, in her seventy-fifth year. She united with the Damascus Christian Church, Gates County, N. C., early in life and remained a faithful member until her death. She was a devoted wife and mother, and a sincere and devout Christian, and was loved and respected by all who knew her. She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, one son, two sisters, and one brother, and a host of friends.

May the blessings of our Heavenly Father comfort her loved ones. The funeral was conducted by the writer. The interment was in the family cemetery. Many attended the burial service as a tribute of respect.

E. B. WHITE.

DOFFLEMYRE.

John W. Dofflemyre was born February 24, 1850, and died January 23, 1930, at the age of 79 years and 11 months. Bro. Dofflemyre was a faithful member of the Christian Church for about 61 years, being one of the charter members and loyal supporters of Bethel Church, near his home. He was much devoted to his family, and in return was very much beloved by all of them. He is survived by four sons and two daughters, and by twenty-six grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren; one sister also survives. He was well known and much esteemed among a large circle of friends.

Visits to his bedside during recent months always made me think of Paul's words in 2 Tim. 4:7: "I have kept the faith," and this was used as the text for the funeral service at Bethel January 26.

A. W. ANDES.

WILKINS.

Mrs. Grace Jones Wilkins, the daughter of Bro. and Sister Paul Jones, was born in Halifax County, Va., October 21, 1896, and died at the hospital in Lynchburg, Va., on Thursday, January 9th; age 33 years, 2 months and 19 days. On April 26, 1914, she was married to Charlie B. Wilkins, of Nathalie, Va., and in this community they lived till her death. To their union were born five children, three being deceased—Norman and Edith survive, Besides the two children, she is survived by her husband, father, mother, and one sister, Mrs. Walter Satterfield, of Crystal Hill, Va.

In July, 1911, in a meeting held under an arbor before Liberty Church was built, conducted by Dr. W. T. Herndon and myself, Mrs. Wilkins, then fourteen years of age, professed faith in Christ, and with her father, mother and two sisters, united with the Church.

I have been pastor of the deceased for fifteen years and have spent many a pleasant hour in her home. As a companion and home-maker for her husband, she was among the most faithful; as a mother, competent, devoted and unselfish; and to her Church and its auxiliaries, she had that abiding interest and love characterizing the real Christian.

The funeral and burial were at Liberty Christian Church on Sunday afternoon, January 12, 1930. A large crowd of relatives and friends were present. The floral designs were beautiful. Seldom have I conducted a funeral where more relatives and friends expressed their sorrow by giving away to tears. This could not be otherwise, for she was loved by all who knew her, and each felt a personal loss and knew that she would be so missed in the home, community and Church.

THE COST OF AIR TRAVEL.—

It looks as if the world is gradually to become air-minded. Certainly those who are working to popularize travel by airplane are doing everything possible to make the idea of traveling by air "catch on." One of the corporations promoting transcontinental air travel has fixed the passenger rate for the combined air and rail travel at 5 cents a mile. They will doubtless make much of the fact through their advertising that this rate is cheaper than the combined railroad and Pullman fares which are now charged. It is certainly fine that travel by airplane is fixed at so moderate a figure. But doubtless for some time yet there will be many of us who insist on considering other facts than the cost per mile of such transportation.

THE SALVATION ARMY AT PEACE.—

The difficulties in which the Salvation Army has been involved over the question of supreme command have finally all been cleared away. Because of the advanced age and failing health of General Bramwell Booth, who was commander-in-chief, steps were taken last year to transfer authority into younger hands. The supreme council of the Army met and declared General Booth incompetent to handle the affairs of the Army, due to his weakened condition. The council named Edward John Higgins as the successor of General Booth. The Booth faction refused to accept the ruling of the council and carried the controversy into the civil courts of England. Before the courts had rendered a ruling, General Booth died. Previous to his death, he had followed the precedent of his father, and named his successor. The nomination was left in a sealed envelope to be opened after General Booth's death. The courts decided in favor of General Higgins and ordered that the Booth executors turn over the properties which were held in trust for the Army, and which had been retained by the executors.

Salvation Army officials decided to burn, unopened, the envelope which contained the name of the successor whom General Booth had selected. Thus not only is the immediate questions of controversy settled, but the idea that the supreme command of the Salvation Army throughout the world was a hereditary prerogative of the Booth family has likewise been exploded.

CHRISTIANITY AND INDUSTRY.—

There is no subject of more intriguing interest today than the relationship of Christianity to industry. How much, if any, of our industrial order is in harmony with the teachings of Christ? More and more this question is forcing itself upon the minds of students of both Christianity and the social sciences. The two fundamental principles of Christianity are unselfishness and co-operation. Industry as organized today is individualistic in its ambition and competitive in its methods. There are those who would still their consciences by insisting that business is business. But the realization is sinking in that business need not always be as business has been in the past.

Nor is it simply a matter of the principles upon which business is founded. The unrest is not limited to those who are thinking upon the theories of things. The present scheme of organization is not working out to the complete satisfaction of all concerned. The rich are growing richer and the poor are growing poorer. The number of individuals who have an annual income of a million a year or more increases at a rapid rate, and unemployment assumes the proportion of a national problem.

Clearly something needs to be done. It is a problem that vitally concerns the Church. And what method shall the Church pursue in seeking to change the conditions that exist at present? There are those who tell us that it is cowardly for the Church to keep silent. There are others who say that such things are of no concern to the Church.

One way to tackle the problem is to denounce all those who are leaders in the management of large business affairs as un-Christian. This way is especially appealing to certain types of mind. It gets publicity for the denouncer. If such publicity can be counted an advantage, he is about the only one who profits by such a course. It needs to be remembered that those who are today the leaders in our industrial order did not adopt the principles upon which business is being conducted. Many of them not only desire, but are earnestly seeking a better way by which business affairs may be conducted.

It needs also to be remembered that the welfare of every single individual is bound up in the present order of things. The business methods of the world cannot be scrapped in a moment, and reorganized. It is one thing to point out the faults of the present order, but an entirely different matter to work out the practical details of an eutopia. The task that confronts us is not one for destructive, but for constructive methods. It is going to require the utmost in wisdom, in patience, in mutual forbearance, and co-operation.

WHY MISSIONS?—

There is no phase of Church life that is subject to so much fluctuation as the missionary activity of the Church. It is comparatively easy to mark the great periods of Church history when there has been a passionate interest in missions. There have been other long periods in Church history when the missionary zeal has all but died. We know that such things have happened, but in so far as we know, there has never been attempted an adequate explanation of this rise and fall of missionary interest.

In the history of most denominational work, there is an ebb and flow of missionary support from year to year. The cause of this annual fluctuation in the support of missions is not so hard to discover. Two factors seem to largely determine what is contributed to missions in most denominations. They are the concerted efforts of denominational leaders, in what might be called missionary drives; and the relative degree of prosperity that is prevalent throughout the country.

It is pretty generally agreed that when we are in the midst of financial depression, or hard times, to use the more popular term, that the Church treasury is one of the first places where retrenchment may be noticed. And it seems that among all the enterprises of the Churches, that missions is the one enterprise that is the first to suffer a falling off. There may be and doubtless are exceptions to this fact. There are two or three denominational bodies that appear to make missions the outstanding objective of their denominational interests. There are individual congregations whose interest in and support of missions is worthy of the highest commendation. But with the rank and file of Church members, missions does not seem to be taken very seriously.

It is also apparent that in recent years there has been a marked disposition to measure the responsibility for supporting the mission cause, in proportion to the visible results that are being achieved. We are even going further than that and looking for the visible results in terms of material things, and the extent to which the people who are reached by the appeal of the gospel are taking on to what is called modern civilization.

These considerations are far removed from the spirit and purpose which moved the hearts of Christians in the apostolic age. One wonders what the apostles would think of our modern attitude toward the work of missions. Their moving passion seems to have been to acquaint others with the Christ who was the center of all their living and loving. Loyalty to Christ was the main motive of those who carried the gospel throughout the known world.

This should be the essential motive for mission work today, as it was in the days of the apostles. No other motive is sufficient and constant. The modern age will not assume the responsibility for the evangelizing of the human race until it has tasted of a rich spiritual experience and been brought into a closer fellowship with Christ.

NOTES-PERSONALS

While THE SUN editor is away for a season, Dr. W. C. Wicker has very kindly consented to contribute editorials and look over copy coming into the office. Dr. Wicker feels, as does the editor, that there should be more news from the Churches in THE SUN, and more contributors to our columns.

This invitation, much delayed in the mails, reaches us: "You are cordially invited to attend the opening of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Va., Sunday afternoon, February 16, 1930, a 3 o'clock." The letter, elsewhere in this issue, from the pastor, Rev. M. F. Allen—which but for delay in mails should have been in last week's SUN—is exceedingly interesting. This is, we believe, the first one of our well-established Churches to voluntarily take the name designated. Bro. Allen gives his reasons.

Rev. W. T. Scott presented his resignation as pastor of the Walnut Hills Christian Church, Dayton, Ohio, on Sunday, January 26th, to take effect in April, or as soon as the Church can secure a successor. Bro. Scott has accepted a call to the new Congregational-Christian Church at Salisbury, N. C. Salisbury is a progressing city of 18,000 people, and there is a fine opportunity here with the Mission Boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches back of it. Walnut Hills regrets and Salisbury rejoices at the decision of Bro. Scott. He has done a fine year's work in Dayton and will be greatly missed.

On Sunday, January 26th, Dr. L. E. Smith celebrated his tenth anniversary as pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., by canceling a twenty-thousand-dollar obligation against the Church. In the past ten years Christian Temple has grown from a mission Church in a temporary structure to a Church of over twelve hundred members, and a magnificent edifice, valued at three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. One of the heartening features of the tenth anniversary was the note of advance which was sounded by the Church along missionary and educational lines. The Herald joins with the entire Church in offering congratulations to Christian Temple and to Dr. Smith for the splendid work of the past ten years.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Through the efforts of the Board of Christian Education and the Department of Leadership Training of Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention, the Franklin Christian Sunday School is enabled to have her first leadership training institute. The school opened Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock with appropriate devotional services, and class-work was resumed. Courses for credit on the International Council of Religious Education diploma are offered. Instructors and helpers in the work are as follows: Rev. F. C. Lester, Miss Jewel Truitt, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk; Rev. W. C. Hook, Holland; Rev. J. W. Fix and Mrs. J. W. Fix, Franklin. Courses in worship and teaching are offered. Members of nearby Methodist, Baptist and Friends Churches are availing themselves of the opportunity afforded in such a school.

The school is to close Friday night, with an appropriate program of awarding credits for work done. Miss Truitt, field secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, is in charge of the school. Rev. F. C. Lester is chairman of the Board of Education of the Southern Christian Convention. It is hoped that other Churches will avail themselves of the services of Bro. Lester and Miss Truitt and conduct schools such as we are enjoying and profiting by here in Franklin.

Trained leadership and expert teachers are demanded in the public schools. Should not the teaching of religion be done by men and women who are trained for their work? All of our Churches need to emphasize this factor more in our work. J. W. FIX, Pastor.

VANCEVILLE.

Leaving Wadley Friday night, I arrived at Tifton, Ga., at 11:30 A. M., the train being four and a half hours late on account of a freight-train wreck on the other end of the A., B. & C. line. I was entertained in the home of Walker Pearson Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson are deeply interested in the college and are doing their part to support it.

I preached at the Vanceville Church on Sunday from subjects "Christ the Son of God" and "Elijah Under the Juniper Tree." At the close of the morning service the Sunday School pledged $50 to the support of Piedmont Junior College. This is very commendable for this small school, considering that Bros. Pearson, Veazey, Carpenter and a few others are already doing a large share of support. For the remainder of the day I was very royally entertained in the home of Mr. W. Hand, formerly of Wadley. Rev. W. C. Carpenter, their pastor, was also here for the evening meal, and when we got ready to go to services, Bro. Hand slipped a ham of meat in Rev. Carpenter's car. Of course the pastor was not expecting it, for he had eaten all he could hold for supper. But this is as it should be. If the members of our Churches would pay their pastors more and feed them and their families better, they would preach better sermons.

At present the roads are dry and dusty and the farmers are getting ready for their spring crops, and planting will begin in about four weeks. This section is fine for crops, and something for the table may be had every day in the year from one's own garden. Let the good work go on. Who will win one of the Sunday School scholarships for next year!

ANTIOCH Y. P. S. ENTERTAINS.

The winning group of the Young People's Missionary Society of Antioch Church was highly entertained by the losing group of the contest in the home of Mrs. G. Fred Johnson, Friday evening, January 31, 1930.

Many games were played and were enjoyed by everyone. Refreshments furnished by each member of the losing group and served by Emily Johnson and Winifred Clements were enjoyed very much, especially by those on the winning side.

Those present were Mrs. C. M. Clements, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Godwin, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Pierce, Ethel Pierce, Louise Pierce, Louise Godwin, Winifred Clements, Essie, Emily and Evelyn Johnson. Messrs. Gurnie White and Harry Griffin of Windsor, Channing and C. M. Clements, Jr., Thomas and Scott Hill, Andrew Woodard, Curtis Godwin, George Cobb, Hudson and Wallace Griffin. Every one expressed themselves as having spent a very enjoyable evening.

The Young People's Society holds their regular meeting every first and third Sunday night in the Church at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited, as each visitor counts a certain number of points. At the end of each month the winning side will be entertained by the losing side. Each side is always anxious to win.

Our pastor, Mr. E. B. White, organized the Young People's Society at Windsor and Antioch. Both societies are making wonderful progress, and we all hope he will be successful in organizing the society at Isle of Wight and hope they will make the progress we are making.

Our pastor seems very much interested in the work of the young people, and if we work and co-operate together we are sure he will do his part to make our meetings successful. As Mr. White preaches at four different Churches, it is impossible for him to attend all the meetings of each society. Each society will enjoy having him and his family with them whenever it is possible for them to be with them.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

Our new Church is now ready for use. The furniture is being installed this week, and on Sunday, February 16th, at 3 P. M., we will hold the opening service in our new home. We have planned the opening service for the afternoon with the hope that many of our ministers and friends from nearby Churches may find it possible to come and worship with us.

At our January quarterly conference, the congregation voted unanimously to operate in the future under the name "First Congregational-Christian Church." There is no Congregational Church in this city, and we felt that if we were to expect our Congregational friends here to affiliate with us that we should be willing to share our name with them. We felt, furthermore, that we were acting in the spirit of our General Convention, which approved the merger with the Congregationalists. A third thought motivated our action. We have in Newport News two Disciples of Christ Churches, one of which operates under the name of the "First Christian Church." This has caused no little confusion. Many instances could be cited of persons belonging to the Christian Church who have moved to Newport News and have united with the Disciples' Church, believing it to be their denomination. We feel that the hyphenated name should help to avoid this confusion.

And that brings me to another thought. When one of my members moves into the community of another Christian Church I make it a rule to give the information to the pastor of that Church. When one of your members moves to Newport News, if the pastor would advise me of his presence here, then I might be able to keep him lined up with the Christian denomination.

Just one thing more. We want our friends to visit us for the grand opening of our new plant, and as an inducement we offer the following: Any minister who attends this service and places five dollars on the collection plate will be listed as a "prospective pastor"; and one who places $25 on the plate will certainly receive a call in the event the Church is left pastorless during his lifetime. Pastors who are not able at this time to make such an offering may get a layman to make it for them and get the same recognition. Try it. You may find your laymen glad for the opportunity to secure the prospect of a call for you.

M. F. ALLEN, Pastor.

P. S.: The writer is a small man. The new minister's chair is a very large chair. There may be those who will want a man to fit the furniture. Also the writer is in his fourth year of service for this Church. He is, therefore, an "old" pastor. Possibly there will be others who will want a "new" pastor to go with the "new" building. The possibilities are great! M. F. A.

THE DREAMER.

"And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it to his brethren, and they hated him all the more."—Gen. 37:5.

Dreams are nothing more or less than ideas that enter our minds while we are asleep. The principle feature of a dream is that it seldom has any direct connection with an experience. Often the individuals who characterize our dreams are remote people. The mind has no control over dreams. Will power is absent in directing our dreams. Dreams cover long periods of time, flash through our minds in a very short space of time. Dreams are often due to over-exhaustion, nervousness, or mental fatigue. Depressing dreams are a sign that one's health is not what it should be.

People of long ago believed that dreams were direct communications from the spiritual world. At the ancient royal courts, soothsayers were employed, whose duty it was to interpret dreams. Some people believe that dreams are direct proof of the immortality of the soul. The North American Indian claimed that dreams were sent him for looking into the future of his existence. It is said that the city of ancient Carthage was the result of an ancient dream of its builder, Augustus Caesar, who in his dream saw the city as it was when completed. English history tells us that Oliver Cromwell dreamed that one day he would be England's greatest man. He thus sought greatness by service. The dream finally became realized.

On the subject of dreams, the Bible has much to say. In the Old Testament we find that men like Daniel, Pharaoh, Gideon and countless others were influenced by dreaming dreams. But the dream that is of most interest to us, as we think together today upon the text, is the dream of Joseph. So intense was his dream that he became known as "The Dreamer."

"And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it to his brethren, and they hated him all the more." Now, it so happened that Joseph was the eleventh son of Jacob, and was the son of his favorite wife Rachael. He dearly loved this son, for he was his baby, the son of his old age, and he was a lad of purity, pensiveness and very mystical. Joseph was a lover of his parents and home life. It was somewhat natural that his father should bestow many gifts upon him. His beautiful coat of many colors was a symbol of his father's love and devotion to him. And Joseph dreamed a dream in which he saw his future portrayed. He saw himself as a big leader, perhaps a governor, and in his youthful ambitious way ran forth to tell his dream. But his dream was misunderstood. For relating it, he was mistreated. Nevertheless, he became the prime minister of Egypt.

Joseph was sent to find out, from his brethren, how the cattle were getting along, and report to his father, who in his old age was unable to inquire of the sons and the cattle. Joseph proudly wore his coat of many colors. He felt sure that his brethren would be glad to see him; but not so. Neither did they enjoy or appreciate his dream, for when Joseph told his brethren his dream they hated him all the more for it. This they did because they did not understand the meaning or the interpretation of Joseph's dream. In his childish manner he said to the brethren, "Hear, I pray you, the dream which I have dreamed; for behold I, we were binding sheaves in the field, and lo! my sheaf arsoe and also stood upright, and behold your sheaves stood round about and made obeisance to my sheaf. And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shall thou indeed have dominion over us? and they hated him all the more for his dreams and his words" (Gen. 37:7-9).

It was very unfortunate for Joseph and for his brethren that they did not understand the significance of the dream. Hastily they jumped at the first conclusion that came to their minds. Misunderstanding is the curse and source of many troubles. Most of the heart-aches are caused because some one else misunderstands.

It was no doubt hard for Joseph's brethren, who were practical, hard-working men, to understand the fantastic idealism of their "kid brother's" dream. And for it they hated him all the more.

2. Joseph was mistreated because he related his dream. One always has to pay a dear price for anything that is worth while. Joseph, the young brother, had a vision of a future united kingdom. In his dream he was to be the head ruler of the kingdom. Before that reality came to him, he had to pay a price. He suffered and was mistreated. His own brethren were most cruel unto him. Such treatment from one's own relatives is not unusual, though it is most painful. As Joseph approached the place where the brethren were gathered, they plotted against this dreamer. Thus they placed him in a pit which had been dug long ago for holding water in case of drought. After a while they took him from the pit and sold him to some slave-traders from Egypt. Desire for money led them to sell him, rather than seeing him suffer unto death. The manner in which they treated him, taking his coat as a trophy, reminds us of the way the soldiers cast lots for the garments of the Master.

Just as the brothers punished Joseph for making known a dream, so the world punishes and causes to suffer any one who would do something worth while. "Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you" (Matt. 5:12-13). Men who have dared to dream and make known their dreams have suffered discouragement. Columbus, who dreamed of a new world, was called by the children of Genoa, Italy, the crazy sailor. The Wright brothers were called fools, and discouraged in their attempts to fly in the air. Jesus of Nazareth dreamed of a kingdom of love and good will, and for preaching and teaching His convictions He was nailed to a cross.

3. For relating his dream, Joseph finally became prime minister of Egypt. This dreamer boy of Israel, who was so badly misunderstood by his brethren, mistreated by his brethren, was finally made prime minister over Egypt. The time came, as per his dream, when his sheaf stood up—he was in office, and the others bowed down before his sheaf. Joseph's brethren are now before him asking for food, for a great famine is causing much suffering and hunger. Joseph gives unto his brethren, bags of grain. They recognize him not. He returns them good for evil. The opportunity of loving one's enemies and doing good to those who persecuate you is one of the fine experiences granted the Christian. One dreams of such days, and when they come he, like Joseph the dreamer, rejoices in doing good to those whose evil devices are most painful.

"Dreamer of dreams, we take thee with gladness,
Knowing that God, beyond the years you see,
Hath wrought the dreams that count with you for madness
Into the substance of the world to be."

CONSECRATION.

The theme used for one of the monthly missionary programs was: "The need of the hour is not money; it is consecration, which will lay money on the altar."

Recently we read an address given by a missionary to India, in which he spoke about the devout Hindus; how that they put away the things of the world, stripping themselves of all those things that are not essential, some of which we think are very essential, and becoming what he called, "religious beggars."

To the Hindu, religion is the giving up of things, ever denying themselves to attain to a higher life, yet never accomplishing their ideal.

Such is their consecration to an unknown God. If their consecration is so unselfish, what should ours be! Shall we whose souls have been lighted with the wisdom that our God alone gives, deny to such as these the gospel of salvation because we want the comforts, yea the luxuries, that we may have in our gospel-enlightened land? Can we sing, "Consecrate me now, to Thy service, Lord," and go on enjoying life with only a passing thought to those who do not know the delight of communing with a Saviour who loves them and yearns after them?

Even now the Hindus are gathered at the junction of their two sacred rivers, the Ganges and the Jumna, where they will seek to wash away their sins by plunging beneath the waters. The government reports that there will be two and a half million people there this year, and they have set aside one thousand five hundred police to manage the multitudes. Such a multitude without God and without hope—what a call to prayer! Some missionaries will be there to hold out the gospel torch by giving out Bibles and tracts; living in tents that they may be in the midst of the multitude to sow the seed of the kingdom and help in any way to show the love of Christ.

In the address, the missionary went on to say that the Hindu people will not believe the gospel of Jesus Christ until they can see behind the preaching, the outstretched arms of Jesus, the Christ, hanging upon the cross with the nails piercing through. Oh, may we not let the missionaries stand alone to show forth the love and compassion of Jesus, but may we take up our cross of self-denial and service here in the homeland, that the cross of Christ may not suffer loss. May we lay all of our desires and longings upon the altar and seek to know what the perfect will of our God for us is.

"How can I, Lord, withhold life's brightest hour
From Thee; or gathered gold, or any power?
Why should I keep one precious thing from Thee
When Thou hast given Thine own dear Self for me?"

W.

Why not have a mission superintendent in your Sunday School? Some schools have these and find them a source of information and helpfulness. Such a superintendent would have charge of the missionary program on "Mission Sunday," or during mission period in the Sunday School, and would be a real asset in the school. The mission office will gladly supply literature and helps and programs to such mission superintendents in the schools.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA FINDING HERSELF.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 8, 1930.

Poor folks as well as rich folks, busy people as well as idle ones come to Florida. It is a mental attitude, or to be modern about it, just a question of "psychology." One tourist here said he could live in Florida in winter for what it would cost him to keep his home warm at home. So he came to keep from building fires, and just kept warm a-plenty from God's good sunshine and balmy climate in Florida. Another said he could think as hard and study as well here as he could in the cold country, and get the generous sun and fragrant open-air thrown in without charges.

It is good to be in Florida now. The snow and ice and cold winds had piled up on us about Elon, and by a twenty-four hours' ride to get into warmth and flowers and song-birds and silvery lakes was a thing not to be despised by one who is thin-blooded and loves as well as needs the open. Florida is beautiful and inviting now, and no wonder it is full of tourists, health-seekers and "loafers."

It was uncomfortable under cover last night, and this morning one just had to put on light, spring or summer clothes. And this is the way, and this is why Florida is finding herself. She has the climate, and is capitalizing it. She went wild, absolutely "daffy," a few years ago, as if the whole world was going to move residence here, own real estate and abide always. And the world had no such mind or intention. People do not come here to stay. They come here to play. In summer-time, when they can play elsewhere, they don't come here. But in winter, when they can't play elsewhere, they all come here. They are turning the State now into golk-links, playgrounds and bathing beaches. In this field, Florida is superb and supreme, and if she will content herself with this she will find herself again and come into her own. Everything is full up and running over here in winter. This sanitarium where I am staying is full to capacity. I went again to hear Ed Bok's "singing tower" and see his bird sanctuary the other day. The whole hill-top, grounds and sanctuary were full of people. I went to Church Sunday, arrived at the spacious auditorium half-hour before the sermon, and with hundreds of others had to stand through the whole service, all seats and chairs in all aisles having been taken, and even standing room at a premium. The hotels are full. The camping grounds are crowded. Streets and stores are thronged. People come to Florida in winter just to enjoy God's good sunshine and breathe His fresh, free, open air.

This morning (Saturday) I went to the Adventist Sunday School. It was just fine to be there. They are so dead in earnest about making this world a better place to live in. They have two great objectives: First, to relieve human suffering; hence, their numerous and incomparable hospitals and sanitariums. They have skilled surgeons and able physicians for emergencies and nervous wrecks; but their prestige, power and progress are due to proper nourishment, healthful dieting, right living. Two years ago, while here for a season, I met a gentleman from Chicago. He was all in and seemed practically done for. Well, he is here now, and for these two years has lived here and at Battle Creek, and at others of this chain of sanitariums where they teach you what to eat and how. He is now a well man; says physicians find no physical or organic ailment of any kind, and he just feels fine and looks it. He is just past ninety-one, and thinks life is sweet and holds much for him now. He looks with hope and happiness to living to be 100. They allow no meat of any kind in these sanitariums, no coffee, no narcotics, no cigars or cigarettes; and they are bringing back to health and happiness, from emaciated frames and wrecked nerves and tired bodies, hundreds and thousands.

Secondly, in the Sabbath School this A. M., the one note struck was missions—foreign missions. This is their second objective—giving the gospel to a sin-cursed, pagan world. It is a very small denomination numerically, numbering about what we Christians numbered before uniting with the Congregationalists. And yet they have missionaries in all parts of the world, raise and give to foreign missions about $4,000,000 a year, and send out four times more missionaries every year than we Christians have now on the foreign field or have sent out in all our history. Every Sabbath School offering—that of every Sabbath—goes to foreign missions, and in a school of 150 the regular morning offering reaches $50 to $75. Adventists believe that Christ's second coming is not far off and they feel that they should do all they can now, both to hasten His coming by making Him known to as many as possible before He comes, and to be ready for that coming, which is constantly expected or faithfully and confidently anticipated.

If one can't agree with their theology, one can admire and applaud their zeal and the two worthy objectives for which they spend and are spent, viz: relieve human suffering and give Christ's saving message to a lost world.

The writer is glad indeed to be, for a few days at any rate, back in sunny Florida and at a sanitarium where they try to teach one how to rest, relax and live. J. O. A.

VI. GOODNESS.

Fruit is of the same kind as the tree that bears it. "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so, every good tree bringeth forth good fruit." Goodness is one of those sweet, rich words that masses excellences and consecrates virtues. There is more all-'roundness of character in the meaning of this word than in almost any other unit of our language. All other graces seem to merge into this rare jewel and to be reflected from it in sparkling radiance. "O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good," is one note of praise repeated by Israel's sweetest singer. And the eulogy paid to Barnabas when sent to Antioch was that "he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." The reigning love of God and Christ in the heart denominates a man a good man"; and Jesus told the Pharisees that "a good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good." When the rich ruler inquired, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" Jesus said unto him, "Why callest thou me good? There is none good but one, that is God." This shows that God is the only source of goodness: "for the Lord is good; His mercy is everlasting; and His truth endureth to all generations"; or, as it is expressed in the text, "The fruit of the Spirit is goodness." Christ is distinguished for His goodness, for He can have compassion on the ignorant: He is meek and lowly in heart." When the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep, God said, "Let there be light: and there was light." And "God saw the light that it was good." So He said of other creations, "That they were good." David sings in his time that "the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." This is not a poetic fancy, but a real fact ranging from the midge in the sunbeam to the leviathan in the ocean. Even the pathless desert blazes with some undiscovered good, and the hidden caverns of the deep conceal treasures of love.

Earth teems and overflows with kindness, and if earth be so full of mercy, what must heaven be where goodness concentrates all its beams. Vaster than the universe of matter, discovered or undiscovered, in suns and stars, and milky ways, flooding space with golden light, is the goodness of our God: and yet, that goodness may be reproduced in us by His Spirit, just as sunbeams may be reflected in all their beauty by the myriad flowers that deck the earth. "None good but God" and those in whom His Spirit dwells. Must the terrible truth be told that no man can be good unless the Spirit of God works in his soul? Such is the teaching of divine truth. We sometimes say, "He is a good man, but not a Christian," but there is no truth in our words. "A corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit"; and no man can bear good fruit but by the Spirit of the Lord. Every thought, word, and deed proceeding from one who rejects the Holy Spirit is corrupt. Association with such a character defiles, and all his steps lead toward death; and so Solomon says, "One sinner destroyeth much good." "But the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord."

The origin of goodness is in God; spiritual goodness is, therefore, a divine quality, and nothing but the Holy Spirit can generate it in man. It seems to be the virtue of all virtues, and no other moral condition contains such strength. Goodness is an impregnable fortress divinely secured. Well does Paul include this quality in his divinely ordered declaration "against such there is no law." Goodness is even more than innocence. It is innocence plus all the virtues and graces of Christian character. The babe is innocent; the mother, on whose lap it sleeps, is good. Her life is more than the life of the innocent child. Goodness stands out bright and glorious as the light of God, in the morning of creation, when it chased away the darkness that was over the face of the deep.

In the Anglo-Saxon tongue, good runs back to God, and spiritually the idea does the same thing. An atheist could not be a good man, because he ignores the fountain of all goodness. The gospel is called "good tidings" by Isaiah, and the soul from so many strains from David's harp seems to be the song of goodness. David says: "My goodness extendeth not to thee, but to the saints that are in the earth."

Philosophy teaches that there is no reaction from the earth to the heavens: the heavens indeed shed their influences upon the world, but the earth returns none back to make the sun shine brighter or the stars more gloriously. God pours His goodness down upon man, but man's goodness can only reach His saints on the earth. God leaves His poor saints upon earth to receive all that is due from us to Him. Gurnall says that "An ingenius guest, though his friend will take nothing for his entertainment, yet, to show his appreciation and thankfulness, will give something to his servants." There is more grateful appreciation in the good we do to others than can be expressed in any other way.

"Oft have my heart and tongue confessed
How empty and how poor I am;
My praise can never make Thee blest,
Nor add new glories to Thy name.
Yet, Lord, Thy saints on earth may reap
Some profit by the good we do;
These are the company I keep,
These are the choicest friends I know."

A very small girl, who read the Bible, came to her mother with some fruit which had been given her. The mother said, "The friend was very kind to give you so many." "Yes," said the child, "she gave me more than these, but I gave some away." "To whom?" inquired the mother. "I gave them to a girl who pushed me off the path and makes faces at me," replied the child, "because I thought it would make her know that I wish to be kind to her, and perhaps she will not be rude again." Goodness is more than honesty, politness, justice, or squareness; it is divineness, celestial attitudes and benevolences operated through Christian living. Goodness is of the heart and not of the head. The plainest and humblest may be good if only God is enthroned in the heart and obeyed in the life.

A young woman in Vermont married a poor but worthy young man against her father's wish, and he drove them from his house and closed his door and heart against them. They settled near Boston, went to work and prospered. Many years after, the father had occasion to go to Boston, and while there decided to visit his daughter. She and her husband received him kindly and entertained him royally. Upon his return, a neighbor inquired how they had treated him. He said, "They have broken my heart; they have killed me. I don't feel as though I could live under it." "Did they abuse you?" inquired the neighbor. "They loved me to death and killed me with kindness," said he. "I can never forgive myself for treating so cruelly my own darling daughter, and spurning her from my door when my precious child loved me so affectionately."

There are hearts in men so true as to "overcome evil with good," and that is the apostolic injunction. There is no law or tribunal that can harm the good man. He dwells in realms where God is regnant, and all the powers of heaven guard his goings. Goodness is like gold—good in all forms and all markets. Its intrinsic value is independent of all speculations; it is the crown of all Christian qualities. It is more than greatness —it is the sum of character. Good or bad tells all. Goodness is not perfection. An apple may be good but not perfect. A man may be good but not perfect. But if God's Spirit works divinely in the soul, the fruit of such a life will be goodness. W. W. MISSION PERIOD.

With February, by our Christian Church calendar, mission period began for Churches of the Southern Christian Convention. It is the most opportune time for teaching missions in the Sunday School, for preaching missions from our pulpits and studying missions in societies and groups. During this period of four months there will be literature available and information ready for all who desire to know and to teach missions.

Missions grew out of the character of God, and were instituted and commissioned by His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Neither the Church nor any human agency initiated the missionary movement and enterprise. But God, through His Son, committed to the Church, and the Church alone, the carrying on of the missionary work. There is only one institution, the Church, that is engaged in the missionary task, and unless the Church does the work it will not be done. No State, benevolent order, or fraternal society will aid in carrying the gospel to those who haven't it, and in building Churches among those who are without Christ and the Church. This missionary task the Church alone must do, or it will not be done.

It is, therefore, a spiritual task. A missionary Church is a spiritually minded Church. The work of missions is a spiritual task. It is confined to the body of spiritual believers in Christ. So while the Churches prepare for Easter, the spiritual festival of the Church, the time is most opportune and fitting for missionary teaching, preaching and practice. May every Christian Church avail itself of this glorious privilege and opportunity. J. O. A.

TWO WAYS OF DOING IT.

There are many methods of Bible study, but there are two ways that especially contrast with each other.

One man studies the Bible to find support for his preconceived notions. Proof-texts are what his soul craves, and the Bible is full of them. A man can take a portion of Scripture out of its setting and make it support almost any "ism" he may desire. This type of man has given us the creeds that divide the body of our Lord into competing, not to say hostile groups. Sad, but true!

Another man goes to the Bible open-minded. He reads it not with a concordance in hand, or at the suggestion of cross-references. He reads it like he does any other book, anxious that it should speak its own message to his heart. He reads it prayerfully, confident that the Holy Spirit will guide him into the understanding of its meaning, its truth. Such a man regards religion not as a creed, but as a way of life, and to him the Bible is a chart for that way. This type of Bible study will unite Christ's Church into one body.

Which way ought we to do it? W. A. H.

SERVICE AND HAPPINESS.

"He that would be greatest among you, let him be servant of all." Modern psychology teaches us that we are by nature neither good nor bad, but are endowed with inherited instincts which are capable of being so modified by environment as to become good or bad. In other words, sin and righteousness are matters of controlling conduct and changing our nature into the likeness of Christ or allowing it to run riot and dissipate into the violation of the possibilities of Christian character. Some modern educationalists would have us believe that the child can be taken and so trained that he will acquire Christian character without conversion through repentance and regeneration, but Christ did not think so nor teach so when he talked to Nicodemus, and Christ knew more in a minute about this subject than the wiseacres of modern education know in a month. I shall pin my faith to Christ and trust Him who said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou canst not tell whence it cometh nor where it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit."

It is true that we can have instruction in the principles of Christianity so far as intellectual and conceptual understanding of its dogmas are concerned, but no experimental understanding of the Christian life can come through the intellect alone. Vital religion is a matter of experience beginning in regeneration and growing toward the full manhood of Christ. The instinctive life exists primarily for the well-being of the physical organism. All the instincts exist for the service of the physical nature and have their ends in such service. They constitute what the apostle Paul calls the 'natural man,' but their activity is attended with pleasure of the natural man, hence their powerful appeal for exercise for the sake of pleasure. When such pleasure is made the end or object of such exercise and we act for the pleasure we sin, but if we exercise these instinctive tendencies only for the purpose for which the Creator endowed us with them, we fulfill His will.

Regeneration brings these instinctive powers into subjection to the Spirit of God, directs them to worthy activities which lead to the formation of wholesome habits which function with the will of God. We are endowed with reason and conscience for the control of these impulses in the creation of wholesome sentiments and dispositions with a Master self-sentiment centered about Christ as the concrete expression of God. With this ideal as a standard of self-control and self-realization to guide us in conduct and character-building, we become stronger and tend toward completeness in Christ with every activity which is done for His sake or in His name.

All our virtues and qualities of character come into being and are developed with the development of our Christo-centric sentiments. Service for others is acting upon the teachings of Christ if done in His name and tends to greatness, completeness, or self-realization. There is an increasing state of happiness with the increasing Christ-likeness of our character. Pleasure is the affective feeling which attends the exercise of any one of the instincts to the neglect of others. Pleasure is the temporary satisfaction of one isolated part of our nature in its independent exercise. It is a substitution of a small part of the self for the entire integrated, unified, organized self composed of all the inherited tendencies of our being acting for one purpose. Happiness is the result of the organization of all the powers of our nature, so that the body, mind, and spirit will be served for their highest good and utilize all the surplus energy of our nature for one supreme purpose in harmony with the will of God. Christ said, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me, and finish His work"; and cried out on the cross: "It is finished." W. C. W.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Hard times are usually considered from a financial standpoint, though it might be well to consider hard times from a spiritual standpoint; and that is even worse than financial hard times. There are several causes for financial hard times: overproduction, overcredit, extravagance in current expenses, overdoing business. Stock corporations, capital that belongs to a large number of people, and handled by a few incompetents on large salaries, running apparently well for a season and then, in stringent periods, passing into the hands of receivers and finally sold to pay off mortgage indebtedness. If men would stay inside of the line of their ability to do business, crashes would be avoidable.

But hard times is business sickness, and is necessary to keep society from running wild and losing moral balance. The psalmist said, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept Thy word." The same is true of society. In what men call good times, business men go astray; but when hard times come, they become more careful. Most all great progress follows hard times. The same is true of great revivals. When society gets very bad, religious leaders become deeply concerned, the gospel is proclaimed with a new emphasis, sinners repent, believe, and join in with the people of God. The greatest movement in the Southern States for financial, industrial and educational progress followed the Civil War. Conditions had reached the bottom, people went to work in earnest, lived within their earning capacity, and times grew better until prosperity blinded the eyes of men and luxurious indulgence turned the tide of prosperity into what men call hard times.

Another cause of hard times has been war. Prices mount up to abnormal heights, men run wild for gain, government pays big wages for service, and high prices for goods, farm products rise with the tide, extravagance spreads over society, and then when the war is over and business drops back to normal, it is called hard times. Then follows failures, complaints, lack of confidence in men and business, and the whole country halts in its progress. This nation is in one of these hard-time stages at the present time. Debtors can't and creditors won't, and so the brakes are on society and the car of progress slows up for the time.

But reaction always follows hard times and prosperity goes forward, and people have faith again in business, in one another, and in God. Solomon was right when he said, "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them." Hard times never hurt as much as prosperity. Riches spoil more people than poverty. People get hopelessly in debt in flush times. Even banks become careful in hard times. The last ten years have been wild years in business and in morals, too. Booms and breaks, fortunes and failures, high living and stint, came along in the wake of prosperity. All artificial means to correct hard times fail. Hard work, economy in expenses, revival of confidence among men, honesty and fair treatment, more regular attendance and support of Church work, will heal all the hard places like rain softens hard ground. W. W. STALEY.

Are we willing to deny ourselves, take up our cross daily, and follow our Lord? This is the acid test of a Christian.

ELON LETTER.

Two new procedures have in recent years come to college campuses—co-operation and counseling.

When I was a college student, there was a feeling of antipathy between faculty and students. We felt that faculty members possessed authority and that we had to obey it, but we did not always relish it, even when we obeyed.

But today the method of co-operation makes for a community interest, even in disciplinary matters. Students and faculty, for example, today decide on the rules and regulations for governing the college, each committee representatively chosen. Students and faculty, acting through a committee, control the chapel services, determining who shall be invited to speak and what topic he shall use. Some older heads think it bolshevistic for students to desire the privilege of sitting in on such matters, but they are mistaken. It is the method of education, of training for life, of democracy.

Even the contents of a course of study are now the subject of repeated conferences, in not a few instances, between the professors in charge and a group of students chosen by the class to represent their views to the teacher. Neither is this bolshevism. A professor who does not know his subject is at a disadvantage in such a procedure, but the well-prepared man is gloriously happy in such a situation. Co-operation in education as a procedure is here to stay.

The other new procedure is counseling. Colleges require much more information now when a student registers than was the custom, even as recently as a decade ago. This information is sought, that the administrative officers and others may really understand the student and be prepared to give him good advice when occasion arises.

A student comes to a professor on some problem. The professor listens carefully and tentatively suggests certain things to be thought over, and that the student return after due consideration. Meantime, the professor goes to the records and learns all he can about this student, his ideals, his scholastic standing, his problems of every character. When he returns he can give him sound counsel. This is not paternalism. It is fraternalism. The counselor is also on the college campus to remain.

Every year the colleges are putting forth greater and greater effort to make the interests of the individual student the real center of the entire educational procedure. When they shall have done this perfectly, we shall have a perfect Christian college, because that was Christ's method in the prototype of all Christian colleges, the twelve whom He trained to carry on His work.

WHAT ARE THE PASTORS DOING?

Many of our pastors seldom write to the Church paper and little is known on the part of the Church as to their activities except as their report appears at the annual Conferences. They may think that what they do is of little concern to any part of the Church except the congregation to which they administer in spiritual things, but this is not true, for both ministers and laymen throughout the Church who have any sentiment of appreciation for the progress of our work are deeply concerned about the successes and achievements of every local organization.

Such information published through our Church paper each week would stimulate our people to appreciate their Church in a broader manner than simply to confine it to the local congregation. We need to cultivate a denominational consciousness, and develop an appreciation for the entire Church and all its enterprises. There is something in our nature, either inherited instinct, acquired habit, cultivated sentiment, developed disposition, or organized personality which rebels against any semblance of imposed, self-constituted, organized, or self-assumed authority which presumes to dictate, dominate, or commisserate those of other lines of activity, and organizations and institutions frequently are interpreted in the wrong light because of the lack of full and free discussion of their problems until complete understanding is developed among all the constituency.

Our ministers in the field and on the firing line constitute the backbone of the Church. They are the advance guard in the kingdom. They lead the fight against sin and unrighteousness. They are the creators, pioneers, adventurers into new fields of activity. They are forging ahead with torch lights of truth, and blazing the way to larger and better things. They should delight to enter new territory, build new Churches, hold evangelistic campaigns, train the young recruits in spiritual values, guide the development of young life in the building of personality, and direct the aspiring youths in vocational guidance. They should magnify their office by engaging in every good work of the minister and pastor and live the larger life by investing their influence in the lives and characters of the rising generation by being servants of all.

When we have made success, when we have found better ways of doing things for Christ, when He has blessed our efforts and brought rich blessings to our people through us or through other members of the congregations to which we have ministered, we should not be falsely too modest to let the Church know what we are doing nor fear the criticism that we are boasting of our own achievements. There is a true modesty and a false modesty. Christ said: "Ye are the light of the world. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Your reports will help your Church paper and the entire Church, and we shall be pleased to have reports from the fields for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

FIELD NEWS.

Bethlehem, Alamance County, N. C., with near four hundred and fifty members, has splendid congregations, are an interesting people, and possess great possibilities. They have a large Sunday School, good teachers, and school continuing through the year.

The children take great interest in singing. The choir leader gives special attention to them, and it is a delight and inspiration to hear them sing, led by Bro. Madren.

The pastor says little about money, but they paid more to missions last year, I am told, than ever before, and other purposes were not forgotten.

It is indeed a delight to serve this dear people and to enjoy such a gracious opportunity to do good. J. W. PATTON.

JOHN WESLEY.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, with its twenty million members, is planted in every nation in the world, and is said to be the largest of all the Protestant group.

The strong body of Christians had its beginning about 1730 in the so-called Holy Club of Oxford University, of which John and Charles Wesley and George Whitefield were the most prominent members.

The Holy Club was nothing more than a body of young men meeting at stated intervals for Bible study, prayer and mutual spiritual encouragement. Because, contrary to the custom of their fellow-students, they took their studies and religion seriously and adopted methodical habits, they were jocularly called "methodists," and so that which was applied to them as a mark of reproach has become their badge of honor.

John Wesley is correctly called the father of the Methodist Church. But even to the end, he seems never to have contemplated the formation of a separate denomination. All his life he spent in ministering to the societies within the Church of England. The ministry of his day is described by Bishop Ryle as gambling, drinking, fox-hunting professionals, who cared nothing for the salvation of men. The Holy Club of Oxford and the succeeding ministry of John Wesley were a revolt against this empty formality and immorality in religion and an attempt to revive the Church of England to spiritual life through the societies.

John Wesley was the fifteenth child, and his brother Charles, the eighteenth, of the Vicar of Epworth, Samuel Wesley, and of his wife, Susannah. It is an interesting fact that the mother of these boys was the twenty-fifth child of her father, and that she also was the child of the parsonage. The Great Duke of Wellington Arthur Wellesley, who assumed the more ancient form of the family name, was a relative.

John Wesley and his movement were rightly termed methodist, for even while a boy he evinced painstaking characteristics. His father once said to his mother, "I think our boy, Jack, would not attend to the most pressing necessities of nature unless he could give a reason for it." The following are some of the rules which he drew up for his own conduct:

1. Begin and end every day with God; and sleep not immoderately.
2. Employ all spare hours in religion; as able.
3. Examine yourself every night.
4. Never on any account pass a day without setting aside at least an hour for devotion.

His biographer tells us that Wesley was constitutionally lazy; but if this is true, he is due all the more praise. "Leisure and I," he wrote his mother, "have parted company!" And from the record of a long life of incessant labors, we can readily believe they never met again. For over fifty years he rose from his bed at four o'clock and retired about ten. When eighty-three years old he decided that it was about time for him to take a little vacation; accordingly, he went over to Holland for a few days only. It was a season of genuine rest. For several days he indulged himself in sleep as late as 4:30 A. M.!

Ministerial activity is not necessarily Christian work; but in this case we can readily believe that it was. Fortunately, Wesley's journal has preserved for us a record of his activities. In forty years he traveled a quarter of a million miles—chiefly on horseback—preached more than forty thousand times, and crossed the Irish Channel fifty times. He wrote two hundred and thirty-three books, including some histories and a work on medicine.

The secret of good horsemanship, says Wesley, is to leave everything to the horse! And so in his travels from one preaching point to another, he threw the bridle reins over the neck of the animal and proceeded to make preparation for the next sermon. The well-known failure of Wesley's marital career was no doubt due to his thought that professional duties should occupy the whole man. To his wife, who once complained of his conjugal indifference, he defended himself by quoting, "Let them that have wives be as though they had none."

The Methodist Church may be said to have been born in 1738, with the organization of the Fetter Lane Society. With this as a beginning, Wesley went everywhere preaching the gospel. In his answer to the charge that he was invading forbidden territory, Wesley used his immortal words, "I look upon the world as my parish; I judge it my bounden duty to declare unto all the glad tidings of salvation." The groups organized in these itineraries formed the nuclei of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Within ten years the movement had spread all over England, and was not slow even in reaching America.

Wherein lay the phenomenal success of John Wesley? Although university trained, he seems not to have been possessed of any very extraordinary native ability or scholarship. Moreover, his judgment was by no means unerring; nor did he appear to be a very well-balanced Bible student. He could see only one set of truths in the Scriptures. Calvanism he summed up in these words: "One in twenty (suppose) of mankind are elected; nineteen in twenty are reprobated. The elect are saved, do what they will; the reprobate shall be damned, do what they can."

A close perusal of the life of John Wesley reveals him to have been a very human person, with like passions with us. But there was a secret of his power, a very simple one indeed. He believed in the Bible as the only and very word of God to man; he believed in God's universal and tender, compassionate love for sinners, and he believed in the efficacy of prayer. Believing these things with all his soul, he had no other ambition in life than to make them known to as many people as possible in a short lifetime.

The close to such a career was a fitting one. The old man was nearing his eighty-eighth birthday. It was his intention to start out on February 28th to visit again his work in all England. On the twenty-third he preached from the text, "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near." In a day or two he took his bed from which he never arose. A few hours before his passing on March 2nd, he burst out in song:

I'll praise my Maker while I've breath,
And when my voice is lost in death
Praise shall employ my nobler powers."

"The best of all is, God is with us! Farewell!"

William Jennings Bryan said there are three requisites of a great speech—the occasion, the audience, and the man. These are also the requisites of a great career like Wesley's. In his case, the occasion was the burning need of a revival of genuine religion: the audience was the mass of unsaved people whom the Established Church of England was not reaching; the man was a devout preacher, of simple, fervent faith and single aim. Through these conditions the Spirit of God touched England and shook her to the foundations.

Is our generation anything similar to England of the eighteenth century? Who doubts the need of a revival of genuine religious faith—even among Church members? And who does not know of the throngs yet untouched by the saving power of Jesus?

We have the occasion. We have the audience. Do we have the men?—Presbyterian Standard.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A MORNING PRAYER.

(February.)

O Loving Father, Thy guardianship is our security. Each morning Thou givest rest and revivification. Grant that, with the constancy of recurring light, our little "taper of desire" may burn and glow until at the light of Thy great fire it shall ignite into a glorious, consuming flame for Thee. Morning breaks, the soul awakes, May it be to a sense of service such as Jesus would have us render—a service of sacrificial living and surrendered will. As conscious, actual stewards of our Lord in the spirit of praise and exultation, O Holy Spirit, lead Thou us on. In Jesus' name. Amen.

JESUS AND THE TITHER.

Jesus had little to say about the tithe. Only once did He mention it, and then incidentally, when He said: "This ought ye to have done." He was dealing with "friends," who had been trained under the Jewish law; they were no longer servants waiting for orders; they had graduated from the lower grades into the higher. They were now bound by a sense of honor, not orders. Is it possible to conceive that He would have scrapped all the training given to the Jewish people in their training for His kingdom? He merely took some things for granted, and one of them was that they had learned to acknowledge God through the separated portion.

Plain honesty in a parenership relation is absolutely fundamental. We said in the beginning that honesty would require a division of the profits. Moreover, it is one thing to make a contribution to a beggar on the street corner and another thing to divide profits with a partner. Listen to men talk about "making contributions"! Is the silent partner a common street beggar? Shall we ever keep the kingdom of Christ on the five-cent bargain counter, and seek to ease our souls by giving a little loose change that we may happen to have, to Him and His kingdom? The great majority of the people of the Church, otherwise good people, are literally robbing their partner of His portion. The moment a man accepts partnership with Christ he is driven to the policy of the separated portion. That belongs to Him. Then will come the problem of administering the remainder for and with Him.

The separated portion does two things, in the language of Ina C. Brown in her wonderful little book on "Jesus' Teaching on the Use of Money." It gives first, the kingdom of God a chance. Without it the claims of the kingdom are completely shut out of a man's life. The cry of the world, its sob and distress, the plea of want and poverty, the hopelessness of heathenism—all these we never hear, shut in as we are in our comfortable homes. It gives, second, the soul a chance. With all the howling appeals that are constantly made to a man to gratify his senses, there is no chance for his soul to develop unless he treats with a sacred sense of honor the separated portion as belonging to his silent partner.

"Let us think for a moment what would happen if every Church member in the United States should actually do as the Bible suggests and set aside one-tenth of his income for God. There are 40,000,000 members in our Christian Churches, with about $40,000,000,000 total annual income. Calculate the tremendous power summed up in one-tenth of that amount, $4,000,000,000. Spent honestly and wisely, such a sum would furnish sufficient money in a few years to teach every living soul the principle of righteousness."—Roger Babson, "Enduring Investments." (From "Royal Partnership," by Melvin.)

A MISSIONARY SUPERINTENDENT.

It very frequently happens that a general superintendent finds himself not well enough acquainted with the missionary work of his Church to instruct the school wisely along that line. He may feel that he does not know enough about the matter to say what shall be introduced into the school in the way of missionary plans and projects. He may not have time to look after this important detail. In such cases a missionary superintendent chosen preferably from the leaders of the Women's Missionary Society may be appointed.

In our school the missionary superintendent has full supervision over all missionary instruction given in the school. She plans with the superintendents of departments, furnishes them with necessary information, and, if desired, herself makes many of the announcements and tells some of the stories.

She is a member of the Board of Religious Education of our school, and with them plans the special missionary programs for the Sunday School year. Every Church has its own special missionary causes for which the Sunday School is in part or wholly responsible. It is for the Board of Religious Education (or the Sunday School Council, if this is the governing board of the school) to decide with the advice of the missionary superintendent just which outside missionary causes the school or any part of the school shall sponsor. This does not mean that the missionary superintendent will wish to dictate, but trivial outside causes will thus not enter the school and draw interest from the school's regular missionary projects.

Since we have had a missionary superintendent to supervise this department in our school, we have not only raised more money for our main missionary causes than ever before, but we have understood far better for what we were giving and the results of our giving.—S. S. Times.

PRACTICAL CHRISTIANS.

Miss Mabel E. Emerson, returning from a world tour, has this to say of American Board activities in West Africa: "The rapid growth of the Church within the last few years is not a mass-movement, but the normal growth due to witnessing Christian lives. The converts come in small groups from many villages, totaling thousands a year. The growth in Bailundo is a good example. In 1916 that Church had less than 500 members; in 1922 it had passed the 1,000 mark; now, in 1929, the membership numbers 3,300, a trebling in seven years. By 1931, judging from the number now enrolled as catechumens in the training classes, there will be more than 5,000 members.

"Nowhere did I see people facing more difficult economic conditions than those in West Africa, where the average daily income is only 5 cents, and yet these African Christians are facing resolutely the obligation of Church support. A new building for Church and school in one of the out-stations, which cost not less than $500, has been built without a dollar of help from the board. Native Christians had contributed money and labor equivalent to 10,000 days' income. The 'words' came to these people less than fifty years ago."—Missionary Review of the World.

MEANS TO AN END.

The Jubilee Year Committee suggests the importance of personal preparation for the approaching Easter and Pentecost observance. It calls attention to the universal reading of the gospel of Luke (24 chapters) preceding Easter beginning in March, and the reading of Acts (28 chapters) between Easter and Pentecost. The American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York, N. Y., will furnish copies of each of these books for one cent each. There is time to order them for your congregation and Sunday School in readiness for a wide reading by your people. The committee heartily commends it.

"The Fellowship of Prayer for the Lenten Season," which has been issued for several years by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life of the Congregational Churches, and which is used also by the Committee on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches, is very valuable. Those of us who have used it each year in our homes and congregations appreciate it very highly. It is a 32-page booklet with daily devotional reading and most helpful comments and suggested prayers. The committee would suggest to our pastors to send for a copy, costing only two cents, to either the Federal Council Commission above, at 1-5 East 22nd Street, New York City, or to the Congregational Commission above mentioned, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. These may be secured at $1.50 per hundred. It would be a most helpful matter to have one hundred for your congregation, and your people would gladly pay the two cents and reap rich benefits from them.

We would call attention to three valuable books for pastors and Church workers which may be secured from the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio. These will help prepare pastors, teachers, workers for this observance: Gordon's "Quiet Talks on Power"; Fosdick's "The Meaning of Prayer" and "The Meaning of Faith." The first is $1.25, and the other two are $1.35 each.

Your committee is very anxious to co-operate with pastors, superintendents, and other workers in any way possible to deepen the life of the Church. Thousands of pastors in the United States are preaching all their sermons during this period from the books of Luke and Acts. Pastors are using appropriate messages in their weekly bulletins. The Federal Council of Churches has offered a suggested list of sermon topics and of prayer-meeting subjects and a general program for the fifty days between Easter and Pentecost. May there come to the Church this spring a spiritual enlargement such as came to Christ's followers at the first Pentecost. We crave for our people such a quickening of spiritual life, such an ingathering, that will bring great rejoicing to the Church. Many communions are observing this Pentecostal observance with deep interest.

Your committee voices the hope that no department or age in your Church may be overlooked in this January-to-Pentecost program in the Churches.

WARREN H. DENISON,
Chairman.

CHRISTIANS IN CHINA.

The present communicant membership of the Christian Churches in China, according to estimates of the Chinese Recorder, Shanghai, is 446,-631. The figures are not set forth as being precise, but are believed to be approximately correct. In 1922, the figure stood at 402,539.

From the same source it is learned that there are now about 4,700 missionaries in China, about 78 per cent of what was regarded as the "normal" number before the confusion of the last few years. The recent "Directory of Missions in China" records 20 new stations as opened, and 500 names of new missionaries who have been added since 1927.—Missionary Review.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

The Woman's Missionary programs have been most interesting and helpful this year, and much praise is due our faithful and efficient Mrs. Alice Morrill, who gives us such wonderful helps and explanations in the Herald of Gospel Liberty magazine number to carry out these programs.

Follow these programs with the aid of the envelope of helps and Mrs. Morrill's suggestions and you will surely have a fine meeting.

The program for February is based on "Faith."

"What's done for God will never die."

Song.

Prayer.

Business.

1. Devotional period—The fifth pillar.

2. Current news is found everywhere in this month's magazine number of the Herald of Gospel Liberty.

3. Story, from "Friends From the Land of Cherry Blossoms."

4. Heart-to-heart message.

Young People's Society.

Purpose—To help us to a better appreciation of the best in other religions and in our own.

1. Special instrumental prelude (sacred).
2. Project committee report.
3. Leader's presentation.
4. Illustrations.
5. "Mohammedanism and Buddhism, and why I Prefer Christianity."
6. Discussion.
7. Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' name."

Scripture (Matt. 7:7-12; Matt. 7:16-20).

A prayer poem.

Sentence prayers.

One verse of "My Jesus, I Love Thee," sung softly as benediction.

"Lest we forget"—These programs are based on a small booklet, "Youth and the World Outlook," by J. L. Lobingin, and may be purchased for 35 cents from C. P. A., Dayton, Ohio.

Be sure to follow the articles by Mrs. Marian M. McCord on these programs for helpful suggestions.

Junior or Willing Workers.

Theme—"God's Other Children."

Song—"I Am so Glad that Our Father in Heaven."

Call to worship and prayer same as last month.

Song.

Prayer. Lead the Juniors in thinking of things for which they themselves will wish to thank God, or things for which they wish to pray.

Offering song—Tune: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Father, to Thy loving kindness
Never failing us we owe
Homes, and friends, and schools, and teachers,
All the pleasures that we know.
So if boys and girls are churchless,
Homeless, friendless, anywhere,
Use, O Lord, these gifts we bring Thee
For Thy needy children's care.

Since this is the month of preparation for the foreign mission offering, it would be well to be clear and convincing in your statements about the needs of and for the work. Use leaflets from foreign mission boards or from the Woman's Board (Mrs. Emma S. Powers), C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. If you are not using the book, "The Jewels the Giant Dropped," use some of the older mission study books. "Kin Chan and the Crab," "Our Japanese Friends," etc., have splendid Japanese stories, and "The Land of the Golden Man" or the home mission book, "Jumping Beans," deal with Spanish-speaking peoples in the Caribbeans and in America. "The Land of Cherry Blossoms," costing 10 cents, contains stories of our own missions in Japan. Continue the project suggested last month for the Philippines if studying that book. Or a similar picture map of Japan may be procured and used in the same way.

Closing song.

Miss Carrie Robison has some splendid suggestions in the Herald of Gospel Liberty this month. Read them. Encourage the boys and girls to join the wide-awake club which is found each month in the Herald.

This is not a program, but my, oh my! how we would love to have a news item to put in this department from your society. Tell others what you are doing, and maybe it will inspire some other society to try harder. Who will be first? Eastern Virginia societies send their notes to Mrs. J. M. Fix, Franklin, Va.; North Carolina societies send notes to Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, Elon College, N. C.; and Georgia and Alabama and Valley Virginia Conferences send directly to me if you do not have a Conference editor.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VIII—February 23, 1930.

The Twelve Sent Forth.

Golden Text: "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but laborers are few. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He send forth laborers into the harvest."—Matt. 9:37.

Lesson: Matt. 9:35-11:1.

Devotional: Isa. 52:7-12.

The Three-Fold Ministry of Jesus.

"And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people." Teaching in a simple, effective, vital way the truths by which men live, preaching in an informal and impressive way the "good news" of the kingdom, and healing the bodies in a tender, compassionate way.

"But when He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion on them." The sight of those great throngs of people with their diseases, their ignorance, their sorrows and their sins, went straight and deep to the heart of the Master. He had compassion; He felt with them. Jesus revealed God. In the heart of God there is a great compassion for His children, all of them, but especially the wayward ones.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest." There was and is so much to be done. There were and are so many without the knowledge of Christ. We have too long overlooked the fact that the way to supply the demand is to pray the Lord of harvest, that He might send forth laborers. It is only as laborers feel that they have been sent forth, or "thrust forth" as the word implies, that they can do effective work.

The Twelve Called and Commissioned.

"Now, these are the twelve: Simon called Peter, meaning a Rock, because of the bold positiveness and potential strength of character in him; Andrew his brother, a quiet, unassuming fellow, the one who brought Peter to Jesus and who undoubtedly was a fruitful personal worker; James and John, brothers, so fiery that they were called the sons of thunder; Philip, who brought Nathaniel to Jesus; Bartholomew, probably Nathaniel, a man noted for his sincerity; Thomas the doubted, but also a man of indisputable courage; Matthew the tax-collector, who wrote the first gospel; James the son of Alphaeus, who is called James the Less, because he was a short man; Judas who was probably the brother of James the Less; Simon the Canaanite, a revolutionist, and Judas Iscariot, the only one of the twelve who was not a Galilean—men of varied temperaments and capacities, men unlettered and untutored in formal education. But they loved Jesus and they learned of Him, and as a result they turned the world upside-down and made themselves immortal. We call Him Master, and we do well, for such He is. Only a Master could have done what He did with the material He had.

Jesus not only called these twelve; He commissioned them. He gave them power over unclean spirits, power to heal diseases. For the time being, He restricted the field of their activity—they were to go only to the Jews. They were immature, and Jesus, with consummate skill, gave them tasks not too great for them. They were to trust in God for the necessities of life; they were to act upon His statement that those who seek first the kingdom of God shall have added unto them such things as are necessary. They were to love men, but they were not to be blind to the limitations of men—they were to keep their eyes open and to use their common sense. They were not to be worried beforehand what they were to say in case they were delivered up to magistrates—the Heavenly Father would inspire them in such an emergency; they were to give their thought and energy to the task immediately at hand. He told them very frankly right at the beginning that they need not expect a "soft job." In fact, devotion to Jesus was going to cost tremendously. But in case they were persecuted in one city, they were to go on to another city—there were too many places which would be open to them, and there was so much to be done in a short time that they could not afford in this instance to waste time.

They were to derive their strength and their inspiration from the fact that they were in the Father's hand. If they confessed Him, He would confess them. But they were not to allow anything, not even family affection, to come between them and God and the interests of His kingdom. Self-denial and self-discipline were to be the central factors in their lives. The only way by which they could really save their lives was to give themselves to something larger. In losing life for the sake of the gospel, they were really to find it; find its deeper meaning and enter into its larger possibilities.

They were to be personal ambassadors for Jesus Christ. He not only identified Himself with them; He that receiveth you, receiveth me, and He that receiveth me receiveth Him that sent me—but He promised that they would not lose their reward.

The instructions governing on this occasion are in many senses limited in their general application. The twelve were going out on a special mission. But they deal with abiding principles, and they need to be read and studied by every Christian worker today. They were written for our instruction, that we might be thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, February 23, 1930.

Topic: "The Value of the Bible for Non-Christian Nations."

Scripture Reading: Isa. 55:8-11; Luke 8:11.

Non-Christians come to know and understand the Bible because the Bible is taken to them by missionaries. What the Bible will come to mean to these people is determined by their own lives and their background and the lives of the missionaries who take the Bible to them. The lives of the missionaries are studied and read by the natives many times before the Bible can be studied by them. Sometimes there is no written language and the missionaries have to reduce the language to writing. This is a long and tedious piece of work. Sometimes it is difficult to find words that are needed to convey the message. Eearly missionaries to Africa could find no native word for the word "love." Years and years they waited. Then one day a missionary saved the life of a native. The native said, "You saved my life." The missionary then used this word "saved" for "love" in his gospel story. Read Rom. 10:14, 15.

The values of the Bible to non-Christians may be suggested by mentioning several things that the Bible brings to them.

To the non-Christians, the Bible brings a knowledge of God. Non-Christian nations and even individuals know something of some form of a god or gods. But they do not know God. The Bible brings them this message, the most wonderful and the supreme message of the ages. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts; neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." What ideas of God do non-Christians have? What idea do they gain from the Bible? Will this idea make their lives happier?

The Bible brings non-Christians into a fellowship with Christ. Not only are they introduced to God, but to the greatest Friend the world has ever known. Careful and earnest study of the Bible makes fellowship with Christ more real and wonderful to individuals.

When people know Christ, then happiness and satisfaction—nay, more than satisfaction, even peace—come. Our missionaries have a very hard task to present Christ without giving the idea that He belongs to us. The danger in this was not realized until very recent years when the peoples to whom missionaries had been sent began to protest, saying that they were satisfied without Christianity. India's cry of "You may keep your Christianity; we want your Christ," is a challenge to missionaries to the biggest task ever known to mankind—the presentation of a Saviour to a needy world.

"It must always be remembered that Christianity did not spring from the New Testament, but the New Testament from Christianity. Christianity did not begin as a religion of books, but as a religion of spirit. There was neither time nor need to write books when the Lord Jesus was at the very doors. Still less was there need of authoritative books to guide men whose dominant conviction was that they had the mind of Christ, the very Spirit of God, guiding them constantly from within."—E. J. Goodspeed.

Listen now to the voice of a woman from India: "Christ gives to the women and girls of India a great hope. Before we knew of Him we could do one of two things to vindicate our existence. We could bear a son or we could become a bride of the gods. To do the latter was to lead a life of unutterable debasement. We married early, while still children, with the hope that we could become the mother of a son. Today we are being lifted out of superstition to a brighter life, and we are beginning to walk life's pathway with women of other nations in the footsteps of the Master. When He walks with us along the dusty highway, when we see our sisters who still do not know Him, and our hearts yearn to tell them of Him, we begin to understand His great love. Slowly we, who have never known anything of love, begin to see its meaning."

"The annual reports of the Bible Society are full of stories of the way the Bible appeals to all sorts and conditions of men all over the world, and speaks to them not as a foreign book, but in accents that they can understand." Is it just our Bible?

"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ,
And not on paper leaves, or leaves of stone,
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it,
Texts of despair or hope, of joy, or moan,

While rolls the sea, while mists the mountains shroud,
While thunder's surges burst on cliffs of cloud,
Still at the prophet's feet the nations sit."

—Ellen Sturgis Hooper.

THE CHURCH AT WORK.

Some Items to which We Should Give Heed.

1. See that the budget plan of the Convention is adopted by every Church and remittances made monthly (or quarterly) for one-twelfth (or one-fourth) of the full allotment. Leading laymen should give attention to this.

2. To conduct a complete, thoroughly-prepared-for every-member canvass annually for local current expenses and for benevolences. It is not sufficient to give, say, ten per cent of the amount raised to benevolences. Each member of the congregation should be solicited for both.

3. To see that a high class of men and women are chosen for Church clerks and Conference secretaries—persons with education, accuracy, and a love for details of records and statistics.

4. To do teamwork by carrying out the denominational program in the local Church. Co-operation is a great word. Our independence has too often spelled failure.

5. To see that every member is given a definite task and to follow such assignment with a definite check-up.

6. To inspire confidence in your leadership, be it pastor, official board, Conference officer, or general officials. Support your leaders. They did not call, choose, or elect themselves.

7. Keep informed on the work of your Church. Order your copy of "Official Proceedings" of the Piqua Convention today. It is ready. Send dollar with order.

8. Some of the great words in Church life—loyalty, faithfulness, accuracy, promptness, sacrifice, vision.

9. To greatly increase the number of weekly subscribers, both to local expenses and to benevolences. The primary reason for inactive members is the Church's failure to enlist them financially for these two items.

Generous Individual Givers.

We are voicing a plea for more individuals to make worthy personal gifts to benevolent work. Great benevolent agencies can be supported only in part by democratic, free-will offerings. The Red Cross cannot depend alone upon its one dollar enrollment fees; the Federal Council of Churches, Anti-Saloon League, community chests, week-day schools of religion, etc., cannot execute their programs with the offerings from only the Churches and organizations. They must depend upon generous gifts from individuals with deep interest. It is so with your larger Church work. The General Convention and its several departmental phases of work sorely need generous personal gifts, and many individuals for their own good need to make such gifts.

WARREN H. DENISON, Sec'y.

NOTICE.

So far, no invitation has been received for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference. If any Sunday School within the bounds of the Conference is contemplating entertaining this Convention, your executive committee would appreciate an invitation as early as possible. We would like to complete the arrangements of the program as early as possible. The final arrangements of this program depend upon where we are to meet. Please send your invitation to Rev. J. E. McCauley, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

MISSIONARIES.

Who are these
That run along the highways of the world
And seek its meanest suburbs with their feet?
They are the troubadours of God,
Blowing an airy melody along earth's aisles
As solid as the masonry of dreams.
They are the wise eccentries
Who reason with divine hilarity.
They are the canny merchants
Who buy the hearts of nations for their Prince.
They are the vivid tailors
Who push the threads of age through their hands.
They are the white militia
Who take no blood, to spill it, save their own.
They are the blessed coolies
Who lift the loads of folly on their backs
And dump them into truth's dissolving streams.
They are the blithe outrunners
Who trek the world's long reaches for old trails
Whereon to lay the pavement of new years.
They are the grave cross-carriers
Who bear stern wooden gibbets on their backs
And nail their loves and treasures to the beams.
They are our princely brothers,
Born of the womb which bore us,
Who speak for us amid the courts of life.—Ex.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

SNOW-CAPPED.

"Blessed are they in whose spirit is no guile." —John 1:47-51.

It is a thrilling delight to travel through mountains. In the distance they appear to speak benedictions. Our text speaks of guileless spirits. Can you recall the people you know whose presence is genuine and delightful and uplifting?

Nathanael souls are pearls among God's people. It is possible for every soul to be one of these pearls. Just be pure in heart, and thou art as white as snow. Such whiteness of character is the unspeakable glory of the human race.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, give us the light of faith, the singleness of eye; light which sees things right and sees God, makes us pure. Then shall we see the hills around us covered with mighty heroes whose spirits are heavenly, and make us white. Amen.

TUESDAY.

MARRIAGE AND HOME.

"Male and female created them."—Gen. 2: 18-24.

The first thing God did in the creation of things was to establish marriage and a home. He ordered men and women to live together in wedlock. When God came in the person of Jesus, He sanctified this marriage by being present at marriage feasts and blessing them.

Every man should have the wife fitted for him, and every woman should have the husband fitted for her. Each should be a helpmate and blessing to the other, and each should be able to receive the other as a gift from God.

Nothing but the true idea of the Christian spirit and genuine love will make this so. Love unites the hearts and wills of the two, and together they become strong to fight the battles of life and bear the day's burdens. In love they gladly serve each other and are glad to give in to the other for the better things. In love each is happy in the other and both have their troubles in common.

When this is so, wedlock is a glorious estate. Though having many trials, it is rich in grace and has a refining and sanctifying influence on everybody.

How this beautiful relation is desecrated by improper unions, by ill-considered tempers, by lowering marriage to the plane of mere sexual love!

How often separate opinions divide and produce discord until one becomes a torment to the other and love's fire is quenched!

Self-love has never made any one happy. But for each to love the other and to have the union in Christ, happiness is consummated.

"Who so findeth a wife, findeth a good thing and obtaineth favor of the Lord."

Prayer.—God, give us happy marriages and happy homes in which love is the bond of union, in which love is the fire, in which love is the strength, and the riches, and the life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A PRAYER OF DAVID.

Lesson: Psa. 143. (Read entirely.)

The idea is, sin is the cause of all misery, but the Lord has pity on all who are his and healeth them. God is the God of all, and we are His servants.

It is the nature of the children of God that the more they suffer, the more they yearn after the Lord. Others are embittered, or they are burdened in their hearts and doubt, or they despair. Where there is no humility there is no truth in God, nor is there any heartfelt longing after Him.

Stretch out your hands to Him. Tell Him that your love thirsts after Him. Cling to His precious promises. He has never thrust any one away who has done this.

Prayer.—Lord, give us humility and a childlike trust in Thee. Give us victory to the glory of Thy name. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HEAVENLY TWINS.

"Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me whole." "Lord, I am not worthy that Thou shouldst come under my roof."—Matt. 8:1-13.

The leper's speech was beautiful, but still more beautiful are the words of the centurion. These passages are the beautiful twins of the Bible—humility and faith.

Christ has saved you, and this should appear in your conduct. Your strength to do this is in God. Come to Him as the leper, and submit to Him as the centurion, and in Him you will have an unfailing well from which to draw.

Prayer.—Dear Lord Jesus, Thou who alone givest all good things, give us humility, and faith, that we may experience Thy power to save, that we may be sanctified in spirit, in love and in body, and live with Thee forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

STRIKING BACK.

"Recompense to no man evil for evil."—Rom. 12:17-2.

To love an enemy is our hardest lesson. But a Christian must learn that to do evil is the business of the devil, and that to do good unto all men is the work of God, and a work directly imposed upon Christians. It is understood that we are to live peaceably with all, unless to do so works harm to him or to others, or perchance curtails the honor of God. But in matters of personal concern it is neither right nor necessary for one to stir up a quarrel. He who desires to live peaceably finds it possible to do so. To suffer injustice in order to do right makes one the gainer in the end. Love is stronger than any one's hate. Quench the fires of hate by loving. One of the most pitiful objects of life is one who is the slave of his own anger.

He who is in Christ is free from this, forgiving enemies and blessing them.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, my instruction is dwelt and Thy grace and power are great. Give us an overpowering knowledge of sin and melt our sands in love and conquer us over old sin. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE VOICE OF THE WELL.

"Whoever drinketh of the waters that I shall give him shall never thirst."—John 6:6-14.

The well is the place of refreshing for weary and thirsty people.

The woman of Samaria was weary and unhappy and did not understand what ailed her. The well of her refreshing became the symbol of the revelation of herself to herself and she found Christian and happy adjustment in society with all sins forgiven.

Many Christians, as well as infidels, are tired of their life, but they have put the yoke on and do not know how to throw it off, so they give up.

The Lord offers deliverance, Christianity wakes the soul to its happiness, brings its yearnings to the light of day; and the well is the symbol of it all, bringing both eternal life and heaven's refreshing.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, speak to our hearts of the waters of life that make the soul happy; give us thirst for these things, and make our every-day experiences a well of water springing up into everlasting life. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GET AWAY.

"Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, into a land that I will show them."—Heb. 11:8-12.

It may be strained to make this text teach the importance of leaving our daily cares and getting in a spiritual realm by going to Church and worshiping God today.

But the sanctuary is the way of God in worship, instruction and Christian experience. This was what Abraham sought, and he had only the Word of God to guide him. Obedience thereto led him to God's country and an imperishable state.

We have the promise of eternal life. Today, let the heart leave the work, the home, and all else necessary, and enter the Canaan of Christian worship and devote the life to the Lord.

Prayer.—Lord, help us to believe, and to launch out on Thee. Give us grace to believe as Abraham did, for Jesus' sake, we ask it. Amen.

SENTIMENTS.

Sentiments are essential in life. They may be good or evil, for they are acquired.

Instincts are innate, and are, therefore, good; but when they function for pleasure only, the result is sinful. Emotion is of the mind alone, being the excited action of some inward feeling. So instincts are not sinful, emotions depend upon mental activities, and sentiments, being acquired, may be either right or wrong, producing good or evil in logical results.

Instincts, emotions and sentiments are the factors governing human life, producing actions, the result of which is character.

All religious activities should be to produce right, or Christian, sentiments.

The fundamental, or potent, question in every Church and with every leader and member should be, What are my sentiments? What results are desired? What is my aim or purpose? Is it to worship, love and serve God, or for what I may gain personally? To serve or to be served? To fill the hard place or seek for the easy?

In the light of these questions, let every one of us find his real status and purpose in Church life, whether it be in pulpit or pew, doing our part in developing among every one, and especially the young people, sentiments for the kingdom of God, to the saving of both soul and body to the glory of God. And, too, let us not forget that the institutional Church may function as a social organization long after the Spirit of Christ has become extinct.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I want to call your attention to Bro. M. W. Hollowell's letter published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, issue of February 6th, on the second page —"A Word for the Orphanage." If you failed to read it, look up your SUN and read it carefully. It's worth reading many times. It's to the point. He struck the right key, and it ought to inspire many to want to help the little children in the Christian Orphanage who need your help so badly at this time. The misfortune of losing our barn in the early fall with practically all of our hay crop has been heart-breaking to us. We had worked hard all the year and had the finest crop of hay we had ever raised, but when time came to harvest our crop the rains set in, and all through haying season it rained. It was very hard to get hay dry enough to put in the hay-loft. Much of it got too ripe and the beans so near ripe, and with the dampness of the hay, it caused spontaneous combustion and set it on fire. It was unfortunate to happen so early in the fall, because it necessitated our cattle to stand out in the bitter cold weather, with only a temporary shelter to protect them from the cold, snow and sleet.

We have succeeded in getting our new barn built, and it is now furnishing our cattle and mules warm quarters, and we are happy. It was hard for us to sleep when we knew that our cows that furnished such nice milk for the children were out in the cold. We have a great deal of sympathy for dumb brutes, and always like to see them in comfortable quarters. We still lack several thousand dollars of having enough money to pay for it. I will let you know the balance needed just as soon as we can have a settlement with the contractor.

We truly hope our people will come to our rescue and mail Mr. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., checks to help finish paying for the barn. Bro. Darden is treasurer of the new barn fund. All contributions will be appreciated.

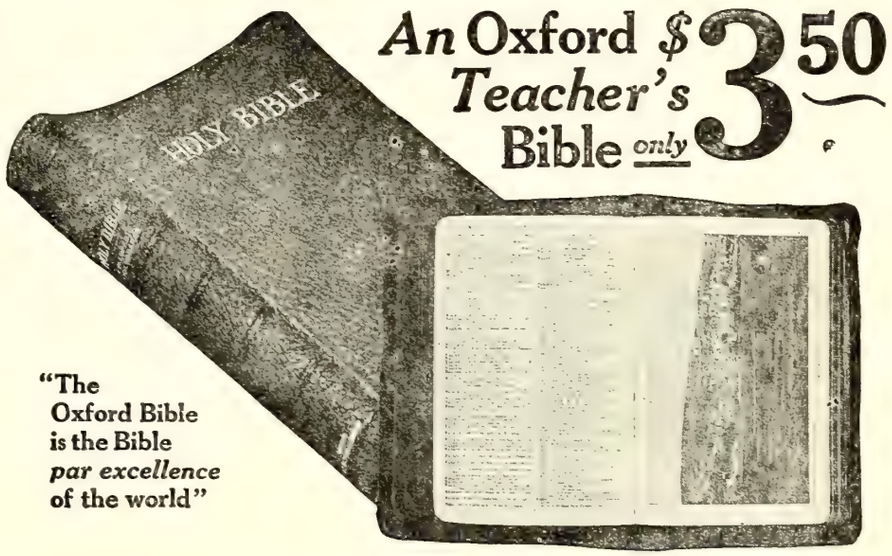
High blood pressure has become the peril of many people. The Public Health Service advises that a person who has it should not become a "high blood pressure fiend." That is, he should not be constantly thinking and talking about it. Let him learn how to regulate his eating and his activity; then he "should adopt a cheerful frame of mind, shun too frequent estimations of the pressure, avoid physical and mental, and especially emotional, excesses and get plenty of rest, and he may live with his pressure to a ripe old age." —Christian Advocate.

OXFORD BIBLES



An Oxford Teacher's Bible only $3.50

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

The best recommendation of the OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLES is the fact that over 3,000,000 copies have been sold. The wonderful helps they contain save your time because they are alphabetically arranged, making reference easy. They take the place of many books about the Bible, and can be depended upon, being written by eminent scholars. The Helps contain 32 graphic illustrations, besides 15 beautifully colored maps. The text is the Authorized or King James version, with over 50,000 centre column references.

LANETT—NOONDAY.

This is our third year as pastor of Lanett, and we have a faithful band of Christian workers at this Church. About a year ago, we organized a new class in our Sunday School. This class is composed of our young married men. They began at once to plan á Sunday School annex, which was very much needed. On last Sunday morning we opened our new rooms, and it was a great day for us, for we now have ample Sunday School rooms, dressing rooms, and pastor's study.

This class is doing great work under the leadership of Bro. Woodie Seamore, as teacher, and the members of the class will make good Church workers. The teacher is enthusiastic, and it means a great deal for the future usefulness of the members of his class. We are expecting great things for the Church through this class and teacher.

Bro. G. F. Patridge is teacher of the young people's class and he has a very enthusiastic class of young men and young women who are doing a great work. The class has faith in their teacher and the teacher is trying to develop the right spirit and loyalty to the Church in the life and character of these young people. This is the largest class in the school, and from this class we expect our future leadership. May the Lord give Lanett Church and the Church at large an educated, consecrated leadership from the young people who will put the kingdom of God first in their lives.

Bro. J. T. Cox, one of our most faithful men, is teacher of our mothers' class. This class seems to be the leaven which leavens the entire school with spiritual life.

Wilbur Huff, Mrs. T. F. Roquemore, and Mrs. Johnson have charge of the primary and beginner classes. These classes are large, the teachers are excellent, and they are doing fine work.

The whole school is under the superintendency of Bro. C. R. Rutledge, who is a consecrated Christian, and has the confidence and esteem of the entire school. They believe in him and he believes in his school. We are looking forward to great success this year, and if all are faithful in the future as they have been in the past, we shall realize our fondest hope.

We have a Missionary Society and Christian Endeavor Society of both seniors and juniors, and we are delighted to report that these societies are doing commendable work.

Noonday Church is located at Wedowee, Ala., Randolph County, where a junior high school is located. Last year, under the leadership of Rev. C. W. Carter, this Church launched a building program, and we now have an edifice that is a credit to the denomination. The Church building is paid for, and there was never a finer spirit manifested than that exemplified during the building of the Church. Perfect harmony prevailed.

Under the leadership of Bro. O. Messer, the Sunday School has taken on new life, increased its enrollment, and is doing fine work.

I resumed my work at this Church on the fourth Sunday in October last year and held the first service in the new building. Since that time we have received two very valuable members—Bro. O. Messer, from the M. E. Church, South, and Mrs. Joe McManus, from the Congregational Methodist. After three years' absence from these people, we are glad to return to them a spastor and enjoy with them the work that is nearest our hearts.

We have organized an official board in the Church, consisting of eleven of our young men who are very much interested in the work. It is a real pleasure to sit in council with them about the work of the kingdom. This Church is doing things new as she has never done before.

We are planning to have Rev. G. D. Hunt with us to dedicate our new house of worship and to hold our revival meeting, beginning the fourth Sunday in next July, and we are expecting a great meeting.

My appointments at Lanett are every Sunday night and every Sunday at 11 o'clock except the fourth Sunday. J. D. DOLLAR.

WHAT NEXT?

The attack on the Bible and the Church, which is the body of Christ, continues to increase. We can hardly read a religious periodical, secular magazine, or even the daily paper, without seeing something of this kind. Here is just a sample or two we ran across in our daily reading:

Dr. Fosdick, in his book, "The Modern Use of the Bible," has this to say: "The historic Jesus has given to the world the most appealing and effective explanation of vicarious sacrifice." Does this sound orthodox? Read on: "Wherever one meets with vicarious sacrifice . . . in Livingston . . . Father Damien . . . Florence Nightengale, it is always the most subduing and impressive fact mankind can face." And again: "Vicarious suffering is not new in human life."

Now, Dr. Fosdick has made clear what he means by "vicarious." Nothing different in the vicarious suffering of Christ on the cross and the vicarious suffering of man except it may be in degree. Child of God, is there any food in this for you? any hope? any salvation? Surely not!

Now, it is also intimated that the Church of God is about to go to pieces. Dr. Peter Ainsley is quoted as saying, "If Protestants and Catholics do not unite, Christianity is doomed." When will this great program of uniting stop? What strange meaning one must give to the Word of God when he can believe that true Christianity, the Church, the body of Christ, can fail? What will man do to help God out of this dilemma into which he has gotten himself? Do we believe that true Christianity is founded on the "Rock," and that "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it?" Have the words of Psalm 115:3 lost their meaning? "But our God is in the heavens; He hath done whatsoever He hath pleased." And is there no hope in the word of the inspired apostle in Eph. 1:11? "Who worketh all things after the council of His own will."

I haven't the slightest fear for the Church, for He will "present it to Himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing." In the daily papers we see this subtle attack on the Church and the Word of God from another angle. Dr. Delaney, Episcopalian, of New York, together with Dr. Trexler, Lutheran, have taken a shot at good old gospel songs that have been the means, under grace, to the salvation of thousands. "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Jesus, Lover of My soul," "I Need Thee Every Hour," "Rock of Ages," and "Onward, Christian Soldiers," are said by them to be "sloppy," "spine-ticklers," "sickly sentimentalism," "words, nothing but words," "merely dragging language along."

What an awful indictment against the Word of God, the Church and the saints of God who wrote these hymns! What proud boastings in a man when he can no longer say "I need Thee every hour." What blindness of mind and heart when one no longer sees the need of flying for refuge to the bosom of Jesus! What terrible distance one must be from the throne of grace when he can no longer pray, "Nearer, my God, to Thee"! What a thrust at the Son of God to deny Him as the "Rock of Ages"! The saints of earth and heaven will never cease to praise Him for the truth expressed in these words.

"Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to Thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to Thee for dress,
Helpless, look to Thee for grace;
For I to Thy fountain fly:
Wash me, Saviour, or I die."

J. Lee Johnson.

"DRESSED."

Our depot agent informed us today that there was a box for us, express prepaid. We were anxious to see and know what it contained. The parcel was soon removed and opened. To our suprise, it was an outfit of wearing apparel for the preacher. There was only one name on the box, that of Bro. Carey Welch, a very good friend of ours. We suppose Bethel and New Hill Churches combined their efforts and did this. We have found them a pleasant and splendid people to serve. We wish for them the best there is in the Christian life.

We wish to hereby acknowledge our many, many thanks to these good people for their kind and generous remembrance in such a substantial way. May the Lord richly bless them and enable us to be a better servant, and thereby prove our appreciation for what they have done. There are many things to encourage us in the Christian life if we only take time to note them.

Again we wish to say thanks to you all and to the Lord for making it possible through you.

Your humble servant,

L. L. Wyrick.

AMBROSE.

I spent last Sunday with the Ambrose Church, preaching at both services. A very deep interest was manifested, and the attendance was good for that place, considering weather conditions. This was the regular time for preaching, so Rev. W. C. Carpenter, their pastor, was present. Bro. Carpenter is one of our busy pastors, having charge of several Churches and is principal of a large school in south Georgia.

The Sunday School was in the afternoon. At the close of the school I stressed the fifth-Sunday offering for Piedmont Junior College, and then Bro. T. J. Holland, Prof. W. M. Melton, and Prof. Dees presented the matter to the school, and in less than twenty minutes they had pledged $150 to be paid by members and classes of the Sunday School, with thirty-five present. This is certainly fine. What school will go them one better. If all of our Sunday Schools and Churches in the Conferences of Georgia and Alabama will get behind the college like this school, we will see a brighter day for Piedmont Junior College.

But we have still more good news from Ambrose. Bro. T. J. Holland has agreed to buy enough lumber to finish our auditorium in the new administration building of the college. When I announced in chapel what the folks of Ambrose had agreed to do last Sunday, the students certainly did cheer. Let us hear from others.

OBITUARIES.

ESTEP.

William J. Estep passed to his reward in Quicksburg, Va. After services by the pastor, the body was interred at Cedar Grove, Shenandoah County, Va., January 30, 1930. He was 67 years old. God's blessings on those who await this side.

B. J. ESTEP.

WILLIAMS.

Hilda Williams, three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Williams, of Williamsville, Shenandoah County, Va., was laid to rest at Cedar Grove February 6, 1930. She leaves parents, two brothers, and twin sisters. Services at Whistler's Chapel by Pastor. May she be a guiding star to lead others to the Saviour.

B. J. EARP.

SHIFLETT.

Arthur Clyde Shiflett, son of Bro. and Sister Earman Shiflett, of near Shenandoah, Va., was born September 9, 1924, and died December 29, aged 5 years, 3 months, and 21 days. Brother Shiflett's home has been the scene of much affliction and sorrow this winter, and the death and burial of this little son was unusually sad. Surviving are the parents, four brothers, and seven sisters. Funeral services were held at the home, December 29, 1929.

A. W. ANDES.

BARFIELD.

Martha Catherine Barfield was born on July 2, 1847, and died December 19, 1929, age 82 years, 5 months and 16 days. Sister Barfield had been in declining health for several years, but as she grew weaker in the flesh she grew stronger in the love and faith of Jesus Christ.

She was a member of the Forest Home Christian Church, and a devout Christian. She will not only be missed in the home circle, but in the Church and community. The services were conducted at Forest Home by the writer, assisted by Rev. G. H. Veazey. Interment was in the Church cemetery.

She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, five children, and a host of friends. May the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort sustain and bless the sorrowing hearts.

A. H. SHEPPARD.

Glenn, Ga.

JONES.

Henry Thomas Jones, son of Fleming and Mary Jones, was born in Halifax County, Va., May 10, 1860, and died at his home in the same county December 24, 1929; age 69 years, 7 months and 15 days. August 23, 1894, he was married to Miss Dora Clay, who died June 15, 1929. There are nine children surviving—Mrs. J. W. Walker, Miss Anna, Henry Otis, Thomas Ray, Alvin Maloney, Clarence Woodrow, Clifton Wilson, Eunice and Herbert Edward.

Bro. Jones joined the Catawba Baptist Church in 1911, and later transferred to Liberty Christian. The deceased had been a great sufferer for twenty years. He was a successful farmer, and leaves, besides his children, a number of relatives and friends. The funeral and burial were conducted at his Church, by the writer, on December 27, 1929. May the Lord comfort and guide the bereaved.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

A RELIGION OF GOOD CHEER.—

Christianity is essentially a religion of happiness. The idea that religion is associated with gloom, is a very ancient and persistent error. It was flourishing in the time that our Lord was upon earth. It called down much unkindly criticism upon the head of the Master because He refused to fall in with it. The fact that He entered happily into the every-day affairs of the people 'round about Him caused the adherents of long-faced sanctiosity to pronounce Him a "Man gluttonous and a wine-bibber." Jesus did His best to banish the ugly specter of gloom from the face of the earth, but His efforts have not yet reached ultimate success. To those of us who profess to be Christians and have not yet left off a funereal atmosphere, it might do us good to catch some of the following cheery spirit of J. W. Foley's poem, entitled "Good Morning."

Good morning, Brother Sunshine;
Good morning, Sister Song!
I beg your humble pardon
If you've waited very long.
I thought I heard you rapping—
Won't you walk right
in?

Good morning, Brother Gladness;
Good morning, Sister Smile!
They told me you were coming,
So I waited on a while.
I'm lonesome here without you:
A weary while it's been;
My heart is standing open—
Won't you
right
in?

Good morning, Brother Kindness;
Good morning, Sister Cheer!
I heard you were out calling,
So I waited for you here.
Some way, I keep forgetting
I have to toil and spin,
When you are my companions—
Won't you
right

LUTHERAN BODIES UNITE.—

The world moves on apace, and those who think that the Church is not keeping abreast with the spirit of the times should be daily encountering arguments to prove the absurdity of their belief. One of the most significant steps toward the unification of the followers of Christ is the recent organization of a world federation of all the Lutheran bodies. It is a long and important step toward the fulfillment of Christ's prayer that all His followers may be one. Dr. John A. Morehead becomes the first president of the Lutheran World Convention. The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri is the only organization of Lutherans that has so far refused to co-operate in the united movement. This action gives the Lutheran Church in this country a combined membership of 4,521,977, and makes it the third in point of numbers of the Protestant groups in America.

The genesis of the movement which has resulted in the bringing together of the Lutheran bodies is attributed to the influence of the World War. Thus again is it exemplified that "The Lord maketh the wrath of man to praise Him." The Lutherans in America became concerned about the welfare of their brethren who were suffering the consequences of the war in the Old World. They contributed $8,000,000 toward the relief of their suffering, thus were the Lutherans of America brought together in a common task which linked them with those whom they had helped in other lands. They found, as is generally the case when Christians really come to know each other, that their differences were of far less consequence than they had thought; and that they were really united in a common faith.

It is true that there are denominational groups between which there is a great gulf fixed. In many cases, however, the fact that there are so many different groupings has come about through geographical location, and the lack, at the time of organization, of adequate means of communication to bring them into touch with other groups in remote sections, which were really one in spirit. The very names of the bodies which have entered the World Lutheran Convention from America suggest the part which geography has played in forming divisions, and also serve to illustrate the fact that there could not be wide differences between them if there be anything in a name. The list is as follows:

"The United Lutheran Church in America, the Evangelical Lutheran Joint Synod of Ohio, the Synod of Iowa, the Lutheran Synod of Buffalo, the Evangelical Lutheran Jehovah Conference, the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana Synod of North America, the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, Lutheran Free Church, Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, Church of the Lutheran Brethren of America, United Danish Evangelical Church, Danish Lutheran Church, Icelandic Evangelical Lutheran Synod in North America, Finnish Evangelical Church, Finnish Lutheran National Church, Finnish Apostolic Lutheran Church, Evangelical Synod of Wisconsin, Slovak Evangelical Lutheran Synod of America, and the Norwegian Synod of American Lutheran Church."

THE DANGERS OF MASS PRODUCTION.—

We owe a great deal, especially in America, to the possibilities of mass production. There is not a single American family that does not enjoy a great many more of the necessities and luxuries of life than would be possible were it not for mass production. The automobile is an apt illustration of what we mean. Henry Ford's idea of building so many automobiles that he could bring the price within the reach of the average purse, while not absolutely original, was original and revolutionary in its application to the automobile industry.

It ought, however, to be possible for thinking people to acknowledge the benefits of mass production and profit thereby, and at the same time recognize and take steps to safeguard against the dangers of mass production in the realms where it cannot be safely applied. For we believe that there are fields where the application of the principles of mass production must inevitably result in evils and dangers.

That is one of the principal troubles with the movie industry as it is at present organized in America. Mass production cannot be satisfactorily applied to creative art. And if movie production is to do what it ought to do, it must be creative art. Whenever art is commercialized it is in grave danger of prostitution. There are realms where quality ought ever to be the standard, and not quantity.

The same danger is easily recognized in the world of literature. Every one is familiar with the fact that many of the great masters of literature were a long time in winning popular recognition. In many instances, time was necessary to develop a taste that would measure up to the high standard of their literary merit. Perhaps many of the immortals owe their fame to the fact that their early works were not recognized as masterpieces. They became masters in trying to so perfect their work that the world must recognize its worth. Many of the modern writers who have had their early works turn out to be best-sellers, in their efforts to quickly produce other best-sellers have only succeeded in producing pale imitations of the work that first won them fame.

One cannot but wonder whether or not the Church has escaped the danger of mass production. It may be that we are so eager to produce many converts in a short time that much of our work fails to stand the test. Standardization of character is neither possible nor desirable. The soul of man is a work of art in which are united the highest and best efforts of both man and God. Its development is the task of a lifetime; its perfection the work of eternity.

NOTES-PERSONALS

During this mission period in our Churches and Sunday Schools, books, talks, literature should be used to inform our people as to what we are doing on the mission fields. The Mission Secretary has literature to send on request for this good purpose.

Bro. C. A. Walker, of the Christian Church in Burlington, N. C., who has for the past fifteen years been engaged in the manufacture and sale of hosiery of this city, has gone to New York City to open offices and act as sales manager of the Gibsonville Hosiery Mills. We regret losing him from our community, and wish him great success in his new undertaking.

Rev. H. J. Duckworth, D. D., who was a most loyal and faithful minister of the Christian denomination, died at his home in Mt. Sterling, Ohio, on Saturday, February 15th, in his 88th year. He has been noted among his brethren for his ability as a preacher, and was a great student and an eloquent expounder of the Word. Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor of the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., was called to Mt. Sterling to preach the funeral sermon on Tuesday, February 18th.

One of the outstanding men in the religious world, especially in the field of missions, is Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, of Boston, Mass. Dr. Eddy speaks at 11 A. M. at Greensboro First Christian Church Sunday, March 2nd; Palm Street at 3 P. M.; Reidsville, 7:30 P. M. The following Sunday he is to speak at Durham, Chapel Hill and Burlington and give a week to speaking to our people on the theme of missions. Dr. Eddy has had experience in the Orient, and knows whereof he speaks.

One interested pastor writes as follows about THE SUN: "I believe that the ministers are in fault for the condition THE SUN is in today. Not many of us do justice to it, to our constituency or to ourselves. We do practically nothing in its interest. If we would come to realize its value, I believe we would do more for THE SUN. I can name the members who read THE SUN by the manner in which they take on to Church work. They have a definite interest. I have made one extensive effort for THE SUN since I have been here, and I plan to put on another drive soon."

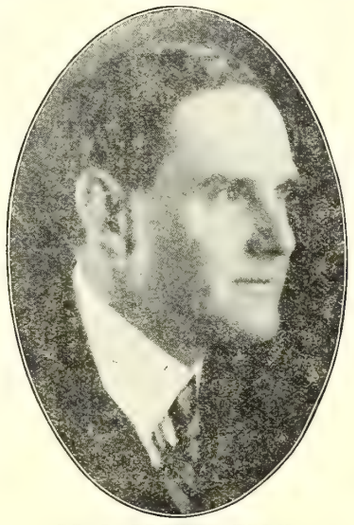
The following was received from H. G. Nichols, Jacksonville, Fla.: "Prof. A. R. Flowers is spending from February 11th to 15th with our young people of First Freewill Baptist Church of Jacksonville, Fla. He came here from a few days' outing at St. Augustine, Fla. He says that 'It is needful that bachelors stay young,' and he has been drinking from the fountain of youth. Bro. Flowers is a very busy man, and because of his unselfish, Christ-like spirit, makes friends in all denominations. He is a firm believer in the fellowship and co-operation of all Christians, and he lives it. We are always glad to have him."

Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, Va., has been in a two weeks' meeting with the pastor, Rev. R. L. Williamson, at Winchester, Va. The Winchester Star of February 8th says: "The Rev. R. L. Williamson, pastor of the First Christian Church, is being assisted by the Rev. D. D. Poythress, of Norfolk, in a two weeks' evangelistic campaign at the local Church. Mr. Poythress had as his subject Friday evening, 'Complete Consecration.' Two texts were used, 2 Cor. 8:8 and John 15:7. With forceful logic, graphic presentation, and apt illustration, he showed that God requires the consecration of our time, talent, personality—our all—to his service. This consecration must be made through sincere and earnest prayer. He gave several illustrations of wonderful results following the yielding of life to God's service. A choir composed of members of the intermediate Christian Endeavor Society had charge of the music, giving a program which was much enjoyed. Mr. Poythress gave an invitation to Christians to reconsecrate their lives to the service of the Lord, and many came forward."

DR. D. BREWER EDDY.

Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, D. D., of the home department, American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, is a member of that famous group which formed at Yale under the title of the "Yale Band." After his studies at Yale University, Dr. Eddy attended Auburn Seminary, Hartford Seminary, and Oxford, England. He has traveled extensively in Europe, Asia and the islands of the seas.

Dr. Eddy is especially well informed on conditions in the Orient. He joined the American



DR. D. BREWER EDDY.

Board in 1900 as head of its educational department, and is now corresponding secretary in the home department. Much of his time is spent in speaking on missionary and international topics, for his unusual platform ability has made him a lecturer greatly in demand.

About three years ago, Dr. Eddy spent a period of time in Honolulu, where he acquainted himself with the social and religious problems of Hawaii. During the war he served in special religious work on the various battle fronts. He is widely known today as a speaker of magnetism, and his vivid and colorful way of handling missionary topics makes him a platform favorite.

NEWS NOTES.

Ambrose.

This Church has had a double coat of paint from foundation to roof, which adds much to the beauty and attractiveness of the building. A very nice, substantial yard fence has been added to the parsonage, which greatly pleases the occupants of the minister's home. The Sunday School is doing well. Last month it pledged $150 to Piedmont Junior College for this year's current expenses. The Sunday School is to be congratulated on this pledge, as it represents half as much as the pastor's salary. A junior Christian Endeavor Society and a Woman's Missionary Society have recently been organized. The good people here are faithful and occupy a warm place in the pastor's heart. The future of the Church is bright for success.

Vanceville.

The membership of this Church is a consecrated and devoted band of Christian workers. Here we have a small but good Sunday School that runs twelve months in the year. The South Georgia group of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Societies met with this Church the fifth Sunday in December. We have recently repainted the Church building, and it presents a very pleasing picture facing the highway. We have built a choir loft and installed a new piano since Conference. This improvement has added much to the interior appearance of the Church and greatly improved the music. We pledged $50.00 to Piedmont Junior College.

Enigma.

This Church has repainted the house of worship and made some other needed repairs since Conference. We have a union Sunday School at this Church, and hope soon to organize a Christian Endeavor Society and a Woman's Missionary Society. The membership, as well as those associated with the work, are faithful and loyal to the Church. Congregations have been steadily increasing since Conference, and the seating capacity of the Church is frequently taxed to its limit.

Antioch (Congregational).

At this Church we have installed a new heater, bought new song books, and have funds in hand to paint the house of worship, which has been accomplished since Conference. We have organized a Sunday School, and the prospects for the success of the work here is fine.

It would be a fine thing for all our Sunday Schools to stress the importance of their work in training the children and young people in loyalty and devoted sentiments for the Church. In the eagerness of my people for the improvements in their Church buildings, they have not forgotten their pastor and his family. A series of poundings have been made since Conference to the pastor, and his needs have been kept in mind by his people. Congregations seem eager to share their blessings with their pastor and supply his needs with such things as not only contributed to his comfort but also manifested their concern and love in their contributions.

The Churches have not been unmindful of their pastor in payment of salary, for more has been paid at this date than during any preceding year at this time. I have labored under great burdens in several ways and desire the prayers of the entire brotherhood, that the work may prosper in spite of the burdens.

W. C. CARPENTER.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

We are hoping that we will receive many renewals and new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN during the contest. We have already received some encouraging lists and hope to receive many more before the contest closes. A $15.00 hand bag for the first prize and a $10.00 coin for the second prize is worth working for.

Let every pastor lend us a helping hand during the contest and see if you cannot get up a large list of renewals and new subscribers in your field. THE SUN needs your support, and if everybody will lend us a helping hand we can have better success in getting THE SUN in more homes.

LITTLE MISTAKES THAT LEAD TO FAILURE.

"What Lack I yet?"—Matt. 19:20.

The story of the young man who came to Jesus, saying, "Good Master, what must I do to inherit eternal life?" is typical of the quest of every nominal Christian. In our inmost desires, we all are anxious to inherit eternal life and happiness. Not all of us have the assurance, however, that we shall become the recipients of that which the young man in the story sought. Because of the many little mistakes we make which lead to a failure in the things that really count, we know not that we shall be with Him.

The young man, about whom we are thinking, seemed to be gravely concerned about his life. He was an average Christian. In many respects his life resembled the lives of many of us today. He loved God with all his heart. He called Jesus "Good Master." He knew the commandments and proudly repeated each one without reference to the Old Testament. He declared that all of his life he had been virtuous and had been strictly obedient to the commandments. He did not practice murder, adultery, stealing or lying. He loved and honored his parents. What more was there to do to be a good Christian and an inheriter of eternal life?

In spite of all of his virtues, Jesus saw that he was making a little mistake, which if not corrected, would lead to a great failure in his life. When he asked Jesus "What lack I yet?" Jesus said to him, "One thing thou lackest. If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me." But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful, "for he had great possessions."

By hoarding his money and leaving out the poor in his love for God, he made a mistake that would ultimately lead to a great failure. Furthermore, he would have no assurance of eternal life so long as he did not minister to those in need.

The same little mistake made by the young man may be the same mistake that many of us are constantly making. If so, we need to sell our goods and give to the poor, for we read in the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew's gospel that inasmuch as we minister unto even the least of His little ones, we minister unto Him. If we are absolutely honest with ourselves and with our God, we will endeavor to discover some of the little mistakes that may cause us to come to great failures in later life.

We go to the doctor, even though it be unpleasant experience, and ask him, saying, "What lack I yet?" And after a careful examination he says, "You lack rest, for you are on the verge of a nervous breakdown." We take our cars to the mechanic and ask him to check up on the mechanism and he makes a complete examination and says, "On thing your car lacks, and that is good brake lining." At once we correct this little mistake and save a great accident. In like manner we need to sit down and ask the great Master to help us find some of the little mistakes that may be leading us to great failures. Should each of us ask Him, "What lack I yet?" He would perhaps give a different answer to each person. None of us are perfect, all of us are sinners, and all need to hear Him say, "One thing thou lackest." There are a few little mistakes that we all make. Let us, therefore, pass over the individual problems and think of some of the little mistakes that are most commonplace. Let us hear Jesus say to us, "One thing thou lackest."

Loyalty and Reverence for God's House.

Failure to support the services of God's house may seem a trivial thing to a great many people. There are individuals whose names appear on the roll book of the Church who never make a practice of attending the services of worship and instruction in Christian living. Such individuals are making a mistake that will eventually lead to a great failure. There are heads of families whose lives are filled with goodness and devotion to their families; they are loyal to the secret lodges of their choice, and practice honesty in the community in which they live, but one thing they lack, and that is a zeal which finds expression in loyalty and reverence for the house of the Lord. These people are typical American Church members; they are the average citizens of every community in the land; they are making the mistake of their lives by overlooking the command and reminder to "Forsake not the assemblying of ourselves" (Heb. 10:25).

Those who fail to attend public worship at least once each Sunday miss a great and necessary spiritual blessing. They are not strengthened for the week, nor is their soul refreshed. The true follower of Jesus will constantly follow Him, for it was His practice to go into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day. There He worshiped His Father in heaven. Jesus found such experiences necessary. If Jesus found it so vital, how much more should we, His followers, need that contact with God.

One unexcusable excuse that some people offer for not attending the services of God is that the Church seems very tame along side the fascinating and exotic entertainments of the world. They say that such amusements have momentum, and by buoying one up he is kept from sinking, depressing loneliness. Hence, weeks and months come and go with no thought of spiritual concern. Thus a little habit is formed, a little mistake is made, and a great failure to inherit eternal life lies just ahead. Recently I talked with a young man who, laughingly, told me that he was quite regular in his attendance at Church services and that he had not missed attending annual Easter services, Mothers' Day and Christmas programs in several years. He had shut the door of the Church, other than when duty demanded him or some special program was planned. Each of us need to get into the regular habit of attending Church. Time spent in God's house is never wasted. Children need to be trained to stay for preaching services. It seems a bit hypocritical that parents send their children to school and require them to sit for five to six hours daily and then excuse them from Church services, with the feeble excuse that the preaching hour is too long for little Mary to be kept still. But little Mary goes daily to school and receives awards of merit for her deportment and punctuality, and ofttimes goes to the movie matinee and sits on a theater chair two or three hours.

Lack of loyalty to the Church deprives man of the things he most needs. Listen to these words copied from the front page cover of the Herald of Gospel Liberty and written by Rev. Andrew Magill:

"The Church offers the freest access to its holy places where men may worship God, pray for themselves and others, and meditate on the realities of the unseen world. It offers the inspiration of noble music and the songs which kindle the imagination and comfort the heart. It sets before men an organized program of Christ-like service, beginning at home, covering the world, embracing mankind. It welcomes men to the happy fellowship of earnest souls, who have caught the vision of a better world and are under vows to attain its realization. It offers the comfort of a great hope which lifts the horizons of life and thrills the soul with the rapture of a golden age. It offers the privilege of co-operation in all her plans and programs of service for the welfare of mankind and the greater glory of God."

If one member has a right to remain away from the services of the Church, every other member has the same right, and if that right were exercised by every member, there would be no Church services, and eventually no Church, and no civilization.

Some months ago there appeared two articles on Church attendance in the American Magazine. One of those articles was written on "Why I Don't Go to Church," by W. O. Saunders, of Elizabeth City, N. C. In the opening paragraph he said, "I don't like to go to Church; I never did like to go to Church, and don't think I ever shall like to go to Church. I would rather lie in bed on Sunday morning after the week's grind, or putter around the house in my old clothes and feel that the day is one of rest, a day made for man, and when the out-door is calling me, take the open road." Mr. Saunders claims furthermore that if he hasn't lived to suit God on the week days, he cannot make up for it on Sunday. He says he does not attend Church, because he feels no obligation to go to Church; that the Church has no demand upon him, his time, his money or his life. He says he believes in Jesus and the things He taught, but does not feel that such a belief has anything to do with the Church. This radical writer says he sees no connection between being a Christian and attending Church. Mr. Saunders says that as a lad he joined the Church of his parents' choice and for a long time attended its services and never got any help or uplift or inspiration of any kind out of any of its services. Because of the fact that he could see no benefit in his own life or notice any difference in the lives of regular attendants, he ceased going to Church.

In contrast to this article, the American printed a story from the pen of Mr. Edgar Guest on "Why I Do Go to Church," in which the writer declared that he attended Church and contributed to its support because he believed in Churches, and under no conditions or circumstances would he care to reside in a State or nation in which there were no Churches. He says, "I go to Church because I believe in the ministry of the Church as a whole," and because he wanted his children to go to Church and grow up to know that there was something more in life than business, sport and amusement. The Church, he said, is the only institution that will teach them that they are divine.

Thou Lackest a Working Knowledge of the Word.

Again Jesus speaks to us, one and all, saying that, in addition to the mistake we make of failure to attend God's Church, we neglect the reading and study of the Bible. So great is our neglect of this Book that many so-called Christians devote all their spare time in reading the daily papers, weekly periodicals and numerous current novels. All of us need to be reminded of the commands which are just as positive as words can make them. Listen:

"Study to show yourselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not be ashamed."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SUNSHINE.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Medical science now declares that we human beings have not learned the curative, hygienic effects of sunshine. We should do it, and we might—but we just will not or do not. Every argument is on the side of science here when we consider the facts. We have more "colds" in winter than in summer. Why? More sunshine in summer. In winter we stay housed up and will not let the sun have a chance at us. Do you wish to destroy disease germs of any and every kind? Expose them to the sunshine. Do you wish a healthy child? Rear him or her in the sunshine. And now, if you are sick or sallow or diseased, get out in the sunshine. The great Creator who made the human body knew how to preserve it, and would preserve it if man's ignorance, prejudice and short-sightedness did not intervene. So the one who made man made also the sunshine, and put into the sun's rays curative and preserving elements and values. So get out into the sunshine and, as a patient here said today, "give God a chance at you."

This writer has today had a physical examination—a sort of "checking up"—by a physician. At the conclusion, this injunction came: "Stay in the sunshine. Walk in the sunshine. Play in the sunshine. Work in the sunshine." So The Sun's editor is down here in Florida taking—Sun-shine.

Another curative element in sanitariums, this one in particular, is a fruit-and-vegetable diet. They serve in "courses" here, but it seems not to make the least difference as to which course you take first or last. I sometimes start at one end of the menu, and sometimes at the other. There is no sort of fish, flesh or fowl in it; so why worry? Eat your dessert first, if you wish, and your soups last—it doesn't matter. It is all vegetable or cereal or fruit, anyway. Our good physician told us recently that most of us "dig our graves with out teeth." We go by the meat route and the way of slaughtered animals, following the blood trail, in order to arrive earlier. And so doing, we find ourselves in a sanitarium or a hospital. What does a Sun reader think of this. If we Americans would leave off eating meat, one-half at least of all the sanitariums would have to close their doors and go out of business. And if we would leave off coffee, tobacco and other neurotic poisons, a large per cent of the other half could soon close their doors also.

People from all parts are pouring into Florida now. Over 600,000 tourists are in the State and are pouring in at considerably over 1,000 a day. One can't blame them. Strawberries are ripe, spring onions, radishes, carrots, cauliflowers, cabbage and Irish potatoes are in the garden and fields for gathering, and orchards hang with oranges, grapefruit, tangarines, etc., and the balmy sunshine just makes one stay out-of-doors.

On my way down, I had the pleasure of a night under the hospitable roof of Hon. C. C. Howell, attorney, of Jacksonville, Fla., who is an Elon College graduate, and as will be recalled, came back to his alma mater last May and thrilled a great commencement audience with an able and eloquent alumni address. He and his good wife (who was Miss Clara Moffitt, Asheboro, N. C.) have a fine family now, and their oldest son is a student at Elon. "Charlie" has built up a fine practice in Jacksonville, and is a factor in that great city. His father came to Florida from Holland and Holy Neck, Va., years ago, and to this day his son's home is conducted according to all the cordiality of good old Virginia (and North Carolina) hospitality and delightful fellowship. And then three nights later we were guests in the home of Bro. D. W. Brown and family, now living at West Palm Beach, but formerly and for many years residents of Elon College. The Browns have a large, healthy, happy family of sons and daughters, and thus are delighted with life in glorious, sunny Florida. How happy, indeed, to meet the friends of other days and spend the hours in happy talk about incidents, experiences and events of the past. Some one has remarked that when we get to heaven, one of the most delightful indulgences will be that of talking over with friends the experiences of earth. It must be so. Meet one in the middle or mature years whom you have not seen recently; the conversation will invariably be of boyhood and girlhood days and experiences.

In childhood we live in the future. In maturity we live in the past. But it is good now in sunny Florida to hear the birds singing, to see the roses blooming in the open, to bask for hours in the balmy sun, and drink in great drafts of open air and God's good sunshine. Truly was the psalmist right: "The heavens declare the glory of God; the firmament showeth His handiwork." His line has gone out into all the earth. God is good and has built for us a beautiful and a wonderful world. We should rejoice, be glad in it and give Him all the glory and gratitude for it.

DR. EDDY IN THE SOUTH.

When the Mission Secretary was in Chicago recently at the midwinter meeting of Congregationalists and Christians, he learned that Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, D. D., was to be at Southern Pines on vacation the first week of March. Dr. Eddy was immediately assailed for a ten-day stay, in addition to his vacation, with Christian Churches in North Carolina and Virginia. He consented, and as many of our Churches as he can reach are to have the privilege of hearing this consecrated man of God tell of his observations and experiences in fields and among peoples afar to whom missionaries are sent.

Dr. Eddy was at our Piqua, Ohio, Convention last fall and captured all who heard him with his eloquence, his enthusiasm for a great cause, and his wonderful zeal for the kingdom of our Lord. Next week's Sun will carry his full schedule. At this time we are prepared to say that on Sunday, March 2nd, he will be with Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, 11 A. M.; at Palm Street, Greensboro, at 3 P. M., and with Rev. J. H. Dollar, at Reidsville, at 7:30 P. M. Then after six days at Southern Pines, Dr. Eddy will begin a week's itinerary with our Churches—Sunday, Monday, Tuesday in North Carolina; the remainder of the week with Eastern Virginia Churches.

We are giving in this issue a cut of Dr. Eddy, with two statements of a personal character about who Dr. Eddy is.

VII. FAITH.

(Prayer-meeting address at Presbyterian Church, February 8, 1893, while we were building our Church.)

The seventh fruit of the spirit of faith (Gal. 5:22).

Faith enters into all human affairs as simple confidence in nature and in man, but it is the essential element in religion; for, "without faith it is impossible to please God, for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." This faith embraces ideas vast in significance to men. (1) The existence of God who can be approached by men; (2) that men may please God by their faith in Him; (3) that He will reward such as diligently seek Him. These truths are so essential to personal salvation as to rank first in our minds always. The idea of God's existence is so large as to overwhelm us with its greatness when we consider the world in which we now live, with all its forms of beauty and grandeur, and then go, in thought, to other planets and stars till thought tires in its effort to find boundary lines to the universe; and then consider that "the heavens declare only the glory of God," and that the firmament shows only "His handiwork"; and that behind all this complex system of worlds, God exists as Creator of all, we are awed into reverence and holy fear. No wonder David exclaims, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon, and the stars, which Thou hast ordained, what is man that Thou art mindful of him?" And then to think that we can please such a being as God by our faith! That simple confidence brings the reward of life! Jesus said to the woman, "Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace."

1. Faith is an essential in salvation. "Now, faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith deals with unseen things, not fancies but substances. No one who has essayed to put his own thoughts into words, or into a picture, will suppose for a moment that a marble statue is more than the conception of the artist who fashioned it. The ideal conception is the most essential, the most real existence, the most substantial thing, for it really produces the statue. So faith is the substance of things hoped for. Discoveries and inventions, like that of Balboa and Fulton, exist first in invisible forms of reality, and afterwards disclosed to unbelieving mnids by facts. It is even more in religion, because moved by the Spirit who makes the man trust in God as Spirit and put confidence in the unseen as eternal. Anselm says that "faith precedes knowledge," and it really seems to be so.

2. Faith is of the Heart. The head may take some part in its exercise, but the seat of its empire is the heart. Religious faith is pre-eminently a heart-power of spiritual birth. "The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart: that is the word of faith which we preach—that "if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart, man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." The head is capable of receiving facts, and of building up confidence upon them, and still the man be barren of religious or saving faith. Faith is not produced wholly by facts. The woman of Serepta who received the starving Elijah, believed the "word of the Lord" in spite of facts; and her faith kept the "barrel of meal from wasting" and the "cruise of oil from failing." Faith works where reason and facts fail. The heart acts under a deep moral impressing a certain potent conviction, a lofty spiritual impulse. As Paul says: "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints, what is the breadth and length, and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." Faith is attended by love and the presence of Christ in the heart. Robert Collyer says that "faith makes the discords of the present the harmonies of the future." And Toplady says, "Faith is the eye of the soul, and the Holy Spirit's influence is the light by which it sees."

3. Faith is work. It is divine energy in the life: potential activity generated by the Spirit of God. When the people asked, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" Jesus said, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." Work is not confined to manuel and mechanical labor. The mind may work and so may the heart. Manuel work is the lowest and easiest of all, while spiritual work is the loftiest and severest. God is the great worker in the universe. He creates worlds, fashions mountains and oceans, decorates the earth with matchless loveliness, and the firmament with blazing worlds. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." "By faith, Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith."

Where are the signs of the flood? What insanity possesses Noah's life? What self-denial, what great expense, what ridicule endured! Warned by unseen things, he is at work with all his might. Faith is working out salvation, for "faith without works is dead." Beware of inactive faith, for it is not a fruit of the Spirit. Faith is always at work, and Christian faith manifests itself in Christian activity. Let the cypress trees fall under the axe swung by faith, and let the timbers be fashioned into an ark to save Noah and him family. God gives the idea, the plan of salvation, and man works it out by faith. Every lick struck on the ark was made by faith; faith finished it, and entered it, but God shut the door and secured them against the flood. God inspires and completes faith in the heart. "He is the Author and Finisher of faith." The man full of faith is full of divine energy, and will be busy in the Lord's work "instant in season and out of season." This working of faith is a resistless power: "By faith the walls of Jericho fell down after they were compassed about seven days."

Faith, you see, is the great spiritual force as resistless as the electric current in nature. It has behind its operations divine power, and nothing material can stand its force. Huge stone walls, defying the battering-rams of ancient warfare, must totter and fall when faith completes her seventh circuit on the seventh morn. Faith as a grain of mustard seed can remove mountains. What we need is faith. "One thing thou lackest," said Jesus to the young man.

4. Faith leaves all for Christ. When Jesus saw Levi at the receipt of customs, He said, "Follow me," and "he left all, rose up, and followed Him." Again: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field." This leaving all may include two things. (1) All sin. All sin may not leave us, but we must leave all sin. So far as faith works in us, the tendency is away from sin. Noah left all sin, but all sin did not leave him. He was surrounded by sin, and it remained to hinder him till God made the final separation by the flood. (2) All good that hindered faith: "Go, sell all that thou hast and give to the poor and come follow me," said Jesus to the rich young ruler. Jesus saw that his estate hindered him, impeded him, and it was necessary to forsake all that trammeled his life. "Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter." He separated himself from all hindrances to the activity of his faith. Paul counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND DWIGHT MOODY.

By Calvin J. Felton.

Today, February 9th, comes between the birthdays of two of the greatest citizens our country has produced. In fact, they are so great they do not belong to us alone. They are world citizens and have rendered a world service. There is a striking similarity between the life and experience of these two great citizens and a striking connection in the work which each of them did. When we study them closely and in the right light, we can see that there is real reason to believe the hand of God was in their preparation and call to the work which they were to do, and the hand of God was with them in the doing of that work. I would not say they were ordained of God for the work which they did. But God called them because they proved themselves fit for the task which He wanted done. God could use them because they were willing that he should use them, and they were willing to pay the price of the service which they were called to render.

Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in Kentucky on February 12, 1809. His early life was spent in poverty and hard manual labor. He had little chance to learn, but used all the chance he had. He had but few books available. But he became master of those which were available. And they were books which helped produce both intellect and character. One of these books and the one which he came to know best was the Bible. There are those who ridicule the Bible. But there is no better way of judging a tree than by the fruit it bears, and the Bible has shown its power to produce such character as Lincoln's. That ought to be sufficient to prove its worth to any reasonable man.

Lincoln used every opportunity for advancement that came to him. He was willing to pay the price of progress, and he became President of his country at one of the most critical times in its history. He was prepared in mind and character for his great responsibility by the habits and ambitions of his previous life. He saved his country, and through it rendered a great service to the world.

Dwight L. Moody was born February 5, 1837, on a poor farm at Northfield, Mass. His father, a stone mason, died when Moody was four years old, leaving the mother with a small family and a mortgaged farm. The farm would have been lost during the early childhood of Moody had not an uncle come to the rescue and paid the interest for several years. His first money was earned by driving the neighbors' cattle to and from the pasture at the magnificent sum of 2 cents a day. He left home at nineteen to go to Boston and work in his uncle's shoe store. Here he was converted and began his work for Christ. Later he went to Chicago to work in a shoe store, and in connection with his work in the store began conducting a Sunday School in a saloon.

Moody's evangelistic work won thousands to Christ and brought thousands of others to a closer relationship to God and prepared them for a life of usefulness to community and to the world. His work came soon after the Civil War, when everything was in turmoil, and some influence was needed to bring people to a stable and solid consideration of life and its responsibilities. Lincoln's work was very important, but it needed very much to be followed by just such a work as Moody did. People needed to realize that God was with them; that He is love and that He was calling upon them to meet their responsibility to Him and to each other.

Moody's great work in the field of education was also important. Like Lincoln, he didn't have the opportunity for advanced education himself. But he trained himself as best he could, and he prepared himself for a great work among all classes of people. And he established schools, that other poor boys and girls might have a better opportunity than he had. His schools continue and are a monument to his great life and his abiding interest in humanity.

Some Elements in Their Success.

1. They were men of great faith in God. Theirs was a faith which had been handed down to them from parents. Lincoln's mother and father were both people of strong and sincere faith in God. Through his severe experience in the President's chair, misunderstood by a great part of the country, criticised and condemned by many of the greatest citizens, while his heart bled for the torn and suffering people he loved so much, his great source of power, he tells us, was his habit of prayer and the help which came to him through it. He took no step without first seeking divine guidance. This is illustrated forcibly in his announcement of the emancipation proclamation, when he told his cabinet that he had sought the guidance of his Maker in that which he was about to do.

Moody had also inherited and been trained in a great faith. His sick mother, when told by the man who held the mortgage on their farm that they would have to get out, first prayed for help and guidance. And when he himself came to feel the nearness to God in his life he made it a habit to seek the guidance and help of God at all times. No matter what the experience he was called upon to endure, or what problem he was called upon to solve, he sought the strength and wisdom from above. God was real to Dwight L. Moody. His prayers were no mere reaction upon himself. How weak and small and unsatisfactory seems the faith of the humanist when compared to Moody's. The great faith of these two men had much to do with their success.

2. They were men of intense earnestness. Lincoln would have given up the fight and let others take over the government long before the close of the war if he had not been so tremendously in earnest for the cause of his people. He was aflame with a fire of soul that simply burned out the dross of selfishness and so gripped his heart with

SUFFOLK LETTER.

We live in a world of repetition, though some people object to repetition; they think that every sermon should be a new sermon, every book should be a new book, and every experience should be a new experience. Nature does not suggest absolutely new things. "There is no new thing under the sun" (Eccl. 1:9). The sun rises and sets as it has always done; it is repetition. The seasons come and go as repetitions. The leaves appear on the trees in spring and then fall off in the fall, as they have always done. Farmers plant, cultivate, and then gather the harvests that feed the world by repetitions. The orchards and gardens repeat their fruits and their flowers. Love repeats itself in the home and in the Church. Kindness loses none of its sweetness and value by repetition. "Good morning" does not lose its value by repetition. Songs do not perish by repetition. The dinner bell does not grow monstrous because repeated every day. Work does not grow harder by repetition. Prayer does not lose its spiritual value by repetition.

Repetition is the foundation of character, whether that character be good or bad. The curse of drunkenness is repetition. Repeated absence from Church kills the desire to attend Church. Repeated sittings at the card table weakens sincere spiritual aspirations. Repeated neglect of Sunday School dulls the mind, Sunday, and spiritual appreciation. No matter whether habits are good or bad, they crystalize character. Habits are nothing but repetitions, and habits form character. It is the repetition of laying bricks, one by one, that ends in a high brick wall. It is the repetition of the machine that fills the world with pins and nails. It is the repetition of work that makes the skilled mechanic, the noted musician, and the great typist. It is the constant grinding of the mill that fills the stores with flour and the tables with bread. Even memory does its best work by repetition. A song grows better by repetition, and love grows richer in the same way. God repeats His blessings in sunshine and shower, day and night.

It would be a dull world if no night came and sunshine had no cessation; and it would be worse if all the centuries gave man only night. If the best lasted all the time, it would be worse than the worst that comes sometimes. To rise and eat, to work and rest, to wake and sleep, makes all better as they come and go.

Traveling the same path makes an easier road, doing the same thing makes easier work, serving the same cause makes it easier to serve. "Give us day by day our daily bread" is a prayer for repetition. Daily or weekly wages is better than receiving all at one time. The work is repeated, the pay is repeated, and the expenditures are repeated. Every thing runs by repetition. Whatever is worth saying or doing is worth repeating. What will not bear repetition is wrong. The bad road, the false statement, the hard feeling, the sinful action cannot be repeated without loss to character. All good thoughts, good words, good deeds, and good plans improve by repetition. "Sing them over again to me, wonderful words of life." Repeat all that is good, but never repeat what is wrong.

W. W. Staley.

In our planning how often we forget prayer! We go ahead without consulting God, and then we wonder why our efforts fail.—Selected.

ELON LETTER.

The sacredness of personality is a primary principle of the Christian gospel. The individual is always an end, never a means to an end, according to the Christian view. This is the most revolutionary teaching in the realm of the social relations that has ever been enunciated.

A few illustrations will make this clear.

The father has no right to exploit his son to make economic gain for himself. On the other hand, the father is under obligation to his son to do all he can to promote his every interest, whether economic, educational, moral or spiritual.

The educational system must not sacrifice the welfare of the student for its own advantage. On the other hand, the educational system is under obligation to spend itself to promote the interests of the student.

The Church cannot circumscribe the right of the individual Christian to live his life as the Holy Spirit gives him understanding. The Church, on the other hand, exists for the individual Christian, to promote his interests and welfare.

There is no principle of the moral life more revolutionary than this which proclaims the lordship of the individual soul.

In the application of this principle, there is a test which prevents chaos from reigning in the world—the test of universality. The worth of the individual must not be selfishly proclaimed. Personality is primary, but so is our brotherhood. We are not only individuals—we are persons, and that means we have social obligations.

Individuality would divide the human family up into hostile, competing groups. There must be an integrating force, a unifying influence, and it is found in the test of universality arising out of our essential brotherhood.

A problem presents itself to me. There are several possible solutions. Since individuality is pre-eminent in its rights, I can choose any outcome I may prefer. No, I cannot do this, because I must consider the other individualities in the world. They, too, have primary rights. What am I to do?

I am to select the outcome that can be universalized—not what is good for me here and now, or for the majority of men and women, but for all men and women everywhere. When we have found that solution to any problem, we may be sure it is the Christian solution.

The limitless worth of the individual, the centripetal force of life, and the universality of all moral conduct, the centrifugal force of life—these two summate for us the gospel of Jesus Christ for the social relations of men.

Never treat your brother or sister as a means, but always as an end, as of boundless worth, says Jesus. And to this He adds, be sure that everything you do has universal validity. Attention to these two will guarantee Christian attitudes in all your conduct.

A SUPER-POWER TRANSMITTING STATION.

By Dr. J. W. Manning.

A prayer-meeting talk at Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

A special receiving set—Psa. 85:1-8.

Equipment and requirement necessary to get a radio message:

1. There must be a sending station.

2. There must be a receiving set. It must be in perfect condition. Must be equipped with proper tubes, and speaker. Then the current or power must be turned on.

But we may have done all that and still get nothing. Why? We have failed to "tune in." We must get the proper channel or wave-length.

When we have met all of these conditions we will get the message, if the sending station is working, and we will not get it until all conditions are met.

We may be getting the message perfectly and we may stop it entirely by tuning out, or by cutting off.

The reception may be interfered with by outside interference, such as static and back-ground noises, or your neighbor may have a set that is not working properly and it makes a lot of squeals and noises that interfere. And then there may be inside troubles; that is, troubles that originate in your set, or with you as an operator—you may not tune very carefully, so as to tune out these troubles and to keep other programs from blanketing or lapping over on you and hinder you from getting clearly the program you wish.

When Christ was on earth and teaching the people, He used every-day, familiar, commonplace things to illustrate, such as:

The shepherd and the sheep.
The sower went forth to sow.
The husbandman and the vineyard.
The housekeeper and the coin.
The mustard seed.
The man who built a house.
The wise and foolish virgins.
And others with which all are familiar.

I believe if Christ was on earth today teaching, as He was 2,000 years ago, that He would say that the kingdom of heaven is like unto a radio. Let us illustrate:

Station HEVN.
A super-power station.
God is the great Broadcaster from this heavenly station.
Our hearts are the receiving sets.
Christ is the Power that connects the two and makes it possible to operate, and the Holy Spirit is the Operator, or the one who is to do the fine selective tuning.

Now, with the great super-power transmitting station all in readiness and in active operation, as it is, and has been for all time—what is necessary for us to do in order to get the message?

We must put ourselves in proper condition to become a receiving set. Must be equipped with an enlightened intellect and conscience. We must let Christ come in as the Power, for He has promised to give us "power to become." Then we must let the Holy Spirit take complete control, to do the fine tuning necessary for proper reception.

This receiving set is not like other sets in one or two essential respects. This set needs no loud speaker, but you get the message individually by the "Still Small Voice"; you get the message by the "ear phone," so to speak, of the soul.

But it is very much like the usual set, in that you can cut off or interfere with the program in many ways. You cut off entirely by failing to let Christ be the controlling power in your lives. You may still be connected with the power line, but, for the time being, you "tune out." Something else you want to do, something in which at the moment you are more interested in, and still you may desire to get the message. You are connected with the power still, and the message may be coming in, but static—background noises—and various interferences keep you from getting it in a satisfactory way.

The reason for some of these things may be that your surroundings, your environments may be such that they cause you to hear, see or think things that are out of harmony with the message. Maybe some one about you is trying to tell you something that they should not, about some one else, or maybe you are interested in some special message or program and they are trying to get you interested in something else—all of these things interfere with satisfactory reception.

This station is unlike ordinary stations in one important respect. In the usual radio set, if you are getting a station, it may be coming in good, but the program may not be what you like or want to hear. You must hear it or cut it off entirely and wait until they change the program or change to another station.

But in this great sending station you do not have to change stations in order to change programs. Because of the unusual selectivity of the tuning agency (the Holy Spirit), you can get a change of program at any time you wish it. The Operator at this station (our God) has an infinite variety of programs on at all times.

Just for example: If you are tired and weary, feeling all-used-up and worn out, tune in and listen to the sweet and restful message of "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." If you have children and you get tired and vexed with them and feel inclined to scold, just get that message, "Parents, provoke not your children to anger," "Train up a child in the way he should go," etc.

If you who have husbands are tired at times—and who is it who has a husband who is not?—and at times probably wishes that she didn't have one; and if husbands are inclined to be harsh and inconsiderate, let all such get some of the many messages to husbands and wives, and many others, such as, "Children, love and obey your parents," "Remember the Sabbath Day, and keep it holy."

The type and variety of programs are many. If you wish a study about creation, tune in on Genesis. If you want history, there are many messages coming from Genesis and Exodus. If you are interested in law, listen in on Leviticus; if you are interested in prophecy, hear the program sent out by the prophets; if you are interested in a study of love, devotion, music and praise, listen in on the psalms and songs of Solomon; or perhaps, for a change, you prefer tragedy, if so, what program could be filled with more tragedy than that of David when he cried out, "Oh, Absalom! my son! my son!" What father has not, at some time in his experience, been able to sympathize with David? Or that tragic picture of Abraham as he trudged up the mountain by the side of his son, who, in his heart, he had already offered up. I think as we contemplate this sad picture we might really call it television.

Or if you need a lesson in patience, tune in on Job, and there get a lesson that should make us ashamed that we were ever impatient.

If you need a lesson in faithfulness, get it by listening in on the life events of Paul. If you need instruction in living in Christian life, get the program from the Epistles; and if you want a glimpse of the real beauty, splendor and grandeur of it all, attune your heart to the rich things of Revelation.

Request Programs.

In the radio of every-day life, we often hear the operator say, if you wish certain numbers, or a certain type of program, just send in your request. We have the suggestion that we make requests—"Ask and you shall receive." "Whatsoever you ask in my name I will do it." So if you feel the need of special help in your Christian life, use the medium of prayer to make your desires known to the Great Giver of programs, and I am sure it will come through; and if you feel the need of some help and you do not know just what it is, ask for it and He will send the program most needful and the Holy Spirit will tune in—for is it not said, "He will bring all things to our remembrance"? There are two ways of using a radio—one is to lay aside everything else and concentrate on the special program that you are trying to get; the other is to tune in a station, get it coming good, and then leave it alone, insofar as giving it special attention—read your paper or book, or go about your household duties, and enjoy the music in a general way—as it comes floating in. Much the same way as you do the hotel orchestra at meal-time—you eat your meal, engage in conversation with friends, yet in a general way you are getting the program.

So with this spiritual set. You can withdraw from others and concentrate the mind and heart on getting through and receiving the message uninterrupted, and making a personal application of it to your practical needs. And then we may go about the daily duties and ordinary affairs of life, but we need not cut off the connection or "tune out," but have our hearts fully atune with the great station and enjoy the beauty, the sweetness and the riches of the things that are all the time "coming through."

When the day is over, and its necessary duties are done, and its inevitable trials and troubles met, we may realize that because of the messages we have caught we have been made stronger for the duties of tomorrow. May we all learn to use this service more and more, and realize that, as in radio, the beautiful and helpful programs are all about us, but we do not get them unless we "tune in." So with this, God's truths and beauties and helpfulness are ever ready for us, but we do not get them unless we are "in tune."

DR. EDDY TO VISIT MANY CHURCHES.

Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, D. D., who has gained wide recognition throughout this country as a speaker of unusual magnetism, possessed of rare ability to put life into any subject, is a missionary leader of note. Dr. Eddy has traveled extensively in both the Orient and Europe. During these trips he has met with leaders of government and public opinion in many lands. From such first-hand material, Dr. Eddy has occupied a place on the platform as a strong champion of American idealism in international affairs.

A yale graduate and a member of the famous student group called the "Yale Band," Dr. Eddy also studied at Auburn Seminary, Hartford Seminary, and Oxford, England. In 1900 he joined the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, of which he is now associate secretary in the home department. A winter spent as pastor of a great Church in Honolulu and an extensive study into the educational and religious work carried on in all the islands of the Hawaiian group, has added material on the race problem in the Orient.

Since 1909, in his secretarial capacity as a trustee of several missionary colleges, he has been co-operating from the broadest point of view, the statesmanship and strategy of the missionary enterprise, urging its importance as a factor toward better international understanding, spreading education, not only for individuals but through new educational systems implanted in various backward countries, creating systems of mission hospitals, and placing doctors and advisers in public health to officials in countries needing them most.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A MORNING PRAYER.

(February.)

O Loving Father, Thy guardianship is our security. Each morning Thou givest rest and revivification. Grant that, with the constancy of recurring light, our little "taper of desire" may burn and glow until at the light of Thy great fire it shall ignite into a glorious, consuming flame for Thee. Morning breaks, the soul awakes, May it be to a sense of service such as Jesus would have us render—a service of sacrificial living and surrendered will. As conscious, actual stewards of our Lord in the spirit of praise and exultation, O Holy Spirit, lead Thou us on. In Jesus' name. Amen.

INSTILLING THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT.

It has always been Methodism's laudable ambition "to spread scriptural holiness over all lands," and doubtless, every faithful preacher among us has often said: "The world is my parish." With all this, however, we are not very ardently zealous to "evangelize the world in our generation!" 'Tis true we have some six hundred representatives in eleven strategic centers of the struggling nations, but what are these among the thousand million un-Christianized souls in many lands?

What can be done, not as a temporary spurt or for spectacular display, but in a wholesome, permanent, cumulative way to increase the Church's interest so that far more may be undertaken and accomplished? We believe that our general leaders should preach more on this supreme subject; that our literature should be placed under the eye of every Methodist; that periods of special missionary cultivation should be seriously magnified in every congregation; that our capable, interested, numerous official lay members should be inspired and charged with very definite responsibility as those who must greatly assist in sub-soiling the minds and saturating the souls of all our people with the infinitely urgent demands of Christ, viz: "Ye shall be my witness," "Disciple all nations," "Preach the gospel to every creature!"

Pastor and People.

To do this we must remember two facts: First, that to mobilize all these forces and definitely touch and develop the individual Church membership, the pastor is the indispensable leader! He is, therefore, the privilege and the responsibility for so equipping his membership for honoring and serving Christ that they will yield their substance, their efforts and their lives to Him! As the pastor re-examines his commission, he will probably find it a genuine apostolic order, and as such he will wish earnestly and supremely "to preach and to testify" to all men that "Christ is Lord, to the glory of God." He will specifically endeavor not only "to save and edify" those to whom he ministers, but he will seek to qualify his people to be worthy advocates of world-redemption.

The second matter to remember is that the local congregation is the unit of the divine kingdom, just as the family is the unit in a nation. It is the foundation of the kingdom, the means of accomplishing all gospel work, and it is the ultimate end of our life-long endeavor. If the local pastor and congregation, therefore, shall so cooperate as to become thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit, our wealth and energy, love and life will be gladly given.

Can these high ends ever be reached? Yes, to a commendable extent, provided that (a) we believe that this whole enterprise represents God's thought, will and love. This isn't to be a mere theory, but a dynamic truth! (b) If we further believe that to Christianize the "outside" world will save us on the "inside": "He that would save his life, shall lose it; but he that would lose his life for my sake shall save it," and "There is that scattereth yet increaseth, there that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Let a congregation do large things for Christ's underprivileged ones and no local cause will languish! (c) If we either love or fear God we shall honestly try to do our utmost, for how shall we disobey His commands, violate our convictions, dishonor His proffered fellowship, repudiate "His constraining love," and yet dare to hope for His approval or His pardon? "If I be a Master, where is my fear? if I be a Father, where is my love?" He asks! (d) Knowing the indescribable suffering and ruin wrought by sin wherever the gospel isn't known or accepted, is it possible for people to be real Christians and refuse sympathy and assistance? Shall we be priests and levites or good Samaritans?

Why shouldn't every teacher teach, every leader lead and every preacher preach on every regular and special occasion during January and February till the entire congregation is thoroughly informed, deeply convicted, and enthusiastically dedicated to the proposition of bringing this world to Christ?—Richmond Christian Advocate.

WHERE WOMEN AND GOD ARE VEILED.

Do Americans realize the dimensions of the Moslem world? It is a far cry from Morocco facing the Atlantic, to the Philippine Islands facing the Pacific, and from the torrid zones of the Sudan in Africa to the snow-bound steppes of Central Asia. And yet all that vast area is the Moslem world, and all this territory is involved in "the lands where God and women are veiled."

Does God really care for all lands? I think He does. I think He literally cares for the mountains and valleys; for He made them and wanted them to be beautiful. He fashioned them. And as He looks down upon that northern stretch of Africa that once had a teeming population and a great civilization and produced some of the great leaders of the Christian Church, and sees it today desolate because the Arab horseman has passed over it (and where the Arab horseman passes the grass does not grow again), as He looks, I say, on all this, I cannot help thinking that God is grieved.

And as He looks over to that part of the world which, if our traditions are true, was the part which he selected as the cradle of humanity, the great Euphrates valley, the place around which gathers the sweet story of the perfect paradise; as God sees it today so bare and unproductive, I do not think God is satisfied. Or as He looks at that other part of the Moslem world, whose mountains and valleys He thought so beautiful that He not only gave them as His most precious gift to the man he loved best, his friend Abraham, but also chose them as the place into which He might send His own dear Son. As God sees it today a land of waste, with its olive trees cut down and its people impoverished, I do not thnik He is satisfied. I think God cares for the lands themselves, the lands where today His face is veiled.

But of course He cares infinitely more for the people there. How many of His children are in these Moslem lands, in this Moslem world? I think God loves the Arab, with all his sternness of character, with all his range of vision, born in the desert as He is. I think He loves the Persian, with his mysticism and his poetry, and the Turk, with his courage and his daring, for he has that in larger measure than the rest of the Moslem world. And I think He loves, too, His black child in Africa, submissive, obedient, faithful. And all of these His children are in lands where God and woman are veiled.

The considerations that appeal to our hearts in my theme are just these two: first, that woman is veiled in this Moslem world; and secondly, that God is veiled. Picture to yourself two hundred millions of people, one hundred million women —women that are doomed to the veil. We could endure it if it were only an Oriental fashion, a Moslem style of dress. But it is more than that. It is the sign and symbol of faithlessness and lack of virtue. It is the shame of womanhood in the Moslem world, when you really understand the origin of it. But we are thinking not only of this physical veil upon Moslem women; we are thinking also of how, in consequence of this thing that is laid upon them by Moslem social law, women are also veiled by ignorance. Kemal has taken the veil from Turkish women, but he has not changed their character. I suppose Egypt is a land that stands in the front rank of Moslem nations in literacy, yet an accurate census by the British tells us that only three women in a thousand can read and write. It grows out of their seclusion, their limited horizon, their narrow life. They are veiled by ignorance.

Women in the Moslem world are veiled also by servitude. It is true that they are not all slaves, that there are wealthy women in wealthy homes. But where woman is not a slave she is usually a toy. Yet for the most part the Mohammedan woman is a slave; it is no uncommon thing when a man wants another servant, for him just to marry another wife. I read the reports of that Parliament of Religions held at Chicago at the time of the Chicago Fair. I naturally turned to the section that dealt with Mohammedanism, for I thought I could judge the whole parliament by that one religion. I was amazed at the representations made. Speaking of Mohammedan women, the speaker said: "The picture of a Mohammedan woman bending over a washtub to support a drunken husband and several children is a picture that you never see in the Moslem world." I thought for a moment, and I said, "Yes, it is so; but the only reason is that they do not have the washtubs." For if there is any place in the world where woman is made a slave it is in this Moslem world. All her possibilities of life and beauty and character are veiled by this conception of servitude that overshadows her.

Then I think of Moslem woman as being veiled by lovelessness. There is nothing that brings out the beauty in any one's face and life, and nothing that brings out the beauty in a woman's face and life like love. It is because the Mohammedan woman does not have the love of brother and husband and son that you can go all through the Moslem world and you will see hardened faces. The possibilities of these women's lives are veiled by the lovelessness of their lives. It is a loveless marriage into which they go. It is arranged for both sides by the parents. And when they go into the marriage life, it is without the expectation of any sympathy and fellowship. Woman's life is loveless, too, because of polygamy. Four legal wives are possible. Poverty usually decrees that there shall be but one—that is, one at a time; but divorces come in rapid succession. Many a man in middle life has had as many as twenty or thirty different wives.—Missionary Review of World.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church is sponsoring a one-day study of the mission study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem." This study will be conducted on Tuesday, March 4th, beginning promptly at 10:30 o'clock. The first three chapters of the book will be discussed at the morning session. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle will present these chapters. In the afternoon, the last three chapters will be presented by Dr. L. E. Smith. Those who attend this mission study class are expected to furnish their own lunches, but the women of the Church will furnish hot coffee and tea.

The president of the society has sent an invitation to the members of the missionary societies of the Churches in this section of Eastern Virginia, inviting the members of the societies to join them in this mission study class. This is a general invitation to any who may be interested in spending an enjoyable and profitable day in considering this inspiring book by Mrs. Montgomery.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The first message at the birth of Christ was a missionary message.—Luke 2:10.

The first prayer Christ taught men was a missionary prayer.—Matt. 6:10.

The first disciple, Andrew, was the first missionary.—John 1:41.

The first message of the risen Lord was a missionary message.—John 20:17.

The first command of the risen Lord to His disciples was a missionary command.—John 20:21.

Christ's great reason for Christian love was a missionary reason.—John 17:21.

The first coming of Christ was a missionary work.—Matt. 24:14.

Our Saviour's last wish on earth was a missionary wish.—Matt. 28:19.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY.

The Woman's Missionary programs have been most interesting and helpful this year, and much praise is due our faithful and efficient Mrs. Alice Morrill, who gives us such wonderful helps and explanations in the Herald of Gospel Liberty magazine number to carry out these programs.

Follow these programs with the aid of the envelope of helps and Mrs. Morrill's suggestions and you will surely have a fine meeting.

The program for February is based on "Faith."

Call to worship and prayer same as last month.

Song.

Prayer. Lead the Juniors in thinking of things for which they themselves will wish to thank God, or things for which they wish to pray.

Offering song—Tune: "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Father, to Thy loving kindness
Never failing us we owe
Homes, and friends, and schools, and teachers,
All the pleasures that we know.
So if boys and girls are churchless,
Homeless, friendless, anywhere,
Use, O Lord, these gifts we bring Thee
For Thy needy children's care.

Since this is the month of preparation for the foreign mission offering, it would be well to be clear and convincing in your statements about the needs of and for the work. Use leaflets from foreign mission boards or from the Woman's Board (Mrs. Emma S. Powers), C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. If you are not using the book, "The Jewels the Giant Dropped," use some of the older mission study books. "Kin Chan and the Crab," "Our Japanese Friends," etc., have splendid Japanese stories, and "The Land of the Golden Man" or the home mission book, "Jumping Beans," deal with Spanish-speaking peoples in the Caribbeans and in America. "The Land of Cherry Blossoms," costing 10 cents, contains stories of our own missions in Japan. Continue the project suggested last month for the Philippines if studying that book. Or a similar picture map of Japan may be procured and used in the same way.

Closing song.

Miss Carrie Robison has some splendid suggestions in the Herald of Gospel Liberty this month. Read them. Encourage the boys and girls to join the wide-awake club which is found each month in the Herald.

This is not a program, but my, oh my! how we would love to have a news item to put in this department from your society. Tell others what you are doing, and maybe it will inspire some other society to try harder. Who will be first? Eastern Virginia societies send their notes to Mrs. J. M. Fix, Franklin, Va.; North Carolina societies send notes to Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, Elon College, N. C.; and Georgia and Alabama and Valley Virginia Conferences send directly to me if you do not have a Conference editor.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson IX—March 2, 1930.

Jesus' Teaching About Himself.

Golden Text: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." —Matt. 11:28.

Lesson: Matt. 11:2-12:50.

Devotional: Isa. 61:1-10.

John's Question and Jesus' Answer.

"Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" These are the words of John the Baptist, and they come from a sincere but perplexed mind and heart. John had been confident at one time that he was the forerunner of the Messiah—the one who should come; but he was not so confident now, for Jesus had not fitted in with John's idea of what a Messiah should be like and what He should do. In his perplexity and his doubt, he sent to Jesus two of his disciples with the question quoted above. Two suggestive truths are embodied here. First, John's doubts came during a period of inactivity. He was in prison. There was no opportunity for him to get out and do anything. Because of this fact, he became despondent as well as perplexed. There is nothing that so quickens faith in God as activity in His service. It is putting the cart before the horse to say that one cannot do anything until he has proof that God is. If one sets out to do what he thinks a God would have him do if there were a God, he will soon know in a vital way that there is a God. Many a man's faith in God and consciousness of God has become dimmed because he has not been rendering service to God. This does not mean, of course, that a man's faith necessarily depends upon his works. To say this, would be to deny to invalids and shut-ins any hope of a vital faith. But it does mean that service for God and to God quickens and strengthens faith in God. "He that willeth to do shall know," said Jesus.

In the second place, John went as directly as he could to Jesus Himself. If a man has doubts, the best place to take those doubts is to Jesus Himself. Doubts caused by bodily states or feelings, untoward circumstances, undue anxiety or overwork, intellectual problems, and other sources of doubts can best be treated in the light of the person and work of Christ. When one sees Jesus clearly it is difficult to hold doubt. Christ sheds that light on all the problems of life that dispels doubt.

Jesus' answer to John the Baptist is also suggestive. He did not enter into any censure of John because of his doubts, nor did He enter into any argument about his doubts. He simply told the two disciples of John to go back and tell John what they saw—the blind were receiving their sight, the lame were walking, the lepers were being cleansed, the deaf were having their hearing restored, the dead were being risen up, and the poor were having the gospel preached unto them. It was a kind but pointed way of telling John that, in common with the Jews as a nation, he had misinterpreted the nature and the mission of the Messiah, the one who should come. He was not to be a stern avenger, despoiling the other nations, nor was He to be a mighty ruler, ruling by force; He was to be among men as the servant of all. The very things that the disciples saw were the most convincing evidence of the fact that Jesus was the one who should come. One feels that those who picture the second coming of Christ as a mighty and bloody warrior—there are those who believe this—need to interpret their views in the light of these first few verses of the eleventh chapter of Matthew.

The Great Invitation.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It is quite likely that this is the best-known Scripture passage in the Bible, and certainly it is one of the most cherished. Millions know it by heart and turn to it again and again for comfort and strength. It is one of the most striking challenges that ever came from the lips of Jesus. In these few words, Jesus put Himself on test before all men of all time. He knew full well that He was doing this, too. He knew that in that multitude before whom He was speaking, and in generations yet unborn, there would be those who would take Him at His word, and who would put Him to the test. He knew that He would have to make good or forever go down as the great impostor. In the light of these facts, the words take on new meaning. They are a revelation of Jesus' confidence in His ability to meet the utmost needs of humanity. He boldly and conclusively stood there, and He stands now before us, and invites and challenges us to come to Him with our burdens, our problems, our perplexities, and our sins, and He promises us rest. And here is the remarkable and the inspiring thing about it all: No man has ever put Jesus to the test and found Him wanting. Men not only find that He is able to do what He says; they find that He is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that they ask or think. Man may have failed, the Church may have failed, Christianity may have failed, but Jesus has never failed.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." A yoke is not an instrument of adornment, but an instrument of work and service. Christianity is not something to make people pretty, but something to make them useful. But work done for Jesus is not hard, for we work with the Master. We learn of Him as we work with Him. And His yoke is easy, because He bears the heavy end of the yoke, and His burden is light because He does not impose law upon His followers from without, but He puts love within. Those who have done the most for the Master joyously declare that He is an easy Taskmaster. Those who are workers together with Him have a joy which the world cannot take away, and a peace that passeth all understanding.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, March 2, 1930.

By Jewel Truitt.

From time to time in this column a suggested program will be given. It is hoped that societies will adapt these programs to their own local needs. No program can be made to fit the needs of a large group of societies. These program outlines are meant to be suggestive, not programs that you are supposed to follow in detail.

A program for this evening:

Piano prelude: "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break."

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Prayer: (End with the Lord's Prayer in unison.)

Scripture reading: Heb. 11:1-19, 32-38.

Leader's introduction of the topic.

Quartet: " 'Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus."

Talks and discussion.

A prayer hymn: "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Benediction.

Some Material that May Help.

Read Matt. 16:21-27. If Jesus had not had that great trusting faith in the Heavenly Father which He had, He would have been the kind of a Messiah the Jews were expecting. He would probably have depended upon material power. But backed up by His supreme faith in God, He accomplished far greater things than He could have had He been a King without faith. He was the world's spiritual Teacher and Redeemer. The secret of His life was His faith. What do you think of this statement: "Matt. 16:24-27 shows clearly that the business of following Christ is a walk by faith"?

Faith is essential. It is one of the greatest of Christian virtues. There is no substitute for faith. Men cannot deal with each other without faith in each other. The mother would not get any great enjoyment out of planning and hoping wonderful things for her child if she did not have faith to believe that those things could be realized in the child. Without faith there would be no plowing of the fields or sowing of the crops. Without faith, there would be no progress in science and invention. Without faith, there would be no great and noble lives.

Faith changes things. The lack of faith is attended by fear, worry and anxious care. Just as these things hindered Jesus' work while He was here in the flesh, so they hinder the work of the kingdom today. Faith marks men; leaders have faith. Those who have faith do things. Those who are afraid or worried are hampered in the attempt to do anything.

Some Questions for Discussion.

1. From Matt. 8:10, 9:2, and Luke 17:5 make a definition of "faith" as used by Jesus. How does this differ from our understanding of faith?

2. What is the attitude of the man of faith toward worry? Toward the outcome of any enterprise?

3. Do the things we worry about really happen? Is worry necessary? Show why your answer is true.

5. What does faith accomplish?

4. In what do men have faith?

THE CHURCH AT WORK.

Successful Church Finance.

Church finance has certain basic principles, as has agriculture, banking, manufacturing. Only as one acts in harmony with such basic principles may he hope for reasonable success. In Church finance, the following are essential:

1. Your Church must be worthy of liberal support. She must be faithful in rendering real service to the community and the world. It is not enough to "conduct services."

2. Congregational democracy. The members must have a real share in the management. They must help make and approve the budget, elect delegates, choose officers, call pastors, etc.

3. Faithful and competent financial officers. Those who exemplify stewardship ideals, and adopt Christian business methods. Oftentimes Churches elect persons to such positions because they have the reputation of driving close bargains, or of cutting budgets to the quick, or of personal stinginess, or of being talkers instead of sacrificial givers. It should be borne in mind that people follow their leaders.

4. The adoption of a complete Church budget. One that will challenge the full energy and assistance of every member. People will not do their full duty when they know that additional appeals will be made to meet bills not provided for in the budget. It is all too common to make a budget small and then provide for various necessities on the side.

5. Secure written subscriptions each year. The voluntary principle must be recognized in all local Church work. Make the appeal on a high Christian basis.

6. Secure subscriptions on a weekly basis. This should be the practice, no matter how often the Church services are held, for it is scriptural; it is worshipful; it is efficient. Giving is primarily an act of worship—"on the first day of the week." Paul did not say, "When I sell my olive crop or fig crop."

7. Secure written subscriptions from every member and adherent of the Church—personal visitation by twos. The primary reason for inactive members is failure to enlist them financially. This is one of the most important items in Church life. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

8. Use numbered, dated envelopes, with two pockets. This is to insure accuracy of records and to promote worshipful giving and right division.

9. An educational program of all budget items. This should precede, accompany, and follow the canvass at intervals. Just raising a budget is not sufficient.

10. A thorough program of education in Christian stewardship.

11. Regular reports to congregation and contributors; quarterly statements; all books audited. Keep your people fully informed of the Church's financial needs and condition.

12. Inform each new member privately of the Church's financial policy, and enlist him without delay.

The Union is Functioning.

The Congregational-Christian union seems to be permeating to the various local territories, and the same fine spirit prevails that has been so evident in all the conferences of boards and commissions of the national bodies. A large number of union State meetings are being planned, and we hear of joint meetings of local associations and conferences that are being arranged. Young people's groups are planning joint programs. The General Convention office will always appreciate any word of information regarding such union efforts so that it may be an effective clearing-house in any way possible. If any person desires a copy of the plan of union, we shall be glad to furnish it.

A MODERN EPISODE.

Life has become complicated and rapid, and at times dangerous. Sunday afternoon, in bringing two guests from Harvard Square to our home dinner table, at 1:30, we were running smoothly from Watertown with wide open and dry streets, everything clear ahead, and without hint of excitement, when suddenly a car appeared from the left and slightly ahead, evidently planning to cross, and as I thought well beyond my car. So keeping our course, in fifty yards I was aghast to see this car lunging at us from the left. There was no possibility of escape. He struck us in the middle of the running-board, going at least thirty miles an hour. I had said, "We're going to get it, David," and we did! I have an impression of a shower of falling glass as, under the impact, we struck a telephone post on our right, and we stopped there.

When we came to, David was lying out of the door with his face and hands in the mud. I groped out with my head laid open and the blood pouring down my face, blinding me. Mrs. Hales and her daughter climbed out of the back seat. We marveled that we were alive; but the commissioner of the police, happening there, insisted on my going to the hospital, where three stitches were taken in my forehead and eyebrow.

Later inventory shows a severe shaking up. David's eye is black and closed, and his forehead cut and swollen. My shoulder and ribs were severely strained. Mrs. Hales has cuts and bruises and strained muscles over most of her, and her daughter escaped with two or three wounded muscles. The car was a complete wreck. The garage offers us $50 for it, for the headlights, two tires, and some spare parts in the innards. There is no doubt of the complete job done by the other man. Three days in bed have persuaded me that life is a risk. We now are waiting the next chapter in dealing with the insurance people. But all's well that ends well, and no harm done. B. E.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF A HAPPY LIFE.

"Happy is he who hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is on the Lord his God."—Psa. 146:5.

An extract from what is probably the last letter written by the late F. E. Weatherly, the song writer, who died recently, has reached the public.

The letter was written from Bath to Mrs. Flora Klickmann, editor of the Woman's Magazine, who writes in sending it on to the morning Post: "It surely deserves the widest circulation as an epitome of a fine and honorable life."

The passage, which is beautifully expressive of the veteran song-writer's philosophy, is as follows:

"Tennyson has written, following an Italian poet, 'that a sorrow's crown of sorrows is remembering happier things.' I profoundly disagree. Ill as I am, and within a few days of my 81st birthday, I am supremely happy because I remember the love of my mother, my schooldays and my Oxford days—my strenuous life at the bar—and my thrilling experience in the world of song.

Cherished Memories.

"Hard work and contentment, freedom from jealousy, are some of the many things that have gone to make up my happiness; above all, my wife who came to me sixty years ago.

"We watch the hills where I have climbed and can climb no more, the lawns where I have played tennis and can play no longer, the river where I have raced and steered and have said good-bye to all that delight, and yet we do not grumble or repine.

"Though my clever friends, no doubt, think me out-of-date, I still believe in the God of whom my mother taught me, nad believe that my happiness is His gift, and I only hope that, when you are as old as I am, He will keep your memory green, as He has kept mine."

Prayer.—Dear Lord of all our needs, we need delight in doing Thy will most. So teach us Thy fear and to walk in Thy way, and to guard our thoughts in Christ our Saviour. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BE KIND.

"Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving each other, even as God in Christ forgave you."—Eph. 4:32.

I have been traveling around a good deal lately, and living on trains, in hotels, and eating in Pullman diners, cafeterias, and at lunch counters. In all the eating-places I have been impressed by the uniform and general courtesy and good nature of the waiters, men and women, white and black. For the most part, it has not been my experience that they are looking for tips or feeling dissatisfied when they don't get them. Indeed, at the cafeteria and lunch counter eating-places, tips or fees, do not seem to be in order, or to be the custom.

But I cannot help noticing the manners of some of the eaters, if that word is proper; and if it isn't, we will make it so.

The other morning at breakfast in a hotel, a man seated at a table near mine expressed his dislike on account of a very small mistake in his order by the waiter who was serving him.

The boy was nervous, and it looked to me as if he had, perhaps, not been working very long in the hotel. He apologized, but the guest repeated his grumble, and the beginning of an imperfect day had started.

That guest's ill-temper spoiled a good day for three people—himself, the boy who was waiting on him, and myself.—Christian Herald.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our Father, we look to Christ today for Thy Spirit to be kind, helpful to the weak, to guard the works of good men, and to restore trespassers in the Spirit of Jesus. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MOTHERS.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6.

A bit of telephone gossip is going the rounds of a small town where "listening in" on a party line is counted smart, if not nice.

A woman calls up her house number. She herself is at a dance, following a bridge party of her club.

"Is that you, nurse? How is Mary? Not quite so well? Her fever a little higher? Has the doctor been there this evening? He has? What did he say? That her condition required close watching? You will be very careful, won't you? Kiss the darling for me. I plan to be home sometime before twelve. I don't see how I could leave right now, as there are uneven couples for the opening number. Good night. Be careful, won't you? Good-bye."

This sounds rather impossible, but it is recorded as a true telephone talk by a young mother, whose little girl was in the care of a nurse while the mother was at a bridge party and a dance. By the way, she had been playing bridge all the afternoon, and had not been home since ten in the morning. What are homes without mothers?

Prayer.—Our Father, as Thou shouldst have us be, so may we have our children be, that their lives may call us blessed and bless God forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SEARCH AND KNOW.

"My people are destroyed for the lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

"Search me and know my ways," is both the answer and invitation of Jesus to every inquiring mind. But those who think that they have found His secrets when they have raised questions concerning His genealogy as recorded in Matthew are less wise than the humblest peasant who at the sound of the Angelus bows his reverential head.

"Search me and know my ways"—"Not what men have written, but what I have been and am." "Search me and know my ways. Come very close—aye, touch my scars and press my side. Have no fear. Take from my flesh the fact of my humanity as you take from my spirit the fact that I am God's Son."

Even as Thomas, standing very close and seeing the scars, fell down in adoration, so we may search Him to the innermost of His being and find at last only reverence in our souls. The more intimate a man becomes with Jesus Christ, the more unmistakable becomes the fact that He is infinite. Here at least familiarity with the sublime is never deadening. All that was left of the vocabulary of Thomas when his searching eyes had finished their investigation was, "My Lord and my God."

General Lew Wallace began writing his story of "Ben Hur" with the pen of an unbeliever, but finished with the hand of a worshiper. The great Indiana novelist came where Jesus had walked and could only stop where Jesus leads every soul who follows Him—at the foot of the cross.

Prayer.—The Lord's Prayer.

FRIDAY.

ISRAELITISH AND CHRISTIAN CLEANSING.

"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin."—1 John 1:7.

According to this Scripture, by certain ceremonies lepers were cleansed and admitted again into society. It is offered here as a symbol of the act of God through Jesus Christ to cleanse sinners. Sin has made man unclean, separated from God. Not until he can acknowledge his sins can he be cleansed, and not until he confesses his sins and repent can he be forgiven, and not until he is forgiven can he be admitted into communion with God.

Therefore, the gospel enjoins us to repent, do the first works of love and make God our daily conscious faith. "Wash you and make you clean," which means, "put away your sinful life," and prove yourself a new creature in Christ.

Prayer.—Lord, teach us Thy way of grace and lead us in this way. We are unworthy, cleans us. We are dead, quicken us. We are lost, save us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

VISION NOW AND THEN.

Lesson: Isa. 25:6-9.

This lesson is beautiful. It says that in heaven we are to know God face to face, and see Him as He is. It means that life, as we know it, is past. Dishonor, ignominy and shame shall be buried, and people of all nations shall live together and be happy. That is heaven.

It means further that in this life, as we know it, thousands sit at the table of God, eat of His life, taste of His love, and see Him as through a glass darkly. The great difference is, those in heaven see clearly that which we on earth only believe. Is it worth trying?

Prayer.—Dear Father, our Lord, praise be to Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. We seek Thy face. Guard our lives lest we stray, and gather us among Thy saints, and make us members of Thy perfect Church in that perfect day. Amen.

SUNDAY.

ACCEPT THE LIGHT.

"Repent; awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light."—Eph. 5:14.

Jesus makes His home with anybody who receives Him; but it was "The poor heard Him gladly." There are those who dwell in darkness and cannot understand Him. Sin makes dark. He who sins, dwells in darkness; but when Jesus comes, there is light.

The sun of righteousness is in our land. We have the knowledge of God, and the spirit of charity and peace. His purpose is to shine in our hearts; but that does not mean that the people know Him thus. He who sins, keeps the light out. The sun does not profit a blind man. Thus it is with him who walks in ways of wickedness and in the service of sin. He is blind both to his own happiness and to the grace and love of

Dear Friends:

The Orphanage has killed some large hogs this year. We killed four this week that weighed 1,903 pounds. So far this season, we have killed 7,603 pounds and have seven more to kill by the first of March. We are trying to produce as much of the food that we consume in the Orphanage as we can on our own farm. We are trying, as far as we can, to work out the "live at home" policy; but it it is expensive to run a farm, as many of our readers know. Our farm is a great asset to us in many ways. It gives our boys employment during vacation season, and gives them farm-life training which they would hardly get any other way. A boy who learns to till the soil well will learn to do other things well and will make a greater success in life. The boy who spends his early years on the farm gets a sturdy foundation for life's work, and he generally holds to it through life. We are glad the Orphanage has a farm, with its pretty cattle, hogs and mules.

We are having some pretty days now, and as the weather gets better so more of our people can get to Church, I trust the offerings for the Orphanage will be more liberal, as our children eat food and wear clothes whether the income is large or small. Don't forget to mail Mr. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., a check to help us pay for our new barn. We need three thousand dollars now to settle all the bills.

God. The fountain of life flows freely, but he is led by lust to poisonous waters.

The sun is given us, that we may walk by its light. The kingdom of heaven is come to us, that we may repent, believe, and walk right—right into glory.

Prayer.—O dear and tender God, turn Thou us, and we shall be turned. Show us our sins and give us Thy grace. Take away from us self-righteousness and every manner of darkness. Give us humility and true living and saving faith. Amen.

OXFORD BIBLES

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

"Search the scriptures, for in them ye shall find eternal life."

All of us need a mixed diet of food. The best dietitians recommend scientific eating and warn us against eating too much of certain kinds of food. In like manner, it is dangerous to read too much about the current crime wave, lest we be saturated with the desire to become a criminal, for as a man thinketh so he becomes. It is dangerous for one to read too many novels, lest he become a slave to novel reading and thus waste life's most important hours. The Holy Bible should have a vital place in every man's reading.

The Bible is the greatest Book in all the world. It is the most widely distributed Book. The Bible was slowly produced, even as diamonds are distilled and crystalized atom by atom through a slow process. The Bible is a Book in which the religious history of many nations and races is recorded. Psalmist and prophet, poet and novelist emblazon its pages with their pictures of the march of God through time. No other book in all the world is so picturesque and colorful, so charged and saturated with the distilled fibres of the human soul. The Bible is the most human, as well as divine Book in the world's library. To fail to read it, is to lack something in life that will cause spiritual suicide. The Bible is the soil and seed-bed out of which have grown the great forests of literature. The Bible can never pass out of human interests, nor can it become obsolete any more than can the mountains and the sea disappear. They are here to stay. The Bible is rooted in the religious nature of man and will endure as one of the permanent and perennial interests and values of the world.

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God."

"Thy Word have I had in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee" (Psa. 119:11).

"Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" (Psa. 119:105).

The Bible truly contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy and its precepts are worthy, its histories are true and its decisions are infallible. All of us should read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct us, food to strengthen us, and comfort for all sorrow. The Bible has well been called the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's chart. Jesus Christ is the central figure through its pages. He is the world's greatest example of love and righteousness. To learn about Him and to discover the greatest joys of life, we should read the Bible slowly, frequently and prayerfully. Read it so as to get something that will fill the memory, rule the heart and guide the feet.

Our daily reading should be so vitalized that we would not cease until something useful has been attained. One should never read just for the sake of reading so many chapters a year or month. No sensible person attempts to rush through the hotel menu, but carefully reads until he finds something appetizing. Let us learn to study and read until a verse of Scripture becomes gripping and helpful. To find these precious jewels, we may have to read over many chapters. But eventually a pearl of great price will be found of great value to you for your particular problem.

Diamond hunters have to sift tons of earth. In finding radium, one must dig deep and carefully examine tons and tons of earth before even a small gram of precious radium is discovered. Let us be willing to sink deep shafts into the Word of God.

FIELD NOTES.

The work in my field is doing well. On the second Sunday in each month I preach at Shady Grove, Ether and Biscoe. All these Churches give one offering each month to missions and one to the Orphanage. On the fourth Sunday I preach at Pleasant Ridge, Randolph County, and the Church is on the eve of building five Sunday School rooms, which will add much to the convenience and efficiency of the Sunday School. We already have an excellent school, but with these new rooms we expect to see our school greatly improved. We have an excellent superintendent and capable, devoted teachers who are doing wonderful work for the progress of the kingdom.

At High Point I preach on the first and third Sundays at 11 and 7:30 o'clock. The people here are doing fine work for a small Church, both in Sunday School and Church service. We are planning to build additional Sunday School rooms soon which will add to the convenience of the entire school. On account of the difficulty of raising money at this time, due to our people working on short time, we shall find it difficult to finance the building of these new rooms; but by co-operation, loyalty and liberality of a devoted people we can succeed. They are making liberal contributions in spite of their disadvantages. Offerings to the Orphanage and missions are regularly made and reported in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We are teaching our people to be loyal to their Church and the kingdom, and supporting the institutions of the Church the best we can. We give our Father in heaven all glory for what we can accomplish in His name.

NOTICE.

So far, no invitation has been received for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference. If any Sunday School within the bounds of the Conference is contemplating entertaining this Convention, your executive committee would appreciate an invitation as early as possible. We would like to complete the arrangements of the program as early as possible. The final arrangements of this program depend upon where we are to meet. Please send your invitation to Rev. J. E. McCauley, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

LINCOLN AND MOODY.

the cause in which he was engaged that he had to go on, even though it should lead him, as his Master was led, even to Calvary. He was so intensely in earnest that there was no turning back.

The same intense earnestness was in Moody's character. In fact, this earnestness was one of the secrets of his great power over an audience. So intensely in earnest was he that people felt the importance of the mission in which he was engaged and realized something of the value of the salvation which he preached. So far as I can learn from his methods of work, there was nothing spectacular about the way he worked. He wasn't sensational, in the modern sense; but he was in dead earnest, and the people heard him gladly because he felt so strongly that which he told them. He proved his earnestness in the sacrifices he was willing to make in order to carry on his work. All that Moody needed to know was that God would have him undertake a work. He was willing to go ahead, not asking to see the distant scene, but believing that God would find a way to do His work.

3. They were men who lived close to the heart of the people. Lincoln grew up with the common people. He believed God loved the common people, for he had made so many of them. He was never too busy nor too much burdened with the cares of State to give attention to an individual case of need. Story after story is told of how he gave attention to the needs of individuals during the most trying days of the war. His great heart of love and sympathy brought him close to the heart of the people.

Again this characteristic is found in Moody. His work in the slums of Chicago showed his great concern for the people in need. It is said that he went into a home in Northfield one day and found there a father sick in bed, while the mother and daughters made straw hats in order to live. When Mr. Moody had asked them what they were going to do in order to make a living, the girls replied that if they could only get an education they could teach and support the family. The result of that conversation was the founding of Moody's school for girls, in which just such poor girls could receive an education. This is but one among many stories which might be told illustrating how close Moody lived to the very heart of human life and human needs. One can't live so close to the very heart-throbs of his fellows without catching something of their love and loyalty.

4. They both felt the call of God to a great task. Lincoln was none the less called than was Moody. And there was a feeling in the heart of Lincoln that God was calling him. And both of them were willing to make any sacrifice in order to follow the leadership of God. Both these men spent themselves, actually gave their life, for a great cause. Moody went into great undertakings like the first trip he and Sankey made to England without knowing where the money to make possible the trip was coming from. When his Church building was burned in the great Chicago fire, he began immediately to work for another building. There was nothing which could stop him from the task which God had called him to do.

These men had nothing to say about looking out for themselves. They did not talk about the sacrifices they had made and were making. They seemed not concerned whether they received proper credit for the work which they did or not. They simply lost themselves in their task. They were called of God to do a great task, and they answered the call. They left the rest to Him who had called them.

Your work and mine may be different from theirs, as theirs differed the one from the other. They were men of different temperament and characteristics. They were different. But God could call them and use them, each in his own field of service. You don't have to be like either of them, and you don't have to do the same work which either of them did. But God has a work for you, and He is calling you into that task. Will you not be like these great servants of the Most High God in the response you make to His call? Will you take up your task with the same intense earnestness, the same great faith, the same deep sympathy for humanity? the same willingness to answer the call of God, regardless of the cost, which characterized them?

And it is well for us to remember that it isn't so much how we begin a task, but how we finish the task. Dr. William E. Barton, in writing on Loncoln's message to 1930, calls attention to this fact. He shows how the autumn of 1862 began so darkly and discouragingly for Lincoln and the cause of the Union. Yet before that year had closed, the issues of the terrible civil struggle had been decided. When you have undertaken to do things for God and humanity and you are misunderstood and criticised by those you would like to help, don't forget that the important question isn't where you are at a certain time in the struggle, but how you finish. There are many who begin well, but soon give up the struggle. If we follow the example of these great citizens, we must stick to the fight until the victory is won.

OBITUARIES.

ISLEY.

Cecil Harris Isley was born in Alamance County, N. C., on June 9, 1898, and died January 16, 1930, being 31 years, 7 months, and 7 days of age. He was married to Miss Grace Loy on September 14, 1919, and is survived by his wife and three children, May Loy, Hilda and Cecil Harris; his father, R. P. Isley; two sisters and two brothers, and four half-brothers and sisters.

Early in life, Bro. Isley professed faith in Christ and united with the Shallow Ford Christian Church, remaining loyal to the cause until death.

BALLENTINE.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has called to Himself our beloved sister, Miss Lalan Madora Ballentine (affectionately known as "Miss Dora"), whose death occurred November 25, 1929; be it resolved:

1. That in her going, our Church sustains the loss of a devoted and faithful member, who gave her full interest to the worship of the services, to the program of the Sunday School, and to all religious activities of her Church.

2. That her beautiful spirit that loved so much the service of worship may live in our hearts and be a loadstar to point the way to a life calm and gentle, radiant in spirit, and joyful in overcoming the frailties of life.

3. We feel with submission that the soul that departed her fragile body gives a radiance to heaven and glory to her Lord. May the loss her family sustains be comforted with the happy promises of His eternal Word.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun, a copy be kept on the Church records, and a copy be read at the following meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society.

TURRENTINE.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies of the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., feel very keenly the passing of one of our faithful members, Mrs. Ella Roa Turrentine, who departed this life February 2, 1930.

She was a charter member of this Church and these societies, and her life has been a benediction to this community. She was faithful in every good work and word. Her gentleness of spirit and kindness of heart will continue to be an inspiration to us.

Resolved: That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Father, who doeth all things well, and we do solemnly resolve to keep sacred the memory of our departed sister by carrying on the work which was so dear to her heart.

That we extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and offer to them the consolation of the sacred Scripture which was the strength of their loved one.

"When comes the King of royal might
To crush the wrong and crown the right;
When all the saints in glory meet,
No more to die, no more to weep;
When thrones are set and crowns are given,
And all the rich rewards of heaven—
Oh, in that glorious by and by,
What's done for God will never die."

THE CHURCH BUSINESS MEETING.—

Does your Church have difficulty in reaching its membership with its business plans and programs? Who formulates and who approves the financial goals and objectives of the Church? It is not a question as to the method such matters follow as it is a question as to whether or not, when the final action has been taken, that they represent the action of the entire Church membership.

Is not the Church in danger of drifting into a sort of system of taxation without representation? Not because of any desire for such a condition, but because the members either cannot or will not take the trouble to attend the meetings when such matters are under consideration. Nobody can feel as keen a responsibility for the plans which he has had no part in formulating as one should feel for the activities of the Church. This condition is doubtless responsible for the fact that many Church members speak of the affairs of their Church as "what they are doing." What is the solution? So far, none has occurred to us, and we have not found any one who has a satisfactory answer to give. If you have been able to devise any system that is even partially satisfactory, you owe it to the cause to make it public.

THE SALT OF THE EARTH.—

In our eagerness to discover the individuals who are capable of filling positions of responsibility and leadership in the Church, we are in danger of overlooking the importance of the ordinary person who can only be one of the membership. Every Church organization has many such, and oftentimes they constitute the very backbone of the Church. When such members have a keen sense of responsibility and are genuinely loyal to their Church, it is impossible to estimate their worth.

It is the experience of nearly every preacher that there are certain members of his congregation who never do anything to draw attention to themselves. They attend regularly, listen with an air of interest and attention, and contribute modestly, as their means will permit. Such people generally constitute the background against which the preacher projects his sermon. When such an individual is forced to drop out of the congregation, it is only then that the preacher realizes how much he has really depended upon such an one for inspiration and help. Let us thank God for the people who have the ability for leadership. Let us thank God for those of unusual intellectual ability, who challenge us to do our best thinking. But let us thank God above all for the humble, faithful folks who are with us at all times, and by their sheer loyalty give us the assurance that makes it possible for us to push on.

HOW THE MEN MAY HELP.—

It was this writer's privilege recently to attend a most interesting meeting. The men of the Durham Christian Church and the men of Trinity Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Durham, had met in joint session to discuss a topic of mutual interest. That topic was, "How the Men of the Church Can Help the Pastor." What preacher would not be interested in hearing a group of consecrated men discuss such a subject! It is not possible to report the atmosphere of earnestness and spirituality which pervaded the meeting; but our readers might be interested in some of the suggested ways in which men may help their pastor.

One speaker saw the question in the light of college athletics, and suggested that every man in the Church ought to have the ambition to make the team. He contended that one of the first requisites of a good Church member is a willingness to undertake whatever assignments the preacher might deem wise to make, and contended that it is a man's duty to volunteer for service and to let the pastor know that he was not only willing to perform such duties as he felt qualified for, but to be willing to train in order to qualify for the weak spots on the team.

This speaker also likened the pastor to the "coach," whose business it is to give definite instructions as to how perfect teamwork may be developed as well as to strengthen the strong points in the individual player. He showed that the ideal player always puts the success of the team ahead of individual ambitions.

One man boldly spoke up and boldly advanced the contention that the men of the Church should assume the entire responsibility for the adequate financing of all current expenses of the local Church. He argued that in every Church there are men whose chief study and occupation is finance, and should not be willing for the preacher to have to take upon himself a problem which is their own peculiar province. The men of the Church should consult the preacher as to the needs of the work, and then leave him free to give his entire time and thought to ministering to the spiritual needs of the congregation.

Another speaker paid his respects to the grown-ups in the Church who have not put away childish things. He contended that there should be a group of men in the Church who should serve as a sort of grievance committee, smoothing out the friction and the insignificant criticisms before they have had time to grow into trouble-makers.

One man felt that it was an injustice for the preacher to have to serve as a perpetual fountain of encouragement, sympathy, and inspiration for the entire membership, with no one ever giving a thought to the fact that there are times when the preacher may stand in need of encouragement, when he, too, might appreciate sympathy and things which would bring inspiration. He said that many times the pastor might be described as "the lonely man in the pulpit."

Another man contended that it is the duty of every man in the Church to establish a medium of contact with the pastor. He called attention to the difficulty of a pastor establishing contact with a hundred or five hundred members, when all the seeking and contact is left to the preacher to make. This man also had an idea that when there was an occasion of any special need in the individual life or in the family that it should not be left for the preacher to learn about it by chance, but that under such circumstances the preacher should be called, and that the preacher should no more be censured if he does not come without being called than should the doctor.

It was also the concensus of opinion among the men of this group that it is every man's duty to be present at the services of the Church. The idea was advanced that many attend or stay away according to whether or not they shall receive that which they consider worth while. While this group felt that one should be there in order to render such service and help as might lie within one's power. One speaker even went so far as to suggest that it is as much the duty of the individual member to make preparations to receive as it is the duty of the preacher to make preparation that he may be able to impart.

But perhaps the strongest note that was sounded in the meeting was as to the help that men might give their preacher by praying for him. The story was told of a distinguished preacher, who was also a professor in a theological seminary. This preacher had an engagement to preach on a certain Sunday morning at a local Church. When he was in the midst of his sermon, he forgot it entirely. Try as he would, he could not recall the remainder of his sermon. He had the manuscript of his sermon in his pocket, and he was forced to take out the copy and lamely finish by reading that which he had forgotten. At the close of the service an old lady came up to the preacher and said that she hoped that the preacher would not feel too badly about forgetting his sermon. She felt that it was really her fault, for she had been so busy that morning that she had forgotten to pray for the preacher, and she promised that she would never again be guilty of such negligence. And that night the preacher delivered a sermon of unusual force and power.

These suggestions may not be original, in the sense that some one, perhaps a preacher, may not have thought of them many times. But they have a peculiar force and suggestiveness when they are the conclusions of an earnest group of laymen who are seeking to define the things which they may do in order to help their pastor.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. C. C. Ryan spoke for Rev. M. F. Allen, of the Newport News Church, last Sunday evening, his subject being "The Land Out of Which Our Bible Came."

If you wish help in selecting a play or a pageant for Easter, write for suggestions. State the number of people you wish to use and the age group. Miss Jewel Truitt, field secretary of the Board fo Religious Education, Waverly, Va., is always ready to help solve your problems.

Do you wish some mission literature to use during the mission period? Write in to the Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, state your needs and the literature will be sent to you. Miss Truitt will be glad to suggest missionary plays suited to your needs. During the mission period is the best time to put on your missionary plays. Then they won't get crowded out.

Rev. A. H. Sheppard changes his address and place of residence from 2611 Jones Avenue, Columbus, Ga., to Route 2, Glenn, Ga. Bro. Sheppard writes: "My parish has also been changed from the Georgia and Alabama Conference to the Alabama Conference. I have been called to the following Churches: Antioch, Rock Stand and Bethany. We have been hindered some on account of bad weather and roads, but in spite of all the hindrances we have had good attendance at all services. The day is never so dark but that the sun is shining just behind the clouds. The outlook is good for a prosperous year in our new field."

Ramsey MacDonald says: "They tell us that we cannot be made sober by act of Parliament. I hate these little smug, pettifogging and inaccurate pieces of proverbial philosophy. They are thrown off by men who cannot thing, and they are believed in by fools. I say that every experience that the world has had, and I do not care where you go for it—go north, go south, go east, go west; keep within your own empire or go outside; confine your attention to the Anglo-Saxon race or go outside it and take the Slavs—go anywhere experiments may have been made, and the conclusion is absolutely inevitable and irresistible that you can make men and women sober by act of Parliament."

The Eastern Virginia Club of the Elon Alumni Association met in the fellowship hall of the Suffolk Christian Church Friday evening, February 21st, for the annual banquet. The alumni and guests present numbered seventy-five. With the fun and fellowship, enough seriousness was mingled to make the occasion a real event. A business session preceded the banquet, and several items leading toward the betterment and usefulness of the club were passed upon. The toastmaster for the occasion was Rev. F. C. Lester, of Waverly, Va. Dr. N. G. Newman, president of the club, delivered the president's address. Dr. L. E. Smith spoke concerning the very urgent needs of the college, and several toasts were proposed to alma mater. Officers for the ensuing year are Rev. F. C. Lester, president; Rev. O. D. Peythress, vice-president, and Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, secretary-treasurer.

GRAHAM.

The Church at Graham is doing fine work with its new program. The young people's service, conducted every Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, is attracting the interest of the older people because so many of the young people are willing to take part in the program. Last Sunday evening two of the children in the 'teen age read selections of Scripture, two others led in prayer, and another furnished violin music.

The pastor preaches here every Sunday night immediately following the young people's service. The attendance both at Sunday School, Church, and the young people's services is growing. The congregations are attentive, the interest is fine, and the Church is becoming more active in looking after the sick and needy of the community. The membership of the Church is loyal, devoted and faithful in every good word and work.

W. C. Wicker.

WINDSOR, VA.

Under the direction of Mr. E. B. White, our pastor, the young people have organized into a Christian Endeavor Society. Addye Roberts is president, Elminia Rhodes is vice-president, Dorothy Holland is secretary and treasurer, Martha Bailey is sorresponding secretary.

We are divided into two sides. Elmina Rhodes is the captain of the "Reds," and Martha Bailey is the captain of the "Blues." There was a large crowd out last Sunday night, with many visitors. A fine program was rendered by the blues. The blues and reds alternate in having charge of the Sunday night programs. As there was preaching at the Christian Church last Sunday night, the society sat in a body during Church services. They sang a selection. Our pastor preached a very interesting sermon, which was enjoyed by many people who went to hear him. We hope the people of the community, Church and society will continue to co-operate with Mr. White as they already have.

Martha Bailey,
Corresponding Secretary.

SHALLOW WELL.

Our first service was held on the second Sunday in November, with the house filled to capacity. Special music was rendered by the Jonesboro male quartet and their singing was inspiring and uplifting.

On the second Sunday in December we had more than a hundred men, members of the Junior Order, from Jonesboro and vicinity, to worship with us, and special music by a double male quartet from Broadway, N. C. Well, if there is anything in music that beats a male quartet, it is a double quartet.

We have a splendid Sunday School, and under the leadership of Superintendent Frank Watson we are making progress. A few days before Christmas the foundation for three Sunday School rooms was laid, and on the second Sunday in January the rooms were complete and being used for classes. Much labor and material were donated.

Mr. M. L. McIvor, of Toronto, Ohio, a loyal member of the Church, furnished enough paint to put two coats on the outside of the Church and Sunday School rooms. With the new Sunday School rooms completed and the building painted, the Church decided to make further improvement and voted to put in new overhead ceiling and plaster the walls of the Church and paint the ceiling and window and door casings, and the doors ivory color. This work having been finished and six beautiful electric light fixtures installed, we feel that we can say with pardonable pride that we have the prettiest country Church to be found in this part of the State.

Sunday, February 9th, we held our first service in the remodeled Church and the building was filled with happy people. A male quartet from the Morris Chapel community rendered special music and their selections were appropriate and well rendered.

On December 20th, while we were attending Christmas exercises at Sanford Church, a large number of the Shallow well congregation came to our house, located the key, entered and took charge. When we returned from Church we found a number of cars parked near us, lights on and a big fire in the front room. Upon entering to investigate, we found a "slim edition" of Santa Claus (Frank Watson) lying on the lounge in the hall. The hall floor was filled with packages containing good things to fill the pantry.

We are grateful for the generous pounding and all that has been done by the people of this charge to make our coming here pleasant, and pray that God may bless the combined efforts of pastor and people in our endeavor to build up His kingdom in the field.

T. Fred Wright.

SHALL WE MODERNIZE RELIGION?

Everywhere ideas of religion are changing. Our great reason commonly given for the evident failure of the Churches to interest people in spiritual things is that religion has not been modernized along with social usages, education, commerce, and industry. It is said that the Churches are behind the times. And who wants to be a back number nowadays?

We are urged to hold our religious views tentatively, "subject to change without notice," as the scientists do their scientific theories and findings. A belief that fails to do this is said to be doomed.

A writer in the Christian Century declares: "The teachings of science cannot be taken over as the teachings of religion; but the method of science for seeking truth must be taken over by the Christian religion as its method also for seeking truth."

We believe all this is insidious doctrine, calculated to undermine faith in God and His word. It is truth that the logical method of science should be applied by Christians in an interpretation of statements of truth in the word of God, the Bible, the sole source of spiritual truth. But positive, settled, and eternal religious truth itself will never be discovered by aping the experimentation and reasoning and uncertainties of the scientific method. For our religious faith we want something sure and basic, right now; for we have to live now, and our eternal destiny depends on how we live and what we believe now.

God very clearly defines the proper method of approach to Him and to religious truth. He says, "He that cometh to God must believe" (Heb. 11:6). Spiritual things are spiritually discerned (1 Cor. 2:14). He that comes to science must doubt. Scientific truth is sought by doubting a theory. Religious truth is found by believing an authority.

We do not decry experiment and logic in the search for the truths of natural science. Doubtless, in the majority of cases, it leads to absolute truth. But where the Bible does commit itself on a fact of science—and it does do so in some cases where scientific fact overlaps religious truth or is used to illustrate spiritual things—then its statement is more to be depended upon than all the tentative theories and shifting "facts" that scientists can bring to bear.

Yes, modernize religion in the sense of adapting its methods to modern needs and viewpoints; but this does not, and need not, involve changing its doctrines and blasting its foundations. And this last is just what modernists are doing. True Protestant Christianity fits every age, including the millennium and eternity.—The Watchman.

THE PERIL OF PROCRASTINATION.

"Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient time, I will send for thee." —Acts 24:25.

Procrastination is man's greatest enemy. He is a thief of time, yea a murderer of time and opportunity. Procrastination says, "Put off till tomorrow what should be done today"; and duty says, "Never put off until tomorrow what can be done today." Putting things off makes them harder to accomplish. A good steward of time will never put off demands upon his time. He will not cause others to waste their time.

I once read a story of a little seed that lay in the ground. One day the warm breath of spring fell upon the spot wherein the little seed was resting. Then the cool rains fell upon the little seed, and all of nature said, "Awake and burst into life." Be something, grow and multiply, become a blessing. But the little seed responded, as he lazily and sluggishly slept beneath the sod, "I will tomorrow, or some time next week, but not today." And so the days passed and the August sun and wind came and the ground became hardened and dry. At last the lazy little seed said, "Now I will burst open." But there was no spring rain or nice warm sunshine to kiss the spot wherein he lay, and so the little seed died in the cradle in which he was born. Because he had waited too long—waiting for a more convenient time! O the peril of procrastination! Let us get the lesson from the little seed that put off the opportunity of growth and then died.

One of the finest lessons on "The Peril of Procrastination" to be found anywhere in history or present-day life occurs in the scriptural lesson upon which I call your attention. In this twenty-fourth chapter of Acts, the apostle Paul is in care of Felix, the Roman governor. He is being held for trial. In the meantime, Paul is visited by the governor and his unlawful wife, Drusilla. They are in hopes that Paul will bribe him and obtain his freedom. But when Paul stands before them he speaks not in favor of himself or in behalf of freedom, but speaks of his faith in Christ. And he reasoned of righteousness, judgment and temperance, and Felix trembled, for he was guilty of unrighteousness, intemperance and greatly feared the judgment to come. The moments were very tense, and Felix feared the Lord and realized that Paul's conversion was marvelous. He knew in his heart that he should accept the Lord Jesus Christ as his Saviour and be like unto Paul. But the peril of procrastination caused him to hesitate, and he said unto Paul, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient time, I will send for thee."

1. Felix hoped that by waiting for a more convenient time, he would forget the charges made against him by Paul. Hence, he dismisses Paul. He hopes to forget him, for it was not very pleasant to be reminded of the punishment that would surely come upon him unless he sought to change his ways. His conscience hurt when Paul talked about the future judgment that would befall upon all men who were walking afar off from God. All the while, Felix kept trembling and his heart kept telling him to amend his ways, forsake the adulterous life and be transformed into a new life. As the words of Paul continued to pour upon his ears, he could stand it no longer, and decided if Paul would go away maybe he could forget these nonsense statements.

Sin is sin, and is just as real today as it was in the days when our first parents yielded to the tempter's beckon. Be sure your sins will find you out. There is no use to try to hide from sin. Adam sought a place wherein he thought God would not find him. For a time the consciousness of sin may be dismissed from the mind, but not for long. The only cure for sin is the forgiving grace of the Father, who gladly forgives all who come to Him in repentance.

It does no good to say, "Go thy way; when I have a more convenient time" I will consider the matter, and maybe next time make a confession of my sins, but not now.

2. Felix learned that procrastination made decision harder instead of easier, and that it robbed him of the one opportunity of his life to make restitution for his sins and wicked life. "When I have a more convenient time I will send for thee." But just now I am not quite ready to make my decision. By waiting, it will be easier, so I'll wait a while. No doubt but Felix anxiously wished that his life was like that of Paul, but he was not willing to pay the price; so he waited, thinking that the way might become a bit easier. But not so, for the way of salvation is by the straight and narrow way. And Felix waited and waited for that more convenient time, which never, never came.

If one fails to do his duty now, what assurance has he that it will ever be done, or that the performance thereof will be easier? None whatever! "The road to hell is paved with good resolutions," some one has proverbially said. It is very easy to say, I am going to decide for Christ, I am going to start reading my Bible, I am going to begin family devotions at the altar, but am not ready just now.

Let me tell you the story of a man who stopped between trains to visit one of his old college-mates whom he had not seen for years. Upon arrival at his home, he found him sick and learned that he was not a believer in God. Science had wrecked his faith, because he had gotten a wrong view of the relation between science and religion. There he lay on his death-bed, facing eternity without the assurance of a future home prepared for him. His friend told him of the love of Jesus, and how he could save to the uttermost all those who came to Him in penitent faith. But the sick man said, "I'll think about it, and when you come back I'll let you know my answer." But his friend said, "I have only a few more minutes before my train leaves, and I would like to have you know my Christ and be sure of life eternal."

But the man could not prevail upon him to make the supreme decision, and he left his bedroom. The peril of procrastination had sent him away without an answer. Upon reaching his destination, he found a telegram saying that his friend had died a few minutes after he left the home.

"Almost persuaded now to believe,
Almost persuaded, Christ to receive.
Seems now some soul to say,
'Go, Spirit, go Thy way,
Some more convenient day
On Thee I'll call.'"

3. Felix discovered that a more convenient day never came. He learned the sublime truth of the biblical statement that "Now is the acceptable time." In the 25th chapter of Matthew there is a very beautiful story of a wedding feast to which ten young ladies are invited. The story tells us that five of them took oil enough for their lamps —these were wise virgins. The other five were foolish, and said, "We'll get our oil at a more convenient time. This story is self-explanatory.

One of the greatest lessons I ever learned from geometry was the definition of a line. Now most of us would say that a line is the shortest distance between two points, and for a straight line that definition is true, but not all lines are straight. The good professor taught me that a line is the path of a point. It makes no difference whether the point go up or down, east or west, north or south, straight or crooked, the line is always the path of the point. Let us change one letter in the word line and say that life is the path of a point, and the point is now, and now is the acceptable time for all great decisions which present themselves. "Now is the day of salvation." Hence, "boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a single day bringeth forth" (Prov. 27:1).

BRO. FLOWERS' WORK.

It is really pathetic to see young people going jangling along the road of life to "nowhere." Just drifters they are, with nothing definite ahead. And now and then I see a college or university graduate jaunting along the way. He, too, is on the road to "nowhere." He either failed to get the right initiative before going to college or he followed a college curriculum too closely while there. Somewhere they have lost their ballast, and they are unsound in the faith of personal aptitude and in the adaptability for doing something.

These college graduates who cannot fit into any program of life have become a source of much discussion and have led many intelligent people to place a great discount on a college degree.

Seems to me that our schools have become too bookish. Books are demanding too much of the child's time, and he has no time for productive work at home. It is an established fact that we learn to do things by doing; but it was Dr. Dyer, I believe, who said some time ago that "We are trying to learn in this age by not doing." This is the reason, no doubt, for the failure of many of our young people. They come out of our high schools and sometimes out of our colleges, having read some things and having been told some things, but that is all they know.

Not long ago I heard a young man lecture before a large audience in one of our Southern cities, and as we were leaving the Church a leading pastor of one of the city Churches for years said to me: "There is a man trying to teach something he doesn't know." That was true, and any intelligent person knew it. He was just telling us what he had read or what somebody had told him; but as for himself, he didn't know it. The times demand the person who knows, and if you don't know your job it will not be long before somebody will find it.

There is a saying that "fortunes gotten by the sweat of Dad's face seldom stick." This is invariably true when school has been a playhouse, and home a place to hang out, eat, sleep and be at leisure. Nothing develops both body and soul to its fullness but work. If you want to teach a boy the worth of a thing, leave him to work it out. It will not hurt his prospects for life one whit. It may hurt his feelings, but he will outgrow that, and be the better thereby.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHERE SUMMER SPENDS THE WINTER.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 22, 1930.

After a brief visit to America, an Englishman wrote home that the United States was no longer a country or a place, but a picnic. That Englishman must have come to Florida in February. The whole country seems to be here, bent on a picnic. Summer has even come here to spend the winter. This whole city of St. Petersburg, and for miles around, is one unbroken playground this time of year. One will find more elderly people here at play, we fancy, than anywhere else in the United States. Very few young people (this winter excepted) are here. Why shouldn't old people—I mean now, people 75 to 95—play? You will just find hundreds of that age here at play now—fishing, in the surf (wading or swimming), playing golf, throwing "hrose-shoes" (just think of it, coming hundreds of miles to throw "horseshoes"!). They are seeking youth and vigor and health again—and finding all three. No wonder Ponce de Leon thought he had discovered the "fountain of perpetual youth" when he reached Florida. He would think so now if he came back and saw thousands of elderly people out in the glorious sunshine playing all sorts of games and pranks and acting as if they were yet in their 'teens.

They call St. Petersburg the "Sunshine City," and a daily paper here offers to give away its entire issue on every day of the year during which the sun does not shine some in the city. During the three years of this offer they have had to give away less than half-dozen issues. And such a sun! I stayed out in it and baked five hours today. They have the "dinkiest" little houses on otherwise vacant squares and lots here! They call them "salariums." Seven feet long, five feet wide, six feet high. You rent one for a price, go in, shut the self-fastening door, touch a button and half the roof flies back, flooding your house and body with sunshine. You undress, stretch out on a cot and proceed to bake in the glowing sun and enjoy an all-over glowing perspiration like boys used to in the hot summer days "down on the farm." You come to Florida where the sun is shining and proceed to buy sunshine by the hour. The doctors declare now that the human race should spend more of its precious time out in the burning sun. And "they say" that the sun's rays penetrate the disrobed body as thoroughly and as completely as X-rays in a laboratory.

The writer passed gardens today in which all summer vegetables were ripe and ready—beets, carrots, squash, cabbage, onions, strawberries, potatoes—all growing, green and beautiful in the open summer sun. And trainloads of these fresh vegetables are now going north to supply tables a thousand and more miles away.

We are living in a great country and in a glorious time. Truly, God is good in giving us such a land, and in it we should be glad and grateful. For hours today I have listened at the varied but ever-melodious notes of mocking-birds. One sang outside of my window all the time I was dressing and preparing for breakfast. Another sang like her little body would burst with music and melody in a palm tree on the lawn while I took my hour's sun bath. Another sang out the hour I sat on the green bench near the beach and read a good book and dreamed of summer. Query: Why does the mocking-bird sing so much? What are other birds doing while mocking-birds sing? If mocking-birds sing for the joy of it, how do they get their living out of it? Our Creator has provided joy, song, melody in this wonderful world, and He bids us look up, be glad, sing a song of joy to Him, and in our hearts be grateful for all the blessings and bounties and benefits that abide us and come to all daily. "PUSSYFOOT" JOHNSON.

William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson is said to be the best authority in the world on prohibition. The St. Petersburg Times says he is a 50-50 person—that is, one-half the world are his ardent admirers, the other half wish that the earth had swallowed him up long ago. He used to be publicity man for the Anti-Saloon League of America. Now he is official representative of the World League Against Alcohol, which league numbers thirty-six nations. He spoke in St. Petersburg last Monday night, and the largest auditorium in the city packed to capacity heard him (when they were not applauding). He is great!

Mr. Johnson declares that our government has set itself to the task of prohibition. It has never failed yet in an undertaking, and it will not in this most "noble experiment" no more than it failed in the adoption of human slavery.

"They blame everything on prohibition," Mr. Johnson said. "I read in today's paper where the alligators aren't as numerous as they used to be. I suppose that's because of prohibition. They say, too, that the horned apes are decreasing in numbers. More drunkards now than before prohibition? That's all bosh. The wets are so eager to have something to say that they blame everything on prohibition."

According to statistics, Mr. Johnson says there are three times as many students in colleges as there were before prohibition. "They say the young folks are a hard-drinking lot, but that's slander," Mr. Johnson said. "Why, if that were the case there would be three times more drinking than before prohibition. Not long ago the Literary Digest sent out a questionnaire to 219 colleges, asking if the students were drinking more liquor than before prohibition. Two hundred of the colleges wrote back 'No.' Some young folks always did go to hell, and I guess they always will," he concluded, referring to those of the younger age who do drink.

"Local option has had its day," the prohibition authority said. "It was the stepping-stone to prohibition, traveled from city and town to county and State, and then to the country. Right now there are 10,000 people serving time in jails and prisons who have been sent there by State and Federal courts. If that isn't law enforcement I'd like to know what it is."

In speaking of the country's attitude toward prohibition, Mr. Johnson believes that the majority of people are in its favor. "Since the Volstead act we have had five congressional elections, and each time the wets have made prohibition an issue and tried to modify the act. Do you know what happened—we have a drier Congress at the present time than we ever had before. We've had a law against stealing for more than 200 years, and there is still stealing and we've had a law against killing, and there are still murderers. There will always be liquor."

Mr. Johnson believes in nothing but absolute prohibition, and will not even modify his views in favor of the light wines and beers. "There's not any more chance of us going back to saloons and light wines and beers than there is in our going back to slavery and polygamy. Alexander the Great drank himself to death with light wines and beers, and all the drunkenness in the Bible came from light wines and beers. Why, they didn't have severe distillation until 1,100 years after Christ. Lot got drunk on light wines and beers. Ninety-three per cent of the old liquor business dealt in light wines and beers, so if you bring that much back, why not all of it?"

Mr. Johnson had a few remarks to make on the recent prohibition killings. "Every time a prohibition officer has to kill a bootlegger, it is never a bootlegger that seems to be the victim, but a Sunday School teacher on his way to Church or some other 'innocent' person. The newspapers always cover over the fact that it is a bootlegger that has been killed!" J. O. A.

CHURCH AND HOME.

The Church must fight its battle for righteousness, morality and salvation through the home. If home life suffers, the Church suffers. If parents will not back up the Church to which they belong by leading their children to Sunday School and Church, then both home and Church suffer the terrible consequences. Mr. Rodney Brandon, head of the public welfare work for the Staate of Illinois, declared in a public address the other day that only half of the population of Illinois claim membership in any Church, and that less than half of these send their children to Sunday School.

What is the result of this? Well, let Mr. Brandon tell further: "The prison population in Illinois has doubled since 1918, and is now more than 8,000. And the present-day prison population is on an average far younger than that of 1918. The prisons are so crowded that three men have to occupy one cell." Look! As Church membership and Sunday School attendance have decreased, the prison population has increased. The Church must reach and redeem the home.

THINK.

The highest type of thinking, of course, is creative thinking, and every mind is capable of production on this highest level. At least this is the thesis of all educational institutions, and if they should be dislodged from this precept it would be very difficult for colleges to justify themselves.

Despite the fact that intelligence tests are being advocated as delimiting the ability of students to think, those who believe in the innate ability of the human mind to create thought are insistent that intelligence is not the only endowment of thinkers, and there is a remarkable body of evidence that sustains this viewpoint. I was reading the other day a critique on two of the most distinguished thinkers of our time. Both of them were positively dull during their college days. By intelligence tests, today they would be rated as mediocre.

One of the most incisive books having to do withe the art of thinking is that written by the Frenchman Dimnet, who insists as a fundamental note throughout that every mind is capable of creative work provided two conditions are met:

1. Be yourself.
2. Find yourself.

Dimnet argues that a writer is himself in the busy activities of life, and that he finds himself in the period of passivity. In other words, activity or expression and passivity or reflection should be characteristic of every life, and it is through the proper adjustment of these two approaches to life and its problems that real thought is generated.

Preceding the stage of creative thinking, there are three preliminary steps, according to Dimnet:

1. The preparation of our life and mind for the highest kind of images. (Dimnet, of course, as all psychologists, teaches that we really think in terms of images.)
2. The storing in of these images.
3. The elaboration of these acquisitions in the mind.

In the field of elaboration there are four important steps, and it is in respect to these steps that most thinkers meet their Waterloo. These steps are as follows:

1. Going over our knowledge.
2. Reflection.
3. Writing out one's thoughts.
4. Preserving one's thoughts.

I am inclined to think that one of the finest contributions which a college course can make to a student is to acquaint him with the principles and disposition to think. It is not sufficient to store the mind with facts. Facts are the raw material of thought, and it is thought that puts humanity forward in the effort to achieve its ultimate goals. W. A. H.

WHY CHILDREN NEGLECT THE CHURCH.

The practice, the custom, the habit of many of our Sunday Schools either to send the children home at the close of the Sunday School hour or to allow them to return home of their own choice and the neglect to attend the Church service will as assuredly build in them habits of neglecting the Church when they get into maturer years as there is the possibility of forming habits in life by the law of practice. You cannot expect the children to learn to think Church attendance is important when they have been trained until adolescence to leave the Church service.

You might as well expect students who had neglected mathematics all through their school course, or to speak correct English during the years of education to wake up some bright morning when they reach the years of young manhood and womanhood by some miraculous power suddenly to understand the intricacies of mathematics or the technicalities of the English language as to expect them, after neglecting to cultivate the habits of Church attendance to become loyal and punctual attendants of the Church. The idea of such loyalty in attendance with the present practice from early childhood to young manhood and womanhood of neglecting to cultivate such an attitude of loyalty and practice of punctuality is simply unthinkable. All modern methods of education, all psychology of learning, all principles of habit-formation, and all principles of common sense contradict such a conception, and as Christ said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," we know by the fruits of such practice and custom that the thing will not work.

Too many of our young people are trained, educated, practiced in neglecting the Church attendance ever to return to the first principles of right attitudes, to the cultivation of habits of Church attendance, and loyalty to the Church and kingdom, the central idea for which all auxiliaries of the Church should exist and serve.

The first law of learning is open-mindedness, readiness to learn, and no period of life is more prolific in this characteristic of learning than that of childhood and adolescence. If we neglect to cultivate attitudes of loyalty and form habits of Church attendance during these periods, the time will never be redeemed and these attitudes and practices will never be formed, and the future of the Church will be jeopardized for want of attendance and support.

The second law of learning is the law of practice. If we want a child to become a skilled pianist, we must begin in early childhood and practice, practice, practice! This law of use is fundamental in all learning. The same law applies in the learning of any of the skills, attitudes, and practices in the education of the mind, and the same law applies in all religious matters. Church attendance, Christian character, loyalty to the kingdom, loyalty to our institutions, and all the rest depend upon this vital and fundamental law of practice. There is no better time for practice to become effective than during the plastic years of childhood and adolescence.

The third law of learning is the law of effect. If we would apply this law, we must attach some satisfaction, some hope of happiness or reward to the performance of any task worth while. People do very little just from a sense of duty unless there is some joy in the doing or in the outcome. Make Church attendance attractive to children. Reward not only their successes, but also their efforts, and children will go to any limit for the joy that is set before them.

VIII. MEEKNESS.

February 15, 1893 (Gal. 5:22).

Meekness is mildness, pleasantness, softness, as "the mildness of the weather." It is not weakness, but grace and strength. It is the companion of gentleness. In Grecian mythology, the graces were three sister goddesses who were supposed to bestow beauty. It is the act of pleasing with truth. We must not imagine that the graces of architecture, of society, of letters, or of religion are weak elements. The graceful proportions in works of art, the most fascinating manner in society, the richest embelishments in books and oratory, the sweetest and meekest types of character, all show signs of strength as well as softness and taste. Meekness is not useless adornment of life, but is, like the beauty of the lily, one of its essential elements. The blossoms that crown the orchards in springtime tell of luscious fruits to come; and the flowers that cluster in their wealth of beauty on mountain-crest, in every nook and corner, on hillside and dale, and kiss each other over tiny ditches rippling through green meadows, tell us in poetic forms and colors of the fruit-bearing glory of the earth. This world would be a dreary home for man if it produced only what is necessary for the support of the body; but mind and heart are provided for from boyhood even down to old age. Humility or meekness is a grace of character which God's Spirit produces in man. It is not an artificial sham, but a real substance in the life. Moses was the "meekest man," and yet the greatest man the world has ever known. Mildness is consistent with firmness and strength. Jesus said of Himself: "I am meek and lowly in heart"; and yet He could not be moved by temptation, while even the winds and the sea obeyed His voice. Lowliness, meekness, may characterize divine strength, for it is spiritual fruit.

The Inheritance of Meekness.

"For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." "But the meek shall inherit the earth." Or it may be read, "They shall inherit the land, Caanan, a type of heaven." Paul says, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." It includes the covenant privileges and salvation of God." The Saviour confirms this idea of inheritance in the Beatitudes, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The meek are those who quietly submit themselves to God and who follow His directions in compliance with His designs, and who are gentle, showing all meekness unto all men."

Being born of the Spirit makes us the children and heirs of God, and hence we inherit the earth, because the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof. The wide world and its fullness of wealth belong to Christ and its kingdoms are to be His, and all is ours to use and not abuse. The quiet, mild people really enjoy the world more than the turbulent, fractious, acrid, impious ones. Meekness is a better title to the earth than any deeds that man can warrant. Meekness has a real tendency to promote our health, wealth and happiness, and to make us strong in God. The soft, mild air of spring and the gentle showers and sunshine are just as mighty in their influence over nature as the severe cold and howling storm-blast of winter. Under the benign sway of milder days the life of buried seeds moves and grows till forests clap their hands with gladness and wheatfields are crowned with golden grain. The meek are not the easy, worthless mortals, but the graceful, mild, firm, glorious men of power.

The Restoring Power of Meekness.

"Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and shall hide a multitude of sins." And Paul, "If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

It is one thing to overtake a fault; it is quite another thing to be overtaken by a fault. Ye who are spiritual restore such a one—the word means to set in joint as a broken limb. This is not to be done in harshness and passion, but in meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted. The surgeon who resets broken or dislocated limbs ought to be gentle, tender, sympathetic, yet true and firm and faithful. So ought we to be toward those who are overtaken by sins. The whole ministry of Jesus was full of meekness. David said of Him, or for Him, "Then I restored that which I took not away." There was very little of excommunication in the ministry of Jesus Christ; it was pre-eminently the ministry of restoration. He came to save sinners, not to exclude them; and His attitude toward them was "meek and lowly." The stern, crabbed, snappish, churlish, ill-natured professor is certainly void of meekness. His words are poisoned arrows, and his look is full of dag-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

We have read and heard again that "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Experience and observation both confirm the truth of this statement. We can learn from the animal world as well as from the Bible and experience. I will give four examples from animals to corroborate the statement quoted above from Acts 20:35.

Hens give all the time and receive no pay for their eggs; yet the money value of eggs in the United States is greater than the money value of any one farm crop—corn, wheat, cotton, peanuts, none of them equal the value of eggs. Hens cackle when they lay eggs. They seem to be so glad that they have made a contribution to man. They would not be happy and cackle if one gave them an egg. It is not what the hen receives that makes her glad and cackle; it is what she gives. Christian men and women might be happier if they gave more to others. The egg-world is a great world because it is a giving world.

Cows come right along with the hens. They receive nothing but food, and yet they furnish the milk, cream, and butter of the world. The dairy world is a big world and the dairy business is a big business. Cows are generous animals. They furnish the families of the country and the city with the best of food, receive no pay, not even thanks. The cow is outside in the pasture or the stall waiting for the time when the man or woman will milk her again. The family uses the milk without even thanking her for what she gives. Shelter, pasture, and food is all she gets for what she gives; yet, if you look at the fine cow, she looks contented and happy. Men say, "That cow gives so many gallons of milk"; and they say the truth—she gives it; while some members of the Church give nothing to Him who gives all to them. Some workers seem to think all the time of what they are to receive for their work, and give nothing to help win the world for Christ. That bottle of milk on the porch floor was given by some cow.

Hogs are great givers, too. It is true they are great eaters, but what they eat is all they receive. They seem to enjoy what they eat; but the day of slaughter comes to the hogs. Enter a great slaughter-house and behold the live animals driven into the pen, the keen knife enters the neck, the blood flows freely, and the animal passes on to the tank of hot water, the hair is removed, and then on it passes until it hangs in the cold room. Later, it passes into the meat market, then into the kitchen, and finally upon the table in the home or the hotel. The ham is praised, but the hog is forgotten. It has given its life to help feed the world. The hog is a great giver. He fulfills the purpose for which God made the hog, and that is better than some people do.

Mules fill another world. It is the world of service. Quietly up and down the row in the field pulling the plow, or up and down the road pulling the wagon, the mule gives strength in willing service to help feed and clothe the world. But who gives the mule thanks! The man receives pay for the day's work; the mule renders the harder service and receives nothing but his corn and hay. Nobody says, "Thank you" for his service. The work-world is a big world, and men who work for pay only are not as good as faithful mules. W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

The board of trustees met in their midyear session on February 18th. Sixteen members were present. A busy day was given to the affairs of the college. Three members of the board, who have served for many years, came to me after the adjournment and expressed the conviction that it had been the most constructive and harmonious session the board had ever held.

It was decided not to undertake the million-dollar campaign until following the approaching session of the Southern Christian Convention. The leaders of the Congregational fellowship had expressed a desire to participate in the campaign. When the Southern Christian Convention meets in Raleigh this spring, it is expected that a plan of complete organic union between the Christians and Congregationalists of the South will be presented and adopted. The trustees, therefore, voted to request the Convention to authorize the amendment of the charter of the college so as to permit its additional trustees from the Congregational constituency. When and if this amendment is authorized and the new trustees have been elected, then our Congregational brethren will be officially joined with us in the set up of the campaign. It is believed that our people will heartily approve this gesture looking to the closer union of our merged bodies.

One other action of the board of trustees will prove of inestimable value to Elon and the Church. The trustees went on record as requesting the ministers to raise the quotas of their Churches for the $36,750 current expense fund for the college locally, using their own laymen to help, and calling on the college officials and field force only in case of real need. It is hoped that our pastors will regard this as a most vital and effective method of bringing the college before their members in a sympathetic way. I have written to each pastor, and before this Elon Letter is in print I hope many of them will have responded cheerfully and favorable to this suggestion. It will mean work for the pastors, but it will also mean most effective promotion for our college and its interests.

And as one brother said to me yesterday: "Where would the Christian Church be but for Elon?" W. A. HARPER.

PASTORS SEND FIELD NEWS.

It will inspire your people to undertake greater things if you will report all important activities of the Church to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The average Church member will read news from their own Church and pastor with greater zest than they will read general articles about things they are not acquainted with. The things, events and activities nearest to the people will interest them much more than the abstract, the remote, and the unseen events of Church life.

The very psychology of interest is based upon those activities in which people participate and which they see going forward because of their own efforts. When they see themselves successful in carrying out their projects, when they see their undertakings working out successfully, when they see their purposes being realized because they have worked, sacrificed, and planned, the interest grows and may be fanned into a living flame.

The word interest is derived from inter esse, meaning the things between, therefore the steps, the means, the activities, the efforts, the sacrifices, and the services, which they put into the undertakings leading to success, which go between their present attainments and their desired goals or achievements, are suffused with intense interest, and will make attractive reading matter for those who are dedicating their time, talents and money to the attainment of some desirable objective.

Report such things to the Church paper, and we shall have more interested readers, more interested readers will create a felt need for the Church paper, and we shall have more subscribers.

Writing about Klondike will interest few, freeze the interest of many, and be of indifference to more; but writing about one's wife and children, home and fireside, Church and religious life—the concrete, the familiar, the near-at-hand, the tangible, the visible, and the palpable—will create interesting reading matter. Try it out as the scientists say, and see if it does not work. Too many of uor leaders talk and write and preach as though the local Church should give its time largely to doing for others without thought about its own growth. Self-preservation is the primary instinct and the first law of life. We must first live before we can live well. Report your work and stimulate interest and loyalty to your Church and then your Church can and will do great things for others. W. C. WICKER.

SANFORD.

We arrived on the field on Friday, November 1, 1929, about 5 o'clock P. M., from our former home near Paces, Va., and in spite of the prediction by one of our colored friends at Ingram that "Brer. Wright" would surely have bad luck if he moved on Friday, we arrived all safe and sound.

The ladies of the Church provided us with a beautiful and delicious supper, consisting of fried chicken, hot rolls and butter, chicken salad, hot coffee, cake and pie, served at our new home. We were then invited to the Church for a reception that had been planned for the pastor and his family. Arriving at the Church we found a large number of our Church members and friends waiting to meet and welcome us. The Ladies' Aid Society served a delicious and refreshing fruit punch to all present.

For our first preaching service we had a large congregation composed of our members and representatives from practically every Church in the vicinity of Sanford. On separate Sundays we were visited at our evening services by the pastor and congregation of the First Baptist Church and the pastor and congregation of the East Sanford Baptist Church.

The Church had been without a pastor for more than a year, but we found an active, interested group of members, willing to do their share in the work of the Church. The Sunday School under the leadership of Prof. Jas. S. Truitt is active and growing. Our great problem now is what to do with classes that have outgrown their class-rooms.

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies are well organized and very active in our work here.

On Friday, December 20th, we had our Christmas tree and white gifts program. A treat was provided for the children from the primary department to intermediate department age, consisting of fruit and candy and nuts. A gift was brought by each child for a child at our Orphanage, and groceries and money brought by others, which was sent to Superintendent Johnston for the Orphanage.

On the fourth Sunday morning in December we received into the membership of the Church thirteen members on letter of transfer, and we have since then received two more members, making a total of fifteen to date.

Our finance committee recently put on an every-member canvass to secure pledges for Church expenses and benevolent causes, and we had a very liberal response and reached our goal. The weekly envelope system has never been used here before, but is proving quite a success.

On Sunday, February 9th, the young people organized a Christian Endeavor Society, which we are sure will prove a blessing to them and the Church.

T. Fred Wright.

PALM STREET CHURCH.

We held our first quarterly meeting last Saturday night with a large attendance. We were very much pleased with our reports ending the first quarter. Our financial conditions are in the best shape in which they have been in a long time. Our Sunday School is still growing under the leadership of Mr. Shelton Brady. We had the largest attendance Sunday the school has ever had, 268 being present. The Men's Bible Class had to move to the auditorium. Their goal is 100, and they hope to reach it Sunday. Mr. A. H. Henshaw, their teacher, thinks he has the finest class of men that could be found anywhere. We organized a new class Sunday, with lucky thirteen present. The reason the pastor thinks that thirteen is lucky is because our Church was organized with thirteen charter members, and when he was called to the work they had a membership of one hundred and thirteen, and he being the thirteenth pastor and was ordained on the 13th of November, 1929.

At the 11 o'clock service we had a large crowd. The pastor used for his subject, "Arise and Go." Three new members were added to the Church, after which we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The Christian Endeavor met at 6:30, with 72 seniors and 29 juniors and intermediates present. Our Christian Endeavor is doing a great work. The senior class is planning on buying a piano for the Church.

The Missionary Society from the First Church, Greensboro, gave a very interesting program on Sunday night, January 26th, at our Church. The following Monday night we had a business meeting and organized. Mrs. James E. Smith was elected president; Mrs. R. E. Stevens, vice-president; Mrs. Ophelia Morris, secretary, and Mrs. A. H. Henshaw, treasurer, and Mrs. T. C. Apple, program committee. Our ladies seemed to be very much interested in missions, and we hope to do a great work in this department this year.

J. L. Neese, Pastor.

BURLINGTON NOTES.

The fine spirit of fellowship and good will that exists among the membership of the First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., is indeed an encouraging factor and an evidence that Christ's spirit is working. A wholesome interest is being manifested in the Church, and to show evidence of this interest this article is being written.

There has been an increase in attendance upon the Church and Sunday School services for the past few Sundays, and it is indeed very gratifying to note that members are being added to the Sunday School each Sunday and that nine members have been received into the fellowship of the Church since the beginning of the year, three of whom were received last Sunday upon profession of faith.

The Burlington Girls' Council, an interdenominational religious body, which meets at this Church Tuesday night of each week for Bible study and spiritual inspiration, has awakened many of our young people to the extent that they are not only willing but anxious to do big things for Christ. On last Tuesday night, Miss Helen Sherwood, a missionary to Africa, was present and spoke of her experiences as a missionary. She gripped her audience, and when she made an appeal for volunteers, forty girls bravely walked forward. Out of the total number, twelve are members of this Church.

The missionary work of the Church is very encouraging, yet not what we hope to make it. By a unanimous vote of the Sunday School, at the beginning of the year, we voted to increase Miss Martha Stacy's salary to twelve hundred a year. The society work is running nicely. Each group is this year, more than ever before, stressing Bible study as a requisite for a real missionary Church. The Book of Acts is being used for special study. Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, secretary of foreign missions of our United Church, is to be present and will speak to our people on March 9th. We are looking forward to his coming with great pleasure.

Our Church has four live Christian Endeavor Societies of which we are very proud. An increased interest is being manifested not only through the splendid services held on Sunday nights, but interest in community projects, which minister to the spiritual and material needs of the less fortunate.

We are at this time making special preparation for evangelistic services, which are to be held beginning on March 16th and running through the 30th. The services of Dr. L. E. Smith have been secured, and he will be with us for the two weeks. We feel sure that his coming will mean added souls t othe kingdom and new interest to the Church.

MT. AUBURN.

This is the fifth year of my services as pastor of this Church, and no pastor ever served a better rural Church. The members are loyal, active and devoted to the pastor and the work of the Church. The custom of the Church is to unite with the Methodist and Baptist Churches of the community in their annual evangelistic meeting in the summer. All the people of these several denominations and of the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches work in the fraternal spirit in all their undertakings. There is an interchange of visiting at all their regular services which is a beautiful exemplification of brotherly love and Christian fellowship.

The Church and Sunday School at Mt. Auburn make a monthly contribution, which is divided equally between the Orphanage and missions. The membership is loyal to do their part in the support of the Church and Conference obligations.

Bro. J. A. Kimball is superintendent of the Sunday School, and Mrs. J. A. Kimball, a member of the Baptist Church, is the excellent teacher of the adult Bible class, and Mrs. W. W. Kimball, of the Methodist Church, is the inimitable teacher of the young people's class, and Miss Ella Hilliard, of the Christian Church, is doing fine work with the children and laying the foundation for their future usefulness.

The members of the Church and Sunday School are not forgetful of their pastor. Recently they took him on surprise with donations of many good things for his larder. These tokens of love and appreciation make both pastor and people happy.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

THE WORLD'S MOST NEEDED WORK.

Dr. John R. Mott, in addressing the Foreign Mission Conference of North America, in session at Atlantic City recently, declared that the world's most needed and yet most neglected work was that of emphasizing and proclaiming the larger evangelism. To quote Dr. Mott—"making Christ known and loved and trusted and obeyed in all ranges of life by individuals and by society; and an intense passion to have Christ's kingdom widened, to call out the best in personality, to share with others, to be unselfish, and to give to others those things of Christianity that have helped us. This larger evangelism is the work most needed now in the world, yet most neglected. We are in a time when we need great affirmations—affirmations that nothing has changed our belief in Christ or in His power in the world.

"Wherever I went in my last tour of the world I found doors wide open. When we cross the threshold we find people accessible and interested in religion and in what it connotes. There is a responsiveness to the note of reality everywhere. In open forums there is something pathetic in the questions that are being asked. There is a willingness every where to pay the price to come under the spell of reality. This attitude makes possible the larger evangelism.

"We can scarcely comprehend the magnitude of the forces of evil that are opposed to Christ. They are not taking vacations. They are ingenious in their methods. People—whether rich or poor—are absorbed in money-making. People are absorbed in pleasure-seeking, absorbed in the quest for power and name and fame. Secularism and humanism are getting a grip upon the thought life of the nations of the world. To meet this situation we must employ a larger strategy—a strategy that takes in all fronts; we must have a larger message—not a new message. These conditions are the call to the larger evangelism."

This is the real task of missions, and the only agency or institution on earth committed to this task of evangelism is the pulpit, the Church. Unless the Church proclaims to the world in no uncertain terms that there is salvation alone in the crucified and risen Lord, it will go undone. The Church is the agency to which God has entrusted this task. J. O. A.

MISSION MEETING.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Waverly Christian Church held its meeting on February 12th in the home of the president, Mrs. Elnore L. Gray, of Coppahaunk Avenue. The meeting was called to order by the president, and the first chapter of Revelation was read, after which a solo was sung by Mrs. R. A. Wolfe and was enjoyed by all those present. Dues and specials were taken. A very fine talk was given by Mrs. J. Ellis on our mission-study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem."

Rev. F. C. Lester presented the society with some work to be taken up for the Easter holidays, which was voted on and passed by all present. The ladies have decided to send the spread they have finished to Porto Rico, to be used in the hospital there.

After the business was finished, a social hour was enjoyed. The hostess served delightful refreshments, assisted by Mrs. L. Dillard.

DR. BREWER EDDY TO VISIT VIRGINIA.

At a recent call meeting of the ministers of the Eastern Virginia Congregational and Christian Churches, plans were made for the coming of Mr. Brewer Eddy, D. D., of the home department of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational Church. Dr. Eddy is to arrive in Suffolk on March 12th for his first engagement in Virginia. He will address the Woman's Missionary Societies of the nearby Churches at the Suffolk Church in the afternoon, and in the evening at 7:30 at a rally of all the Churches in and near Suffolk.

On the following day, March 13th, he comes to Franklin for afternoon and evening audiences. The Holland, Holy Neck, Mount Carmel, Johnson's Grove, Joyners and Waverly Churches are invited to partake in the Franklin services.

On Friday he goes to Norfolk, where he is to speak to the women in the afternoon, and in the evening he speaks at a dinner rally which is to be given in the dining-halls of the South Norfolk Christian Church. Supper will be served at a very nominal price and a great crowd is anticipated. On Sunday, Mr. Eddy is to speak to the Lamberts Point Sunday School at 9:45. At 11 o'clock he preaches at the Christian Temple, and at 2 o'clock at Portsmouth Christian Church. At 7:30 Sunday night at the Richmond Christian Church.

Thus we see that Dr. Eddy has a full schedule, and in his vigorous and energetic way is to do great work in this section of our brotherhood. Let every Church plan to participate in his services by sending delegations to the centers in which he is to speak.

Joseph W. Fix,
Sec'y Eastern Va. Ministerial Ass'n.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Antioch Church held a most interesting meeting last Sunday night. There were many present and we had a splendid program. Our pastor, Rev. E. B. White, and family were present. They are very much interested in the work of our society and Church.

Mr. White delivered an address on "The Example of Daniel" (Dan. 1:8). Every one enjoyed the meeting. Our meetings are held at the Church on the first and third Sunday nights, and the public is invited to meet with us.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Antioch held its regular monthly meeting with Mrs. C. M. Clements on February 11th. Following our business meeting we had a very interesting spiritual program, closing with a discussion on our study books, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," by our pastor, Rev. E. B. White. Our members are very much interested in the work, and our society is making splendid progress, with Bro. White as our helper, who seems to be very much interested in all work of this kind.

Mrs. J. H. Godwin, Sec'y.

NOTICE.

The missionary rally of the Norfolk district will be held in the First Christian Church, Norfolk, on Tuesday, 10 A. M., April 1st. Theme, "Builders in a New Day." Begin to plan to attend this meeting.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

"Prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

Song—Prayer—Business.

1. Devotional period—"The Sixth Pillar."
2. Exercise—"A Tale of Three Boxes."
3. Mite-box opening.
4. Current news.
5. Heart-to-heart message.

As has been stated so often within the past six months, our major emphasis in this year's program is upon the spiritual life—a personal walk with our Lord.

1. The devotional theme for March is "Worship," and as the basis of our study we are using the sixth and last pillar in our stewardship leaflet, "Some Stewardship Pillars."

"The stewardship of our substance leads us to the great and holy opportunity offered by the collection plate, when we can sit in the pews of the Churches and touch the whole world with our gifts and 'grow in this grace also'—the grace of giving. It is a real privilege to worship the Lord with our substance, and it is by the same token a sacred stewardship."

Following the suggested hymn, "O Worship the King," let the devotional leader introduce the thought of the meaning of the word worship, using the Scripture verses suggested in the blue leaflet: Prov. 3:9, 10; Psa. 98:8; 1 Cor. 16:1, 2, and Mal. 3:8.

The Scripture readings on "How to Worship with Our Gifts," with a one-minute comment on each, should be handed to eight different women at least a week in advance, if possible, in order that each may become familiar with her verse and be prepared with a thought on how to give—cheerfully, liberally, sacrificially, humbly, honorably, profitably, systematically, proportionately—whichever may be hers to discuss.

If "Joy to the World" can be sung with meaningful hearts, it will be easy to join in the circle of prayer following the suggestions given in the leaflet: "That we may admit God's ownership of our material possessions, enter into the riches of partnership with Him, make full acknowledgment of our stewardship, be ready always to render unto Him a proper account, develop our lives according to his plan, and grow in grace and knowledge, that we may enter into the full joy of stewardship by worshiping the Lord with self, service, and substance."

Some one may say that all this is impossible, that the ideal is too high, but men have attained it. John Eliot, the "apostle to the Red men," proved by practice as well as by precept that "prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

2. The use of the time-honored mite-box is being revived in many sections, and, to satisfy a real demand made by many societies, provision has been made on this March program for a mite-box opening preceded by this impressive little triologue, found in the envelope of helps. This number should be assigned to three persons who will be willing to put the same preparation and originality into it that they would if they were to give it at the club or lodge. Surely our best is none too good for kingdom work.

3. It has been the plan this year to have the thankoffering envelopes received in November, as usual, at the special service arranged for that purpose, using the special program; then, in March, to have the mite-boxes brought in and their contents received, at which time the value of the use of the mite-box would be stressed. Use some original way to have the mite-boxes received and contents counted. Some societies have given their mite-boxes new and beautiful names, such as "blessing boxes," "glad boxes," "treasure chests," and the like. By some they are called their "penny-a-day boxes," and these make it the rule of their lives to place a penny a day in their boxes, with a prayer.

4. Read the Herald carefully this month, for the future holds some changes for our department. Of one thing we are certain, that our horizon is being extended to take in more of our Father's world.

5. This message will be sent to you if you are using the envelope of helps. This time it comes from the heart of our general secretary.

"You are earnestly invited to join with Christians of all lands in a world-fellowship of prayer on March 7, 1930, by attending the service in your community on that day; also to unite with others in daily prayer with one accord during this 1900th anniversary of Pentecost."

"Evening, and morning, and at noon will I pray . . . and He shall hear my voice."

For Young People's Societies.

My own Church and its overseas service.

Purpose: To emphasize the idea of sharing Christ with non-Christian lands as the most practical gesture toward world friendship.

Program:

1. Instrumental prelude (familiar missionary hymn).
2. Scripture: Psa. 67.
3. Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."
4. Scripture: Matt. 28:18-20.
5. Prayer.
6. Project committee report.
7. Overseas service of the Christian Church.
8. Discussion: "How Can I Help Our Work Overseas?"
9. Resolved.
10. Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee" (one verse).

Scripture: John 21:15-17.

Circle of prayer.

Hymn: "I Love to Tell the Story" (first and third verses).

Suggestions:

Poster: Place pictures of people from various countries (to be found in periodicals or leaflets from Foreign Mission Department) upon the poster, with the words, "We Are Sharing Christ With These" (date, hour, place).

1-5. Service of worship, well-planned and worshipfully conducted.

6. The project committee will report ideas from last meeting, and will have secured copies of leaflet material from the Foreign Mission Department to add to the record book.

7. Progress toward union between the Congregational and Christian Churches is so promising when this program is being prepared (September, 1929) that it seems altogether certain young people of the two Churches will be working together in an overseas program by March. Full information on this part of the program may be secured from the Foreign Mission Department, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.

8. See chapter XII, Y. and W. O. for material and suggestions.

9. Have each young person write out a resolution on the topic, "My own rightful part in the world service of the Church," to be given to the project committee, and copy retained by the individual.

For Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "Growth."

Quiet music: "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

Song: "We Thank Thee, O Our Father."

Call to worship: Prayer and offering song, same as last month.

Unison prayer.

Dear Father in heaven, we thank Thee for springtime and for the return of the birds, bearing their messages from other lands where they have spent the winter. We thank Thee for our Sunday School and Church and our Missionary Societies where we may learn of Thy other children, whom Thou dost love as dearly as us. Help us, Father, always to act like Thy children, to grow as Jesus grew, and to be kind and helpful to all boys and girls everywhere. Amen.

Song: "A Little Seed Came Through the Ground" (first book of Hymns and Worship).

If mission offering has not been taken in Sunday School or Church, be sure to see that your society takes an offering. If it is taken in other groups, do all you can to aid your children in joyful co-operative giving. Continue handwork project.

Closing song. Benediction.

Let us all heed Miss Carrie Robinson's suggestion as to sending a treasure chest to the Philippines. She will be glad to help any superintendent who will write to her.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson X—March 9, 1930.

The Parable of the Sower.

Golden Text: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."—Matt. 13:9.

Lesson: Matt. 13:1-9.

Devotional: Prov. 3:13-18.

It is well to have magnificent Churches and modern, up-to-date and well-equipped Sunday Schools, but they are not primary. The parable of the sower teaches us that. This immortal story was spoken out-of-doors with a fisherman's boat as a pulpit. It is the personality of the speaker that counts. The other things are aids to, and not substitutes for, the personal element in teaching. This is not a justification of the policy of those Churches and Sunday Schools which are using antiquated and ill-adapted quarters in the service of God. There are a number of Churches which are not doing their duty in this matter. But it is meant as encouragement for those who have to work under handicaps, and as reproof for those who are using the lack of proper equipment as an excuse for half-hearted and shoddy work on their part. The good teacher is the one who can take conditions as they are and make their teaching so effective that people will forget for the time being their surroundings.

The Parable of the Sower.

"And He spake many things unto them in parables." A parable is a story or a picture or an illustration, which illustrates religious truth, because of its appeal and its possibilities. All the world loves a story-teller, and stories stick in the mind long after abstract truth has gone into the land of the forgotten. Furthermore, if one would take the trouble to think out the meaning of a parable, he would find a great truth there. On the other hand, those who would not go to the trouble to do this would forget any truth, however plainly stated. Every preacher and every Sunday School teacher should know how to tell stories, or at least to put abstract truth into concrete or pictorial form. He who has the power to make people "see" truth is twice blessed.

Now, the story which Jesus told was very simple. He probably got His suggestion from something that was happening even as He sat there. In all probability there was a man who was too busy to join the multitude that heard Jesus, and who was on the hillside busily engaged in sowing as Jesus sat there talking to the people. Jesus, with a few swift and bold strokes, painted a word-picture. Here was a man sowing seed. Some of it fell by the wayside, on the well-beaten footpath that ran through the fields, often as a dividing line. Birds flying about with ever-watchful eye would pounce down upon the seed and pick it up almost the instant it landed. Some of the seed fell on stony places, on soil that was good enough but not deep enough—it was simply a thin coating of earth covering the limestone rocks. The seed would spring up and grow, but it would have no root, and the lack of moisture and the lack of sustenance would cause it to wither as soon as the hot Syrian sun shone upon it. Some of the seed fell on good ground, but there were thorns growing in the good ground and the thorns eventually choked out the less sturdy grain. But some of the seed fell on good ground, and it sprang up and grew and brought forth fruit, some a hundred-fold, some sixty, and some thirty-fold. With what seemed like abruptness, Jesus said, "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." As has been suggested at the beginning of this section, it is all a very simple story. Almost anybody who could tell a story at all could tell about a man sowing seed.

Interpretation of the Parable.

It was a simple story, but it was very, very profound. In fact, this simple story put in a graphic way an abiding truth of life. In the interpretation which Jesus put upon it, it lives and glows with practical and suggestive significance.

The sower is Christ, or the minister of Christ, or the teacher for Christ. There is a lesson here. We are too busy at our task, the task of seed-sowing. The seed is the Word of God, says Luke. The field is the world—there is unlimited crops for our talents and our energies. Here, as everywhere, the gospel has the missionary emphasis.

The particular emphasis in this parable, however, is on the hearer. The seed is the same, the climatic conditions are the same, the sower is the same, but the result is by no means the same. What is the point of the parable? It is the soil, the environment into which the seed falls that makes the difference. The soil represents the hearers of the word. There are four classes of hearers which are represented by the four kinds of soil.

Wayside Hearers.

The man whose heart is packed hard by indifference and worldliness, whose life is so filled with outside interests and with unwholesome associations is represented by the hard soil. Good words and good impressions find no lodgment in such a life. Over-absorption in business, undue social demands, shallow reading, empty amusement, moral compromise, and secret and open sin make many lives as if no seed had been sown at all.

Shallow Hearers.

The shallow soil represents the emotional hearer, quick to make a response to truth—which is well—but has no depth of thought or feeling to nourish the truth, so that his religion does not withstand an unfavorable circumstance such as ridicule, or persecution, or disaster.

Thorn-Choked Hearers.

The religious life has many thorns that will choke it unless one be on his guard. Worldly cares, money cares and anxieties, social cares, political cares, business annoyances, all the frets and worries of our modern complex civilization always threaten to crowd out and choke out the spiritual growth that comes through prayer and holy thoughts and helpful plans. He who does not take time to be holy will soon cease to be holy.

Fruitful Hearers.

There are those who listen attentively, who meditate earnestly and prayerfully, who seek to put the truth heard into practice. Their hearts are good soil. They bring forth good fruit. Thank God for all such. There are such in every Church and community.

It is to be noted, however, that the fruitful hearers do not always bring forth the same ratio of increase. Some an hundred, some sixty, some thirty-fold. All do not have the same capacities and the same talents. Therefore, all are not equally responsible. To whomsoever much is given, of him is much required. Let every man see to it that he bears fruit up to the maximum. There is really no end to the good results of such hearing and doing of the word.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Our Christian Endeavor theme for the next seven weeks will point toward Easter and Pentecost. We are going on a crusade together during this period—a crusade of sharing Christ. Some topics that we will discuss at our Sunday evening meetings are "New Recruits for the Crusade," "A Great Leader for the Crusade," "Obstacles to the Success of the Crusade," and "The Crusade in Other Lands." Decorate your C. E. room with Christian flags and emblems of the crusade. Your poster announcing these meetings may have a picture of a crusader drawn upon it, with the general theme, "A Crusade of Sharing Christ," at the top of the poster. Then topics and leaders for the Sunday evening meetings may be listed on this same poster.

At the end of this period of seven weeks present a pageant carrying out this crusade idea as you have developed it in your society during the two months. This pageant may be written by a member of your society, or you may secure a pageant that has already been worked out. One suggestion is "The Living Christ," by Grace Sloan Overton. This pageant requires six girls and twelve boys. It may be secured from the Century Company, 353 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

From our Young People's Congress Bulletin for this month we quote: "We must look forward and plan for the future or the time slips by without achievement. The weeks before Easter are full of rich evangelistic opportunities. Here are four definite things that we can do:

1. Stress personal enrichment. Enroll in "The Fellowship of Prayer," devotions for the young people for the forty days preceding Easter. (Copies are 3 cents each from the Commission on Evangelism and Life Service, Federal Council, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City.)

2. Stress Church worship. Christian Endeavorers attend Church.

3. Study "Acquainting Youth with Christ." (Secure from Miss Lucy Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio. 25 cents.)

4. Serve. Win others to Christ. Co-operate in your Church program in pre-Easter meetings.

Topic: "Why and How Win Others to Christ?"

Scripture: Isa. 61:1-3; Rev. 22:17; Mark 1:16-18.

Topics for Talks.

1. "The Value to Me of Bringing Others to Christ." Do all men understand Christ and His teachings in the same way? What contribution might your friend make to your life from his understanding of the teachings of Jesus?

2. "The Value to My Friend if I Introduce Him to Christ." What does Christ bring into your life that no one else can bring? How will your friend be made happier by knowing Jesus?

3. "Winning Others to Christ Through Their Work." (Mark 1:17.) At what point does religion touch the common types of labor? Is Christianity opposed to labor? How may we make the contact of religion through the labor of those we seek to reach?

4. "Winning Others to Christ Through Prayer." What attitude do we have toward our friends when we pray for them? What attitude underlies all true prayer?

5. "Winning Others to Christ Through Preaching." (Acts 2:14-37.) How is it possible for the members of your society to make the preaching of your minister more effective? Do you do that?

6. A debate on the proposition, "Resolved, That Christian living without preaching is more effective than preaching."

7. List on the blackboard all the various ways in which men and women are attracted to Christ. Call for a discussion of each as to its values and disadvantages. Which ways are best?

8. "How Paul Won Others." (Read 1 Cor. 9:19-23.)

To Think About.

Christian young people are now in need of a challenging task. If they have any outstanding sin today it is happy, satisfied complacency. And when one reads his way back into the intensity of Jesus and the social passion of Paul, he feels the solemn truth of Henry Van Dyke's utterance: "The real question is not so much whether the non-Christians will be saved if we do not carry the gospel to them as it is whether we shall be saved if we do not."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

The first combined Christian-Congregational young People's conference is to be held at the Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus Ga., March 29th and 30th. This is an event toward which all of the Georgia Churches and leaders are looking with great enthusiasm. The Georgia annual State Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Christian Church, and the annual Christian Life Conference of the Congregational young people are to meet together, sharing their leaders and blending their two programs into an inspiring whole. In the following tentative program can be found the variety of elements which will provide a most helpful week-end for all of the earnest young people who enroll as delegates from our Georgia Christian-Congregational fellowship.

Program for combined Christian-Congregational Young People's Convention:

Saturday, March 29th.

1:15. Closing Business; Reports from Delegates.
2:00. Musical Program—Dr. Taylor's Choir (Negro Spirituals).
2:45. Communion and Consecration Service.

This questionnaire is to be filled out and returned to Rev. H. A. Screws, Jr., of Phenix City, Ala., the pastor of the entertaining Church:

1. What problems of the young people do you wish to have discussed at the round-table meeting?

2. Will your group be prepared to lead a devotional program? give a stunt? play Bible basket-ball?

3. How many delegates will be in your party? (Men, women.)

4. When and how will they arrive?

5. Shall we provide entertainment for all of your delegates?

1536 E. Broad St., - - - Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

BRAGGING AND COURTING APPLAUSE.

"Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men in order to be noticed by them; otherwise ye get no reward from your Father in heaven."—Matt. 6:1.

"Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom."—Jer. 9:23.

"Conceit is the most incurable disease known to man."—Beecher.

They expect everybody else to lord them and bow to their smallest whims. "They never get over their astonishment at the ingratitude and selfishness of others."—Emerson.

"They become oppressors, for he that undervalues others will oppress them."—Johnson.

"Lighthouses don't ring bells and fire cannon to call attention to their light; they just shine on."

On the contrary, humility is a Christian grace which comes from a deep sense of unworthiness of self and an exhaltation of the value of others, and it prompts us to strive for higher attainments.

Daniel Webster said that he who enters heaven must go upon his knees. "On the knees" is symbolic of humility, and the posture in prayer. If true, let us go that way.

Prayer.—Dear Heavenly Father, save us from the fault of leaning on our own understanding, and humble our souls to listen to the council of others. "Teach me, Lord, my true condition; bring me child-like to Thy knee, stripped of every low ambition, willing to be led of Thee."—Lyte. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DOES JESUS SLEEP.

"He was asleep."—Matt. 8:24.

It is a blessed change when one comes out of darkness into light. The change to his soul is more blessed than that when Jesus, the Sun of Righteousness, dawns in his life. Such changed souls are his Church, and by such souls Jesus rescues others from the prince of darkness. All may be said to be like the disciples' boat—in a sea of stormy opposition. Waves of atheism, unbelief and sin run deep and high. But we can thank God that the Church has never appeared to founder. Christ is in the boat, and there is no danger. The ship of the Church has always emerged from the waves of opposition safely.

But there is danger for each individual; danger that he may be swept away by temptations, ignorance and infidelity. There is nothing that will save us from it but Jesus—taking him into our lives, do His works, watching and praying at all times, and abiding in the Lord.

This experience of the disciples in the boat is a symbol of our own position and our problems of living, and what Jesus said and did there is the symbol of what He will do for us who trust Him.

What calm of soul wouldst thou have? Accept His corrections and be strengthened in faith. Endure His chastenings and receive balm in Thy heart. Be diligent at Church and experience His grace. Commune with Him, and realize His presence in thy ship. Storms may come to thee, but let them discipline thee in faith and inspire thee to cling to Him in distress. Only the foolish, the conceited, and the lustful shall be swept away.

Prayer.—Dear Lord Jesus, let none of us attempt life without Thee. When dangers come, be Thou our refuge and strength. Dear Lord, be Thou the Captain of our souls and preserve us unto the end. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LOVE.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Rom. 13:9.

The Christian's way of doing things is different from others. When the world hates, we are to love. When we are assaulted, it should have no other effect than to unite us more closely in love.

What a kingly commandment is our text! How hard it is to do! But how rich and precious life would be if we all could obey it! There is nothing to say but that in Christ it is possible. He never commands without at the same time giving power to obey.

If we do not this, it is merely the lack of faith or it is the love of the world. "Study," said Paul, "to show thyself approved of God," and then live your life in love.

Prayer.—Lord, again we pray Thee to pour out Thy love in our hearts by Thy Holy Spirit. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BLESSED IS THE MAN OF GOD.

"Walk before me, and be thou perfect; and I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly."—Gen. 17:1-2.

Pharaoh and his army were lost and Israel was delivered. This was the grand fulfillment of God's promise to them. Israel could now see and understand, and they rejoiced as though they had reached the promised land. Although they had enemies still to face, they would not fear them; they knew that by the greatness of God's arm He would bring them to their inheritance which He had prepared for them, where He would reign forever (Ex. 15:16-18).

That is a good picture of us. We are on our way to glory. There are many obstacles—yes, enemies—but they shall be removed in due time. The way opens as we go on and enemies are overwhelmed.

Besides, we have a better leader than Moses was. It is Jesus. Put your trust in Him. He goes with us through the sixth trouble, in the seventh He will not leave us; "Yea," saith He, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our Father, give us grace to follow Christ all the way. "Thou canst help when earthly help faileth; Thou canst save when sin assaileth." O'er Thee and Thine, death nor hell prevaileth. Grant us Thy peace. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HEAVEN'S REFUGE.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble."—Psa. 46:1.

It may be said that the waters spoken of here are the people of the earth; and the mountains are the rulers. These powers may all turn enemies to God and His Church, but if God is in the hearts of His people there is no reason to fear. Out of Him is the river of life. That means our protection; it means His grace; it means knowing Him and His truth; it means His salvation. It means all is well.

Prayer.—O Lord, we come to Thee to be Thine. We lay ourselves at Thy feet. Be Thou our fortress, and shield, our help and our stay forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"Be not afraid."—Matt. 14:24-23.

Our lesson this morning is just like the former one.

While Israel was in trouble, it appeared that God took no thought of the matter. But He did take thought at the proper time when He said, "I have seen the affliction of my people . . . I know their sorrows."

At a time which was best for them He came to the disciples and turned everything into calm and, best of all, strengthened their faith.

It is not pessimistic to look upon trials, sorrows, troubles, sufferings and death. These things are fundamental with us, and we must face them, not to go down under them but to employ them as a means of enrichment of soul and also the good of others. "Be still and know that I am God."

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, Thou art the Son of God. Give us the light and grace of Thy Holy Spirit. Tell us how and when to go. Give us courage to walk in obedience to Thy word, and save us when danger is near. Dear Lord, rule the world and Thy people, and us. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE COURAGE OF THE INVISIBLE.

Lesson: Heb. 11:23-27.

To the eye of faith, the invisible world is infinitely greater and more glorious than the visible one. The Christian loves righteousness and he lives to be righteous. That is the invisible. God is the Supreme Ruler of the universe to him, and his heart belongs to God. God is invisible. He has learned to trust God and will suffer many afflictions in His name and for His sake. That is invisible. The power of his faith shapes his life to noble ends. That is invisible.

Were the patriarchs disappointed? Who found the rock, the manna of life, the open way? Was it Moses, who clung to the invisible one? or was it Pharaoh who trusted earthly power and defied God? Never at any time has any believer been disappointed in God.

Our whole way is by faith in the invisible one who is present with us all the way. Let the heavens and the earth pass away; the history of the world tells us that He is with us and His word remains forever.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, make us steadfast in our faith. When we would be drawn away from Thee by temptations or desire of earthly habitation, let Thy word, Thy Spirit, yea Thyself, be with us strong, so strong that we cannot err. Amen.

An editorial in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat speaks of the Bible as the best seller in the world and says that week in and week out during the year an average of 700 volumes containing the Bible or parts of the Bible comes from the presses every minute—more than sixteen a second. The editorial continues, "In all the world and in all languages, a total of 36,500,000 Bibles are printed annually, and of these 14,000,000 are printed in the United States. The law of supply and demand must govern the printing of Bibles. Seemingly, this enormous demand is ignored by those who diagnose this as a time of religious indifference."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

And still appeals come to us to take children. Many of them worthy; many of them ought to find a refuge in this institution or some other of like kind. Some are very pathetic and make one's heart ache to say no when we know the circumstances and know that they need the home and care. If people who are able, who have plenty and to spare could only come in touch with real need, real poverty as we do, we are inclined to believe that our income would be more adequate than it has been for the year just passed.

We do our best to make every dollar go as far as we can, and try to save every dollar we can in buying for the orphanage. We also try to get everything donated that we can to help save our bank account; but with all our planning it gets mighty low sometimes. We cannot expect anything else when our income for January and February is much less than our expense account.

The loss of our barn last year has and will increase our expense this year. If a neighbor in your community had lost his barn and all his feed and he had a house full of little children to care for, you would just feel happy to give your neighbor five, ten or twenty-five dollars to help him replace it. You would feel good over doing the kind act.

The Christian Orphanage had the misfortune to lose its barn with practically all the large crop of feed raised during last year. It has one hundred and twenty children. It is your orphanage. These little children are orphans. They are dependent on you for clothes, food and shelter. Have you sent them a contribution to help replace their barn? They need milk and butter. The cattle have to have shelter and feed to give milk.

If you have not sent in a donation to help replace the barn, won't you mail your check to J. M. Dardin, treasurer of the new barn fund, Suffolk, Va. We need $3,000 to meet the balance due. How can we raise it and no one be hurt, but every contributor feel happy? Five persons give $100 each, $500; 10 persons give $50 each, $500; 25 persons give $25 each, $625; 25 persons give $20 each, $500; 25 persons give $10 each, $250; 25 persons give $5 each, $125; 500 persons give $1 each, $500—total, $3,000.

Which amount will you give? Let us mail our checks by March 10th.

FIELD NEWS.

I have visited twenty-five of our Churches and have been on the go at a rapid rate. I am trying to get to all of our Churches before my revival work begins. I am to be with Bro. Smith, of the Congregational Church, at Baxley, Ga., on the third Sunday in March and to begin a meeting on the preceding Thursday night. Will be at McGuire's Chapel next Sunday and at Highland and Red Hill, in Georgia, on the fourth Sunday. I will attend the Georgia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention on the fifth Sunday, and a missionary rally at New Harmony on the first Sunday in April. I am full up until April. I will go to Alexander City shortly.

MEEKNESS.

gers. His rebukes are maledictions, and his reminders are anathemas. He helps no poor soul into the truth of God, and he curses the cause he professes to love. All sourness and fault-finding and complaining lies in that direction. What we need is the spirit of meekness, that we may be "fellow-helpers with the truth." As nations learn more of Jesus, discipline is milder in the home, in the school, and in the State; and yet there is an improvement in manners and in morals.

It is not the fretful, peevish, irritable, scolding mother that trains the best children, but it is the quiet, patient, mild, firm soul that makes love the throne on which she sits to teach and control. There is more power in sweetness, mildness, gentleness, tenderness than in war. The restoring power of meekness is simply the saving power of the gospel.

Meekness Indicates Likeness to Christ.

Isaiah says, "Say ye to the daughters fo Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh." And Zeckariah specifies, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold thy King cometh unto thee; He is just and having salvation; lowly and riding upon an ass." Then Matthew says, "Tell ye the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass." The glory of Christ is seen more plainly in His meekness than in His majesty. Simplicity is the goal of learning, and meekness the soul of greatness. Christ on an ass was within the reach of the people; He was approachable. His second coming will be in great glory, seated upon a throne and the holy angels attending Him; but He comes then as Judge and not as Saviour. When He came as Saviour, it was in lowliness. "Come unto me, all ye that labor, etc., for I am meek and lowly in heart." He comes to man in His lowly estate. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." Then Paul says, "Now I, Paul, myself entreat you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ; I who in your presence and lowly among you; and Peter speaks of the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. Who is a wise man and indeed with knowledge among you? Let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom." "Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a complaint against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye."

This spirit of meekness proves that "Christ is formed in us." The tests of religion are spiritual, and where these fruits are found maturing in the life, we know that we are God's children. Bishop Wall, of Norwich, used to say, "I would suffer a thousands wrongs rather than do one; a hundred rather than return one; and endure many rather than complain of one, or obtain my right by contending: for I have always observed that contending with one's superiors is foolish, with one's equals is dubious, and with inferiors is mean-spirited and sordid."

Peter the Great made a law in 1772 that if any nobleman beat or ill treated his slaves, he should be looked upon as insane, and a guardian should be appointed to take care of his person and estate. This great monarch once struck his gardener who, being a man of great sensibility, took to his bed and died in a few days. Peter hearing of this, exclaimed, with tears in his eyes, "Alas! I have civilized my own subjects; I have conquered other nations, yet I have not been able to civilize or conquer myself." And we all fail without the Spirit of God in our souls. The silent influence of love is more powerful than all the tornadoes of hate. True meekness is seen in Christ who, when He was reviled, reviled not again; when He suffered, threatened not," and is seen in His children who can say: "Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we endure." We show our likeness to Christ in nothing more than in our meekness. W. W. S.

THE SUN LETTER.

A number of our pastors are getting busy on THE CHRISTIAN SUN list and are sending in their list of new subscribers and renewals. We were so late getting the lists out to them we feel that it would not be fair to close this campaign the first of March, as most of our pastors are just getting started on their lists. We have decided to extend the time up to the first day of April, in order that all may have a fair chance. Let every pastor get busy now, and if the circulation manager can give you any information to help you, call on him.

HUMAN INCONSISTENCIES.

The human being is by far the highest type of creature that God ever created, being created in the very image of the Creator. We often boast of our intelligence, wisdom and power. We are the only creatures that God blessed with the power of thought. It is this power only that makes us know how to use the material that God has placed within our reach, whereby we may build railroads, locomotives and other ways of transportation, the great skyscraper buildings, and all modern machinery and conveniences. Above all those other things is the dear old Church of the living God that was given to us not only as a result of the power of thought, but the result of high and holy thought. With all our intellect, knowledge, wisdom and wealth, we are the most inconsistent beings in the world. This generation is just as inconsistent as our forefathers were.

Once upon a time there was a man who bought a farm, and after he had made the deal he said, "I must needs go and see it." Another man bought some oxen, and after the purchase he said "I go to prove them" (to see if they will pull).

There was another man who used great wisdom and skill, and his land produced a bountiful yield and he was puzzled to know just what to do with so much stuff. Finally he reached a happy conclusion and said, "This will I do: I will pull down my barns and build greater, and I will say unto my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up, take thine ease." But God said, "Thou fool." That fool died that night, but there are thousands living today who are just as foolish. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

I once heard this story. There was an ancient king who summoned all his men to a great festival and gave a golden necklace to the biggest fool in all his realm, with orders to keep it till he found a bigger fool than himself. In process of time, old age and disease began to prey upon the old king and he sent for his subjects to visit him again. Among them was this man who had been wearing the golden necklace all these years. The king recognized him and asked him a few questions. The fool at once realized the king had only a short time to live, so he asked him a few questions. Among them was this one: "Have you made preparation for the long journey that you so soon must take?" The king replied, "No." The fool at once took the necklace from his own neck and placed it on the king's neck and quietly went away.

In 1930 there was a wealthy business man who gave liberally to his Church and never missed a service, but was dishonest six days in the week. There was an intellectual woman who was president of a missionary society and also a teacher of young ladies in her Sunday School who played bridge every night in the week. There was a man-of-the-world who said, "I am as good as your Church members; your Church is full of hypocrites; I am not going to mix with them." He does mix in clubs and business.

When we see a man slowly trudging along the highway, half-clad, shivering with cold because of snow and sleet, and suffering from hunger; he passes an inn where food, clothes, heat and shelter are offered free, we are surprised when we hear him say no, emphatically. There are hypocrites in this place; I prefer to remain outside.

So ends the existence of an inconsistent man.

G. H. Veazey.

AN APPEAL.

Just a word to the people of the Georgia and Alabama and the Alabama Christian Conferences. We are in need of some funds right now with which to pay Bro. Hunt's salary. We are a little behind, and I want to say to all that Bro. Hunt is on his job, and I am sure that all of us are beginning to realize that we have needed Bro. Hunt in this place long before now, for his work is paying already. And if we are as enthusiastic in this work as Bro. Hunt is and will stay by him with our prayers and our means, we will see our work wonderfully built up this year. So, those of us who have subscribed, let's send in our subscription just as soon as we can. There are some of our good people who have not subscribed that can send us a nice contribution to this work, and I know that you are going to do it—so come on!

We want our young people in both Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Societies to make a contribution to this work. Begin now, please, and send all moneys to Mr. W. C. Edge, Davisston, Ala., who is treasurer of the joint board, and will pay Bro. Hunt's salary just as fast as we furnish the money. This is a great undertaking, but I know that three thousand of us can put it over, and I know that we are going to do it.

May the good Lord help us to seek first His kingdom and righteousness, and to carry on His work which He has committed into our hands.

Yours in His work,

J. D. Dollar,
Chairman of Finance Committee.

OBITUARIES.

JONES.

Russell Lewis Jones was born July 22, 1892, in Middle Creek Township, Wake County, N. C., the son of Ida Johnson Jones and William Henry High Jones. On his maternal side he was the grandson of Mary Jane Lane Jones and John Lewis Johnson, his paternal grandmother being Martha Lane, greatniece of Joel Lane, owner of the plantation on which the city of Raleigh now stands.

At the age of seven, he joined the Wentworth Christian Church, and later, when his parents moved to Raleigh, his membership was transferred to the First Christian Church (now United Church) of Raleigh. His principal schooling was in the Raleigh public schools, but his remarkable aptitude for learning resulted in his winning a scholarship to North Carolina State College. However, circumstances prevented his acceptance of this scholarship.

His first position was in the office of Congressman E. W. Pou, at Smithfield, N. C.; and shortly thereafter he was employed by the Commercial National Bank of Raleigh, remaining with this institution for nineteen years, until his death in the early morning hours of Sunday, December 22, 1929. At the time of his death he was manager of the analysis department of his bank, and was in line for and would have been promoted to assistant cashier at the bank's annual meeting in January.

Perhaps Russell's outstanding characteristic was his remarkable keenness of mind. His thorough knowledge of every detail of his work was often a source of astonishment to those not in position to know the wonderful mind he possessed. One of the highest of his superior officers recently stated (to use his words) that "Russell Jones was one of the best men in the United States at his position." Such a compliment, while flattering, was in all respects fully deserved; and in spite of the fact that he mastered his position so as to become expert, he still found time to broaden himself by intensive study, shortly before his untimely death having passed with credit the bar examination before the Supreme Court, being granted license to practice in the State of North Carolina.

Russell was always cheerful, generous and constant towards his friends and fellow-men. While his going has been a great loss to his family and friends, they may find solace in the fact that his Christian life commands the respect and admiration of all who knew him. E. M.

KERNODLE.

It is with a feeling of profound sorrow that we, the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church, have to record the passing of one of our true and loyal members, Mrs. Dora Simpson Kernodle, which occurred February 9, 1930, after a few months' sickness. She fell asleep in the arms of loved ones here, to awaken in the arms of loved ones up yonder. We wish to offer the following resolutions:

1. That we mourn the loss of our sister, but bow in humble submission to the will of Him that doeth all things well.

2. That her husband and five children have lost a loving wife and mother, and her passing leaves a vacancy that cannot be filled.

3. That we extend to the Church and her family our heartfelt sympathy and a prayer that they may say, "Thy will, oh Lord, not mine."

4. That these resolutions be recorded on our minutes, a copy be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun, and the Burlington Daily Times.

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

RESULTS OF PERSECUTION.—

It has long been accepted as a truth that the Church prospers amid persecution. We have been taught that the blood of the martyrs is seed. We now have the opportunity of seeing this assumption tested out in the twentieth century. Russia is now earnestly committed to a policy of extermination of religion, of every creed and kind. The days of the Roman persecution of the early Church never witnessed organized government more bitterly hostile toward religion. The Soviet government has declared war upon every teaching based upon the assumption that there is any power higher than man, or that there is any greater good than material prosperity.

It is doubtless true that persecution intensifies and brightens the faith of those who are already committed to a strong belief in God. Men cherish that for which they suffer, and many are caused to believe when they see men and women dying gloriously for their faith. But we must also think of the hundreds of thousands of children who at their most impressionable age are having their minds and hearts poisoned with unbelief and hatred. These children and youth are being denied the sort of influence that would make for rich, full lives. The national life of a great people is being sawn asunder and class arrayed against class.

WHAT IS CHRISTIAN SERVICE?—

The movement toward Christian unity is not only bringing the various branches of the Christian Church closer together. It is also bringing together Christians and Jews in discussion groups and in co-operative services of worship. And why should not this be so? If our Saviour could say of Himself that He had come not to destroy but to fulfill the law, it certainly seems that the followers of Christ and the adherents of the faith of which Christ was the perfect exponent might meet together in the worship of a common Father.

But as is always the case when such forward steps are taken, there are some difficult steps of adjustment that must be made. Recently the Christian Century discussed the question as to what should be the form of closing a petition made by a Christian minister in a service in which Jews were uniting in the worship. Should the prayer be made in the name of the Christ, or should it be a petition addressed directly to the Father? There are those who seem to feel that, for a Christian to make such a prayer under such conditions, constitutes a sort of denial of the Christ. For such an one with such convictions, it would seem that there could be no uniting with Jews in worship, for certainly prayer is the consummation of worship as it is ordinarliy practiced.

This raises the question as to whether all petitions made in the name of Christ are really Christian and whether the petition which is made in the spirit of Christ may not be most essentially Christian, though the name of Christ be not mentioned. If the position be taken that the prayer which is not expressly made in the name of Christ is not Christian prayer, then what we know as the Lord's Prayer, which Christ Himself taught His disciples, must be ruled out as failing to meet the requirements of Christian prayer.

DID WE EXPECT TOO MUCH?—

A feeling of depression, if not actual despair, seems to have settled over the country as to the final outcome of the London conference on naval limitations. Certainly the affairs at London are not measuring up to the high hopes which were entertained by the warmest friends and advocates of peace in this country. When did ever the practical working out of political problems measure up to the dreams of the idealists? If actual conditions corresponded with the ideal, then the idealist would lose all claim to a distinctive position.

There are those who insist that the United States should demand that the conference accede to drastic reductions in naval armaments and should the other powers fail to ratify these reductions that the United States should withdraw from the conference. In fact, the suggestion was made this week on the floor of the United States Senate by a member of that body that the delegates representing this country should be recalled because of the course of events at the conference.

It is not surprising that European statesmen should be inclined to smile a bit at the American way of doing things. Nor is it surprising that they should sometimes be inclined to doubt American sincerity. The purpose of a conference is to see what conclusions can be agreed upon when the views of all parties have been considered. There are certain American legislators who seem to consider an international conference a meeting for adopting and acceding to American proposals.

It would be a splendid thing if the Kellog peace pact had smoothed out all the rough spots in international relationships. It would be most happy indeed if a conference representing the leading powers of the world could speedily agree upon a plan for reducing the armaments of the world. But such things are not to be expected. For centuries, the world has had its face set toward the settling of all disputes by war and bloodshed. All treaties and national policies have been formulated with war as the ultimate court of appeals. Reeling from the weakness of four years of blood-letting, the world has suddenly turned its attention to thoughts of permanent peace. But the building of a satisfactory basis for permanent peace is easier said than accomplished. If such a basis for world peace can be worked out in half-century, every one should consider it an occasion for sincere thanksgiving.

FIGHTING FILTH.—

A correspondent from Kansas City, writing for a leading religious weekly, tells of the steps that are being taken in the launching of a fight by the religious forces of that city against the indecency of the burlesque shows exhibiting there. Attention is called to the fact that a society organized for the purpose of suppressing commercialized vice has proven futile to deal with the situation. The fight is now taken up by the council of Churches of Kansas City. The plan as outlined is to have fifteen of the ablest lawyers represented in the membership of the Churches to formulate a method of handling the fight, which is to be taken up by twenty-five ministers and twenty-five laymen who are to be selected.

It is earnestly to be hoped that the legal talent will find an adequate way to fight the evil. If Kansas City can perfect a plan for a successful attack against this form of indecency, it will merit the gratitude of every American city. Law-enforcement leagues and societies for the suppression of vice have not, to date, wrought out any notable achievements, despite the fact that every city in the United States affords a field for such undertakings.

The reason why such attacks have proven so futile in the past has been because of the limited support back of the movements. The public generally is indifferent to indeceney and filth as it flourishes in theatrical productions and in much so-called literature of the day. It constitutes a most difficult problem in that it is both cause and effect, both symptom and disease. It is a symptom of the low tastes and the decadent standards of the present age. It is a disease in that it is contaminating the tastes, standards, and morals of the rising generation.

If the problem is ever to be solved, there will have to be a program of education that will have to be backed by the home, the Church and the school system of the land. We need a campaign for clean thinking and clean speech. Toleration is not tolerance when it smiles on the base, the indecent, and the filthy. It were better if there must be a choice between the two, to be intolerant than indecent. Perhaps there are few of us who have been as exacting in our own ideals as we ought to be. It is possible to have humor without suggestiveness of evil. It were better to miss a little amusement than to have one's mind besmirched with the unclean. Many people tolerate such things because they are supposed to be the mode. But modes have been changed by a sincere minority who have not been afraid to demand purer, nobler things.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. D. Brewer Eddy was at Greensboro First Church at 11 A. M. last Sunday; at Palm Street and Monticello in afternoon; at Reidsville at night. Next Sunday he is to be at Durham at 11 A. M., Chapel Hill in the afternoon, Burlington at night, and then a full schedule at many of our Churches every day of the week and Sunday following.

The Mission Secretary was in Birmingham, Ala., last Saturday and Sunday, March 1st and 2nd, by decision of the Mission Board, to investigate and report on conditions and prospects there for building a United (Congregational-Christian) Church in that city. There are some forty or more members of Christian Churches in that city, and possibly a larger number of Congregationalists, and it would seem a most reasonable and fitting thing that the two bodies unite in building a Church in this great Southern metropolis.

After great delay, the "Annual" of the Southern Christian Church has been mailed out to the various Conferences. Parts of the "Annual" have been in type since the last of October, and it is a great pity that it should have to be so much behind time. However, it will be worth a close study now that it has been issued. It shows, besides other things, that there is need for a reawakening in our Churches. The statistical tables do not show the improvement in conditions that should be shown. Let's all of us make a mighty effort to do greater thing during the coming year than have been done during the past.

On Tuesday evening the Laymen's Missionary Convention, which was being held in Richmond on March 2d and 3d, closed its sessions with a very remarkable address by Mr. Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald. Other speakers on the program were: Wm. Knowles Cooper, of Crane, Paris & Co., Washington, D. C. bankers; Donald W. Richardson, who served eighteen years in China; Samuel M. Zwemer, noted editor and author, and the outstanding authority of the times on Mohammedanism; Chas. E. McAllister, outstanding pastor of Baltimore, and for several years field representative of the National Council of his Church; Habib Yusufji, Indian scholar and Christian; Sparks W. Melton, noted preacher, and Bishop H. St. George Tucker, who served twenty-four years in Japan. With such an array of speakers it was impossible that the convention should be other than successful. The meeting was interdenominational and was held under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement with headquarters in Chicago, and under the supervision of F. J. Michel, the General Field Secretary of that organization. Aiding Mr. Michel was a local committee composed of: Oliver J. Sands, General Chairman; R. W. Carrington and L. H. Jenkins, Jr., Vice-Chairmen; S. R. Orrell, Executive Secretary; Herbert W. Jackson, Treasurer; W. W. Beasley, Benjamin Bell, Jr., Ben A. Ruffin, Jesse H. Binford, Jesse F. Wood, J. T. Kernodle, Perry Seay, C. B. Valentine, J. H. Meek, L. W. Hoffman, D. J. Kellogg.

WADLEY, ALA.

I have been pastor of the Wadley, Ala., Christian Church for the past five years and have found the people always ready to carry their share of the financial load of the college. If it had not been for a few folks in this Church who were willing to give until it hurt, the college would have had a much harder time to get along than it has.

The Sunday School won one of the scholarships of $100 last year for contributing the largest amount of money to the college of any other Sunday School in the Alabama Christian Conference. The Sunday School will give not less than $100 this year, which will be in addition to the several hundred that the Church will give on old pledges and notes. If all of the Churches in the Georgia and Alabama Conferences would carry their proportionate share of the college's deficit on current expenses, there would be no deficit at the close of the year's work, and this would be less than $1.00 per member for the entire year.

UNION RIDGE.

Just a word from Union Christian Church. During the absence of our pastor, the pulpit has been supplied through the kindness of Revs. J. W. Patton, J. O. Atkinson, and Dr. Jay, of Elon College. While the congregation has been very sorry, their pastor through accident while rendering service for humanity, has been unable to be with us. We are very appreciative to these brethren that have come into our midst and brought us a message in our dear pastor's behalf, who hopes to be able to be with us at his next regular appointment.

Our Sunday School has made an excellent record for the winter months. Our enrollment is 122. Our average attendance for the month of February was 105. The average attendance of parents was 27, or about one-fourth of the attendance. Now we believe if the parents in all Sunday Schools would come up to this average or better, we would have much better Sunday Schools as a whole than we do when the parents send their children and do not take an active part.

THE RALEIGH MEETINGS.

APRIL 27th—MAY 4th.

These meetings include the Conference of the Carolinas of the Congregational Churches, the Advisory Board of the Southeast, and the Southern Christian Convention. We can announce at this time the meetings and speakers for Sunday, April 27th, which will begin the Conference of the Carolinas of the Congregational Churches. For Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Dr. Wm. E. Gilroy, editor of the Congregationalist, Boston, Mass., will be the speaker. In the afternoon conference, 3 o'clock, Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Dr. W. K. Bloom. Sunday evening, 7:30 o'clock, Dr. Frank Sanders and Dr. Elbert Russel.

We want to extend a cordial invitation to all members of the Christian Churches to be in Raleigh for the day. We wish that Christian ministers might arrange for their Sunday services so as to be present to hear these representative speakers and participate especially in the afternoon conference.

The programs for these meetings will appeal later. This announcement has to do with Sunday, April 27th.

SUMMER SCHOOLS.

The Winona Lake School of Theology, at Winona Lake, Ind., has just announced its faculty and courses for the summer session to be held from July 9th to August 14th.

The faculty is a very remarkable one, including only men who are recognized as authorities in their departments, both as authors and educators. The faculty and courses are as follows: Dr. J. A. Huffman, dean, English and Greek New Testament; Dr. A. T. Robertson, English New Testament; Dr. John E. Kuizenga, religious education; Dr. J. A. Faultner, Church history; Dr. A. T. Howard, comparative religions; Dr. Leander S. Keyser, Christian apologetics.

None of the courses offered this year have been given in the institution for a numeber of years, making it possible for many students to attend and to pursue new courses.

The work is divided into two semesters, the first one beginning on July 9th and closing on July 26th. The second semester begins on July 29th, closing on August 14th. Students may register for either one or both semisters.

Work is offered toward the degrees of bachelor of divinity, master of arts (in theology) and bachelor of theology.

Winona Lake School of Theology is a high-standard interdenominational divinity school, conducting summer sessions only. The work is thorough, evangelical and orthodox.

The president of the school is Mr. C. E. Sawtelle, of Cincinnati. Rev. William Edward Biederwolf, A. M., is the director.

For a prospectus containing full information, address Winona Lake School of Theology, Winona Lake, Ind.

WISE WORDS OF A GREAT DOCTOR.

Dr. Howard A. Kelley, of Baltimore, Md., is one of the greatest doctors and surgeons in the United States. He is also a great Christian and his loyalty to Christ and His truth comes before anything else. He is opposed to many tendencies in education and society. Recently when effort was made to bring him into a controversy over the teachings of modern scholars, he said a wise thing all parents should ponder. Hear his words:

"The crying sin of our day is not the teaching of evolution in our colleges, but the failure of Christian parents so to live, to teach and to pray with their children in their daily home life as to render them impregnable to any teaching which then fills their hearts. Children so raised from their earliest years, familiar with the purity, the sweetness and strength of the life which is hid in Christ, are rarely overwhelmed by the temptations encountered later in the course of the disciplinary events of life."—Ex.

THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN.

We hear so much about him, and there is no doubt he needs attention. He does get tired and then he gets cross and nervous and something must be done about it. But we really believe the tired business man has been a little too strong in his bid for sympathy and consideration.

He has no harder lot than the tired housewife, who day in and day out must stay at home doing the same things that never stay done and looking after the children of the tired business man who, in most cases, take on the nervous, cross disposition of the T. B. M. We rise up to make a plea for the tired mother at home. She needs a little time off. Some of them get much time off, but the land is still filled with good women who are following the grind of the years, bearing shocks and mending socks at home with not much time out with nature when the tired business man gets out to the links and the club and the lunch and stops at the drug store and picks up all the latest jokes, along with stale ones, at the lunch meetings.—Ex.

THE BOX OF OINTMENT.

"She hath wrought a good work on me."
—Mark 14:6.

In each of the four gospels the story of the woman and the box of precious ointment is graphically recorded. As one reads this account from Mark, he finds the details explained a little more clearly than in the other gospels, and for that reason let us think with St. Mark of the significance of the story of the box of ointment.

Six days before the feast of the Passover was to be held, there is gathered in the house of Simon the leper a few of his friends and close relatives. This household constitutes a real Christian home. Jesus has a place therein. Heretofore He hath raised Lazarus from the dead, and Lazarus was a relative of Simon. In all probability, Lazarus is there on the occasion when the box of ointment was brought forth. But one fact is sure—Mary, his sister, and Martha are present. The little company of believers are now seated about a table at meat. Mary and some of the other women are serving. But Mary has in her possession something that is worth more than meat, and she hastens to bring forth an alabaster box of precious onitment and spiknard, and she broke the box and poured the ointment on the head of Jesus. And Jesus was greatly pleased to have some one anoint Him, for He was very sad, because the day of His death was near at hand, and even the way of the cross was the way of God. Jesus was sad because the world had been slow to believe, but that night He was happy because He found loyal friendship amid that group. Some of them were not pleased with the noble act of Mary, nevertheless Jesus exclaimed, in the words of the text: "She hath wrought a good work on me."

This good work Mary was enabled to do because she loved Jesus and was willing to lay down her life for Him, just as He was willing to lay down His life for her. As we study the context of the fourteenth chapter of Mark, we find that Mary wrought a good work on Him in several ways.

1. By giving her best. "There came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard and very precious; and she brake the box and poured it on His head." True love and consecration to Jesus is always expressed in one way, and one only. One must give the best to Him. He desires nothing other. We have tried to appease Him and ease our own hearts, oftentimes, by giving Him what is left over. Jesus wants the best we have.

"Give of your best to the Master, give of the strength of your youth;
Throw your soul's fresh, glowing ardor into the battle for truth.
Give of your best to the Master; naught else is worthy His love:
He gave Himself for your ransom, gave up His glory above;
Laid down His life without murmur, you from sin's ruin to save;
Give Him your heart's adoration, give Him the best that you have."

No doubt but what Mary had kept the box of ointment for a long time. To her it was her choicest gift. Like the pearl of great price, she had likely disposed of all other offerings, in order to obtain the best gift for her Lord. We should do as much. The ancient Jew gave unto God the first fruits of his increase. We have, unfortunately, gotten into the habit of giving Him whatever is left over. I wonder if He could say of our gifts, "You have wrought a good work on me." Would you like to have Jesus say of you, as to the poor widow who gave two mites, "She hath given more than all the rest, for she hath given her all"? If so, we, like she, must surrender all to Him.

We often hear people talking about giving their all to Jesus, but it is another thing when we find such people whose lives are wholly consecrated. There are people who refer to the widow's mites to justify themselves in giving dimes and nickles to the Lord when they ought to be giving five and ten-dollar bills each week. Such people are not giving their best to the Master, and He knows that they are only deceiving themselves. If they wanted to follow the example of the widow and give our mite, we would give all we have, for out of her poverty she gave all she had. Her gift, like Mary's, was the largest, because it consisted of all she had. It was the largest because it meant greater sacrifice. By giving our best to Him, we wrought great work on Him—yea, good work! In the poetic hymn of Frances Ridley Havergal, Jesus says to you and to me:

"I gave my life for thee, my precious blood I shed,
That thou mightst ransomed be, and quickened from the dead—
I gave, I gave my life for thee.
And I have brought to thee down from my home above,
Salvation full and free, my pardon and my love—
I bring rich gifts to thee.

And then He asks us, one and all, "What hast thou given for me?" and with fallen countenances many of us have to admit that we have given Him very little and never in our lives have we given Him our best.

2. The story tells us that Mary gave her best, even at the cost of criticism. "There were some that had indignation within themselves and said, Why waste this ointment. For it might have been sold for three hundred pence and the money given to the poor. And they murmured against her." The world is filled with people who are afraid to do a good turn in the name of one who gave His life for civilization. These people are out of tune with the Church and are arrogant fighters against the work of Christianity. When they see some one do a good work on Him they grumble and say (money, time, talent and opportunity wasted). The fact is that selfishness has too large a place in their own lives to enjoy seeing another person helped.

Jesus, being a good student of human nature, and knowing the hearts of these people, stated that they did not care for the poor. The fact was that the poor had and would always be with them, and thus far He saw no evidence of their giving to the poor. He knew that they were only making excuses and were heartbroken because the box of ointment had not been sold and divided among themselves.

In the midst of criticism and murmurings against her, Mary stood firm for her conviction and continued pouring the ointment upon the head of her blessed Lord and Saviour. And for it, she heard the words, "She hath done a good work on me." It is a fine thing to be able to stand for right, regardless of what others may think or say or do. Let us serve the Lord and not self. Jesus looks down upon us at all times. He knows our hearts and inmost intentions. When we are happy, He shares our joys, and when sad He comforts us. In like manner, He knoweth when His children do good in His name in service rendered to others. The Dead Sea is the only lake on the globe from which they is no outlet. This body of water receives nothing and gives nothing. Such a lake is a perfect example of the man, woman, boy or girl whose efforts terminate upon self. The beautiful Sea of Gililee is in direct contrast, for its waters are pure and fresh—this body of water gives and grows. It receives, but it does not withold. The former is selfish, the latter is generous. It is by being generous with our time, our talent and the content of our treasure that we wrought good work upon the Christ.

3. She wrought a good work on Him by doing what she could. "She hath done what she could," said Jesus. It was not in her power to withold the crucifixion of her Lord, but she could do something to make His last hours happy. So she willingly and joyfully wrought a good work on Him by doing what she could, though it was apparently very little. Nevertheless, like a cup of cold water offered in His name, it meant much in the sight of God. We must come to recognize in the work of the Church that not all of us are expected to be president of classes, aid societies, missionary societies, etc. Not all are expected to go to foreign fields as missionaries, nor are all of us commissioned to stand behind the sacred desk. But all of us are expected to do for our Lord what we can; and all of us can do something.

If one goes to Gary, Ind., and asks to be shown over the city, he may be shown the industrial plants, the Churches and the parks. But it is most likely that he will be shown a statue that has been erected in the city which in reality means more to the pride of the citizenship of Gary than all the stores, menufacturing plants, schools and Churches combined.

The statue was erected by newsboys and is a memorial to one of the newsboys, whose name was Willie Rugh. This lad was crippled and unable to get around and make rapid sales of the extras like the other little newsboys, nevertheless he was very cheerful and seldom complained of his misfortune as a handicap. One day Willie Rugh read in one of his newspapers that a young lady in Chicago was terribly burned and that a great large piece of skin was needed to graft over the burned flesh of the lady in order to save her life. When Willie Rugh saw this statement, he joyfully gathered his crutches underneath his little arms and went to the local hospital. There we find him showing the head surgeon the newspaper story. But what about it, said the doctor. "Why, I want to give that woman the skin that's on this little old crippled leg." At once the doctor got in touch with the surgeon in Chicago, located in the hospital in which the woman lay at the point of death. He explained that if needed, he had a lad who would allow his limb to be amputated if by so doing it would help the lady in Chicago. "All right, send it on," said the surgeon in Chicago. Little Willie Rugh was put upon the operating table and given an anaesthetic. The little crippled leg was amputated just below the hip, put into a container, heated to the right temperature, and sent on a special express train to Chicago. It arrived, and all traffic was halted while an ambulance rushed from the railway station to the hospital. The grafting was done and the lady restored to health, but there in Gary, Ind., lay a little boy who was for many weeks very sick. The anaesthetic given was too much for the boy, who was very weak. Finally pneumonia developed

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA AT CHURCH.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 25, 1930.

One does not see Florida unless one goes to Church. And one cannot know Florida unless one learns it at Church. That is neither hyperbole nor exaggeration. It is the plain, simple truth. If any one tells you he has been to Florida and did not go to Church, take this writer's word for it and tell him he hasn't been to the real, genuine, honest-to-goodness Florida. Of course, we are thinking now of Florida in the tourist season—the only season when Florida is really itself. One might not think tourists, away from home, resting, relaxing and on pleasure bent, or health-seeking, would go to Church Sundays. Well, they go! Last Sunday this writer went to the First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg. He had already learned the habits of tourists, and went early. Services were to begin—just the regular preaching service, the pastor to preach—at 10:45 A. M. He found a Church whose normal seating capacity is 2,000. When he entered at 10:10, the best seats were filled, and by 10:40 all seats were occupied and ushers were bringing in chairs and distributing fans. At 10:40 the great mellow-toned pipe organ began its welcome anthem. By 10:45 people were standing practically the whole distance around the rear pews and in the foyer. It was good to be there. A choir of sixty voices led the great congregation in that soul-stirring, familiar hymn, "My Faith Looke Up to Thee." And then, with bowed heads, the pastor led in a brief but fervent invocation, and all joined him in saying the Lord's Prayer. People from everywhere in our country and Canada were there. The man who spared the hymn book with me was from Wisconsin. The man next him was from Minnesota. The two or three I met and shook hands with at the conclusion of the service were from Tennessee, New York, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut. And the services were simple, sweet, inspiring. "Ye must be born again," the preacher said, and portrayed it powerfully. "Write home, you tourists," said the preacher, in concluding his discourse, "and tell the people back there, if you can honestly do so, that you are here in Florida living in God's spirit, not sunshine. The sun that makes this the 'Sunshine City' is not enough. Get into the sunshine of God's lifting love." And a lady with a voice as melodious as that of a nightingale sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

Talk about reality—that was real. To use the speech of old Thomas Carlyle, that was about the only reality that can be so named. If that isn't real which can lift the souls of 2,500 people out beyond themselves and above this universe of time and sense, then I would like to know what reality is!

So far as we know, all the other Churches—some of them larger than the one we attended—of St. Petersburg were likewise filled to overflowing on that hallowed and happy Sunday morning. Here indeed is Florida at her best. And one never knows any fact in this universe until one knows that fact at its best. By the way, I am stopping a few days here in a hotel where there are 125 guests—Greeks, Persians, barbarians, Jews and Gentiles—here we are! Well, Sunday night, just after supper (call it dinner here), when all were jabbering and socializing in the lobby, a courageous gentleman from Pennsylvania passed around some song books and led off with a hymn. In two minutes that hotel lobby was resounding with mingled melody and praise. For half-hour the music continued, all of us singing the dear, familiar hymns. Seated next me and greatly enjoying the songs and doing his best to enter in with what voice he had, was a man nervous, bent, trembling, now ninety years old, and holding a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. Strike the sincere note of praise and gratitude to God, and you strike the note that gives time and tone to the human heart.

Oh, yes! the immoral, the degenerate, the gambler, the bootlegger, the godless, the riff-raff are to be found in Florida, as in all States, we suppose. But these are not the real Florida. They are not at Church Sunday. They do not count. They do not carry Florida. Florida has to carry them, and manages to get along in spite of them. They are not the fruit. They are the dead branches on the trunk.

And this is about true in this universe of ours. If you wish to see the wheels that make the machinery of our government and our industry and of our present civilization go, you will find them usually at or about Church on a Sunday morning. If you want to see the United States as it is—I mean now, at its best—you will have to go to Church to find and see it so.

Well, Florida has been good to me, and I am grateful. I have enjoyed its mellow sunshine every day. I have dreamed beneath its deep-blue sky. I have been cheered from break of dawn till daylight deepened into star-lit night with mocking birds that never tire of singing. I have met and mingled with happy souls and good people from Maine to Mexico, and God has been good and given me renewed strength, quickened energy and a new sense of gratitude and praise. I turn homeward to loved ones and hard work, with hope, faith and redoubled zeal. J. O. A.

IX. TEMPERANCE.

Some one has said that, since the flood, the course of sin has been (1) in the form of sensual indulgence; the type of this sin is drunkenness, and a sad example is Noah, "who drank of the wine and was drunken." (2) Disregard of parental authority. Ham is a type of those who lose reverence for purity and parental honor. He saw the exposure made by intoxication and told it to his brethren who went backward into the tent and covered their fathers' shame. (3) In the form of ambition. The Tower of Babel is the type of this sin of ambition. They said: "Let us build us a city, and a tower whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth." But the Lord came down and confounded of their language and scattered them abroad upon the face of all the earth." But we are to examine it as a fruit of God's Spirit in man.

Intemperance is one of the giant evils of the world, and is self-imposed. There is no moral ground on which intemperance can be justified, while temperance embodies the modesty of nature and the grace of God. The more light you throw upon it, the more beautiful its face. Health, modesty and purity are some of the qualities that this grace contains. Perhaps the best definition of temperance is this: "Temperance is moderation in things innocent, and abstinence from things hurtful." This matter had thorough discussion in Greece by Plato, Aristotle, and Xenophon. Plato maintained that temperance "Can only be learned by having once tested the intoxicating cup," and asks, "How can any one be perfectly temperate who has not fought and overcome by reason and effort and art, in sport and in earnest, many sensual indulgences and lusts that urge him to act with shamelessness and wrong?"

This fallacy led Xenophon to give two meanings to the term temperance: (1) "Moderation in healthful indulgence; (2) abstinence from things dangerous, as the use of intoxicating wines." Aristotle makes the same distinction. By abstaining from sensual indulgence, we become temperate; and when we have become so, we are best able to abstain from them." Just, then, as the Trojan elders felt respecting Helen, must we feel respecting unlawful pleasure. In all cases we must pronounce sentence as they did; for thus by sending it away we shall be less likely to fall into fatal error."

The laws of Judea, Egypt, Greece, and Rome prohibited the use of intoxicating liquors, because they led to intemperance. Mahomet was led to prohibit the use of wine in the Koran by an incident which came under his notice. Passing through a village one day, he was delighted at the merriment of a crowd of persons enjoying themselves with drinking at a wedding party; but returning by the same way next morning, he was shocked to see the ground, where they had been drinking, drenched with blood; and on asking the cause, he was told that the company had drunk to excess and, getting into a brawl, fell to slaughtering each other. From that day the mandate went forth from Allah that no child of the faithful should touch wine on pain of being shut out from the joys of paradise. Thus we have the voice of philosophy, of history, and of the Koran in favor of temperance, or abstinence from intoxicants.

The whole duty of temperance is embraced within the limits of self-control; and that can only be attained by coming under the control of the Spirit. It is as impossible for human nature to control itself in its alienation from God as for a car cut loose from the train and the engine to control itself on the descending grade. All the forces of the world tend to hasten destruction. Self-control is only another name for divine control; hence temperance is a fruit of the Spirit. What we need most in our life is God's Spirit. The Church has never had power without His presence, and "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps."

Paul, in writing the Corinthians, says: "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." The reference is to the discipline of athletics for the Isthmian games. The discipline lasted for ten months preparatory to the contest, and only true athletes would deny self for the prize. Epictetus thus describes the diet: "Thou must be orderly, living on spare food; abstain from confections; make a point of exercising at the appointed time, in heat and in cold; nor drink cold water or wine at hazard—in a word, give thyself up to thy training-master as to a physician, and then enter on the contest."

But the prize of the racer in the Isthmian games was only a garland of pine leaves and his statue to be placed in the temple of Venus; while the prize of the Christian racer is an incorruptible crown and a home in the temple of God forever. Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." No man can do this but by the Spirit. Self, to the natural man, is all. Self is the person he gratifies. Self is the subject of his thought and his ambition. Self is the god he worships. All lines of service and gain and pleasure terminate in self. No picture is complete without his presence. No enterprise is worthy unless he shares in its profits. No circle is complete unless he leads it, and no decision is right unless he is the majority. In religion, self must be least and last, while God and others must be first and greatest. It was so with Christ. He made Himself of no reputation. His thought was of sinners. "He bore our griefs and carried our sorrows." "He gave Himself a ransom for many." His life was a lesson of temperance for men. "He that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things."

Drunkenness and gluttony are classed together by Solomon, who knew more than any other man of the luxurious excesses of this world. "Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh: for the drunkard and glutton shall come to poverty, and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." The fallacy with most persons is that they will never indulge to excess. W. W. S.

SUPREME PURPOSE OF CHRISTIANITY.

The supreme mission of Christianity is nothing less than the salvation of mankind, the establishment of the reign of Christ on earth through the salvation and spiritual life of the individual. Frequently, in our enthusiasm for the denomination, people act as if it were the progress and growth of the Church, the support of an institution, or the raising of money. These activities are all good or evil in terms of their ends or purposes. If they contribute to the reign of Christ in the hearts of men, they are worth while. If they are for themselves and have lost sight of the proper place for the emphasis, they become selfish and fail of their better purpose.

The purpose of the gospel is the solution of the problems, difficulties, perplexities, troubles and conflicts of the soul. Christ dealt with the individual. He forgave sins, restored sight to the blind, cleansed the leaper, made the deaf hear and the dumb speak, and raised the dead. Each of his acts was to change the condition of the defective, the imperfect, the afflicted soul to normal life, health and happiness. If the Church or any of its auxiliaries turns its attention to other things as ends rather than as means to this supreme end, it fails of its purpose.

The educational system in the Church must keep this supreme end in view or it loses its moorings. The preparation of ministers, leaders, workers, teachers for this specific work of saving the soul of the individual is its supreme task. If it fails to meet this task, it loses its appeal to the Christian consciousness and need not complain if the Church does not respond to its calls for financial sacrifices. One of the great needs of the Church is to promote the evangelistic work of the kingdom and advance the work of a fruitful Church is the preparation of leaders in standard Church music that can be used by the largest number of our Churches. Young men and women should be prepared to return to our rural Churches and teach the young people and children to learn and appreciate standard Church hymns and direct Church music.

So-called Christian education is failing to meet this need, and our Churches are suffering for the want of such leadership. The ministry is not provided with methods of psychology in dealing with their people in pastoral work so as to get best results. Something should be done for the special fitness of the ministry to prepare our ministers for clinical study of the souls of their people. They should be as well qualified to deal with the needs of sin-shocked persons in spiritual life as modern psychiatrists are in dealing with shell-shocked soldiers in times of war. Pastoral work will mean something when it can be done so as to get results for the reconstruction, rehabilitation and restoration of the sin-sick soul to normal life in Christ.

It is a fine work that we are doing in our Orphanage for the few orphan children that we are caring for there, but we should estimate this work in terms of the souls we save, the lives we rescue, the children we save from crime, squalor, poverty and want, and not forget the multitudes of children that constitute our possible constituency. To clothe, feed and educate a few is a great work that appeals to th heearts of Christians, but to train, educate, Christianize and redeem the thousands in our Church communities is infinitely greater in the mind of Christ.

"Missions" is not the raising of money to be sent to foreign fields, but is "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Mission money is a means to this end, but the results must tell the story. All means that work well for the salvation of mankind at home or abroad will be honored of Christ.

CREEDS CO-OPERATING FOR DEEDS.

The faith of men in the supreme spiritual reality may express itself in many differing formulae, in many varying rituals, in many sorts of organization, but in spite of these diversities it has an underlying unity which more and more we recognize, and which tends increasingly to bring us into co-operative relationship for the service of humanity.

Within the Protestant group of sects, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America represents the most comprehensive and most effective instrument for promoting this co-operation. Recently its executive committee held its annual meeting in Chicago, and surveyed the work which had been done, and the field in which need and opportunity challenge further effort.

There has been a good deal of misunderstanding concerning the aims and methods which characterize the council. Much of this misunderstanding has been created by deliberate misrepresentation on the part of those who are antagonistic to the spread of Christian principles in the world's life. There is a pagan spirit in America which resists the message of Jesus. It has its organizations, its newspapers, its magazines, its methods of propaganda and obstruction. There can be no greater tribute to the work of an agency of Christian faith, such as the Federal Council, than the active opposition of this pagan spirit. The more bitter and vindictive it is in its attacks, the more sure can we be that the cause of faith is making headway, is gaining ground. If faith were asleep, complacent, concerned merely with the singing of hymns and the reciting of prayers, the pagan forces would ignore it. Only in so far as it is seeking to translate its ideals into terms of life, into terms of human relations in society, in business, in industry, into terms of citizenship and international policy does it find itself the target of attack.

The Federal Council of Churches has been a vigorous exponent of the spirit of international good will and peace. In this role it has spoken with united voice for millions of American men and women who believe that war is not in accord with God's thought for the world, and that the way of Jesus is the way of understanding and conciliation, of good faith among peoples and the brotherhood which reaches across barriers of race and nationality. And because it has spoken thus loyally and earnestly it has aroused the hatred of those who cling to the pagan view of life and find in war a necessary and apt expression of that view.

At its executive meeting, the council invited the fullest investigation of its organization and methods, and took occasion to make clear the fact that it maintains no lobby at Washington or elsewhere. In a statement issued during its Chicago session, it declared it has carefully refrained from employing "any lobbyist or legislative representative, and from using any form of political or personal pressure or partisan alignment, but has relied wholly upon the moral power of its statements to influence public opinion."

The council has a Washington office, just as it has a New York office and a Chicago office, but the annual budget of its Washington office is only $11,000, and the executive secretary who directs it is paid the princely salary of $1,500. Three-fourths of the Washington budget are expended on assisting the army and navy in the work of chaplains and in aiding disabled veterans.

Statements of the council from time to time have supported the Kellogg treaty, the World Court, the work of the League of Nations, the movement for reduction of armaments. In all of these statements it has voiced the sentiment of the enlightened Christian conscience of America. The paganism which opposes these agencies and movements for a better world order resents the fact that the Christian conscience of America can find such effective and influential expression—that is what lies behind the attacks on the council in this particular field.

These are but a few of the many interests which engage the council. It should be an occasion for rejoicing that its work advances. There is, we think, no more hopeful augury for spiritual progress in American life than the fact that the Churches have found in the Federal Council a means whereby creeds may unite for service, and the voice of faith in God may utter itself with intelligence and persuasive power.—Chicago Evening Post.

THE SUN LETTER.

We have decided to extend our special campaign for new subscribers and renewals for THE CHRISTIAN SUN through the month of march. Some of our pastors got a late start in the race, and it was not their fault. To give every one a fair show, we are extending this time to April 1st. This will give the lucky ones time to get their prizes for Easter. Several nice lists came in this week. Let every pastor get busy. You still have a chance to win a prize.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The most satisfactory occupation for man is honest work. The hardest thing for man is doing nothing. People sometimes complain of having so much to do; but the complaint is greater when unemployed. The easiest thing in the world is work. God conferred a universal benefit upon man when He put him in the Garden of Eden to "dress it and to keep it," and later said, "In the sweat of thy face shall thou eat bread." Idleness and riches rob men of their natural right to work. Crime is rarely committed by men engaged in real work. The crimes reported through the papers in this day are almost all committed by people doing no honest work and away from home. Absence from home and unoccupied lead the way into all sorts of crime. Land-owners rarely commit crime. To own a home on a piece of land helps to make industrious and honest people. There are exceptions to all rules and all experiences, but honest work and a plain home are great factors in making honest men.

System decreases burdens and increases efficiency. This is true in work and business. Prompt payment of obligations, whether they are financial, social, benevolent or Christian, helps the world on and the Church in its work. The payment of Church expenses seems hard only to those who have no system in the payment of what is called "Church dues." To wait to the end of the year and then ask the Church treasurer "How much do I owe?" always makes the sum seem large and burdensome. But if system had been introduced and payments had been made by the week or the month, to suit the weekly or monthly meetings of the Church, it would come to be a pleasure and not a burden. A good member of a country Church once said to me: "Won't you please get the Conference to reduce my assessment?" I said, "How much?" He said, "From $7.50 to $5.00 for the year." He used tobacco, and, later, I asked him how much his tobacco cost him for the year. He replied, "Oh, not much; about $10.00." I said, "Ten dollars for tobacco seems small and seven and a half dollars for the Church seems large. It is because you pay for your tobacco a little at a time and your Church dues all at one time. In the one case you have system; in the other you have not." He said, "Let it remain at seven and a half dollars, and I will pay by the month." He had not thought of the matter in terms of system.

The calendar is a system that men follow, and it eliminates confusion, maintains efficiency, supports law and order, and increases the progress of the world. System is a simple thing, but it prevents the wreck of the world. System is another name for schedule, and railroad trains could not do business without schedules. Mills could not do business, schools could not operate, the world would go to pieces without calendars, schedules, system. System reduces friction, increases efficiency, produces harmony, and conforms to nature as God has created the heavens and the earth. If you are a member of the Church, decide what you will give per week, and then pay it regularly, systematically, as you have monthly meetings in the county or weekly meetings in the city. One can be made as systematic as the other.

ELON LETTER.

What is My Life Work?

Yesterday afternoon, in addressing his youth audience of America over the radio, Rev. Daniel A. Poling, D. D., said that of the thousands of questions that come to him in a year from the youth of America, the majority of them relate to vocational choices. "The uppermost question in the mind of American youth today," declared Dr. Poling, "is how should I invest my life that it will count for the most?" Dr. Poling regards this statement as a sufficient answer to the traducers of youth who consider that the young people of today do not have a serious purpose, and that they are lacking in the fundamentals of character.

The question of vocation will always be an important one. We have but one life to live, and it is proper that we should approach the investment of this life in a spirit of service and devotion to the interests of mankind. Nor must we neglect the interests of the kingdom of God as it relates to our life.

Broadly speaking, there are two types of persons in the world, from the standpoint of vocation—those who are interested in things and those who are interested in ideas. It is possible that any calling or vocation or profession may be viewed from these two standpoints, so that this distinction does not necessarily mean that the one interested in things should enter upon a calling that involves mechanics. A lawyer, for example, may be interested in the mechanics of law, by which is meant the prosecution of criminals or the defense of law-breakers, in accordance with laws already enacted. Or a lawyer may look upon his profession as involving the great fundamental ideas of the social relationships of man. This latter type of lawyer will be a man of ideas, and his aspiration will be to improve the legal system under which we live.

It is of primary importance, however, that in deciding on our life work we should be sure to classify ourselves properly with preference to our fundamental interests, whether they be in the realm of things or whether they be in the realm of ideas and ideals, because the preparation we will need to make for our vocation will be essentially modified in terms of our primary interest.

Another consideration which we will need to keep steadily in mind in the choice of life work is as to whether we are interested in initiating projects or in fulfilling and realizing the projects that have been initiated by others. There is need in the world for each type of mind. Not every person can be a creator, and those who are endowed with the creative ability cannot possibly do team-work according to blueprints and specifications supplied by others. We need to exercise great care in assessing our ability and aptitude according to this important category. If we fail properly to orient ourselves in this respect, we shall be very unhappy in our vocation, no matter what it may be.

A special word of caution needs to be spoken to college students at this time because we are restless in these days of tremendous energy to begin our life work at once. We must consider whether we are interested in quick returns in our vocation or whether we are willing to take a long look and to be patient, confident that ultimately satisfactory results will accrue from our efforts.

At this point, I may say a word in respect to technical schools and liberal arts colleges. These two types of education have always collided with each other, more or less, and the conflict between them is keen at this particular time. If, when we have finished high school, we know without doubt what we expect to do in life, perhaps it would be best for us to select a technical institution. In this case we have what has been described with no intention to disparage, as a "single-track mind." Such a mind finds an uncongenial intellectual climate in the liberal arts college. But if, when we enter college, we are open-minded with reference to our future, we will find that the educational outlook which it fosters will be the very tonic which we need in order to qualify ourselves for effectual service in any vocation which we may later decide to choose and prepare ourselves to enter. The graduate of a liberal arts college should be able to select any one of a dozen or more vocations and to build upon the foundation of his liberal education a superstructure of professional training which will fit him for a large success.

In conclusion, I would like to speak a word for religious motivation and purpose as it relates to vocational choices. Is our religion concerned for ourselves or others? We can prostitute any calling to selfish ends, and when I say "prostitute," that is exactly what I mean. I have known ministers of the gospel to prostitute their sacred calling to selfish ends. Whatever we do, we should do it to the glory of God and for the happiness of our brother-men. Our aspiration should be to make the world in which we live a more welcome environment for the development of Christian character.

W. A. HARPER.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

One of the coldest days of the winter did not prevent First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Va., from having a successful "opening service" on February 16th. The new auditorium which is supposed to seat 530 persons comfortably was crowded to capacity, and about one hundred chairs were brought out and put into use to accommodate the crowd. There were seventeen additions to the Church at this service. More than seven hundred dollars was placed on the offering plates, and additional offerings that reached us the next day ran the offering above the one thousand dollar mark.

Rev. N. G. Newman was in the pulpit and took part on the program, as did also Rev. T. H. Dimmock, of the Second Presbyterian Church, this city. Other ministers in attendance were Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, H. G. Robertson, J. E. MacCauley, and T. N. Lowe, of our own brotherhood, and Rev. J. B. Hill, pastor of the Orcutt Avenue Baptist Church, Newport News.

Mr. R. E. Bush, of Norfolk, Va., who drew the plans for the structure, and son of one of the contractors, presented the keys to the Church in a very appropriate address. It is the opinion of the writer that Churches desiring to build and having a limited amount of funds would do well to get in touch with Messrs. Bush & Bond. They are conscientious workmen and Christian gentlemen of a high type.

Mrs. J. A. Bowden and Miss Louise Bowden, of the Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, made the occasion more delightful by rendering an inspiring vocal duet. The choir also gave several special selections, and the light of a glad heart was reflected in the face of both the members and visitors. Another milestone has been reached and the congregation seems to be determined to "press onward."

Pastor.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY.

(Printed by request of Rosemont Church.)

Having been asked to talk to you on the subject of "Yesterday and Today," I will begin by stating that I spent twenty-five years in this community—all my boyhood days. I went to school, to Church, and Sunday School, as well as to work on the farm. I really worked. I arose at 4 A. M. and retired at 8 P. M.

Our school was at Money Point. Providence and Berkley, our Church and Sunday Schools, were at the same places. Our means of transportation was by foot. We had a shell road from here to Berkley, which we walked daily. We had a Church at Money Point and another at Providence which we walked to and from every Sunday afternoon.

Later a store-room was secured and Sunday School and Church services were held here by the people of this community, of which there were about two dozen families. They began and built the first Church in this community on the present Church site, donated by John L. Gibson nad family. The people in this community at that time were all God-fearing and Church-going people. They gave, worked and sacrificed to build their first Church. After a few years this Church was too small and the present Church was built and paid for by the untiring efforts of its members and friends. Now the present Church is too small and a new one must replace the present one, with accommodations to care for our many boys and girls, to educate and teach them the laws of God, for as we all know the boys and girls of today will be the men and women of tomorrow.

As to yesterday and today, many changes have come about. I do not believe our people have the same respect as formerly for the Sabbath Day as a day of worship and a day of Church-going. We say the times have changed. We go through life at such a rapid rate today, with the many things to attract and draw our attention from that which we know and feel is not the best; many of us get in the current of the tide and we follow the masses to the point where Sabbath Day is fast becoming one which many thousands of our good people no longer respect as the Lord's day by attending Church at least once or more, but spend the day in work and amusements. Were it not for the laws of our Commonwealth, there would be no Sunday with many people.

On yesterday our young people or our children were reared, taught and did follow in the footsteps of their parents. They would sit and receive advice and counsel from their parents; they loved, respected and were obedient to those about them.

Our children were held in restraint. They were taught the many good things of life. They were warned of the many evils of life. They followed the parents' lead. We corrected them, they were not allowed the many privileges permitted by parents today. I fear that the parents of today are being led by their children.

The sphere of duty is infinite. It exists in every station of life. We have it not in our choice to be rich or poor, to be happy or unhappy; but it becomes us to do the duty that everywhere surrounds us. Obedience to duty at all cost is the very essence of the civilized life.

Bad will be the day for every man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life he is living, with the thoughts he is thinking, with the deeds he is doing.

Love your family, the partner of your life, and those around you ready to share your joys and sorrows. Love the dead who are dear to you and to whom you are dear. To love is to give and take a promise for the future. God has given us love, that the weary soul may give and receive support on the way of life.

Thousands of men breathe, move, and live, pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They do not partake of the good in the world, and none were blessed by them; none could point to them as means of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke could be recalled, and so they perished—their lights went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than insects of yesterday. Will you live for something, do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storm of time can never destroy? Write your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with; your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as the stars of heaven.

Things that were luxuries of yesterday are necessities today. Some of the most important to all of us are ice, telephones, electricity, modern homes, schools and Churches, motor vehicles, etc., and last but not least, surgery and medicine. There is probably no one science that has made as much progress for the good of our people and the suffering of humanity as that of surgery and medicine. People of yesterday, with their many ailments and incurable diseases, are today being made well so they may return to some useful and gainful occupation. The children of today are daily taught in their school work the necessity of health and sanitation. Our health boards, particularly our Virginia State Board of Health, has done much and is today doing much work to aid our people by preventive medicine for such as typhoid fever, maleria, tuberculosis, contagious and infectious diseases.

The physicians and surgeons of this country have been able to do many things and stamp out many of our worst plagues in the past few years, but I regret to say we are faced with one of the most horrible plagues or diseases known to mankind—cancer. Hundreds of the most learned, the most thoughtful, the best-preferred men in the world have been working, sometimes patiently and sometimes feverishly, and always earnestly in the hope of discovering something like a specific for cancer. They have found nothing approaching a specific as a cure. They have found only that there is just one thing for a sufferer to do, and that is to go without delay and place himself in the hands of a competent physician. Cancer is increasing at an alarming rate and is the one disease that means death without early recognition and its removal by means of surgery.

The medical profession throughout the land, both home and abroad, has been endeavoring to teach and educate our people, the signs and symptoms of this dreaded disease. We are also asking Churches, colleges, magazines and newspapers to co-operate with us in our efforts to try to stop this most-dreaded disease.

In comparison of yesterday and today along educational lines, children of today can teach their parents of yesterday. Our schools and the manner in which we operate them give an opportunity to every boy and girl in our land to secure a liberal and necessary education. Today science has so revolutionized most of our early concepts that we find many of the things we have believed in unable to bear the clear light of critical analysis. The people need a broader, deeper, more complete education, expressed in terms of prsent-day conditions. If our civilization is to reach its highest

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(March.)

Saviour of all, Thou dost bid us "Go." In mercy plead Thou for us that we may be swifter to learn the whole meaning of that command and obey it. As the efficacy of Thy blood is not measured by the Palestine path of Thy earthly journeyings, but reaches "unto the uttermost," even so does the Holy Spirit, not limited by the traverse of our feet, but according to the equipment which we supply, go for us "into all the world." Of whatever we are or possess, God help us not to withhold, but to give for others as we ourselves have received. In Jesus' name. Amen.

THE CALIBER OF OUR FAITH.

This is a time of financial depression. No one denies that. But it is just such times that show the kind and caliber of our faith. Dr. John Timothy Stone, of the Presbyterian Seminary, Chicago, speaking before a great group of Churchmen, ministers and laymen, in Atlanta, last Friday, said, and truly, "Great financial revivals have come in times of depression. The Church lives by sacrifice, likes to sacrifice, must sacrifice if it is to advance. For the caliber of our faith depends upon our attitude in facing our tasks."

Even in our time of depression God is abundantly blessing us. We are still enjoying the necessities as well as the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. This is more than can be said of many people in other lands. In such times, God is testing our faith to see of what kind and caliber it is.

This is to be a testing-time in our missionary giving, faith and activity. Is the caliber of our faith such as to enable us to face our task, support our missionaries, and, through sacrifice, endure hardship as good soldiers. Last year, times were more favorable, financially, We had the challenge of a $5,000 conditional gift to stimulate us, and an additional single donation of $2,500. This year we have to overcome all this by sacrifice that will indeed try and test the caliber of our faith. Surely we are yet willing and abundantly able, if we are ready to make the heroic sacrifice, to give one-third as much to send the gospel to others as we are to have it preached to ourselves. Our coming Easter offering will answer that question and will show the kind and caliber of our faith. J. O. A.

AS FINANCES DECLINE.

Our Mtehodist friends have such a close-knit organization that sometimes we are inclined to think that they can do anything. I noticed in one of their Churches last fall an urgent telegram that came from the Mission Board, pleading with the members of the Church to do their utmost to bring the missionary funds up to standard before the end of the year. The report in one of the Christian Advocates afterward indicated that the fund fell several hundred thousand dollars short of the amount required.

This situation in Methodism led the Western Christian Advocate to carry this editorial entitled "The Broken Spirit of Methodism." "Methodism has witnessed one of the greatest tragedies in her history. For some reason, many stand by largely complacent, scarcely understanding the significance of what is happening. Apparently we are drugged. Some opiate has been administered. Who did it? Who was the physician? What did he administer? Who will answer? If we could really appreciate the situation we are now in, the whole Church would be on its knees in sackcloth and ashes, crying out to God in heaven to save us from our present shameful lack of spirit, faith, devotion, sacrifice and loyalty. What is the meaning of the 15 per cent cut in our benevolences? It has caused the recalling of over 200 of our missionaries, the dismissal of hundreds of native workers. Yes, it means almost the collapse of our missionary work. We have withdrawn our missionary enterprise from entire provinces. It has not apparently disturbed the great body of believing Methodists in America."

Financial conditions are not easy now. A good many people are out of work and a large number live on small salaries. On the other hand, a great many receive good salaries and large dividends and live "on easy street." They have comfortable homes, own from one to three cars, and travel a great deal. Our Protestant Church members make up a fair proportion of the well-to-do, but they are somewhat niggardly in using their wealth to extend a helping hand to the world. Is it not so?—The Congregationalist.

WHY BOTHER THE HEATHEN?

The heathen are happy as they are—why bother them?

So the cynic on Christian missions. But he entirely disregards the fact that civilization as represented by commercial firms seeking markets for the white man is still pushing vigorously into less civilized countries, and uprooting the customs, traditions, religion, and working methods of the people. The cynic never condemns these agencies for forcing themselves and their wares upon a native people. The Christian missionary, on the other hand, desires only to help these people to meet the new conditions of life to the best possible advantage, and to help them in developing an adequate religious foundation. Reminding us of all this, "The Churchman Afield," the Boston Evening Transcript's religious department, quotes F. T. Meacham, an American missionary at Chikore, East Africa, thus:

"In our educational and evangelistic work, four Churches and twenty-six primary schools now are open. In our community, which we call the Chikore Larger Parish, we are educating the hearts, heads and hands of more than 2,500 children, not to mention their fathers and mothers. Jesus said that He came that people might have life; He came to save for life, not for death. We desire to give the African life—a life of hope instead of ignorance and superstition; of industry instead of idleness; a God of love instead of the fear of evil spirits; a monogamous home instead of a polygamous kraal; and the principles of Jesus so that they may build a Christian Church, African in form and spirit."—Literary Digest.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The annual rallies of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will be held as follows: Norfolk District—Mrs. H. C. Caviness, superintendent, First Church, Norfolk, April 1st; Nansemond District—Mrs. B. D. Jones, superintendent, Oakland, April 2nd; Franklin District—Mrs. W. D. Harward, superintendent, Mount Carmel, April 3rd; Waverly District—Miss Louise Pittman, superintendent, Dendron, April 4th.

The theme of the program is "Builders in a New Day." A large representation is earnestly desired from all the Churches in each district.

POWER OF MOTHER'S PRAYER.

A few years ago a son of a good mother was playing first base for the New Orleans Southern League baseball team. He had been devoting his life to that pastime, and was a splendid player.

During the series of games in New Orleans, this son became interested in a revival service conducted near the hotel where he was staying. He wrote his mother nearly every day, and in one of these letters he mentioned the fact that he had attended the service the night before.

His mother was a woman of great faith and prayer. I have heard her often say that she believed that God would grant her any request she asked of Him. The very night following the reading of that interesting letter she went into a place of prayer, alone with her God, and prayed fervently and believingly that her son reach a decision for Christ. She arose in a few moments perfectly satisfied that God had answered her prayer.

Two or three days after that prayer she received a letter, not dated, which brought her the glad news of his conversion. She immediately answered the letter and said, "Son, you did not date your letter, neither did you tell me the time of your conversion, but I know it happened on such-and-such a night."

Just as soon as he received her letter, he sent the following telegram: "You are right, mother; that's the exact time." In her next letter she explained fully when and how she prayed for him, and therefore produced in his heart a living faith in God's power and in His willingness to grant requests.—G. Frank Burns.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

"Prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

Song—Prayer—Business.

1. Devotional period—"The Sixth Pillar."
2. Exercise—"A Tale of Three Boxes."
3. Mite-box opening.
4. Current news.
5. Heart-to-heart message.

As has been stated so often within the past six months, our major emphasis in this year's program is upon the spiritual life—a personal walk with our Lord.

1. The devotional theme for March is "Worship," and as the basis of our study we are using the sixth and last pillar in our stewardship leaflet, "Some Stewardship Pillars."

"The stewardship of our substance leads us to the great and holy opportunity offered by the collection plate, when we can sit in the pews of the Churches and touch the whole world with our gifts and 'grow in this grace also'—the grace of giving. It is a real privilege to worship the Lord with our substance, and it is by the same token a sacred stewardship."

Following the suggested hymn, "O Worship the King," let the devotional leader introduce the thought of the meaning of the word worship, using the Scripture verses suggested in the blue leaflet: Prov. 3:9, 10; Psa. 98:8; 1 Cor. 16:1, 2, and Mal. 3:8.

The Scripture readings on "How to Worship with Our Gifts," with a one-minute comment on each, should be handed to eight different women at least a week in advance, if possible, in order that each may become familiar with her verse and be prepared with a thought on how to give—cheerfully, liberally, sacrificially, humbly, honorably, profitably, systematically, proportionately—whichever may be hers to discuss.

If "Joy to the World" can be sung with meaningful hearts, it will be easy to join in the circle of prayer following the suggestions given in the leaflet: "That we may admit God's ownership of our material possessions, enter into the riches of partnership with Him, make full acknowledgment of our stewardship, be ready always to render unto Him a proper account, develop our lives according to his plan, and grow in grace and knowledge, that we may enter into the full joy of stewardship by worshiping the Lord with self, service, and substance."

Some one may say that all this is impossible, that the ideal is too high, but men have attained it. John Eliot, the "apostle to the Red men," proved by practice as well as by precept that "prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

2. The use of the time-honored mite-box is being revived in many sections, and, to satisfy a real demand made by many societies, provision has been made on this March program for a mite-box opening preceded by this impressive little triologue, found in the envelope of helps. This number should be assigned to three persons who will be willing to put the same preparation and originality into it that they would if they were to give it at the club or lodge. Surely our best is none too good for kingdom work.

3. It has been the plan this year to have the thankoffering envelopes received in November, as usual, at the special service arranged for that purpose, using the special program; then, in March, to have the mite-boxes brought in and their contents received, at which time the value of the use of the mite-box would be stressed. Use some original way to have the mite-boxes received and contents counted. Some societies have given their mite-boxes new and beautiful names, such as "blessing boxes," "glad boxes," "treasure chests," and the like. By some they are called their "penny-a-day boxes," and these make it the rule of their lives to place a penny a day in their boxes, with a prayer.

4. Read the Herald carefully this month, for the future holds some changes for our department. Of one thing we are certain, that our horizon is being extended to take in more of our Father's world.

5. This message will be sent to you if you are using the envelope of helps. This time it comes from the heart of our general secretary.

"You are earnestly invited to join with Christians of all lands in a world-fellowship of prayer on March 7, 1930, by attending the service in your community on that day; also to unite with others in daily prayer with one accord during this 1900th anniversary of Pentecost."

"Evening, and morning, and at noon will I pray . . . and He shall hear my voice."

For Young People's Societies.

My own Church and its overseas service.

Purpose: To emphasize the idea of sharing Christ with non-Christian lands as the most practical gesture toward world friendship.

Program:

1. Instrumental prelude (familiar missionary hymn).
2. Scripture: Psa. 67.
3. Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."
4. Scripture: Matt. 28:18-20.
5. Prayer.
6. Project committee report.
7. Overseas service of the Christian Church.
8. Discussion: "How Can I Help Our Work Overseas?"
9. Resolved.
10. Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee" (one verse).

Scripture: John 21:15-17.

Circle of prayer.

Hymn: "I Love to Tell the Story" (first and third verses).

Suggestions:

Poster: Place pictures of people from various countries (to be found in periodicals or leaflets from Foreign Mission Department) upon the poster, with the words, "We Are Sharing Christ With These" (date, hour, place).

1-5. Service of worship, well-planned and worshipfully conducted.

6. The project committee will report ideas from last meeting, and will have secured copies of leaflet material from the Foreign Mission Department to add to the record book.

7. Progress toward union between the Congregational and Christian Churches is so promising when this program is being prepared (September, 1929) that it seems altogether certain young people of the two Churches will be working together in an overseas program by March. Full information on this part of the program may be secured from the Foreign Mission Department, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.

8. See chapter XII, Y. and W. O. for material and suggestions.

9. Have each young person write out a resolution on the topic, "My own rightful part in the world service of the Church," to be given to the project committee, and copy retained by the individual.

For Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "Growth."

Quiet music: "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

Song: "We Thank Thee, O Our Father."

Call to worship: Prayer and offering song, same as last month.

Unison prayer.

Dear Father in heaven, we thank Thee for springtime and for the return of the birds, bearing their messages from other lands where they have spent the winter. We thank Thee for our Sunday School and Church and our Missionary Societies where we may learn of Thy other children, whom Thou dost love as dearly as us. Help us, Father, always to act like Thy children, to grow as Jesus grew, and to be kind and helpful to all boys and girls everywhere. Amen.

Song: "A Little Seed Came Through the Ground" (first book of Hymns and Worship).

If mission offering has not been taken in Sunday School or Church, be sure to see that your society takes an offering. If it is taken in other groups, do all you can to aid your children in joyful co-operative giving. Continue handwork project.

Closing song. Benediction.

Let us all heed Miss Carrie Robinson's suggestion as to sending a treasure chest to the Philippines. She will be glad to help any superintendent who will write to her.

Lesson XI—March 16, 1930.

The Parable of the Kingdom.

Golden Text: "The kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit."—Rom. 14:17.

Lesson: Matt. 13:24-52.

Devotional Reading: Prov. 3:19-36.

Every preacher and teacher should carefully study the parables of Jesus as an example of how to put spiritual truths into concrete terms. In these parables or word-pictures, Jesus presents several phases of the kingdom, which is essentially spiritual, in terms of every-day objects or experiences. We call Him Teacher, and we do well, for so He is.

The Good and the Bad in the Kingdom.

The parable of the tares in the wheat teaches that there is a mixture of the good and the bad in the members of the kingdom. There are bad folks mixed in with good folks, and there is also bad mixed in with the good of the good folks. Jesus Himself realized the fact that there would be hypocrites and unworthy members in the Church. He suggests, however, that it is not always possible for mere human beings to make the distinction. There is so much bad in the best of us and so much good in the worst of us that only the divine Judge at the end of the world is competent to pronounce final judgment. Eventually, all bad things and persons shall be gathered out of the kingdom. It is well enough to have the words of Jesus to the effect, however, that the devil is busy all the time sowing "tares." No life and no community is immune. Let us be vigilant.

The Extensive Growth of the Kingdom.

The parable of the mustard seed emphasizes what might be called the extensive growth of the kingdom. It had a very small and insignificant beginning in the mind and heart and life of Jesus. But it has grown in numbers and in prestige until it is the most comprehensive organization in the world. Only recently the writer has been reading the book "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," as well as reviewing the book "The Christ of the Indian Road," and in each case there was actual fulfillment of the words of Christ as to the growth in extent of the kingdom of God. In round numbers there are six hundred million Christians in the world today. Let these figures tell us not to despise the day of small beginnings in anything Christian.

The Intensive Growth of the Kingdom.

The kingdom of God has not only gone far; it has gone deep. Like leaven in the lump, it has worked silently, slowly, imperceptibly, but irresistibly and pervasively. The spirit of Christ is permeating economic life, social life, education, government, organized religion, and even international relationships. It is producing not only numbers, but quality.

The Inestimable Worth of the Kingdom.

The parables of the treasure hid in the field and the pearl of great price teach the supreme value of the kinfdom. To possess Christ, to have the spirit that characterizes the true member of the kingdom, to share the blessings that come to those who seek to advance the kingdom, is life's supreme value. No expenditure of time or thought or possessions is too great that helps one to enter the kingdom, which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. Furthermore, if one seeks first the kingdom of God, he shall have such things as are necessary.

The Inclusiveness of the Kingdom.

The parable of the net cast into the sea, like the parable of the tares and the wheat, teaches that all kinds of people get into the Church. The Church ought to be glad to get them, too, for that is the only way of getting those who will prove true members of the Church, and it is the only way of helping those who need help. But the parable also teaches that there will be a final separation between the good and the bad, the true and the false. This separation will be by discerning and competent parties. It is well enough to call attention to the fact that Jesus does not minimize the terrors of that final separation for those who are wicked.

Old Truths of the Kingdom in New Forms.

The truths of the kingdom do not change, but their interpretation and application change. Old truth can be put into new forms and still maintain its vitality. Jesus Himself demonstrated this for He put old truths in new forms. Church leaders are at last coming to see that the creeds of one era must be interpreted in terms of another era. The preacher or teacher who would make his work effective must present his truth and interpret it in terms of contemporary life. Jesus said, "Like unto a householder which bringeth forth out of his treasure, things new and old."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Topic: "Peter a Great Evangelist."

Scripture: Matt. 4:18-20, 16:16.

Topics for Talks or Discussion.

1. The character of Peter. A reading of the following Scripture references suggests the characteristics of Peter given below. Add any other that you may discover.

(a) Mark 1:16-18: "And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed Him." One purpose—whole-hearted.

(b) Luke 22:31ff: "And when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Could be depended upon to help others.

(c) John 13:6-36: Respected the position of Jesus. Trusting. Whole-hearted in whatever he did. Spokesman of a group. A leader, questioned Jesus when he did not understand.

(d) Luke 5:4ff: Recognized the divine in Christ. Saw power in Him.

(e) Matthew 16:13-19: Attuned to things of the Spirit.

2. Compare and contrast Peter with James and John.

3. Peter the companion.

(a) What did Jesus mean to Peter's life and character? How would you picture Peter without Christ?

4. Peter the leader.

(a) Read Acts 1:15-20. What seems to be the position of Peter among the rest of the disciples? How do they accept his position?

(b) Read 1 Peter. What does this letter reveal about the character of Peter? What influence do you think he had upon the early Church?

(c) What qualities of leadership did Peter possess? What weaknesses did he have?

(d) Compare the Peter who denied Christ with the Peter of Pentecost. How do you account for this difference?

5. Peter the tested.

(a) Why was Peter able to come back after he had denied Jesus while Judas was not?

(b) Why do you think the New Testament gives so much more information about Peter than any of the other disciples? Do you think it just happened so, or was there some good reason for it?

(c) Do we have the same qualities that Peter had? Can we do with the qualities we have as Peter did with the qualities he had? What qualities did Peter have to overcome? What qualities did he have to cultivate?

(d) Is it a mark of a great man never to apologize? What steps did Peter take when he realized he had denied his Lord? Luke 22:61-62. What effect do you think this experience had upon Peter?

6. Peter the evangelist.

(a) Read Acts 9:32-35. Would you expect Peter to do the same kind of work that Jesus did? Why? Why was Peter able to heal?

Some Prayers that You May Wish to Use.

"May we, like Thine early followers, O Christ, first give our own selves, counting not our lives dear unto ourselves, doing all things for Thee and through Thee, whose we are and whom we serve." Amen.

"O God, our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the example of Thy Son in whose presence we stand convicted of our short-comings. Dear Father, make us big enough to admit our weaknesses; make us brave enough to face them; make us strong enough to overcome them. Help us to wipe out of our lives all those petty sins and the petty pride which stand between Thee and the accomplishment of Thy purpose through us. We would be open channels for Thy work. This we ask through the name of Thy Son." Amen.

"God, give us men! A time like this demands
Strong mind, great heart, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor, men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking—
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking."

MANUAL AND GUIDE.

A "Manual and Guide," containing the minutes of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions of the Southern Christian Convention for the year 1929 has been prepared by the field secretary and mailed to the Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies and pastors. Any organization or individual wishing a copy of this work should write to the field secretary at Waverly, Va., for a copy. These copies are free to any who write for them, but the supply is limited. ACT UPON EVERY NOBLE IMPULSE.

Men who were with Mr. Hearst in San Francisco remember the night he came into the Examiner office and heard that a man had been seen on a half-submerged rock in the bay, with the tide rising and certain to overwhelm him. In the office, they were wondering how he got there.

"What difference does it make how he got there," Mr. Hearst cut in; "get him off first and find out afterwards. Charter tugs, call for volunteers and save his life—that's the main thing." They went out with the tugs, even though it was a wild night, and rescued the man just before the seas rose over the rock.

God is telling you the same thing today. Go out and save that man who is lost! Don't sit there and speculate as to whether or not he is predestined to be saved or to be lost. Go and save him, and then you can speculate on that. Don't sit and speculate as to whether or not someone will take offense at your asking them to Church—go and ask them and find out. Don't speculate as to whether or not it would be any use to ask so and so to join the Church—go and find out. If you are reviled and persecuted; if you get a very cold, uncordial reception, if people are short and rude and say catty things back to you, just remember that verse, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you falsely for my sake." A lady asked me if I thought she ought to go to see so and so, when she would be insulted if she went there. I said, "Go, for an insult for Jesus' sake is a great crown and glory. Let people hurt your feelings, let people get mad at you, if you are doing it for Jesus you have your reward. There is a reward for action in life. There is no reward for passive day dreaming."

We are passing along a country road on a dark evening and are arrested by seeing luminous points in the herbage at the foot of a hedgerow or side of a lane. We find on investigation that the beautiful little lights are emitted by glow-worms. At first sight, they appear to be stationary, but we find by patient watching and watching that the little creatures are slowly moving as they shine. Each glow-worm ceases to emit its lovely gleam as soon as it stops moving. And in human life are not the bright lights of society, of the family and the Church those persons who are incessantly in action? The sluggard is too dull to shine; the energetic souls go sparkling on their way and charm as well as help.

It is the Christian in action that shines for God. It is the person who is carrying out from day to day the fine emotions aroused in their breasts on Sunday that is glowing for God. Just sitting and thinking of how fine it would be if all the people in the community were members of the Church isn't getting anywhere. It is definite action on your part to bring one more there that counts. The person who says, if I had time I would do more Church work, would not do it if he did have more time. The person who says, I wish I had a whole lot of money, so I could help the Church and help people around me is not the person who would help the Church if he did have it. It is the man in action who, no matter how busy he is, is taking some time for Church work that counts and who would do more if he did have more time. It is the man who hasn't much and who is sacrificing terribly now, that would do more for the Church if he had it. Action for your Church, action for your Sunday School, action for your Christian Endeavor is what will make your life shine with the love of God.

Be a Magnet for God.

The law of life is to use what you have, and you will get more. The miser who sits and dreams of what he has or of what he would like to have, never amounts to much. A magnet is sometimes seen in a chemist's laboratory suspended against a wall and loaded heavily with weights hung on an armature. We ask the reason and the scientist replies carelessly, as if it were a common-place thing: "The magnet was losing its power by lying around here without being used, and I am restoring its force by giving it something to do, more and more every day." It is with men as with magnets. Idleness results in the loss of power. Since the day of the Great Teacher, the unused talent is taken away. And the law of restoration is always the same. To him that uses what he hath shall be given more. The secret of restored force is to have something to do.

I know of spiritual men and women who are losing their power—because they are not doing enough for God and their fellow-man. Some day the talent will be taken away and given to someone who will use it. Do you want to become a powerful magnet for God, drawing men into the kingdom? Act upon every noble impulse, do what your heart and conscience tell you to do every Sunday. Be alert, eager, active to do some kind act, say some kind deed.—Presbyterian Standard.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY LIFE.

"I have all, and abound: I am full. My God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in glory."—Phil. 4:18, 19.

The postscript of a letter is often the most personal part of it. This is true of the last verses of the Philippians where the apostle Paul gives us a graceful and beautiful insight into his peaceful heart. He lived a contented life.

For one thing, he lived in the atmosphere of faith. He pitied those whose lives were clouded with doubt and chilled with suspicion. God will keep in perfect peace those who live in the attitude of trust. It is a great thing to believe in people. It is a great thing to believe in ourselves. It is a greater thing to believe in God. That lifts us to the ozone and to the pure air of the mountains, whence cometh our help.

Paul kept his record clean. A sick woman faced death with the saying: "My record is clean and the road is clear." A pure body and a clean mind and a reverent soul will enable us to say, "I rejoice in the Lord." The memories of wrong living, the impressions from impure thinking, the lashings of a condemning conscience, and the remorse from an ungrateful and irreverent spirit will drive from any heart the peace of God.

To have good friends, who mean so much to us, we must first of all be worthy ourselves. Birds of that feather will not flock our way if we be unworthy. We must show ourselves friendly. Many make the mistake of being always in the receiving line. We must remember, too, that Christian friends are the best, with all their faults, and that they may need us as much as we need them.

Paul constantly sought to find God's plan for his life. He was constantly pressing on and seeking to get hold of that for which Christ had gotten hold of him. The calls of the world are many, but he who would have added to his life all things worth while must seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness.

Paul ministered to others. It was the principle of his life and work. He loved others for their own sake. He longed after those who were his own kinsmen according to the flesh. He was ready to serve or to suffer, if it meant the welfare of those who were members of the household of faith. He remembered that Jesus came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and he was willing to be in chains and to die if need be for Jews and Gentiles, that they might know the gospel.

Prayer.—Our Father, who art in heaven, we bow before Thee at the opening of this day to ask that we shall not lack in doing all the things which we can do to make for happiness everywhere. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BUILDING FOR THE FUTURE.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6.

"If we work upon marble, it will perish; if on brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, and imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something that will brighten all eternity."—Daniel Webster.

This the way to save our homes. There has been no laws to abolish our homes. There never will be. And yet there is grave danger that there will be. Homes will pass away through lack of training of the children for them; through lack of children; through neglect of the home when we make them merely a sleeping-place; through apartment dwellings, and perhaps through other neglects which will make inroads on them.

We cannot take it for granted that the home will always be with us as an institution. It came into being through great effort and sacrifice, and it will be saved only through those who love and appreciate its value enough to make determined efforts to preserve it.

Prayer.—Dear Lord Jesus, come Thou into our homes and our hearts and dwell there. Forbid that we shall lose from view the God-given homes of the world and their value to a noble country and a noble world. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

STEWARDSHIP.

"For he that hath to him shall be given; and he that hath not, from shall be taken that which he hath."—Mark 4:25.

"The practice of stewardship is the ultimate goal of all Christian preaching and teaching. To use all one's time and talents, all that one is and has, in accordance with the will of God—that is surely to teach the ideal. That is truly to love God with all the heart, mind, soul and strength, and one's neighbor as one's self. That and nothing less is Christian stewardship."—Evangel.

Prayer.—Dear Father, Thou who art our life and strength, and author and finisher of our faith, teach us by Thy Holy Spirit the value of our talents and how we shall use them. We pray that we may be diligent, and when Thou caomest we may be found faithful. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LEARNING TO FORGET.

"Forgive each other, if any man have a complaint against any; even as the Lord forgave you, so also do ye."—Col. 3:13.

As far as the east is from the west, so hath our Lord removed our sins from us. It is one of a Christian's hardest tasks to do the same thing toward one another. The editor of one of our gospel monthlies says:

"There are few things that are worse for a man's soul than remembered wrongs. They may only be imaginary wrongs, or if real, very small and of little moment. It doesn't seem to make much difference; if they are cherished in the heart they become as cankers that eat their way through all the wholesomeness and happiness of life. A grudge is a thing no living man can afford to keep. It is the foe to good will and to all the lovely and beautiful things that grow in the soil in which good will is one of the chief elements.

"Remembered enmities and slights are among the cruelest of burdens that any man may lay upon his life. And what is true of an individual must be largely true of a people or a nation. Is there anything much worse that a nation can do for herself than to enshrine her hatreds and enmities toward a sister nation in the books of history that her sons have written, to be studied by the youth of the land generation after generation? And yet this has been done, over and over again, and done in the fine name of patriotism, too. Surely this is sowing dragons' teeth with a vengeance! And surely the one way to world peace is the way of a wise and a Christian forgetting. But are the nations and peoples of the earth learning of that way and beginning at all to walk in it? Slowly, very slowly, it would seem. And, yet there are indications here and there that fill one with hope."

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, who hath all things abundantly more than we can ask or think, do Thou possess our souls so thoroughly every day that we may show forth Thy spirit toward our fellow-men. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THOU SHALT NOT BEAR ANY GRUDGE."

"Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold, the Judge standeth before the door."—Jos. 5:9.

"How searching is that demand upon the soul! My forgiveness of my brother is to be complete. No sullenness is to remain, no sulky temper which so easily gives birth to thunder and lightning. There is to be no painful aloofness, no assumption of a superiority which rains contempt upon the offender. When I forgive, I am not to carry any powder forward on the journey. I am to empty out all my explosives, all my ammunition of anger and revenge. I am not to 'bear any grudge.'

"I cannot meet this demand. It is altogether beyond me. I might utter words of forgiveness, but I cannot reveal a clear, bright, blue sky without a touch of storm brewing anywhere. But the Lord of grace can do it for me. He can change my weather. He can create a new climate. He can 'renew a right spirit within me'; and in that holy atmosphere nothing shall live which seeks to poison and destroy. Grudges shall die 'like cloud spots in the dawn.' Revenge, that awful creation of the unclean, feverish soul, shall give place to good will, the strong genial presence which makes its home in the new heart."—Christian Hope.

Prayer.—Almighty and forgiving God, have mercy upon our sinful souls and forgive us of all our trespasses. We humble before Thee in shame. Forgive us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LIFE'S QUIETING STREAM.

"There is a river, the stream whereof shall make glad the city of God."—Psa. 46.

There have been very many turbulent waters in the world. Sins have overwhelmed us, revolutions have beset us and all our plans upset. But like as when Elijah stood before the storm, etc., and heard the still small voice, so we, amidst all the turmoils and upsettings we have had, have found a quiet stream that maketh glad, a reassuring thought that God is still on the throne and for us, and nothing can harm us. There is rest and peace by this river.

This river shall never be stopped or turned from its course, but will ever be found pure and fresh for those who come to live by it and drink of its life-giving power.

Prayer.—Our Father, Protector and Shield, in the day of troubles hide not Thy face from us. Help us to p'n our faith to Thee and be found always faithful. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Orphanages, like homes with children, always are in need of something. But the good women in our Church have always been so good to help supply our needs that it is a real pleasure to call on them, as we know they get a real pleasure out of helping us in this work. They always seem to be so happy when they come to bring supplies we need and which helps us so much, and when they are so far away they cannot come they often write us such kind letters telling us how much real joy they get out of the work of making things for the children at the Christian Orphanage. Our greatest joys in this life come to us through doing something for others.

Money don't buy happiness. Beautiful and costly homes are not always the happiest homes. Sometimes a little cottage on the side of the road, where a mother has struggled to rear her family of children, denying herself of the comforts of life for the children's sake in order to educate them for teachers, preachers, missionaries and other callings in a happy life of service, we will find real happiness. Jesus taught us that great truth in His life of service to others. He not only taught them, but He healed them of their diseases. He showed them that He had compassion on them because he healed them and made them whole again.

For a number of years the good women in our Church have at Easter time made and sent us little dresses for the girls and little suits for the boys. Our great need this year is little suits for boys from six to ten years of age, and dresses for girls from 13 to 16 years of age. We have a supply of dresses on hand for little girls up to twelve years of age, but have none for girls 13 to 16 years. This year we are asking that you send us dresses for the larger size girls.

We truly hope our good women will help supply this need, and we feel sure they will be delighted to do this service for our orphanage. Slippers for the girls for Easter. Every girl wants new Sunday slippers for Easter Sunday to go with the new Easter dresses.

CHRISTIAN OFFENSES.

"Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth."—Psa. 12.

Paul testified that he is grievously oppressed and deeply grieved at the offenses committed by the Christians. This sort of thing caused Jesus to weep over Jerusalem. How much of this distress do we find today? Whose heart is really breaking over the hypocrisy, the lukewarmness, the unbelief, the crime, and even the continuation of Christians until they do not feel the impressiveness of eternity and the significance of grace?

But we have this word among us: "He that heareth my word and doeth it shall be likened unto a man who built his house upon a rock. The rains descended, the floods came and beat upon that house and it fell not, because it was founded upon a rock."

Prayer.—O Thou living God, quicken our hearts, give us the love after which we thirst, that we may know its joy and its sorrows and that we may spend our years in the exercise of this love. Amen.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY.

attainment, we must come to see that no aim or object of social desire is so great as the best possible development and training of the average citizen; and the present haste and waste of rushing immature children from the schools into breadwinning life too become, like the machines they operate in factory and shop, mere automatons, is most harmful and ultimately destructive of national permanence.

America has made most rapid strides in the advancement of education in the last ten or twelve years, and there is no reason why every boy and girl should not go out in this world properly fitted to earn a livelihood.

Joys have three stages—hoping, having, and had. The hands of hope are empty, and the heart of having is sad, for the joy we take in the taking does, and the joy we had is its ghost. Now which is better—the joy unknown or the joy we have clasped and lost?

On yesterday we traveled by foot, by ox-cart; our news reached us by messenger or by weekly papers; we were moderate in our habits and mode of living; we had time to waste. Today we travel at a most rapid rate of speed, our mental faculties are taxed to their limit. To keep pace with our fellow-man, both in business and living conditions, we are taxed to find time to do many things our thoughts and conscience tells us we should do. Our lives have been changed many ways; we do things, go places and permit in and around us many things that we would not have tolerated twenty years ago. Should we not stop, look and listen before it is too late? Should we not apply this slogan to our every act of life, for safety first pays big interest and dividends in the long run?

On yesterday we were called upon and did our best. We built and paid for this Church. It has stood as a monument in this community, telling the world that this community of people loved and served God, and that this Church was the place to send your children to school, that they could be taught the Bible, the laws of God. Not stopping here, our children, as well as our adults, are taught right from wrong, taught to obey the laws of God and taught to obey the laws of our land, that they might grow up and become honest men and women, a credit to the community in which they were reared.

Our Sunday Schools and Church today not only teach you the Bible, but teach and train our little ones love, respect and honor. The kingdom of God is not on the wane. Reverence is one of the surest signs of strength of character; irreverence one of the surest indications of weakness.

Our community is growing rapidly. Only a few years ago we had only a scattering of houses and people; today we have grown until we have hundreds of people around us. We must do our duty to God and ourselves; we must rear our children in schools and Churches; we must start them right. The responsibility rests on us.

Let us unite as one people, one community, and meet the challenge to raise the necessary money in 1930 and erect a monument to God on this spot that will accommodate our needs for years to come.

ROANOKE, ALA.

On the third Sunday night in February I preached to the Roanoke congregation from the text Heb. 11:16, "But now they desire a better country," giving in outline how America can be made better. I had a fine audience, with the best of attention throughout. This is the Church that Rev. G. D. Hunt organized a few years ago, and later built a new Church building. Rev. G. H. Veazey has been their pastor for the past two years. He is a graduate of Piedmont Junior College and of Elon College. He is of fine character, a good preacher and pastor and is doing a worthwhile piece of work.

This Church and Sunday School is loyal to Piedmont Junior College, and has promised to do its part in supporting the institution with students and money. We believe that the Church and Sunday School will give to the college this year not less than $100. Their building project has been a hard struggle for them to pull through, so it enables them to sympathize with us in our endeavors to build this new college. Watch for reports from Roanoke Church from time to time. They will inspire you to bigger things.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

Two Paths to the Same Goal.

In our country's history, the two lives that are the oftenest in intimate and enduring fellowship are those of Washington and Lincoln. Profoundly similar, yet illustrating two different paths to the same goal—the moral ideal of the nation, the moral meaning of human life.

Moral dignity is the key to the character of Washington, and this was founded upon two things—his self-respect and his respect for his fellow-citizens. There were temptations then as now to falsehood, to graft, to corruption, to making private gain out of public office and setting the fortunes of the servant above his task. His sense of moral dignity lifted him above this low plane of action, having refused to allow himself to be open to their appeal.

The sense of divine self-respect and the sense of the divine worth of his fellow-human beings, saved Jesus from the great temptation. By these two motives He came out unsullied, pure, victorious, free; He came forth with His gospel vindicated in His own soul before He uttered a word about it to His fellow-men. Salvation is to be lifted into a sense of your own worth and the worth of your brother so great and constant that you should never insult by a wicked deed, yourself or your brother.

The key to the character of Lincoln is sympathy with the upper ranges of his own being and with all the upper ranges of his fellow-citizens and with the whole high possibility of our human world. All great forces are set going in the soul by sympathy, and he serves less by the sense of a categorical imperative, and more by the sense of an infinite privilege. Lincoln heard the cry of his mind for knowledge, for discipline, for power; and the cry of his heart for honor, for justice, for kindness—heeding the cry he was lifted into a new world.

The man of sympathy sees the uplands in the life of humanity, and he can no more keep from loving them and desiring to serve them than a poet can look upon a vast mountain-range without love; the same man, full of sympathy, cannot behold the grander possibilities of his own nature without sympathy and without longing to lift these possibilities into actual possessions and powers.

These two illustrious men who are guiding us in our thought today, typify, one the judgment of value, the sense of moral law, obedience to which springs from self-respect and respect for others; the others, the beauty of the Lord our God in the life of his creatures, the beauty that sets free all love and sympathy, that brings him, under the music of all melodious and singing privileges, into the service of his fellow-men, the beauty that becomes in his own heart the supreme joy and peace. In these two lives there is a silent beauty more impressive than any speech, and we must press forward by the one path or the other, because the nation needs our best.

WINDSOR, VA.

One of the most active organizations of the Windsor Christian Church is the Woman's Missionary Society. Our ladies are very enthusiastic and we are making progress under the splendid leadership of our president, Mrs. J. M. Raby. She has the loyal co-operation of the three circles. We are glad to report that we expect to reach our quota for this year.

Our society was delightfully entertained at the parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, February 26, 1930, by our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. B. White. It was one of the most interesting meetings held this year. Miss Violet Griffin read a splendid paper on chapter 2 of the book "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem." Our pastor gave a very interesting talk on the Book of Acts, using as his subject, "The Second Coming of Our Lord."

Rev. and Mrs. White are very much interested in the missionary society. They are thoroughly missionary in spirit. We feel sure that, under their consecrated leadership, our Church will continue to progress. Our congregations are excellent.

and he died. Today a memorial tablet stands in the city to the honor of little Willie, and on it are inscribed his last words, "I'm glad just to be a little help."

"She hath done what she could; she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying. Verily, I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her." "She hath wrought a good work on me."

OBITUARIES.

MARCH.

Mills Jordan March died at his home, Route 1, Holland, Va., February 23, 1930, aged 64 years. The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley and Rev. W. C, Hook, and the body interred in Holy Neck Cemtery.

Bro. March was the son of the late Marion and Marcia Howell March, of Nansemond County. He leaves a widow, who was Bettie P. Keen; four sons—Loyd C., of Norfolk, Va.; Clyde, of Richmond; J. Ether, and Mills J., of Route 1, Holland, and one daughter, Elizabeth, of Route 1, Holland, and four grandchildren, three brothers—Harvey, of Elwood; Daughtrey, of Florida, and Bim, of Gates County, N. C.; four sisters—Mrs. Charlie Taylor, of Whaleyville, Mrs. W. T. Edney, of Norfolk, Mrs. Hillary Fanny, of Gates County, N. C., and Miss Hunter, of Somerton.

Bro. March had been a member of Holy Neck Church for about 39 years. He was fond of his Church and was a regular attendant and supporter until his recent affiliation. He was industrious, frugal, loyal and devoted to his family, and a kind and generous neighbor. A rich and beautiful display of floral designs and a crowded house witnessed the esteem in which he was held by hs community. May a Heavenly Father's guiding and sustaining hand rest upon his loved ones.

DUCK.

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, Mills H. Duck, who died February 29, 1920:

Dearest husband and father, how we miss you!
With a memory fond and true;
Just a tear in silence falling,
And a heartache still for you.

We didn't know the sorrow to be left alone
Until God sent a message to our home.
A lonely home now we must bear,
With only father's vacant chair.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Hidden tears so often flow;
Memory keeps my father near us,
Though he died ten years ago.
Gone but not forgotten.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

VALUATION OF SCHOOL PROPERTY.—

Value of all property for public school purposes in the United States is $5,486,938,599, or an average of $218 per pupil, the statistician in the Division of Statistics, United States Office of Education, Emery M. Foster, stated recently. California ranks first, with an average valuation of $386 per pupil; New York second, with $353, and Michigan third, with $351.

THE OBSERVANCE OF LENT.—

The Lenten season is coming more and more into the thoughts and consciousness of the non-liturgical Churches. This is perhaps as it should be. Whenever any movement comes into being, in the nature of a protest or a reform, it is likely to go to the extreme and to reject some things that are of vital importance. We are learning that there is power in simultaneous activities. It is easier for one Church to conduct an evangelistic campaign when neighboring Churches are engaged in the same kind of efforts.

There is also great value in methodic and habitual spiritual exercises. If things are left to inclination or the inspiration of a moment, our spiritual lives are likely to be haphazard and impotent. Those who have laid greatest emphasis upon spiritual guidance and inspiration have been most insistent upon regular times for seeking the presence and guidance of the Spirit. The Society of Friends has insisted that spiritual activities should be inspired. But no religious organization has ever been more insistent that the individual believer should have fixed and regular times when the heart should seek to prepare itself for the coming and the moving by the Spirit.

As the calls of modern life become more insistent and the demands upon our time more exacting, it must become increasingly necessary that we safeguard ourselves by fixing definite times and seasons for self-examination, meditation, confession, and the inward renewing from above. And there can be no more appropriate season for such spiritual activity than the season which is associated with our Lord's passion and resurrection.

THE WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.—

Friday, March 7th, was the annual "World Day of Prayer" for missions. The idea is sponsored by the Federation of Women's Missionary Organizations. The purpose is to have groups of women all over the world assembling to pray for the missionary enterprises throughout the world. That there are blessings and inspiration in such a practice, would doubtless be the unanimous testimony of every one who participated in the observance of the day.

The realization that in every Christian land there are those of different denominations, and of different races, who are serving one Lord and who are praying for the success of one great Christian enterprise, brings a consciousness of the oneness of Christ's followers such as nothing else can give. Christians are never more essentially one than when they are united in prayer. The closer we come to the throne of grace in supplication, the nearer we are together.

It has always been recognized that prayer is an important factor in the successful carrying on of missionary endeavor. But we have not always realized that it is the most important factor. Once the Christian world has really learned to pray for the mission cause, all other problems connected with missions will be well on their way toward solution. The real weakness in the missionary enterprise lies in the heart of the individual Christian. And that weakness can be transformed into strength through no other medium than by prayer. Of course, annual prayer is not what is needed; but many of those who united in the "World Day of Prayer" received that which will cause them to continue to pray for the mission cause.

THE PROHIBITION INVESTIGATION.—

The country is being treated to a most unusual spectacle in the form of the hearing before the House Judiciary Committee on legislation for the repeal of the dry laws. To what purpose is all the talk? So far as we can see, the investigation, so far, merely afforded an opportunity for a small group to get publicity for views which every one knew they held. We have learned nothing that we did not know long before the hearing began.

About all the news that has been contained in all the publicity to date is from the statement of those who have been heard as favoring the repeal of the prohibition laws, that the wets are just as wet as they have always been. If the list of those who have been heard contained any new converts to the wet cause, their opinions were not of sufficient weight to merit broadcasting by the wet press. And now that the drys are having their inning, we are hearing the opinions of men and women who have always been openly and avowedly dry. So far, there have been no new arguments advanced by either side. And there have been no new facts to bolster up the old arguments.

It would seem that it were about time to stop talking and begin to do something about the enforcement of the prohibition laws. During the last presidential campaign, we were told that the election was a direct referendum on the prohibition issue. If it were what it was purported to be, then there can be no doubt as to where the majority of the American voters stand on the issue. If the party at present in power won the place which is now held on the promise to enforce prohibition, then we should be at least beginning to see results. There are millions of American citizens who expressed their convictions at the polls in the last presidential election, not for the privilege of hearing prohibition debated, but in the expectation of seeing an earnest effort made to really enforce the prohibition laws.

It is not an issue which is to be settled by seeing which side can shout loudest and longest, the wets or the drys. One witness very gravely informed the committee that "The liquor business has fallen into disrepute. I propose we endeavor to get it into good hands." Now, that certainly is an interesting declaration and proposal. Does it mean that the party elected to power on the promise to enforce prohibition is incapable of dealing with the situation? We do not believe that is the situation. What it most likely means is that the wets are trying to repeat so insistently that prohibition cannot be enforced, that all serious attempts to enforce it will be abandoned.

It is interesting to note the arguments that are being made for repeal of the present prohibition laws. If they were to be accepted and followed to their logical conclusions there is not a single prohibitory statute, vital to the protection of life and liberty, that would be left upon the statute books. It would be far more to the point, to have those who are in a position to know or to find out, tell us why the prohibition laws are not being enforced. The country has learned only such facts as those who have an avowed purpose to further have seen fit to make public. Surely there are those who are capable of viewing the situation with an impartial judgment, and clearly set forth the facts as they are. The American people who have declared that they wish to see prohibition enforced have a right to know just what has been done and what is being proposed toward enforcement. The beliefs of outstanding wets and outstanding drys are no longer of general interest. What we need is not opinions, but facts.

There is a certain amount of human interest in knowing what millionaires and industrial leaders hold as their personal convictions, no matter whether they be wet or dry. But there are many earnest souls who believe that our government has gone far enough in the effort to meet the demands and satisfy the demands of the millionaires, the captains of industry, and the financial experts. It might not be amiss to consider the welfare and the wishes of the rank and file of the citizens of the United States and make an effort to conform to the course for which they have made an insistent demand through the exercise of the franchise.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. A. W. Andes is assisting Pastor B. J. Earp in a revival at Whistlers Chapel the week of March 10th.

It is to be devoutly hoped that our pastors are preaching missions and teaching missions during this period in preparation for the great Easter service and sacrificial offering.

The Karnahan Evangelistic Campaign of all-Richmond will begin March 30th. The western district of the city will have headquarters at the First Christian Church, corner of Sheppard Street and Grove Avenue, with Dr. C. C. Ryan in charge.

Rev. and Mrs. S. E. Madren, Fancy Gap, Va., announce the arrival on March 5th of Willie Robert. Here is hoping that our mountain school and Church will have in Willie Robert a real and devoted friend, just as his parents have already proved themselves to be.

Rev. J. W. Barrett changes his address from Hopewell, Va., to 211 West Thirty-fifth Street, Norfolk, Va. Bro. Barrett writes: "I have moved my family from Hopewell to Norfolk and will close my work with the Hopewell Church March 30, 1930. I am leaving them but my prayers and very best wishes will be with them. They have been very kind and attentive to me."

Envelopes are being sent out this week to the secretaries of all Churches for the Easter offering for missions. Surely these faithful secretaries will see to it, with the co-operation of the pastor, that one of these envelopes is placed in the hands of every member and friend of the Church and congregation. Every Church secretary can certainly aid his pastor and make a real contribution to a glorious cause in this way.

The mission literature to be used in Churches during this mission period is, we think, the most explicit and valuable ever sent out to Churches. Many pastors and others interested in missions have ordered supplies for their people, and we are anxious to place the literature where it will be used. If any pastor or Church desires more, a request to the Mission Secretary, J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., will suffice.

Every Church in our Southern Convention should plan for its Easter service this year (or the service held nearest to Easter) as never before, since it will celebrate the 1900th anniversary of our risen Lord and Pentecost. At this service the sacrificial offering in the entire Church should be laid upon God's altar to help carry out the one command that our risen Lord gave to the Church and the world, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Dr. G. S. Watson, a trustee of Elon College from its beginning and also of the Christian Orphanage from its origin, passed away Tuesday, March 4th, after an illness of several months. The funeral services were conducted from the home at Elon College, N. C., March 5th, by Rev. A. W. Hurst, pastor Elon Church, of which Dr. Watson was a member and deacon, by Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., and the editor of THE SUN, J. O. Atkinson.

It is one of the tragedies of the modern Church that the average preacher talks about diseases in general, but does not prescribe remedies in particular. He pictures, for instances, the tyranny of appetite and passion, but does not point out the way in which the power of any particular appetite or passion may be broken. He rails against an ugly disposition, but he gives us no instructions as to the method by which that disposition may be improved. He denounces the sin of worry, but he does not make it clear to the man who is harassed by worry how he can shake off his besetting sin.—Chas. E. Jefferson.

The Burlington Daily Times, March 6th, says: "The name of Dr. William A. Harper, president of Elon College, has been mentioned in connection with the presidency of the University of North Carolina, to succeed Dr. Chase, who goes to Illinois. It is understood that Dr. Harper's name was mentioned at the board meeting held in Raleigh on Tuesday along with several other available men for this place of distinction in the educational life of the State." Following this, the writer in the News speaks very complimentary of the president of Elon. The University of North Carolina would honor itself in selecting as its president the brilliant and well-known president of Elon College. Its trustees could certainly go further and fare worse in selecting a successor to the eminent Dr. Chase. And what the writer in the Burlington paper says is deeply appreciated by the friends of President Harper.

In a personal letter, dated March 5th, the pastor, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va., writes: "We had a great day at our Church yesterday. Our Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society sponsored a one-day institute of missions. Members of the societies of the Churches of this district were invited to be present. They responded in a most surprising way. Instead of just a mere handful, as might have been expected, there was a large audience present. I did not count the number present, but the general assembly room of the Sunday School was well over half filled at the morning session, and there were many more present at the afternoon session. Dr. Smith and I had the privilege to teach three chapters each of the mission study book 'From Jerusalem to Jerusalem.' It was a day of inspiration and good fellowship." Why should not others of our Churches follow this example and study together this wonderful book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," or some other book equally as wonderful? This is getting missionary information lodged at the right place.

Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, of Boston, who is to speak in Norfolk and Richmond, March 16th, has had large and appreciative audiences and has brought to our people, who had the privilege of hearing him, real enthusiasm for the great work. From his address at Greensboro First Church, the Daily News of that city quotes: "The first thought which comes to my min dis the great spirit of unity now prevailing among the Churches of all denominations, and how much greater that spirit of unity is in the mission fields today than it is in this country. The second point which comes to my mind is that it is much easier to do our work today because of the talk of international peace and friendly relations. The London conference now in session, though it is meeting with many difficulties, is bound to accomplish much good in the direction of world unity. The Washington conference a few years ago on the five-five-three ratio has gone around the world, and the result of it is that missionaries can talk missions with a great deal more ease and with a more attentive ear than ever before. The greatest strategy behind mission boards today is to teach and train those who can lead. My own board has 750 missionaries around the world, with 5,000 native workers in the lands where they operate. We are training 80,000 children in foreign lands who can go back and mold the young life of their communities into Christianity."

President W. A. Harper met with the ministers of Eastern Virginia at Suffolk on March 6th and reports a most happy and enthusiastic meeting, the ministers present voting to assist and to do all they could in raising their Church quotas for the college. And following this very happy session, within two days both Holland and Holy Neck Churches subscribed their quotas in the campaign for funds for the college. Dr. Harper reports a most satisfactory meeting and outlook among the Churches of Eastern Virginia in the campaign for funds now so much needed by the college. The following account of the Suffolk meeting, with quotas for each Church in addition, was given in the Virginian-Pilot of March 7th: "Outstanding clergymen of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met today in Suffolk, the meeting having been called to consider the suggested quota apportioned to the Churches of Eastern Virginia for the current expenses of Elon College for 1930. The total suggested for the five Conferences of North Carolina and Virginia is $24,000. For the Churches of Eastern Virginia, whose representatives spent today in convention in Suffolk, Va., the suggested sum was $10,200, which the pastors, after hearing all discussions agreed to try to raise. Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, presided today at the session, which was held in the Christian Church. Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, presented the matter of the suggested quota. The ministers agreed to endeavor to raise this sum by May 15th. After the business session, the body adjourned to the Hotel Elliott Cafe, where they had luncheon."

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

In the year 1811, during the Madison administration, an unknown person sent $5 to the United States government, stating that he owed that sum to the nation. One of the bookkeepers of the Treasury Department, after thinking over the matter for a long time, opened a new account and credited the amount to "Conscience." Ever since that account was opened, it has been growing each year by remittances, ranging from 2 cents to $30,000, sent by different persons whose conscience was not at ease with the United States government.

Here is a principle which can be studied by many Christians, and which will be a blessing to themselves and to the cause of God. There are many who, after having joined the Church, have been delinquent in tithe-paying, or who have rarely paid an honest tithe. There are others who have formed the habit of borrowing the tithe, and have failed to return the whole or even a part of the money borrowed. Many of these persons, I believe, when their conscience was awakened, on finding themselves unable to pay an accumulated and consequently heavy tithe, have sought God's forgiveness, and have experienced His pardoning grace.

But would it not be a blessed thing for such ones, even though forgiven of the debt, to follow the plan of some who defraud the government, and return "conscience tithe"? From such a source much means could be turned into the cause, with the result that our work would be greatly assisted in home and foreign fields, and the givers would most certainly be equally blessed.—Review and Herald.

THE MYSTIC AND MAGIC WAY.

By Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N.

I.

"Jesus saith . . . I am the way, and the truth and the life; no one cometh unto the Father but through me."—John 14:1-24.

Simply described, mysticism is contact with and a personal contact with the unseen. A mystic is one who is conscious of that which is unseen. In religion, it is one's consciousness of the existence of the unseen God whom he cannot demonstrate, but of whom he has a certain knowledge and a certain intuition distinct from reason.

Magic is a pretended art working by the power or the assistance of supernatural beings, often pertaining to trickery. It is no misnomer to say that both mysticism and magic exist in the Church. It is the purpose of the Church, by means of the mysterious way, to lead men to a living which will give them the abundant life.

From the first man, all sensible men have been mystics. Whatever may be said about what man was in the beginning, whether like monkeys or not, this we know that he was scientist enough to invent tools, he was artist enough to draw pictures, and he was religious enough to have a God. From then until now that sense of God has been abiding in man, developing and growing until God has come to be what He is to us today. It is foolish to say, as the hymn says, "The heathen in his blindness bows down to wood and stone." He does not. He never did. Before the image of wood and stone, as an image before him which he could see, he was bowed down to a mysterious something which was his God. And we, whatever we may know about our God today, may leave Him out of our thought if we please, and we will still have a keen sense of the supernatural—a longing for the mystic something. We feel it in the leaves of the trees in springtime, in the magnificence, the power and the eternal movings of the sea. We can feel it in the love that burns beyond passion. We have felt it as we looked into the face of our first-born child. We have felt it in our prayers and devotions and the spirit that thrilled us when we pulsingly took afresh the viws of the Holy Sacrament. We have seen it in the lives of those who have become Christians and have found His love. We have seen it in the ministrations of comfort and strength in days of endless affliction. That is the thing once called "it" in the worship of primitive men that to us has become a personal God. Only those doubt it who have become over-cultivated in material things and trust their own wisdom rather than the divine.

When we come to think about it, the common sense of the ordinary man is too strong to permit his denying what is potentally a part of human experience, which is that religion is a part of man. There are strivings in the human heart; there are yearnings for a knowledge of things to come; there is something about us interested in the unknowable. It is the search for a reality of this something which has made religion a thing of mystery and made its followers mystics.

When Jesus came, the people of the world saw the possibility of knowing the unknowable; that they could travel the mystic way. What they had hitherto vaguely worshiped, now they were able to put in concrete form. The coming of Jesus upon the earth was like a flash of light in the darkness which reveals the reality of things around them. The mystic way in which they had groped so long was now a plain path, and although He soon disappeared in the same mystic way, it was clear to all what sort of person God was. They could then visualize God in terms of Jesus, and through Jesus there has never been a time since that everybody could not know God. Through Him, eternity became plainer, simpler, more reasonable, more human, life more divine, and his passing from time into eternity was but a door through which we look into the great beyond and catch visions of our destiny. "I am the way," said Jesus. It is through this way we go beyond things material to the things of God. The marvel is that everybody does not see it. Though Jesus is visible and represents God, though His example is perfect, though His way is plain—so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err; though in Him we can well understand what God is like, thousands continue to turn from Him and search for their god in hundreds of other ways.—Taken from "Beyond Agnosticism," by Chas. F. Bell.

VALUE OF MISSIONARY CULTIVATION.

As we come to the close of the quadrennium, more and more we are asking what is the value of the cultivation period and the free-will offering in the missionary program of the Church. Has it merit beyond an emergency measure? Has it hurt or helped the local Church? It is a study in the value of a purpose, and our answer must be in the revealed reaction of the local Church.

The cultivation period purposes to bring to the local Church, and to the individual, the statement of our missionary achievement as a Church, the program of work, and the end in view for immediate accomplishment. It is an effort to familiarize the whole Church with what we are doing to fulfill the command in the great commission. In the alert Church, and the Church willing to make effective the will of the General Conference, the cultivation period faced the congregation in sermon, in study book, in the distribution of special literature and in special and personal contact with the opportunity and responsibility of missions. Any Church that is denied this program is a poorer Church, in that it has missed visioning fields white unto harvest, has not been called to special prayer, nor made the sacrifices that make the man and the Church really Christian.

It is not an accident that the Church doing this work is a live Church. It is the law of the kingdom, and it is fulfilling the one purpose of the Church in the world. There is never a sense of assurance until the program of the Church is harmonized with the program of the Master. Only when the Church adjusts itself to that program and feels the benediction of the Most High, will there be the measure of enthusiasm that makes a great Church, whether its membership be small or large.

Are We Too Narrow?

During the last decade there has been a tendency on the part of the Church to emphasize local needs to the exclusion of the far reaches of the kingdom. Beautiful and expensive buildings have arisen all over the land, but there has not been a proportionate increase in the winning of souls to fellowship with Jesus. When we have said all that can justify, and there is much, this investment in the home land, we cannot forget there is in it a measure of selfishness that is deadening.

It is a true statement that the greatness of a man, or a Church, is measured by the way he relates himself to great issues. Some fail to recognize an issue at all. Some see it, but, appalled by that which is involved, do nothing about it. There are others who see and comprehend and dare with faith in self and in God to accept the challenge and direct the outcome of that issue. With such an issue is the Church of the living God faced today. A world is in the remaking. Missions is the effort of the Church to rightly relate itself to this issue. The more effective and influential ambassadors of any nation are the missionaries who carry to all parts of the world assurances of sympathy and brotherhood that break down all barriers of nation and race and class, the Church alone seeks to vitalize this idea of brotherhood. It is not surprising, then, that the Church visioning this sort of a program, that is conscious of its opportunity, is one that is aglow with life and the consciousness of power.

Cultivation Without Collection.

There is an oft-repeated criticism of the cultivation program that we must not ignore, and the only answer is to honestly face the criticism. Men have said again and again, "Let us have the cultivation, that is good, but be sure to separate it from a collection." There is the feeling that we are teaching our people that all cultivation, and even prayer, are made that we may the more easily raise a collection. We are forgetting that the offering is as much a part of spiritual cultivation as the review and estimating the facts that come from the field.

There are two things we need to keep in mind. First, if there was no collection there would be no time given to this cultivation program. Only the most daring and adventurous preacher and the one with the most Christ-like vision would dare ask that two months of the year be given to a study of the missionary program. It would fail for lack of an understandable motive. Second, there is no point to a cultivation program rich in factual, intellectual and inspirational values that issues in nothing. There is no reason to seek a man's conversion if there is to be no consecration of himself to the thing to which he is converted. Every high impulse and every great emotion, if conserved, must express itself in corresponding action. There would be lost to the Church and to the individual the sustaining character of the cultivation if the individual was not led to express himself in some sacrificial way. Out of it some will give their lives, others will give their money, but all must give something if there is to be point to the program.

Through this cultivation the Church is coming to be missionary. It is presenting the larger possibilities in the Master's service, and there is a quickening of the pulse as we see what can be done and what there is to do in this service. All along the line there is a renewed interest. Not only is the local Church participating in an enthusiastic way in missionary activity, but every interest of the Church is quickened. All collections are easier and evangelism comes to be the most natural interest locally.

The danger and all the criticism spring out of doing this work imperfectly. If a collection is asked for upon the strength of partial cultivation, there is sure to arise the cry, "The Church has become a collecting agency." If it is done less than enthusiastically, the Church will not take it seriously and will do less about it. After a rather careful observation, I am sure nothing more beneficial was ever asked of the local Church. To discontinue it would be a most serious mistake.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ONLY CHRISTIANS THERE.

Some years ago a noted evangelist was leading a great meeting in a Church of one of the denominations, and several denominations were participating—Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and others. The spirit of harmony throughout the meeting had been beautiful, and when in the meeting the audience seemed to be of one heart and one mind, the evangelist, who chanced to be a Methodist, cried out from the pulpit, "What has become of our denomniational names and our sectarian differences now? Right now I think we are all Christians." This declaration, in a meeting where brotherly love prevailed and the presence of the Spirit was evident, struck a responsive chord and all present seemed to realize that they were of one accord, that Jesus was lifted up in the midst, and that they were all willing just to bear and to wear His name—Christian.

This was possibly not original with our Methodist brother, since the father and founder of Methodism, Rev. John Wesley, had previously given voice to the identical idea. This incident is again going the rounds of the press, and, we presume, is true. But whether true or not in Wesley's actual experience, it conveys a truth that is worth meditating upon and making our own:

John Wesley once, in a crisis of the night, found himself, as he thought, at the gates of hell. He knocked and asked who were within. "Are there any Protestants here?" he asked. "Yes," was the answer; "a great many." "Any Roman Catholics?" "Yes, a great many." "Any Church of England men?" "Yes, a great many." "Any Presbyterians?" "Yes, a great many. "Any Wesleyans?" "Yes, a great many."

Disappointed and discouraged, especially at the last reply, he traced his steps upwards, and found himself at the gates of Paradise, and he repeated the same questions. "Any Wesleyans here?" "No." "Any Presbyterians?" "No." "Any Church of England men?" "No." "Any Roman Catholics?" "No." "Whom have you, then, here?" he asked in astonishment. "We know nothing here," was the reply, "of any of the names you have mentioned. The only name of which we know anything here is 'Christians.' We are all Christians here, and of those we have a great multitude, which no man can number, of all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues."

The world has gone a long way since Wesley's day. Missionaries have multiplied on the home and on the foreign field, and millions who knew not our Christ in His day have come to know Him, and, knowing Him, they are not ashamed to wear His name.

Recently a very intelligent lady of another Church approached the writer and said: "I understand, sir, you are a Christian?" "Very well," the writer replied, "what of it?" "Well," said the good lady, "I thought all of us Church members claim to be Christians." "I thought so myself," was the reply. Any one wonders why all who so claim are not content just to wear the name "Christian," and then get busy in believing on the Lord Jesus Christ and, having done this, unite our efforts and our zeal in making Him known to a Christless world. One decides that John Wesley, whether awake or asleep, was right when he heard "none but Christians in heaven." And the biggest business of earth is that of preaching and teaching the message of Christ so that all the world may hear of Him and have the opportunity at least of embracing, and, if they will, of just wearing His blessed name—Christian.

CIVIC AND INDIVIDUAL RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Our esteemed contemporary, the News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C., carried this introductory paragraph to a recent editorial: "Chicago cannot pay its officials or school teachers. The financial situation in Birmingham is bad. Atlanta has had to indict some of its officers. Philadelphia city government is notoriously rotten. The same thing is true in other cities, proving that Mr. Bryce was right when he said city administration was the weakest point in American government."

Concluding the editorial thus introduced, this question is propounded, "When will people wake up to civic righteousness?" This question is very easily answered, even if the problem raised is not so easy solved. Here is the unmistakable answer: People will wake up to civic righteousness just as soon as, and no sooner than, they wake up to individual righteousness. The current can rise no higher, and furnish no other volume, than its source. The source of civic righteousness is individual righteousness. The city of Chicago, and the city of Atlanta, and the city of Philadelphia are suffering collectively that which millions of individuals are suffering, viz: spending that which they have not, and living beyond their income, and handling their affairs on a basis of borrowed and anticipated capital which has not been earned. Our wants have far outstripped our earnings, and our expenditures have gone beyond our incomes. This is poor economy, and more than that. It is an economy based on wrong, or loose, morals. Our moral standards have broken down under the impact of increased and multiplying desires.

What the cities mentioned need is not so much civic righteousness as individual righteousness. And this may be said of social movements and activities. The "social gospel" resolves itself into an individual gospel, and civic righteousness is depended upon individual righteousness. Our time needs a gospel that will give the individual a higher sense of morality, justice, economy and righteousness; and our cities and our country need individuals who will count it poor economy, as well as bad morals, to spend more than they make and to waste that which they have not, and to indulge in the imaginary assets which are in very truth liabilities. The one who preached the Sermon on the Mount, and was later nailed to the cross, set a standard, and lived up to it, which individuals may measure their own lives by and, in the light of that life, establish personal righteousness out of which will come civic righteousness.

CONGREGATIONALIST-HERALD MERGER.

These two great national Church papers are now one. The first issue of the merged publication is dated March 6th and is before us. On its front cover page are carried the fine faces of Dr. Frank G. Coffin and Mr. Hermon Eldredge, who are listed as "associate editors of the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, representing the General Convention of the Christian Church." The further announcement is that the Congregationalist will be continued as formerly, with Dr. Coffin and Mr. Eldredge joining the staff as special contributors. In this first issue a "cordial welcome" is sent out to the united brotherhood of the readers hitherto of the two papers, but henceforth of the one paper, by Rolfe Cobleigh, business manager, which welcome closes with the petition in which all Congregationalists and Christians could and should join: "May we all work together heartily and effectively for our common cause of Christian service, and for the support and extension of the circulation of our one great Church and home journal. Its effectiveness will be limited or enlarged by the number who read it."

In the first issue of the new publication, Dr. W. G. Sargent, of our Providence, R. I., Church, has a gripping article on "The Newer Freedom." Mr. Hermon Eldredge presents in the same issue a very graphic history for the past 121 years of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, the face of Elias Smith, founder and first editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, being given, with a picture of the house in Portsmouth, N. H., where the first issue of the Herald was printed. And then the fine face of our late, lamented and distinguished editor, Dr. Alva M. Kerr. There are other contributions from the pens of our Christian brethren, and then follows two editorials about the merger from the pen of the distinguished editor-in-chief, Rev. Wm. E. Gilroy, D. D.

The merged publication covers a wide field of Church activity and interests, and its first issue sets a high standard, indeed, in the field of religious journalism. Christian Sun readers who desire in their homes a religious publication of national and international scope and significance in matters that pertain to enlarging the kingdom of our Lord and building up the cause of righteousness through the Church, may obtain the publication for $3.00 a year. The address and place of publication is 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

WILL THE NATIONS HAVE PEACE?

We are laying much store by the naval disarmament London conference and praying devoutly, unnumbered Christians are, that much may come of the conference and that the way may be prepared there for permanent peace among the nations. For many years it has been our wont to pray for peace and to acclaim peace in public utterance in pulpit and in press, and to assert that the nations were becoming more friendly. But our prayers and proclamations are not enough. We must do something about it. It may be rather amazing to CHRISTIAN SUN readers to know that while the nations are publicly acclaiming peace, they are vigorously and persistently arming for war.

Hon. David Lloyd George, Great Britain's war-time premier, said a while ago in the British House of Commons, "The armaments of France are four times as powerful as those of the great German army of 1914." France's standing army today consists of 666,945 men, with 5,010,000 reserves. We are advised that Russia's standing army is only slightly smaller than that of France, consisting, as it does, of 658,000 men under arms, and with a larger reserve than France, that of 5,425,000. Italy's standing army reaches 346,-990, and their reserves, 2,995,236,, and, in addition to this, all the boys of Italy are enlisted in a militia. Jugo-slavia has a total army of 1,342,-000, with a militia consisting of all the boys and girls from the ages of seven to twenty. China's army has been increased from 400,000 to 2,500,-000. And Japan is prepared to put in the field an army of 2,138,000.

No wonder Mussolini, the dictator of Italy, says, "All the world is arming."

President Hoover is quoted as saying, "There are now in the world almost thirty million men under arms, including actual reservists, which is ten million more than before the war."

According to the League of Nations' Yearbook, it is costing Europe $3,500,000,000 to maintain its huge armies. What if this huge sum of money could be devoted to the task of propagating the gospel of the Prince of Peace and of proclaiming to the world His power to reach and to save, and of making known to men His program of peace, power and progress!

Is it likely that the nations will have peace while they prepare for war? While the States and the nations are spending their billions in preparation to kill, to wound and to destroy, the Church of the Living God is called upon to carry the message of the Prince of Peace to the uttermost parts. The world's hope today is not in her standing armies, nor in the millions expended for offense and defense, but in that army marshaled under the banner of the cross, an army which is sustained and supported through service and sacrifice in and of the Church. IX. TEMPERANCE.

II.

The wise man is he who can see results before they come. The fool can see the error when the business has failed, or he has become a drunkard, or he has gone too far to retrace his steps. No man is in so much spiritual danger as the one who thinks he can indulge in what has ruined others without moral hazard. The only safe ground is "abstinence from things harmful," and that by the spirit of the Lord. This principle must be accepted before "temperance in all things" can be attained. If temperance is moderation in evil, then one might cheat or defraud in moderation, one might slander his neighbor occasionally, one might lie or steal when it served his interests; he might curse and swear when provoked, or take human life when insulted. Total abstinence from hurtful or sinful things is the only position that is tenable.

Moderation in innocent things is Christian temperance. Here is a list of characters that shall not inherit the kingdom of God: "Neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners." Christianity exposes all the vices of society and all the sins of the heart. Excesses in the lawful indulgences of life are intemperate. "Let your moderation be known unto all men" was Paul's exhortation to the Philippians. Moderation in our thoughts about others, in our words to others, in dealing with men, in our promises, in our ambitions, in our desires and efforts for wealth, in our criticism of officials, in our judgment of society, in our indulgences of body, mind, and heart. The angry waves of the swift-flowing river whirl and fret and dash furiously against the huge rock that stands in midstream without excitement or agitation, because of its great strength. If we have the Divine Spirit in our own, the world may rage about us in vain. The life is safe so long as the currents of the world do not enter it, but only surge around it. The progress made toward sobriety within this century has been wonderful, and tells for the work of the Spirit of God in society. Sidney Smith said that at the beginning of his life, "even in the best society, one-third of the gentlemen, at least, were always drunk." Now, drinking at public tables is the exception and not the rule. In nearly all the States the divorce laws specify one ground for divorce to be "habitual drunkenness." The exceptions are Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia. But these laws show the light in which society, in its civil form, begins to regard the use of intoxicants. Legislation is already at work with this giant evil. High license, local option, all the regulating efforts prove that the State recognizes its power and danger. But, for the Christian, law is vain—the Spirit of God does the work efficiently.

Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes was the first lady of the White House to banish intoxicants from the executive mansion, and I believe it has been sustained by those who have succeeded her. The Secretary of State tried to persuade Mrs. Hayes that it was an insult to the representatives of foreign nations not to offer them the wines they were accustomed to drink. But she could not be changed. "I have young sons who have never tasted liquor," she said, "and they shall not receive from my hand or with the sanction that its use in our family would give, their first taste of what might prove their ruin." "What I wish for my own sons, I must do for the sons of others." All is not rotten in Washington.

Mrs. Cleveland is an abstainer and a "Good Templar." I wish I had time to consider adulterations and "fortification." I will mention a few substances used in adulteration and multiplication of wines: benzine, brimzone, creosote, copperas, cachineal, elderberry, essence of absinthe, fusil oil, glue, glycerine, heubane, hartshorn, indigo, muriatic acid, marble dust, nutgalls, opium, prusic acid, strychinine, sulphuric acid, tansy, and wormwood. Other poisons are taken to intoxication as chloral, chlorodyne, chloroform, cocaine, and ether. All these, except cocaine, contain alcohol as a chief constituent. The great principle of Bible temperance is what the Church must maintain. No one who is informed as to duty and loyal to the gospel, and filled with the Spirit can tolerate excess in what is good or indulge in what is bad. The dignity of this grace is seen in Paul's discourse before Felix. He reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come; Felix trembled and answered, "Go thy way." This trial of essential features in Christian truth went like an arrow to guilty life. But temperance here ranks in importance with righteousness and future judgment. It was the sharpest application of the gospel I have ever read.

Drusilla was at the side of Felix. He "preached on justice to a venal officer, on chastity to an adulterous pair, and on the future judgment to an unjust judge." The Holy Spirit applied the word to the heart of Felix. Let us close with a contrast. Belshazzar, in his banquet hall with a thousand of his lords. Brilliant lights shine on decorated walls, while jewels of rarest values reflect gleams of beauty that rest on loveliest forms. The wealth and beauty of Babylon are there. The golden vessels which his father, Nebuchadnezzar, had taken from the temple of God were there, filled with sparkling wine, from which the rank and beauty drank with rapturous delight. They rioted in the pleasures of gayest hours run mad with wine. It was a scene of grace and liveliness, and laughter rang tumultously through the halls. But silence deep as death came when the fingers of a man's hand wrote mysterious words on the wall. The winebibbers turn pale; Belshazzar trembles with fear. The queen attempts to calm him by telling of a man in whom is the spirit of the holy gods. Daniel, the temperate man, who refuses to drink of the king's wine, was introduced. He stands in the presence of the mystery and that reeling crowd as strong as the mountains.

Temperance is right, and right is strength. He had intercourse with God. The drunken man had not. He interpreted the strange words. The king was found wanting. The man who drinks is always found wanting. His kingdom was to pass to another. That is the history of drink. He had reached the end. Belshazzar was slain that night, Daniel was clothed with scarlet, a chain of gold was placed upon his neck, and he was made the third ruler in the kingdom. W. W. S.

INTEREST IN RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

Religion is a subject of increasing public interest and the Bible is still the most popular Book in the world, pessimists to the contrary notwithstanding. Else, how can one explain the steady stream of books from the great publishing houses of Europe and America? These houses publish books to sell. They reject manuscripts, however meritorious, for which they believe there would not be a profitable market. It is significant, therefore, that trade reports show that religious books rank next to fiction in the total number of volumes published in the United States. It is not surprising that fiction headed the list with 1,135 novels, but religion came next with 776, a number which exceeded sociology, economics, biography, drama, poetry and books for children.

Still more significant is the steady increase in proportion as compared with former years. In the year 1880, the number of religious books published in America was 239, in 1900 it was 448, in 1920 it was 665, and in 1928 it was 776. The advance outstripped that of books on other subjects, in 1900 religious books having been sixth on the list while in 1928 they were second. "And yet," observes the editor of the Federal Council Bulletin, who cites these facts, "some people talk as if general concern for religion disappeared with our fathers!"

We are impressed not only by the number but by the character of the books on religion that come to our desk. Some indeed are of inferior grade or advocate vagaries of belief. These are exceptions. Most of the books make no sensational appeal but are serious discussions of weighty themes, the kind of books that demand the thoughtful study of thoughtful men and women. Many have already been reviewed in former numbers of the Review in the section headed "Books Worth Reading." Now several more are before us, and partly to illustrate our point and partly to emphasize their value, we refer to them in this article.—Missionary Review.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The grindstone stands for all kinds of sharpening instruments. Turning the grindstone is not an attractive job for a boy, but many boys have learned good lessons by turning a grindstone. One good thing is that the axe, the scythe, the knife, or any other dull instrument, can do better work after the grind, and the work is easier on the user of the tool. Dull times come as well as dull tools; and when dull times come, people have to go to the grindstone. This nation is there now. Tools grow dull by non-use as well as by long use. Rust dulls as well as use. No matter what causes dull times, it brings folks to hard pressing and turning for the time. Hard work simply to prepare for work is the school in which people learn the lesson necessary to accomplish the best results.

The tools of progress are dull now. It is not necessary to find out the real cause; enough to know that the axe is dull—the times are dull and people have got to stop and sharpen out the edges of business for new movements and better results. It is not a loss of time to stop and do the drudgery of turning the grindstone. There is no pay in grinding the axe, but there is good preparation. There is no pay in the drudgery of dull times; but theer is good preparation for careful work when the edge is on and the day opens for service. People are in the backyard now planning for economy as well as hard work. Doing nothing is the hardest work known to man; and many are at that hard job now. But after the axe is sharp, the trees will fall, the mills will start, and pay-day will return. People are learning now how to live on less, and they are planning to save when business brightens up again. Economy is a lesson that is difficult to learn when business is prosperous; but it is easy to learn when times are hard. If people do not learn that lesson now, they will never win a diploma in thrift.

Religion has its hard times as well as business, and they do not come at the same time nor under the same conditions. Religion runs lowest when business runs highest, and religion runs highest when business is lowest. Poverty awakens in human hearts a sense of dependence upon God; people pray more when they are in trouble than when all goes well. It is sickness and death that cause people to look up to Him from whom all blessings flow. The wise man said, "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them" (Prov. 1:32). The dangerous experience in society is prosperity. When religion runs low in the congregation, it is time for a revival. The people realize their need of divine help. People send for the doctor when they are sick; for a lawyer when they do not know what to do; for Jesus when they find the world can not supply their spiritual needs. An automobile would not be safe without brakes. They are just as important as tires. Hard times are brakes on human progress, and hard times bring people to their senses and their cents-es.

ELON LETTER.

Old People not Out-of-Date.

We owe more to philosophy sometimes than we are aware. This is particularly true with reference to our debt to that class of philosophers who in recent years have given themselves to the study of the human mind. We sometimes refer to these philosophers as psychologists, sometimes as philosophers, simply, and sometimes as metaphysicians. For our purpose at this time, we shall not make any distinctoin among these types. Our debt, however, to all three of them is great.

When I was a student in college, some thirty years ago, and studied psychology, we were taught to believe that when the twenty-fifth birthday had been reached it was impossible to introduce new ideas into the mind. A man might be capable of elaborating the ideas and ideals which he had up to that time acquired, but it was considered beyond the realm of reasonable possibility to believe that he could change his fundamental attitudes, or acquire new learning. At this particular dead-line, the mind was supposed to have set like cement.

One of the chief debts which we owe to modern psychology is the utter discrediting of this view. A man may learn, and does learn, as long as he lives. Some minds are able to learn much more readily than others, but the possibility of learning is with us. We have learned from the study and investigation of the philosophers that this possibility is with us as long as life continues.

The modern philosopher divides life into three age groups—childhood, youth and adulthood.

Childhood is divided into three age groups—early childhood, from 3 to 6; middle childhood, from 6-9, and later childhood, from 9 to 12.

Preceding childhood is the period of three years known as infancy. The characteristics of each age group have been studied and patiently cataloged, and the findings written into books. The wise parents and teachers acquaint themselves with the facts which may be had in these important volumes and adapt their methods to the age level, and so have achieved exceptional results.

Youth, sometimes known as adolescence, also falls into three special age groups, from 12 to 24—early adolescence, from 12 to 16, which witnesses and records the ripening of the physical powers; middle adolescence from 16 to 20, which witnesses and records the awakening of the emotional life; and later adolescence from 20 to 24, which witnesses and records the ripening of the intellectual faculties.

The philosophers have rendered a great service by their study of the period of youth or adolescence. They first dealt with this period of life and have rendered a great service to mankind by their discoveries. For example, they have shown that there is no need to sow wild oats, as was supposed formerly, to be essential as young people passed from childhood to adulthood through the intricate maze of the period of upheaval known as adolescence. They have also demonstrated the value of Christian nurture as being unmistakable in its ministry to the life and character of youth. Out of the patient investigations of the philosophers who have specialized in the province of youth, there have appeared three outstanding general principles. The first of these is that every youth is to be individually studied. The second is that every youth is to be individually instructed. The third is that the finest method of character-building is personal association with persons of character.

Our chief concern at this time is with what these philosophers have discovered with reference to adulthood. Adults are not a single group, but four separate and distinct groups, according to the study of these philosophers.

The first period of adult life which they have carefully distinguished lies between the years of 25 to 40. It is characterized by a driving energy and results in the establishment of the individual economically and socially. The age of 40 is a dead-line in a very real sense, for at this age disappointment in the success that has been achieved drives many an adult to crime or suicide.

The second period of adulthood extends from the 40th to the 60th year, and has been shown to be a time of tremendous production in the normal life of a successful individual. During this period a man is in possession of his fully developed powers and produces in whatever realm of life his interest may lie at a prodigious rate and with surprising excellence of result.

The third period of adult life reaches from the 60th to the 75th year. We were taught a few years ago by a distinguished Canadian physician, Dr. Osler, that when a man reached the age of 60 he should be chloroformed. Immediately the psychologists started to work to discover if Dr. Osler were a quack or a competent authority, and they have shown by scientific study that the fifteen years from 60 to 75 are characterized by a great productivity, somewhat conservative, but that man's capability of workmanship does not lose its luster or its splendor during these years.

The fourth period of adulthood begins at the 75th year. It is the golden sunset period of life's wisdom and sane counsel, and some of the best work that men do has been produced during these years of life's ripe wisdom and sound judgment.

A very interesting study of 100 industrial leaders has just been concluded by the research department of the Sherman Corporation, a firm that specializes in industrial and management engineering. They did not confine their research to their own business, however, but selected 100 men who direct the destinies of large industrial corporations in the United States. Their discoveries are most unique.

For example, only 22 per cent of the 100 outstanding industrial executives received only a common school education. Only 14 per cent terminated their educational preparation at the completion of high school. The remaining 64 per cent attended college, and 3 per cent of them took advanced degrees.

Only four of the group are of foreign birth. Twenty-nine per cent were born in the country; 40 per cent were born in cities of over 100,000; 71 per cent originated in communities of 5,000 population or over.

But the most significant thing of all that this research disclosed was found in connection with the ages of these men. The research clearly showed that from 50 to 70 are the years when large leadership possibilities come to fruition. Only two of the group of 100 were found in the decade from 30 to 40. Thirteen outstanding executives were found in the decade from 40 to 50. Thirty-four in the decade from 50 to 60; thirty-five in the years from 60 to 70; fourteen in the decade from 70 to 80; and two of the greatest executives in American industrial life today are beyond 80 years of age.

If any one supposes that adults cannot learn and that persons who have been estimated to be old and incapable of great executive achievement, according to the philosophers and also according to researches and experience, his judgment is in sore need of revision.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF GIVING.

By Dr. S. L. Beougher.

Man is born as a receiver, and he is sent out into the world to be as large a receiver as he can be. Born upon this principle, educated to it, and sent forth into the world, how is it possible for an honest man to say, "It is more blessed to give than to receive"? We think it possible for just men made perfect, for the higher ranks of intelligences in the spiritual world, for natures free from the domination and free from the taint of selfishness; but it seems to be an impossible mood for ordinary men, and yet the readiness of mankind to deny themselves in order that other people may have the pleasure of giving is nearly universal.

The Lord's words do not mean that the giver shall not be a receiver. The sea is a great giver. It pours the fullness of its majestic life, incessantly into the heavens, and descends in due time to keep our beautiful world alive. The sea is also a great receiver, for whither do the rills, brooks, streams and rivers go but to feed the great sea? If the sea can say, "It is more blessed to pour out than to absorb," it is a Christian sea. Our planet is a great giver, and yet it is a great receiver. Look at its mineral wealth, its coal, iron, silver, gold, precious stones, its forests, its continents, with their deep rich soil, how it shelters and feeds all the forms of being that live upon it; what a royal, ceaseless, glorious giver this old planet is. And yet what a receiver it is—forever rolling in sunshine, and incessantly there are pouring into it tides of heat, life, wealth and power. But as long as the old planet can say, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," it is a Christian planet.

The great leaders of mankind have been so because they were givers. Take that great poem which man cannot let alone, Dante's marvelous "Comedy"; what a stupendous fabric it is! what a gift by a great soul to mankind! Here are the plays of Shakespeare. They are the outpourings, the creations, the gifts of a great spirit to the world. Here is "Paradise Lost." What an immense and majestic giver Milton was when he sent that epic forth to quicken the soul in the great march of humanity. All these men are givers, but think what receivers they were! Homer swept up into his soul a whole civilization—its pathos, its sweetness, its sorrows, its sad hope, its lightheartedness, its deep and trembling fear: all these quivered and lived and struck peans and dirges through his own spirit before he began to sing. Dante drew up into his own soul the life of the middle ages, absorbed it, understood it, lived it, made it his own, before he gave forth his great poem. Milton borrowed from every language and from every race. Every line in that poem seems to be colored in the highest wisdom and dyed in the best passion of mankind. It is so with all the great intellectual leaders in literature, in philosophy, in science, in political creation. But as long as they said, "It is more blessed to create than to retain, to give out than to take in," their mood is in essential accord with the words of Jesus.

Jesus was a Supreme Giver. He gave His mind, heart and soul, with all their issues, to the service and help of the race; and we do well to signalize His supremacy by His gift of all that He was to the world. But there is another side to it, for Jesus Christ is as supreme in His receptivities as He is in His gifts. Think what nature was to Him—the birds of the air, the flowers of the field, the sea and sky, the river and the meadow, the hillside and the vineyard, and all the loveliness that lay beneath the beauty of the Syrian heavens. Think of what human society was to Him! There were fatherhood, motherhood and childhood, all dropping their divine meaning into His intelligence, each deposited its pathos into His unforgetting and ever-receptive soul. Man's works and ways, the labor and sorrow, the despair and the hope, the death and the life, the love and the tragedy of the world, all went to enrich the soul of Jesus. Above all, God was continually feeding Him, pouring into Him, through service, like a sea into the river of His life. He was the greatest Giver, and He was also the greatest Receiver, and as long as He was able to say that it was more blessed to pour out the good that came to Him than to take it in, He was living in profoundest harmony with the ideal of his own saying.

The great giver must be a great receiver. Tides of wealth coming in are not inconsistent with the principle of giving and receiving. All that this principle demands is that the tide of wealth going out shall give more joy than the tide of wealth coming in. This does not mean that the giver shall exhaust himself. Take the head of a great university, or a great business firm, or a great banking establishment; consider a great judge, or the President of the United States. Expenditure should be balanced by income over the whole life of man. No one who understands the public need desires to see any man who is a man of value exhaust his power. The waste of the day should be restored by food and sleep and by the occasional holiday. Premature death from overactivity even in the kingdom of God is not a good thing. Our Lord, under the pressure of His work, retired to the mountain and to the desert and the home of friends, to be refreshed and renewed by God, what he had wasted in serving mankind.

No one should ask of any man that he give on any level—spiritual, intellectual or financial—to exhaustion. The only instance in the New Testament of a person who gave too much is the widow who gave two mites—all her living—so there is no need for immediate sermon on "The Exhaustion of Giving." The receiver who is a lover must be a giver, and the giver becomes a lover through his gifts. Who is the lover of his country? The man who has done the most for it. We love the Church because of what others have done for it—service that no money could pay, a service that consumed the brain and drained existence of its vitality. We love and honor the Church for all the givers and servants who have preceded us, but there is no calamity equal to that of living on the resources of the past and adding little or nothing from those of the present. While we admire the noble services of other generations, we must not become insensible to the obligation of our own.

Smaller income is no excuse for withholding our gifts, for greater income must not be expected to bear the whole burden. Let each member of the Church bear his own burden; let each count the opportunity to give himself and of his substance as the indispensable privilege of Christian manhood and womanhood. Without that privilege, Christian living is an impossibility. "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye, through His poverty, might become rich." These words are the perpetual comfort of the generous disciple, but they sound to the stingy soul an eternal alarm.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(March.)

Saviour of all, Thou dost bid us "Go." In mercy plead Thou for us that we may be swifter to learn the whole meaning of that command and obey it. As the efficacy of Thy blood is not measured by the Palestine path of Thy earthly journeyings, but reaches "unto the uttermost," even so does the Holy Spirit, not limited by the traverse of our feet, but according to the equipment which we supply, go for us "into all the world." Of whatever we are or possess, God help us not to withhold, but to give for others as we ourselves have received. In Jesus' name. Amen.

WILL CHRISTIANS CELEBRATE?

The Federation of the Women's Boards of Missions, along with scores of denominations and thousands of Churches, are calling attention to the proper celebration of the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost. This is indeed a holy theme, and should be approached and observed by none other than by holy methods and measures. Quoting a statement from the Federation of Women's Boards, we get at the heart of the matter:

"This year of our Lord 1930 marks the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost. After the Holy Spirit, promised by our risen Lord, had come in power, the witnessing of His disciples began in Jerusalem, and extended through Judea into Europe, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. No method or system can take the place of that outlined by our Lord and Saviour, and proven by His apostles and messengers. From it came the Church, and through the Church will come the kingdom of God."

Out of Pentecost came the Church, and back of Pentecost was the commission and program of the Church as laid down by our Lord, following His resurrection: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." This commission was given and entrusted to the Church, born on the Day of Pentecost, and from that day till this the Church has been entrusted with this commission.

The Church is the only institution undertaking this task and making an endeavor to carry out this program. There are scores and hundreds of agencies, orders, benevolent and fraternal, and states, lending a more or less liberal hand to charitable activities, to the work of relieving human suffering, caring for the poor and the needy, assisting in the world's work of human welfare and human uplift; but in the work of preaching the gospel to every creature, carrying the saving message of our Lord to those who haven't that message, the Church goes alone. It is the one institution through all the ages that has proclaimed the message of His undying love, of His saving grace, of His redeeming power. The one business of the Church, and that in which no other organization is engaged, is that of lifting up the Christ and of carrying the message of the uplifted and the risen Lord to hearts that are breaking and to souls that are perishing without Him.

There can be no more fitting way, therefore, to prepare, observe and celebrate the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost than by making sacrificial offering, and rendering genuine heart's service, in His name and for His sake, that His gospel may be carried to the uttermost parts. We know not how better to express our own thought in this matter than to quote further from the marvelous appeal to the world set forth and sent out by the Federation of Women's Boards:

"The way of the cross is the only way by which He can be lifted up. His holy life as an example will not save the world. This year the great host of Christians throughout the world who love Him may claim again His power through the Holy Spirit, and carry His message to those who have not heard. Christian women and girls of all nations may be united in a world fellowship of prayer and witnessing for Christ. This is our supreme and immediate task. The majority of men, women and children in all lands are still without a personal knowledge of Jesus as their Saviour. Shall we begin today to tell the simple story of Jesus and His love to friends and neighbors, with the eagerness of the early Christians after the Day of Pentecost, and ask those whom we tell to tell others?

"As we participate in this fellowship of prayer and witnessing, we may confidently expect to experience, as did the disciples in the upper room, surprising revelations of divine grace and power. 'The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, that there may come a revival of the spirit of witnessing, that every follower of Christ may be a joyful bearer of the good news to others.'"

If Pentecost is properly observed and celebrated there will come a spiritual awakening such as the Churches and the world have not witnessed in recent years. But this awakening can only come as we lay ourselves with our sacrificial service and offerings upon the altar of our Lord to be used in carrying and sending His message of love and life to those who are perishing without it.

No one has better set forth the part that we, as individuals, are to have in this than the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Romans: "How, then, shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?" Shall we go in person and purse and prayer to bear witness of our Lord, who alone is able to reach and redeem an unsaved world? J. O. A.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

District rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference will convene at 10 A. M., unless otherwise announced, and will be held as follows:

Guilford (Rockingham), Reidsville, N. C.—Tuesday, April 8th, Mrs. L. P. Wicker, superintendent, Greensboro, N. C.;

Halifax, Lynchburg, Va.—Thursday, April 10th, Mrs. A. Hayes, superintendent, Virgilina, Va.

Randolph, Randleman, N. C.—Saturday, April 12th, Mrs. I. H. Faust, superintendent, Ramseur, N. C.

Alamance, Elon College, N. C.—Tuesday, April 15th, Mrs. J. W. Patton, superintendent, Elon College, N. C.

Lee (Chatham), Sanford, N. C.—Wednesday, April 16th, Mrs. Ralph Ross, superintendent, Sanford, N. C., Route 5.

Durham (Wake) Catawba Springs, N. C.—Friday, April 18th, Mrs. G. H. Leonard, superintendent, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Vance (Warren), Pope's Chapel—Saturday, April 19th, Miss Margaret Alston, superintendent, Henderson, N. C., Route 1.

NOTICE.

The missionary rally of the Franklin District will be held at Mt. Carmel Christian Church, Walters, Va., on Thursday, 10 A. M., April 3rd. Theme for study: "Builders in a New Day." We hope to have a large number present.

MRS. W. D. HARWARD,
District Superintendent.

TEN HELPS FOR THE PASTOR.

1. Give your pastor a large place in your daily prayers. This will help you and him and your mutual relations.

2. Have confidence in him and in his ability to succeed under divine direction.

3. Stand by him and co-operate with him in his plans for progress.

4. Stand up for him when he is criticised and talk up his good qualities in the community.

5. However new and different his ideas may seem, give them a fair, unprejudiced hearing. If they are untenable, talk them over privately with him.

6. Help to preserve his hours of study for him. Do not let it become necessary for him to be a parish errand-boy for all of the Church organizations.

7. Tell him about it when he preaches well. This will result in more good preaching.

8. See that the comforts of life necessary to his greatest efficiency are provided for him, and that his salary is paid promptly, so that he may preserve his own credit.

9. Let your criticisms of him be to his face, and then always in love and helpfulness.

10. Promote co-operation for his administration in all departments of the Church—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR MARCH.

"Prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

Song—Prayer—Business.

1. Devotional period—"The Sixth Pillar."
2. Exercise—"A Tale of Three Boxes."
3. Mite-box opening.
4. Current news.
5. Heart-to-heart message.

As has been stated so often within the past six months, our major emphasis in this year's program is upon the spiritual life—a personal walk with our Lord.

1. The devotional theme for March is "Worship," and as the basis of our study we are using the sixth and last pillar in our stewardship leaflet, "Some Stewardship Pillars."

"The stewardship of our substance leads us to the great and holy opportunity offered by the collection plate, when we can sit in the pews of the Churches and touch the whole world with our gifts and 'grow in this grace also'—the grace of giving. It is a real privilege to worship the Lord with our substance, and it is by the same token a sacred stewardship."

Following the suggested hymn, "O Worship the King," let the devotional leader introduce the thought of the meaning of the word worship, using the Scripture verses suggested in the blue leaflet: Prov. 3:9, 10; Psa. 98:8; 1 Cor. 16:1, 2, and Mal. 3:8.

The Scripture readings on "How to Worship with Our Gifts," with a one-minute comment on each, should be handed to eight different women at least a week in advance, if possible, in order that each may become familiar with her verse and be prepared with a thought on how to give—cheerfully, liberally, sacrificially, humbly, honorably, profitably, systematically, proportionately—whichever may be hers to discuss.

If "Joy to the World" can be sung with meaningful hearts, it will be easy to join in the circle of prayer following the suggestions given in the leaflet: "That we may admit God's ownership of our material possessions, enter into the riches of partnership with Him, make full acknowledgment of our stewardship, be ready always to render unto Him a proper account, develop our lives according to his plan, and grow in grace and knowledge, that we may enter into the full joy of stewardship by worshiping the Lord with self, service, and substance."

Some one may say that all this is impossible, that the ideal is too high, but men have attained it. John Eliot, the "apostle to the Red men," proved by practice as well as by precept that "prayer and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will accomplish anything."

2. The use of the time-honored mite-box is being revived in many sections, and, to satisfy a real demand made by many societies, provision has been made on this March program for a mite-box opening preceded by this impressive little triologue, found in the envelope of helps. This number should be assigned to three persons who will be willing to put the same preparation and originality into it that they would if they were to give it at the club or lodge. Surely our best is none too good for kingdom work.

3. It has been the plan this year to have the thankoffering envelopes received in November, as usual, at the special service arranged for that purpose, using the special program; then, in March, to have the mite-boxes brought in and their contents received, at which time the value of the use of the mite-box would be stressed. Use some original way to have the mite-boxes received and contents counted. Some societies have given their mite-boxes new and beautiful names, such as "blessing boxes," "glad boxes," "treasure chests," and the like. By some they are called their "penny-a-day boxes," and these make it the rule of their lives to place a penny a day in their boxes, with a prayer.

4. Read the Herald carefully this month, for the future holds some changes for our department. Of one thing we are certain, that our horizon is being extended to take in more of our Father's world.

5. This message will be sent to you if you are using the envelope of helps. This time it comes from the heart of our general secretary.

"You are earnestly invited to join with Christians of all lands in a world-fellowship of prayer on March 7, 1930, by attending the service in your community on that day; also to unite with others in daily prayer with one accord during this 1900th anniversary of Pentecost."

"Evening, and morning, and at noon will I pray . . . and He shall hear my voice."

For Young People's Societies.

My own Church and its overseas service.

Purpose: To emphasize the idea of sharing Christ with non-Christian lands as the most practical gesture toward world friendship.

Program:

1. Instrumental prelude (familiar missionary hymn).
2. Scripture: Psa. 67.
3. Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."
4. Scripture: Matt. 28:18-20.
5. Prayer.
6. Project committee report.
7. Overseas service of the Christian Church.
8. Discussion: "How Can I Help Our Work Overseas?"
9. Resolved.
10. Hymn: "My Jesus, I Love Thee" (one verse).

Scripture: John 21:15-17.

Circle of prayer.

Hymn: "I Love to Tell the Story" (first and third verses).

Suggestions:

Poster: Place pictures of people from various countries (to be found in periodicals or leaflets from Foreign Mission Department) upon the poster, with the words, "We Are Sharing Christ With These" (date, hour, place).

1-5. Service of worship, well-planned and worshipfully conducted.

6. The project committee will report ideas from last meeting, and will have secured copies of leaflet material from the Foreign Mission Department to add to the record book.

7. Progress toward union between the Congregational and Christian Churches is so promising when this program is being prepared (September, 1929) that it seems altogether certain young people of the two Churches will be working together in an overseas program by March. Full information on this part of the program may be secured from the Foreign Mission Department, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio.

8. See chapter XII, Y. and W. O. for material and suggestions.

9. Have each young person write out a resolution on the topic, "My own rightful part in the world service of the Church," to be given to the project committee, and copy retained by the individual.

For Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "Growth."

Quiet music: "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

Song: "We Thank Thee, O Our Father."

Call to worship: Prayer and offering song, same as last month.

Unison prayer.

Dear Father in heaven, we thank Thee for springtime and for the return of the birds, bearing their messages from other lands where they have spent the winter. We thank Thee for our Sunday School and Church and our Missionary Societies where we may learn of Thy other children, whom Thou dost love as dearly as us. Help us, Father, always to act like Thy children, to grow as Jesus grew, and to be kind and helpful to all boys and girls everywhere. Amen.

Song: "A Little Seed Came Through the Ground" (first book of Hymns and Worship).

If mission offering has not been taken in Sunday School or Church, be sure to see that your society takes an offering. If it is taken in other groups, do all you can to aid your children in joyful co-operative giving. Continue handwork project.

Closing song. Benediction.

Let us all heed Miss Carrie Robinson's suggestion as to sending a treasure chest to the Philippines. She will be glad to help any superintendent who will write to her.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XII—March 23, 1929.

Jesus Teaching and Healing.

Golden Text: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."—Matt. 7:7.

Lesson: Matt. 13:53-16:12.

Three chapters for one lesson make it impossible to do anything more than to pick out some of the "high spots" in these chapters and to sketch some of the important truths.

"Without honor among one's own folks" (Matt. 13:53-58). "Is not this the carpenter's son?" Because Jesus was one of the "home boys," the people could not account for His wisdom and His mighty works. He was not the first or the last man who was not appreciated by His own people. There seems to be something about familiarity that breeds a lack of appreciation. Many a young fellow who has been looked upon as a ne'er-do-well at home has made good when he went away.

"A prophet with backbone" (Matt. 14:1-13). John the Baptist was a prophet with backbone. He stood face to face with the king and told him that it was not right for him to have his brother's wife. It took courage to do that, and it eventually cost John his head. Preachers and teachers need a baptism of this same spirit to the end that they may denounce sin in both low and high places.

"Feeding the multitudes" (Matt. 14:14-22, 15:29-39). Matthew records two instances where Jesus fed the multitude. Certain suggestive truths are embodied in these accounts.

Jesus had compassion on the multitudes. Their needs touched His heart.

The disciples said, "Send them away"; Jesus said, "Give ye them to eat."

Jesus gave thanks for such meager resources as He had. He used what He had. He did things in an orderly way. "Make the people to sit down."

Jesus gave to the disciples, and through the disciples the multitude was fed.

All had enough. There was enough left over for the disciples, too.

Jesus showed economy. He instructed the disciples not to waste anything.

"Jesus, Master of natural forces" (Matt. 14:23-36). There are details in the story of Jesus walking on the sea and calming the storm that are difficult to understand if one approaches them from the human standpoint and undertakes to interpret them literally. But if one approaches them in the light of Jesus as the Supreme Miracle Himself, new light is shed upon them. Whatever else the story may mean, it is an attempt on the part of the gospel writer to show that Jesus was superior to and Master of natural forces. His reference to Jesus' healing miracles are evidence of His mastery over disease.

"Outward forms and inner spirit" (Matt. 15:1-20). The scribes and Pharisees were very much agitated because Jesus and His disciples did not punctiliously observe all the details of ceremonial washings before eating bread. To these sticklers for formality, this was not only irreligious; it was sinful. Jesus called attention to the fact that the most important thing in religion or in life was not what went into a person, but the spirit within a man. Correct observance of forms and ceremonies is not the ultimate test of a man's religious life. Men can honor God with their lips while their hearts are far from Him. Christianity is primarily a matter of possessing and expressing Christ's spirit.

"Small favors thankfully received" (Matt. 15:21-28). The story of the Syro-Phoenician woman has a touch of pathos and tenderness that is appealing. This woman was a foreigner and a heathen, but she had a vital faith in Jesus. She also had a fine spirit of humility. In what was almost a tragic way, she told Jesus that she would like to have the "crumbs" that fell from the table—the things which the Jews rejected and despised would be most acceptable to her. Her faith won her the victory. This story carried its silent rebuke of the Jews by showing how faith and humility were present in those whom they looked upon as outsiders.

"Signs of the Times" (Matt. 16:1-12). Then, as now, people wanted signs of the power of Jesus. There are multitudes who think that they would believe if they could have some "mighty work," some concrete "miracle." Jesus said that for those who had eyes to see there were signs enough. There were evidences on every hand that His spirit was at work in the world. It is even so today.

Teaching and healing, so the Master spent His days. Speaking here an immortal truth, stopping there to heal the sick, going about doing good. We become most like Him when we, too, go about doing good.

Leader's talk.

Prayer hymn—"Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

Talk or discussion on the following:

1. "The Barrier of Loose Conduct." The self-satisfied Christian is the Christian who is most likely to be careless in his conduct. He thinks he can do anything that others do and "get by with it." He is not careful about what he does and forgets that others are influenced a great deal by the things they see the Christian do. Not that the non-Christian should base so much on the conduct of the Christian. Christ is his example as He is ours. The non-Christian has no right to hide behind our weaknesses. There is no group all of whose members measure up. We judge a group by representative members, not by the weakest members. The non-professing Christian very often judges the Church by its weakest members. Let us be very sure of that fact. It behooves us, then, to be very careful that we are worthy examples.

2. "The Barrier of Personal Sins." Some are kept from accepting Christ because of personal sins. They feel that there are some things that a Christian cannot do. A Christian must give up questionable practices, harmful habits and all the things that hinder life at its best. We use the words "give up" in speaking of the changes that are made in one's life conduct when one becomes a Christian. But it is really not a matter of giving up anything. Real Christians want to do helpful things, not harmful ones. They have so many useful and helpful things to do that there is no time nor desire for questionable things. It is the task of the Church member to rid himself of personal sin and to live such an abundant life that others will feel that they are to gain infinitely by becoming Christians.

3. "Contention in the Church." Contention in the Church keeps people out of the Church. The habit of keeping up a continual quarrel or disturbance in the Church does not foster the right spirit in the Church. Those who spend their time fanning the fires of contention cannot be very much concerned about the welfare of non-Church members who might come into the Church. If they appear to be concerned and try to hide their quarreling from outsiders, they fail to do so. The outsider raises this question, "Am I not right in refusing to come into such a Church?"

4. "Hiding Our Abilities." One big barrier that keeps people away from Christ is the fact that Christians hide their talents. Some can sing, but refuse. Others can teach or lead in Church work, but say they have no time for it. All can witness for Christ by loving acts, but do we do it? Many of us as Church members are like salt that has lost its savor, or a light that is hid under a bushel. When we realize that thousands of men and women have accepted Christ because of a few spoken words or a kind act or the singing of a hymn, how can we be so selfish and unconcerned as to refuse to do out bit?

5. "Listening to Others." There are a few who do not feel free to become Christians because of parental objections. All of these people are not in Japan, or China, or far away. Some of them live next-door to us. Let us pray that the call of Christ may become so great that they can no longer refuse to accept Him. Still others cannot get around the barrier of scoffing friends. They are afraid they will be laughed at. They need the strength of a Christ.

6. "Material Things." Then there are the barriers of wealth, pleasure, and selfishness. Men feel that they must accumulate money at any cost; pleasure is a goddess to many; others cannot fulfill the requirement of forgetting self.

7. "Indifference of Christians." One of the biggest barriers in the way of people who should accept Christ is the indifference of Christians. We are blind to the real needs of men. If we could get away from the conception of life as material prosperity, we would see men as they really are, walking about in all their barrenness and wretchedness and sin. Under many a calm exterior, a soul is fighting for light and life. Men who appear strong in many things, often have to fight a battle against some one thing—drink, passion, or doubt. On every hand there are people struggling with selfishness and losing the battle. If we could only realize what a common thing temptation is! If we only saw the forces that are destroying character. If we only saw as Christ saw—that sin means separation from God, and that all men who are not Christ's are lost—we would all be personal workers.

Open discussion.

MY PRAYER.

Here's my heart, oh, gentle Saviour,
Make it Thy royal throne;
Rule in me as King and Shepherd,
Take my heart, it is Thine own.

Here's my life, oh, blessed Jesus,
Life that Thou didst give to me;
With Thy guiding hand to lead me,
Use it now, oh, Lord, for Thee.

Let not sin or selfish pleasure
Come into my heart, I pray;
Ever thoughtful, Lord, of others,
Help me live from day to day.

In each thought and word and action,
Make me willing, Lord, to say,
"Though the world may turn against me,
Saviour, Thou shalt have Thy way."

If Thy plan for me, dear Father,
Leads me for o'er land or sea,
Give me faith, I pray, to follow,
And to give my best to Thee.

If to stay at home and labor
Is my mission here below,
Help me give my all for Jesus,
And His love to others show.

Help me live today, tomorrow,
So my friends each day may see
That the life of joy and blessing
Is the life that's given to Thee.

—Virginia Hamilton.

BEING ABOVE ONE'S WORK.

"I certainly cannot understand Mrs. Warren," the girl said, her pretty brows lifted half in perplexity, half in disdain, as she watched the neighbor going home. "She is so quick-witted. You'd think she'd care for the best things—books and culture and all that—but she really seems to enjoy her housework and cooking more than anything else in the world. You saw how she was just now, as delighted over that new salad recipe you gave her as I should have been over a new thought."

The older woman, the girl's hostess, laughed as if something amused her; but tenderly, too, for she loved the girl. "Why shouldn't she enjoy her work first and most?" she asked. "It was what she was put into the world to do."

"But the kind of work," the girl protested—"just common cooking and dishwashing! She might have thoughts above it."

"What would you think of a lighthouse keeper who had 'thoughts above' cleaning lamps?"

"Oh, but that's different," the girl said quickly. "That's a matter of life and death to others."

Her friend shook her head. "No, dear, it isn't different. The task that God puts into one's hands always demands joy and enthusiasm. The problem is not one of having thoughts above one's work, but of lifting one's work to the level of one's greatest thoughts. Do you see?"—Author Unknown.

SABBATH WIDELY DESECRATED.

It hurts the heart of a real preacher to know that his members, and sometimes his officials, engage in business and recreational adventures on the Sabbath when he is trying to feed them on the bread of life and help them carry on the program of our Lord. Many of us are giving about all our energy to our own business and pleasure six days in the week, with little time for God in business or the home. When Sunday comes we more and more want to grab that day for business and pleasure and cut out God and His Church. The Sabbath is the one day set apart to save our own soul and help do the great business of the Church for the Lord God Almighty. And yet we are not willing to give God this day for service and worship.

A certain pastor writes: "I am not blind to the fact that too often the early summer months spoil the good religious habits of many a Church-goer. In one parish calling on a family I had not seen at Church for some weeks, the lady said: 'We have not been at Church lately; too many Sunday pictures. You can blame Mr. So-and-So and his boat.' She named one of the members of the official board. He goes on to say that he was seeking to interest a certain young man in the Church; having met him on the street, I said, "I missed you last Sunday.' 'Oh, I was playing off a tennis match with one of your trustees.' He answered with a twinkle in his eyes which was significant."—Richmond Christian Advocate.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

VESSELS OF GOLD AND SILVER.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God is to visit the fatherless and widows and to keep thyself unspotted from the world."—Jas. 1:27.

In the pursuance of our vocation, it becomes necessary for us to associate with ungodly persons. We cannot withdraw from them, however much we would like to do so. But that does not mean that we shall approve of their ungodliness and do what they are doing. It does not mean that we have any spiritual fellowship with them at all. Such do not belong together and the Christian does not cultivate the society of evil-doers.

The Christian who does cultivate unholy society becomes contaminated and he defiles the Christ, befouls the holy name of the Church, and the Lord Himself is dishonored. It is when and because one does a thing of this kind that he comes to feel that religion doesn't take and it means nothing to him.

Prayer.—God gives us the spirit of love, strength and wisdom to be inoculated against and adamant to the presence of sin. May we be vessels of gold and silver in the midst of our comrades and in our Father's house. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SPIRITUAL SPONGES.

"Every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand a weapon."—Neh. 4:17.

In the midst of every-day issues, duties, pleasures, triumphs and failures, joys and sorrows, and the many confusions, do you follow your course persistently, straight onward, in humility and love, holding fast to the faith you had in the beginning and keeping the goal of a noble life in Christ Jesus ever in view as the thing to be achieved? Do you try each day, like a man building a house, to select material for your spiritual dwelling that will make what you desire to have in the end in the kingdom of God?

Our lesson says nothing of sponges, but it enjoins us to absorb into our lives daily all of the good there is for us until we shall be saturated in every part for God's service and glory. We are to be so determined in this that we shall not be blown about by every kind of doctrine, or tossed to and fro as waves, or carried away by the slight and craftiness of men. We are told not to retreat the breadth of a hair from that which in our hearts we know to be right, but in every way serving one another.

Prayer.—Dear Father, give us the strength, give us Thy word and spirit, give us grace, and the body of Christ to labor on, however dark the outlook. Let Thy truth and love penetrate our souls until we shall be filled for Thy service and for Thy kingdom. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A LESSON OF LIFE.

"Whatsoever is right I will give you."—Matt. 20:4.

The duties of the Christian is described here as being like a man in a vineyard, and he is plainly told that the idea is not the pay. It is service and the ultimate is the fruit of the vineyard. The service is to the Lord and the fruit is the promotion of righteousness which is the kingdom of God. Only they who work in this spirit are really laborers in the vineyard.

There may be many enrolled in the company, but their own personal gains is all they have in mind and they are willing to procure these gains at the expense, even the failure and consequent misery of others. God calls us to the vineyard not to the greedy getting of gold.

Let not the unequal pay of the parable worry you. It is the parable of time and opportunity. Some come into the vineyard early in life; others in youth; others later, and some in late life. It is a great blessing to come early and give a whole life in love for the Master. It is not the fault of the Lord that they all do not. They mistake themselves when they say no man has hired them. The Lord wanted them early, but they would not.

When they do come He accepts them, and the full hire is in the blessing of a pure soul which works for a full harvest and finally gets it. Let every one give thanks when others reach this goal.

Prayer.—O Lord God, speak, then, to our souls and teach us the supreme lessons of life. Call us to Thy service, make us ready, reserve us from pride, self-righteousness and envy. Amen.

THURSDAY.

KEEPING IN THE RIGHT PATH.

"Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things."—1 Cor. 9:25.

It is a great thing to get out of the wrong way and get in the right way. I know of no greater satisfaction, except this, to realize a change from hell's way to heaven's way. This is the greatest thrill of life. If there is a greater blessing still, it is this: never quit the road until we reach the goal.

In athletics there is a prize for the winner of the race. To him who would win, there is a routine of self-denial and training that one must submit to. So it is in life's race. Only he who is faithful wins. To do so we are called upon to abandon those things that weaken us and to freely renounce the lusts of the flesh for Jesus' sake.

Prayer.—Lord, help us to stand steadfast in Thy grace, to push ourselves daily into the fellowship of Jesus, to bow our wills to Thine, to discipline our lives to Thy way. When we are faint, let us see the crown at the end and gather new strength for the stay to be faithful unto the end. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DRAWING FROM THE GLORIOUS WELL.

"Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."—John 4:14.

Jesus is the sweet fountain of life, the bottomless well of love, the sun in the sky that drives away the darkness of life. He is the fullness of glory; He is the beauty and grandeur of things; He teaches us all things and He is the source of our needs. Drawing these things from Him, we learn His unspeakable goodness and grace, and in this way He becomes precious to us.

All that we have comes from Him, and yet He rewards us for even our attitude toward Him. "He that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward." If He rewards for attitude, what will He do for service? If He rewards me for the least, what will He give for my best?

In the light of this, I think we can understand more of what is meant in His words, "He that findeth his life shall lose it." For instance, one has the power and the ability and the opportunity to give meat and drink and clothing to the needy. He that spares for his own sake, holds his own comfort dearer than Jesus, and automatically loses his spiritual peace.

Prayer.—O dear Lord Jesus, teach us to know Thee in truth, that we may love Thee and follow after Thee. Give us a portion in Thee, live Thou in us, let us live in Thee, and serve one another in love. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE FOOLISHNESS OF WISDOM.

"Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom."—Jer. 9:23.

"Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes."—Isa. 5:21.

"There is more hope for a fool."—Prov. 26:12.

Wisdom, accompanied with conceit, has no place in the approval of God, and he who combines the two must be made to know what a fool he is before he can be wise.

But he who can by searching find the deeper knowledge of self, of others, and of life, and keeps his heart humble, knowing that all wisdom is of God and that he himself deserves very little on this earth after all; by that fact there is revealed to his soul more and more the wisdom of God. The excellencies of life, yea of eternal life, come by way of things with which we have very little to do. They are God-given things. What reason have we to be puffed up? What have we to glory over?

We are servants of one another, and we are partakers of God's wisdom, that we may serve one another. Yet, all is ours. Each is a part owner of all.

No, the wisdom of God does not lead to conceit and envy. Such things are from below. The wisdom which is from above is humble, pure, peaceable, full of mercy and love.

Prayer.—Lord God, enlighten us by Thy Spirit; teach us that we cannot of ourselves do anything, and bring to us Thy wisdom from on high, that we therein may serve one another with humility and faithfulness as good stewards of Thy manifold grace. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PAUL'S WISDOM IN WINNING SOULS.

"All things to all men that I may serve some."—1 Cor. 9:19.

It is a glorious calling to be a preacher of the gospel and to win souls to Jesus. And he who can say, like Paul, "Though I be free from all men, love makes me the servant of men," finds the life of true liberty where love points out the proper ecurse. It is in matters relating to the things which are neither commanded nor prohibited we shall find ample wisdom.

Winning souls in this age does not devolve only upon the preacher, but all children of God are called, and with Him they share the glories of it.

Prayer.—Lord, give unto us the grace to walk in Thy spirit at all times and in all places. Alas! we are so far from doing it; for Jesus' sake, help us. Amen.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

There will be a meeting of the pastoral committee of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, together with all pastors and the pastoral committees of three from each Church, in the conference at Bethlehem, March 27, 1930, at 10 A. M.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

In the death of Dr. Geo. S. Watson, Elon College, N. C., the Christian Orphanage lost one of its most loyal friends. Dr. Watson has been a member of the board of trustees of the Christian Orphanage from its beginning, and attended every meeting as long as his health would permit. He was interested in the welfare of the children and their needs.

For several years after the Orphanage was opened he gave the children medical attention and kept this up until he retired from the practice of medicine. He gave of his time and services free of charge and would accept no compensation other than the real joy of service rendered to some fatherless or motherless child. He was always happy and in a cheerful mood. The Orphanage family had a very deep love and the highest respect for Dr. Watson.

The writer will miss him. During these years of service as superintendent we have often gone to Dr. Watson with our troubles and problems, and his wise council, good suggestions and sound advice has helped us to solve many hard problems and made our pathway more pleasant to follow.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

J. M. DARDEN, Ch'n.

RESPONSIBILITY SHUNNED.

We have two types of preachers in the world. One group discourses altogether on theological matters, but knows nothing of the practical, everyday side of life. They are like the Scotchman who said, "That he meddled only with the things of God, which he well knew that he could not change, but that he was not going to meddle with the things of men where his changes might do harm." There are some ministers who have a directory of heaven under their arms, but who know nothing concerning the streets and alleys of their native town. They were called on for wise counsel, when, God was shaping His decrees, and nothing less than the divine decrees will command their genius. The Master prayed the Father not to take the disciples out of the world, but to keep them from the evil that was in the world. —Richmond Christian Advocate.

WAKEFIELD.

It has been some time since I have written anything to THE SUN concerning my field of labor, due to the fact that I have been privileged to attend the school of religion for rural ministers at Vanderbilt University from January 15th to February 15th, and have been away for a while, and upon my return there were so many things claiming my attention that I have not gotten to this before.

I had a very, very fine trip to and from Nashville, and a very pleasant as well as profitable stay while there; was kept busy, but enjoyed the work so much. Only hope for the opportunity to go again for six weeks, and I will certainly go if possible. Would advise any minister who can and will to attend this school. It is very fine.

The work on this pastorate moves along very quietly, but very nicely. Each of the Churches has a splendid Sunday School under the leadership of good men as superintendents, and a fine corps of teachers, with good enrollment in each school. In the Wakefield, Burton's Grove and New Lebanon Churches there are splendid missionary societies which are doing a fine work. Both Burton's Grove and Barrett's buildings have been recovered, and the Ever Ready Class of Barrett's has done a splendid piece of work in reflooring, painting and buying large rugs for the pulpit and rostrum, which add to the general appearance of things so much.

I have accepted a call to New Lebanon Church, since that pastorate does not have a pastor, and find that a splendid field in which to labor, and pleasant people with whom to work. In each of these Churches we plan to have special Easter services, at which time we hope to receive our missionary offering.

The pastor is very grateful to Dr. Staley and Rev. D. D. Nash, of Hopewell, for filling his appointments while he was away. The people enjoyed each exceedingly. We would not forget to mention the fine way the people continue to treat the pastor by poundings constantly, for which we are grateful.

C. E. GERRINGER.

BROADWAY, VA.

It was my happy privilege and opportunity to attend the winter term for rural pastors at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., for the first six weeks of the year. Thirty ministers from thirteen States representing eleven different denominations were in attendance. Rev. C. E. Gerringer, Wakefield, Va., and I were the students from the Christian Church. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had the largest representation—thirteen.

The courses are arranged and executed with the work, needs and problems of the rural minister in mind, and hence are practical and helpful. The spirit and fellowship of the group was fine and inspiring. It was an opportunity which I greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

Revs. F. D. Ballard and David W. Shepherd are taking graduate work in the school of religion there. Mr. Henry Lee Swint and Mr. Frank H. Alexander are also taking graduate work in Nashville.

I returned home to find my Church work moving on fairly well. All my services were taken care of by local ministers of other denominations while I was away. Immediately on my return home, I was engaged as a teacher in a leadership training school for two weeks with the Church of the Brethren, at Timberville, where four of my Church members received standard credits.

Beginning Monday night, March 10th, we are to have a series of services, one week at Bethlehem and one week at Mayland, at which a different minister from a different denomination is to preach each night. The purpose is to worship together and create a better spirit of friendship, fellowship and co-operation between the various denominations. It is meeting with hearty approval with all the ministers. We are to have ministers from all the denominations in this section, namely: Baptists, Church of the Brethren, Presbyterian, Disciples, Lutheran, Reformed, Salvation Army, United Brethren, Methodist and Episcopal.

I plan to spend the greater part of April and May in Page Valley in pastoral and revival work. Brethren, let me ask an interest in your prayers, that the Lord may use me in building His kingdom.

JOE FRENCH.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

On the fourth Sunday in February it was my pleasure to be with Bro. Veazey, at Providence Chapel Church, near Richland, Ga. We had a fine service. Rev. H. W. Elder was able to be present at the service here, and also at Richland that night. It was an inspiration to one to meet so many old friends and to make so many new ones. The work of the Church at Providence Chapel is moving nicely under the leadership of Rev. Veazey. The Church here has been rebuilt and they now have a nice, comfortable country Church. This is the oldest Church of the Christians in the far South. In 1837, under the leadership of Dr. Jubilee Smith, pledges were made and subscriptions given for the erection of a house of worship at Red Hill. They worshiped then under a bush arbor. The Church was erected about

THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street, - - Richmond, Virginia

1848, with the Smith Masonic Lodge in the second story of the building. This old and respected Church has had few pastors, considering length of life and service. Dr. Smith gave his life of service here in the Church as pastor, and to the surrounding country as practicing physician. He was building for himself a reputation equaled by few men, and although gone to his reward, his memory is cherished by the citizenship of his native land and of the Christian Church in the South.

Rev. H. W. Elder succeeded Dr. Smith as pastor, and for many years was the faithful shepherd of the flock. Rev. E. M. Carter and Rev. C. E. Gerringer have also served the Church as pastors. Rev. G. H. Veazey is the present leader, and I bespeak for him great success in the work. I was rejoiced to see the interest of the younger generation in the Church of their fathers. When I thought of the Abells, and the Rogers, and the Browns, and the Bridges, and the Woods, many of whom and most of them have passed over the river and are at rest under the shade of the trees in the paradise of God, my heart was sad, but when I saw their sons and daughters rallying to the Church of Jesus Christ, the Church of their fathers and mothers, I said the Church is in safe hands. May He ever keep us faithful.

Dear Christian friends, this, as you know, is "Mission Period" with our Church, and as we have come into an enlarged missionary fellowship, we surely must do our best to meet the obligation thus thrust upon us. I sincerely trust that every Church, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor Society and each individual will have some part in our missionary offering this year. Please ask the Lord to show us our duty and what He will have us do. Please, brethren, let's not jeopardize our own interest and the interest of our Christ by a spirit of selfishness. Our offerings this year will reach more people and help more to carry the gospel to all the world than ever before in our history. Why not every Church in these Conferences have a mission rally day? Put on a missionary program and take an offering for missions, not simply for the money you may get, but also for the inspiration and spiritual power to be gained thereby.

I am pleading with all our pastors and our Churches to see to it that the cause of our Christ does not suffer in our hands. I will be glad to help any Church anywhere in any way that I can to carry out the missionary program. I have visited twenty-seven Churches, and am doing my utmost to save the Church and inspire the brotherhood and sisterhood to a larger service.

G. D. Hunt.

DAMASCUS.

Just a word about our Sunday School and Church work. The attendance at Sunday School has been good all winter, notwithstanding the bad roads. Both old and young are taking on more interest. We praise the faithful ones that have been privileged to go and carry on this great and good work. God is blessing us and using His children here to help glorify His wonderful work. Nothing can help more than a good Sunday School. Our faithful and beloved superintendent, J. E. Corbitt, is giving his time, talent and all to help God's work here. We are thankful to the Lord for such a faithful superintendent.

Rev. E. B. White, our pastor, always brings stirring messages of God's word. We feel the Church is being revived under His leadership. Bro. White is a busy man and his highest aim is to win the unsaved to Christ through the written and spoken word.

Our Woman's Missionary Society is doing a good work. We hope to meet our apportionment this month. Let us all say, "As for me and my house, we will take time to be holy in this blessed new year 1930." And more than that, let us resolve to develop in spiritual power.

Mrs. Almira Hinton.

THE SUN LETTER.

Several of our pastors are getting very much interested in the contest of getting renewals and new subscriptions for The Sun. We offered a $15.00 handbag as a prize to the pastor who sends in the largest list of subscribers and renewals by the 1st of April, and a $10.00 gold coin for the second largest list.

Four pastors have taken the lead in this contest so far and are running a neck-and-neck race. No one at this writing can tell the outcome of the race. Some new contestant may enter yet and win the prize.

Now is the time to enter with a nice list of renewals and new subscribers. They are easy to get if you will but try. The Sun needs your help. Any pastor will feel proud of this beautiful black real cowhide handbag, with little compartments to carry everything you need when you take a trip. Get in the race at once and win the prize.

OBITUARIES.

JOHNSON.

Bro. I. Newton Johnson was born December 1, 1848, and departed this life January 28, 1930, at the age of 81 years, 1 month, and 27 days. Bro. Johnson was one of the greatest sufferers I have ever known, having spent the last nineteen years of his life in bed, crippled and drawn with rheumatism. In spite of it all he kept up an abiding faith in his Saviour, and we believe has passed to that home in which there is no suffering. He was an ardent defender of the faith, and a loyal member of the Timber Ridge Christian Church. He is survived by three sons and two daughters. Funeral services at Timber Ridge, January 30th.

A. W. ANDES.

LLOYD.

Lydia Florence Lloyd was born September 7, 1891, and died February 23, 1930, making her age, therefore, 38 years, 5 months and 16 days. Sister Lloyd was a faithful member of the Woods Chapel Christian Church, as is also her husband. For about two years before her death she was a great sufferer, but she was comforted through it all by a strong faith in the Lord and the blessed assurance that all would be well in the next life. She is survived by her husband, Isaac Lloyd, and by four little children.

Funeral services at Woods Chapel February 26, 1930. Rev. J. T. Glick assisted at the house and Rev. B. J. Earp at the Church.

A. W. ANDES.

HODGES.

Little Ray Brown Hodges, the infant son of Bro. and Sister Aaron Hodges, of Nathalie, Va., died quite suddenly on Sunday morning, February 2, 1930, age six weeks. The funeral and burial were at Liberty Church on Monday afternoon, February 3rd, conducted by the writer. Ray was a lovely child, one of twins, the other being a little girl, Mary Blair.

Bro. and Sister Hodges have the deep sympathy of their many friends, as was evidenced by the number attending the funeral. It was a great disappointment to the parents to lose their little son, and while they sorrow deeply it is in a submissive spirit.

THE SIN OF OMISSION.—

It isn't the thing you do, dear:
It's the thing you leave undone
That gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flowers you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.
The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way,
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say.
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle, winning tone
Which you had no time nor thought for,
With troubles enough of your own.
Those little acts of kindness
So easily out of mind;
Those chances to be angels
Which we poor mortals find:
They come in night nad silence,
Each sad, reproachful wrath,
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a chill has fallen on faith.
For life is too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great
To suffer our poor compassion
That tarries until too late.
It isn't the thing you do, dear;
It's the thing you leave undone
Which gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

THE CELEBRATION OF PENTECOST.—

Many denominations are laying plans and are launching movements in celebration and commemoration of the nineteenth centennial of Pentecost. They all look toward the reviving of the Pentecostal enthusiasm and the return of the Pentecostal power. We have heard so many prayers to send the Pentecostal power, when we have been engaged in the many enterprises that occupy our Church programs, that sometimes it seems that we forget in what connection the power which was poured out at Pentecost was promised and sent.

Pentecost is inseperably connected with missions. Let us get the history straight. Jesus had commissioned His followers to launch a missionary enterprise that was world-wide in its scope. They had been told to go into all the world and to preach the gospel to every creature. Though they were commanded to begin at Jerusalem, there was no suggestion of dividing the work into home and foreign departments. They were to begin where they were and to work outward in an ever-widening circle. And they were promised the power of the Holy Spirit to make possible the successful pursuance of the task. There was the giving of an immeasurable power because they were confronting a task that surpassed the bounds even of human imagination, for no earthly dreamer had ever projected an enterprise so vast. Alexander only dreamed of bringing all the world under the sway of military power. Christ proposed to erect a throne in every individual heart, and to bring every creature under the dominance of a powerful spiritual ideal.

There is incongruity in the suggestion that we celebrate Pentecost at a time when the missionary passion seems on the wane throughout all Christendom. From all sides comes the news of deficits in mission collections and cuts in the appropriations for the coming year. We are talking about restricting fields and reducing missionary endeavors in one breath, and about celebrating Pentecost in the next. The two do not go together.

Pentecost was the rewarding of a boundless faith. It was the crowning of a sublime passion of unselfish service. It came in answer to prayer, but the prayer was of those who were bent upon going forward. If the Christian world should launch an undertaking commensurate with that of the early Church, then we might expect such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as was first manifested at Pentecost; but it is hardly reasonable to expect a lavish provision for a retreating force.

WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF EDUCATION?—

The question is arising in the minds of many as to just what is the purpose of our modern system of public education. Within the memory of all of us, educational enterprises have been increasing at a tremendous rate, and the end of such an increase does not yet appear. According to government figures of every one hundred dollars spent in this country, one dollar and a half is spent for education. The same estimate also tells us that for every dollar and a half spent upon education, eight dollars and a half go to meet the cost of crime in its various phases. Such a proportion is surprising, and would seem to indicate that either the amount spent for education is inadequate or that there is a grave failure in our educational system as it stands at present.

It seems that there ought to be something which our elaborate system of education might do to reduce the prevalence of crime throughout our country. We have long since recognized that education is not an end within itself, but that it is a means to an end. What that end is has not been clearly defined. Perhaps it would be difficult to formulate an expression of the educational objective that would be acceptable to even a majority of those engaged in the work of the schools. As one can best formulate the objective of the present system, it is the imparting of knowledge and the sharpening of the intellectual faculties. Of course, there are educators who set for themselves a far more serious and worth-while task. Many are seeking to implant lofty ethical standards and to enkindle ambitions which are unselfish and noble. But these are personal qualities and characteristics, and are not the primary standards that govern in the selection of the teachers who make up the personnel of our schools.

The whole question is mixed up with our American ideas as to the separation of Church and State. There seems to be a whole-hearted determination that nothing which is even remotely connected with religion must be permitted to enter the portals of the public school. We are perfectly agreed as to the general policy of the separation of Church and State. We are also aware that to this present time the effort to entirely separate religion and morals has never yet succeeded. But it begins to look as if there must be a change in our present policy. There must be some provision for fostering a wholesome respect for law and order, and the observance of at least a rudimentary form of morality among the rank and file of American youth, even if we have to countenance the admixture of a little religion into our educational system in order to bring it about.

If there were nothing else to be considered save the outlay of money, that within itself ought to be worth-while. When the government figures show that out of every one hundred dollars spent in this country, eight and a half go to pay the cost of crime, it is time for us to be seeking some way out of the burden that is placed on the taxpayer. The criminal court dockets are congested and the prisons are crowded to capacity. Where it is the policy to work convicts on the public roads, it is surprising and heart-breaking to those who are vitally interested in humanity to see the young men and boys who are wearing the insignia of prison and the criminal. Sociologists admit that in the enforcement of law and the maintenance of public morality, the failure of the United States is conspicious among all the civilized nations of the world.

Crime and law-breaking is rapidly becoming the pre-eminent problem facing the American people. It is a task of sufficient magnitude to enlist the interest and co-operation of every social agency and institution in the land. The home, the school, and the Church have always been the most effective agencies in promoting civic righteousness. Each has its important place. The question is primarily the concern of the State. The school is under the direct control and supervision of the State. And it would seem that the leaders in public education should be giving the question their most serious attention.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. F. Morgan, assisted by Dr. C. C. Ryan, is conducting a series of meetings at Rosemont Christian Church, near Norfolk, this week.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Palm Street Church met in the pastor's home on Bessemer Avenue, Greensboro, Thursday night, March 13th. The meeting was happy and enthusiastic, and three new members were present. The society is progressing beautifully and is doing a splendid work in the Church, which makes the pastor's heart exceedingly glad.

Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, Dover, Del., is spending two weeks in the Orlando, Fla., sanitarium, and is finding it good and glorious there as he relaxes from the exhaustion of a trying year and gains new strength for the tasks of a Lenten and Easter campaign and the work of a great and growing parish. He finds the sanitarium all that heart could desire for purposes of real rest, relaxation and cure.

Dr. D. Brewer Eddy, Mission Department secretary of the Congregational Church, spoke to a good congregation at First Christian Church last Sunday evening. His address was packed full of missionary information, which was received with marked attention. He has promised to give us the salient facts of his address for THE SUN readers. After some weeks spent in the South, he boarded the train for Boston.

The tenth anniversary of the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., will be celebrated on Sunday, April 6th. At the morning service, Mr. Wm. Knowles Cooper, of Washington, D. C., will speak, and in the afternoon Dr. J. O. Atkinson, editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, will make the address. Personal invitations are being sent out by members of the Church to all former members of the congregation. In case you may not receive your letter, you are asked to accept this notice as a personal invitation from the Church. Come and bring your friends.

Rev. J. D. Dollar, Reidsville, N. C.; Rev. J. L. Neese, R. 7, Greensboro, N. C., and Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, R. F. D., Henderson, N. C., were some of the pastors calling at the mission room the past week to carry the mission literature to their congregations and to confer about the spring program and Easter offering for missions. The pastors are realizing that in order to get an adequate offering this spring, there will have to be effort and plan and prayer.

Rev. C. E. Newman, Virgilina, writes: "I have received and read the pamphlet, 'My Church and Its Widening Horizon.' Am glad just such information is at hand. I can use to advantage fifty copies in my Churches." This has reference to the booklet which tells of our mission work in Porto Rico and Japan and, since the merger with the Congregationalists, throughout the whole world. It contains information that our pastors and missionary workers should have. We are glad to furnish a limited number to any pastor on request.

Our obituary columns carry an account of the passing of Bro. Henry Franklin Samuel, of Salem Chapel Church, Forsyth County. Bro. Samuel, through his long life, was one of the most loyal and faithful soldiers of the cross it was ever our privilege to know. He was devoted with singleness of purpose and with unflinching loyalty to every enterprise of the Christian Church. In him, THE CHRISTIAN SUN indeed loses a friend, and the Christian Church an invaluable and devoted member. Surely his works follow him and God will raise up others to take up the torch that he has passed on to them.

Palm Street Church is building again to take care of its constantly growing Sunday School. The Church added six nice rooms last year, and this addition has now demanded another addition. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, is deservedly happy in the beautiful spirit of harmony and cooperation that he found when he began building. Fifteen men volunteered, and the additional room was framed and storm-sheeted in one evening before bedtime. The brick work was soon thereafter completed, and that night the men of the Church met again, floored, ceiled and covered the additional room. The pastor is now painting the inside and out. This we call moving along together and beautifully in real Christian service. Happy pastor, happy people, and congratulations to all.

Bro. G. C. White, of Spring Hill Church and Sunday School, writes under date of Waverly, Va., March 13th: "We are feeling much encouraged in our work at Spring Hill, and hope that, through the use of the literature which you have so graciously supplied us, to better inform our membership of the great work of missions and that enlarged work which we are doing among people afar off who know not our Christ. By our programs each Sunday now between this and Easter we hope we shall be able to inspire a greater enthusiasm and do greater things than we have been doing for missions. We shall do our best to get the literature in the hands of every member of Spring Hill Church." We wish all our Sunday School superintendents and Church officials would lend a hand and give the co-operation indicated in Bro. White's letter.

The envelopes for the special missionary offering at Easter (or the nearest service thereto) were mailed out to the secretaries of all the Churches of the Southern Convention last week. It is a matter of experience that the Churches which use the envelopes and the pastors and secretaries that seek to place them in the hands of their people get the more liberal offering and enjoy the bigger, better service. It will be a pity, indeed, if any secretary keeps the envelopes at home or simply sends the package or carries it to the Church without doing anything about them otherwise. We are commanded to let our lights shine, and not to put our candles under a bushel. We can think of no better parallel to putting a candle under a bushel than for a secretary to get the envelopes which have been printed and mailed at considerable cost and then just place them in the Church on a shelf or under the pulpit. The Church secretary is in position to render a real service to his Church and the kingdom by seeing that notice is given about the envelopes and helping to see that they are distributed properly, and that every member and friend has one. Every pastor will gladly aid the secretary in this good work.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, president, is very happy over the organization recently of six Woman's Missionary Societies in as many Churches of the North Carolina Conference. These societies, with their officers, are as follows: Palm Street Church, Mrs. James E. Smith, president, R. 5, Box 154, Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw, treasurer, P. O. Box 1402, Greensboro, N. C.; Mt. Bethel, Mrs. J. W. Knight, president, Stokesdale, N. C., and Mrs. Ruby Price, treasurer, Summerfield, N. C.; Big Oak, Mrs. J. M. Bailey, president, R. 1, Box 29, Biscoe, N. C., and Miss Ella Brewer, secretary-treasurer, R. 1, Eagle Springs, N. C.; New Lebanon, Miss Bernice Moore, president Wentworth, N. C., and Mrs. Numa Comer, treasurer, Wentworth, N. C.; High Point, Mrs. W. D. Woodell, president, 409 Kennedy St., High Point, N. C.; Amelia, Mrs. Eunice Smith, president, Clayton, N. C., and Miss Lois Liles, treasurer, R. F. D., Clayton, N. C. Writing further, Mrs. Rowland says: "Went to New Lebanon last Sunday and organized, with twenty members. It looks as if we might reach a number of Churches if some of us who are interested could just go to them. Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor, hopes to organize a society at Hines Chapel at an early date."

Rev. R. Lee House, pastor, Amelia Church, Clayton, N. C., writes, March 10th: "A missionary society was organized at Amelia yesterday. We had planned to have some experienced person to help organize the society. But our plans were interrupted, and so we took the matter in hand and twenty women were present for the organization. Mrs. Eunice Smith, Clayton, N. C., was elected president, and Miss Lois Liles, R. F. D., Clayton, N. C., secretary. While these ladies are without experience in such work and will appreciate suggestions and guidance, they will do their best and are deeply interested. I do not know when I have been so happy and grateful just to know that the work has begun. One of the Sunday School offerings in each month and the offering in each preaching service is to go to missions. While these offerings will not be great, I am trusting that the total will be acceptable." It is a good day for any Church when a Woman's Missionary Society is organized, because the women set themselves to the one task of deepening the spiritual life of the Church and of aiding the pastor to carry his message not only to the members of his community, but to the uttermost parts. No wonder Bro. House was a happy man when the women of his Church organized a missionary society.

THE MYSTIC AND MAGIC WAY.

By Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N.

II.

"I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me."—John 14:6.

What about the magic way as related to Christianity? We think of magic only in terms of performances of some slight-of-hand trick. We are not apt to think that there is any place for it in religion. And yet I am wondering if hypocrisy is not an art of trickery that might be classed as magic.

The value of individual Christian living lies entirely in sincerity and service and is in ratio to the service rendered the general good of all. There are some artists who paint pictures because they desire to put on canvass a portrayal of their dreams that they may serve the world of beauty. There are others who paint because they are conceited, and they love the applause of the people. Beauty to such a one as that serves no purpose. There are musicians who write for the glory of music and for the cultivation of the love of music among the people. If we are to understand the present popular music broadcast into everybody's home and ears and soul, it seems to be written for nothing more nor less than the sheckles expected out of it. Real art and music, yes, real service, we love. Anything less should be ruled out.

In the Church there are those who are religious because they wish to find God and because they love righteousness and they wish the kingdom of righteousness to reign on earth. They are the ones who say, in the words of Phillip Brooks, "I like life and I like righteousness. If I cannot keep the two together I will let life go and choose righteousness." These are they who lose their self-consciousness and their conceit and become loveable characters and leading lights of the kingdom of God.

There are others who pretend to seek after God for what they can get out of it. To some, it is business; to others, it is associations; to others, it is warding off the necessary results of their folly; to others, it is an effort to appease the wrath of God and to tease Him into forgiving them of their meanness; to others, it is the parade of pride and fashion. None of this is religion at all. It is religious magic. Dr. Eddings calls it "religion's bastard brother."

How absurd! How self-centered! As if the whole world, including God and the will of heaven, are to be bent to one's own advantages. The world revolves around no one but God. How can one think that by an act of his own hocus-pocus he can make the eternal God dance to his piping? One may do God's will in his heart and live, or he may defy it and perish. The truth of the whole matter is that God calls us and we answer or we do not. There is no other way. There are no promises in prayers and no assurance in rituals. To know God, we must be brought into harmony with God's will.

The worst of it is that thousands on the outside look at the Church and religion and see these religious magicians, and that is all they do see. They stop at that and grow sceptical. It is no wonder that the Church has scorners, and that so many young people are growing up out of the Church with an actual dislike for it.

To make the mysteries of religion real, we must make God real in our lives, and God is made real by the devout prayer life. Prayer is not an incantation whereby we impress the mind of God and persuade Him to give us what we want. It is a method whereby we give ourselves to Him. It is that exercise of our lives which brings our souls into harmony with His will. Tuning a violin is an unpleasant performance, but it is a very necessary one to harmony. Prayer, then, is rightly called "tuning the soul to the infinite."

According to the teachings of Jesus, when He began His ministry, prayer is the first act of religion. In this He teaches us to say, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done." And the finest example of this in all history he offers in his own life. Set in the bitterest agonies of life, that night in the Garden of Gethsemane, He said, "Not my will, but Thine be done." There is no doubt that one reason why we do not have more of our prayers answered and why we are not conscious of the reality of God more than we are, is because we have never learned to feel that way about it. We usually wish things for our own advantage without regard to the will of God in the matter, and it would appear that there are as many different prayers as there are individuals. We once heard of a farmer who complanied that while he prayed our harmony with His will.

Now, when one tells another what we ought to do, he should at least give him a few hints as to how to do it. Jesus said, "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet." It is in this closet we are called upon to remember who God is. Who is He? If I may be pardoned for indulging personal experience, when I was a child I had a very definite idea of the God to whom I prayed. My mother told me that He was in heaven, and that heaven was up "above." This I took literally. I immediately enthroned Him in the sky. He was for rain for his perishing crop, his wife was praying for dry weather, that she might go on a picnic. This is typical of the natural selfishness of people. Selfishness never won a place in the esteem of man yet, much less the heart of God.

Can a sick man be healed by prayer? That depends upon not only his faith, but upon the motives that prompt the prayer. If he desires to get well with regard to God's will about it, that is another matter. He cannot. Can a man have success in business by prayer, unless in praying for success he is willing to fail, if in failing he can help God's larger purpose? There is but one answer to this—"no." Prayer is not bending God to us; it is bending us to God and His eternal purpose. It is harmony with His will. When we get what we ask of Him, we may be assured that it is a reward for our sincerity of purpose and for a Man with an all-hearing ear and all-seeing eye. There He lived. I pictured Him a big, strong, loving Man, a rather glorified copy of Mr. Josiah Wilkins, who was a most loved man in the community. To talk to God was a very definite experience to me. But later on in life, with more education and the facts of science before me, this very definite God receded, and I found it more difficult to talk to Him. Fortunately, Jesus came into my life and I learned to visualize God in Him. He is the person now whom I see, and I see Him in the same way I see my sainted mother. I hear His voice in divine precept as I can hear hers in her teachings and in her daily life about the house.

At that period of life when the definite God recedes from a young man, if there is no other concept of Him to take His place, the young man drops religion, or if he continues it, it is merely in a perfunctory manner. There is no doubt that there is a great, great loss of young people from the Church at this period of life. Without a personal God carried on into a man's life, it is well understood how doubt comes, prayer ceases and God disappears.

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father." We cannot conceive of a conversation without the personal element. If prayer means talking with God, it means seeing Him as a person, and the conversation is in the same manner. "Pray to thy Father," but when doing so look at Jesus, the human, compassionate and understanding God.

Again, our prayers should be spontaneous. Rituals and written prayers have their place in group worship, and they may aid many to shape their thoughts and desires toward God, but they would be a hindrance to private conversation. One needs no book to talk to his mother. Your sweetheart would be dumbfounded if you began to make love to her by reading out of a book, even though it might be more beautifully expressed. We need no book to tell us how to kiss. Imagine a couple of youths looking up the definition for a kiss before they engage in that delightful pastime! Our souls should take to God instinctly, as a mother kisses her child, or as a man kisses a maid. No dictionary can ever tell all there is to a kiss, and no book can tell all that God is to those who love Him. And in our prayers with Him, He, no doubt, would rather hear our stumbling, even stupid speech, than listen to recitations of St. Katherine or to read prayers in which our hearts put no meaning. We shall not find God as real as we need until we have visualized Him in Jesus and our spirits go out to Him as naturally as they do toward a personal friend.

The closet prayer is a most personal affair. It is a personal private conversation of two souls and it does away with praying as a sense of duty. How many has been the times that we have gone to our prayers feeling that we had to? How many are the times we have gone to prayer and wondered what in the world should we say? Or if we do feel to pray, we seem to feel that prayer means begging God to give or to do something. It is "give me," "give me." Is this all? Are there no fresh blessings to thank Him for? Are there no fresh wrongs and mistakes to confess? Are there no loves to bestow? Consider our own family relations. A father loves to have his child climb up on his lap and confess his wrongs and say, "Daddy, forgive me." It makes the child seem more worthy in his sight. It would be an evidence of righteousness on his part. Besides, there are others to be prayed for. A father expects his children to ask for something for his brothers and sisters sometimes. Most of all, it would be a queer parent who did not like to have his child come to him, climb up in his lap, put his arms around his neck and say, "Daddy, I love you." Is this not also true with God? Do these things not offer suggestions to us of our vital contact with God?

Therefore, the reality of the mystic way of religion is in the thought of God and the thought of others, rather than in self. It is reliance upon God and His love and His power; it is harmony with His soul; it is seeing Jesus, the author and finisher of our souls, the light of the world, the way of life; it is waiting for Him in all things. Let us not be in such a hurry. "Be still and know that I am God," "Wait on the Lord," "Tarry till I come," He says.

There is a story of an old lady who would

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHY GLORY IN A TRAGEDY?

In one of his letters, Paul wrote: "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." In another letter, the same writer said, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Why glory in the most cruel and heartless tragedy of all history?

The answer is easy. The cross of Jesus is more than a tragedy; it is a sacrifice. Christ, the King of glory, allowed Himself to be crucified. In fact, He forced His contemporaries to crucify Him. He was the King of glory who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many. His contemporaries, the Jews and kindred of His day, felt that their king and deliverer should be a lord, a mighty one of majesty, of earthly prestige and power; should be able to rule states, command armies, be a great sovereign with pomp and splendor and dignity. And because our Lord refused to do this, and chose to prove His kingship, His royalty and His power by way of humility and service, they crucified Him. In the cross, the world saw the supreme sacrifice. The Son of God gave Himself, for, as He said, He could have called down ten legions of angels to defend Him, and He could have made the very trees and stones cry out in His defense or become weapons for His bodily safety. All this He refused to do, and instead gave Himself a sacrifice.

And this is the method that He has chosen to reach and redeem this world. The biggest business in the world is carried on, not through self-seeking, but through self-sacrifice. God is using sacrifices to carry forward His work and to build up His kingdom on this earth.

Let us get at the matter in this way: We are living now in a time of financial depression. Times are hard. Money is scarce. Many are borrowing, if they can borrow, to pay living expenses. But instead of all this proving a barrier to the work of God, to the building up of His kingdom, it should prove a blessing, a benefit, and should open up the way to greater giving and greater tasks than ever. When times are good, money plentiful, prices for crops high and crops abundant, giving, we say, in such a good time doesn't entail much sacrifice; but giving now does entail sacrifice. For if we give now, we will do so, not out of our abundance, but out of our need, out of our want, out of our very living. In such a time as this, the Church and people have an opportunity of coming into great spiritual blessings. It is only through sacrifice that we touch hands and hearts with our Lord. Paul would only know Christ and Him crucified, and would only glory in His cross, because here was the symbol and the token of a real sacrifice. Paul lived with Christ in the sacrifice of the cross.

And none of us can know Christ until we have touched Him in sacrifice, in self-denial, in giving of ourselves and our substance, not when the giving is easy, but when the giving is hard; not when there is an abundance from which to give, but when there is little, and lack, and necessity, and hard times. During "hard times," God gets a chance at us and tries us to see if we will really sacrifice.

It seems providential that in this year, when we celebrate the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost, we will have to make sacrificial offerings in giving if we are to get spiritual benefits. We, too, may glory in the cross, and we, too, may know Christ and Him crucified, but only as we crucify our wants, our own personal needs, our own desire for comfort and even for necessities; and this crucifixion, this self-denial will bring us to share the spirit of Him who died on the cross for us. If we would know the Christ and follow Him we must take up the cross, the cross of real self-denial and sacrifice on which He was crucified.

THE "NEWS" AND THE CHURCH.

A crime or a scandal gets on the front page and in bold type. From this, one might, in haste, conclude that worldliness and wickedness produce the news and write the history of mankind. This conclusion is erroneous, however, and will not bear close analysis.

"No single agency has made more news in the history of mankind than the Church." That sentence, quoted from a recent publication, conveys a great truth as well as an eternal fact. The Church in its activities, or inactivities, has furnished more news and written more history than any other agency known to man. It may not be as exciting, as "thrilling," and have the same "kick" as a recent crime or scandal, but the Church furnishes news that is news and history that abides.

It might have been just a "squib," or a few unpretentious lines on the second or fifth page of the paper which told that William Carey was going to India as a missionary; that Robert Morrison was going to China; that David Livingstone was going to Africa. That was news, and that news has come to be history. It was some of the biggest, most meaningful news ever written into print.

A Church is organized in a town. A new preaching place is opened. A new congregation is formed. This may be told in a few lines in small type, and not get on the front page at all, but that is news which will make history. It means that a new moral force, a tremendous spiritual dynamic has arrived and set up in town for activity and for eternity.

The Monday papers carry on their front page the exciting news of accidents and events of murders and other crimes. Somewhere on the inside of the same paper there may be a few lines in small type about the Church and the activity of the Church, the program and process of the Church on the Sunday before. That is the real news, for it is making history, molding character, shaping destiny, fixing and fashioning the life, the character of that town and State and nation and the world.

The real news and the abiding history of the world is that which occurs in the light and the life of the Church and of the Son of God. Some one has said, and truly, that when history is properly written, it will simply be "His story." If one fails to get some idea of what the Church is doing, of what the people in the Churches are doing, one is not getting the news of the day, and one is not reading correctly the history of his time.

MISSIONS AND PENTECOST.

Modern missions were born on the day of Pentecost. So was the Church. From that day till this the Church and missions have been identified. on the one hand, a Church that is not missionary is not truly Christian, and sooner or later ceases to function; on the other hand, the Church was born for this purpose, viz: to testify of Christ, to bear witness of Him, even to the uttermost parts. And the Church is the only institution on earth that is undertaking the missionary task. It has no associates nor competitors. Through its history, the Church has been witnessing for Christ, in so far as it has been a Church and fulfilled the mission whereunto it was sent into the world. The success of missions is bound up in the very life of the Church. Recently when the foreign mission boards of all the denominations of North America were meeting at Atlantic City, when they came to write their message with reference to the nineteenth centennial celebration of Pentecost, they said: "We humbly thank God for the blessings experienced in a deeper realization of evangelism as the heart of all effort in establishing the kingdom of God in the earth, and we earnestly urge the mission boards and societies to re-emphasize evangelism as the vitalizing spirit permeating and directing all their policies and activities at home and abroad."

The Church may undertake many other tasks than the missionary task, but this is that for which the Church was founded. When Jesus was on earth He bore testimony of His validity as the Son of God with power to redeem and to save. Leaving the earth by the way of the cross, He gave the Church to be His 'body," and, through this "body" the testimony and witness of Him are borne to the world. Missions mean witnessing for Christ, bearing testimony of Him and His power to save in the homeland and in fields afar. Those who give themselves to the thought and task of foreign missions believe that the wide world should hear of Him and that the message of Him at home and in the local Church is vitalized by sharing that message with people beyond the shadow of its own Church spire.

In celebrating the nineteenth centennial of Pentecost, we can give it meaning and reap its benefits and share its blessings only as we give ourselves to witness for Him through our gifts to missions, even to foreign missions, as we witness for Him by word of mouth at home. Ours is the privilege to share the joy of Pentecost, but we will share it only as we bear witness of Christ and seek to make the message of His redeeming love known to those who haven't that message.

J. O. A.

THE WARP AND WOOF OF CHRISTIANITY.

There are yet good people who look at missions as something apart, some detached something coming in to interfere. They forget that the one business of the Church is that of missions. All other lines are the fruits of missions, are the results and outgrowth of missionary endeavor and activity. Christ put missions at the heart of the Church and at the heart of His own life and message. All Christians should see the matter as it is so succinctly presented by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, associate editor, in last week's Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty.

"There has gradually crept into the consciousness of the Church the recognition of the fact that missionary work is a part of the gospel of Christ and that it is neither a thing "tacked on" nor optional, but that it is the very warp and woof of Christianity. Some one has put it in some such way as this: "It is the whole business of the Church, and the business of the whole Church, to give the whole gospel to the whole world." John Wesley's motto, "The world is my parish," fits in with the last command of Jesus and into every life which is Christ-like. Robert E. Speer has put it in stronger and more striking fashion when he pleads that the last thing in the heart of our Lord should be the first thing in ours. The great commission was the farewell of our Lord and is what the Duke of Wellington called the 'marching orders' of the Church.

"New inspiration comes to us this year in new fields upon which we are to enter. Opening doors of opportunity in China, India, Turkey, and Africa stir the imagination; and just a glance over the prospectus of this work as issued by the Foreign Mission Department is an incentive to 'go into all the world' in person or by prayer and purse."

Will our people respond this year to the missionary appeal and call? The opportunity is theirs. This is to be a test as well as a challenge. Again we quote from Brother Eldredge:

"It would seem that there could never be a truer test of our real Christianity than is offered by a response of this sort. The building of a Church and the cushioning of its pews for ourselves and our families is a fine thing to do, but still it has the flavor of a thing done for ourselves after all. Paying the preacher and the expenses of the local Church still savor of our own narrow circle and of things from which we expect returns of our own homes and neighborhoods. Home mission contributions broaden our horizon and our claim to Christ-like unselfishness, even if they are backed by patriotic and national pride, but the giving of our money to people we have never seen and whom we never will see, and from whom we can never receive any direct benefit, is the final test of an unselfish and Christ-like sacrificial spirit." J. O. A.

DR. BREWER EDDY IN THE SOUTH.

Dr. Eddy was in a dozen or so Churches in North Carolina, and an equal number in Virginia the past week, speaking three to five times a day. It is needless to say that the people heard him gladly. He had a real message, and it came from a real man. Dr. Eddy is so thoroughly engrossed in his work, and so absolutely committed to the task of helping to uplift the Christ and to carry Him to the uttermost parts that his very soul speaks through his words and reaches his hearers. Delegations came from nearby Churches to the Churches at which Dr. Eddy spoke, and thus he was enabled to reach two or three times as many Churches as those in which he spoke.

The pastors who had him in their Churches are unanimous in their verdict of approval for the great work this good man is doing, and for the wonderful messages he brought to their people. Having been on the foreign field, and having been engaged for twenty-one years with the oldest mission board in America, he knows the field and the message, and he seems to realize the very yearning of his Christ to reach the unreached and to help lift the unlifted, and to give a hand and a heart to the backward peoples of the earth. The Churches and people of our communion who heard him were inspired and were delighted, and our gratitude for his coming is beyond words.

WHENCE COMETH THE LIGHT?

It is very easy to criticise the Church. But whence came the light in which even the criticism is made? The Church itself has furnished that light. Dr. S. Parks Cadman said recently, and very truly, "We judge Christian history by standards which Christianity itself has produced. Nothing is so severe on the mistakes and crimes of its followers as Christianity itself. It is its own merciless censor."

The world condemns the Church member and holds up the Church to ridicule when a member lies or steals or covets. Well, who is it and what is it that has taught and proclaimed in ten thousand tongues, "Thou shalt not bear false witness," "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not covet"? The Church and those in it who represent it have been proclaiming that through the ages and creating that moral and spiritual light that makes such deeds unseemly and hideous. J. O. A.

RELIGION CONFORMS TO CONDITIONS.

In early ages, emotion controlled the world. It was the childhood age, when feeling ruled mankind. In the early history of this country, primitive conditions had not faded out entirely, and emotion entered largely into religious meetings and experiences. Shoutings of new converts meant happy hearts. The appeal of sermons was to the emotional nature. People enjoyed religion in that stage of society, whether in apostolic times or illiterate conditions in society. The old-fashioned protracted meetings were types of emotional expression of religion. Sermons were plain, biblical, loud, and appealed to the heart. Under conviction for sin, penitents fell down upon their knees at the altar, cried aloud for mercy, and when relief came, arose and shouted for joy, embracing their friends and telling them what the Lord had done for their souls.

The second stage of religion was belligerent. Nations warred, individuals fought, even duels were common. Arguments were bitter, co-operation had little place in society, independence and unfriendliness characterized the age. It developed great energy and effort; but it was selfish in its spirit and practice. The Church caught the spirit of that age, divisions arose, and new denominations came into existence. Great leaders were developed, great preachers proclaimed denominational positions, and people grew apart in their religious thinking, attitudes, and meetings. Each denomination thought it was contending "for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." The age was more religious than Christian, more contentious than spiritual, more selfish than liberal.

The next period was educational. Education entered into the mind of society, Sunday Schools and public schools sprang up, colleges and seminaries, and people came into contacts that changed their attitudes toward one another. By study together they grew more and more into unity of thought and behavior. Out of this new condition, denominations grew more friendly and religion grew more co-operative and what is known as practical. The shouting age passed. The belligerent age passed. The educational age entered. As the emotional age was often wild, and the divisive age was often belligerent, so the educational age became intellectual and skeptical. Education was everything. To be illiterate was to be irreligious. Mind ruled and education was the religion of many saints. It remains true that religion conforms to the ruling condition of the age.

The last stage is financial, and the Church has already entered the period. Money is the controlling factor in the thought, purpose and effort of men and nations today. To possess money is to wield influence. To make large donations is to win standing with the Church. Religion absorbs the ruling passion of society and conforms to its life. At one period of the Church, members were measured by their expressed emotion; at another, by their expressed loyalty to their denomination; at another, by their learning; and last, but not least, by their possessions and their money contributions to the Church and its enterprises. A nigardly Church member in this age has no religious standing, and no religious value. Religion has produced this great financial age, and religious people must share their money with the Church and its institutions and benevolences.

JOHN WESLEY'S EMPHASIS.

John Wesley occupied his life with just one thing. That dominated him for a half-century and more. His was a gospel of redemption, of conscious salvation through faith in Jesus Christ by the mediation of the Holy Spirit. That was what he preached all the time. Whatever else he did, and there was much indeed, his chief business was to warn men and women to flee the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins.

America needs today, and very greatly, just this emphasis of John Wesley. The redemption of humanity is a spiritual affair and will be accomplished only by spiritual processes. The center of the race is the heart center. Men who are not right there are not right. They need a new birth. No sort of profession will answer when the spirit of the man is wrong. "Ye must be born again," whether you be the Nicodemus from the Church leaders or Levi from the hard-hearted tax-gatherers. There is a lot of wrong spirit in people, most people, and this must be gotten rid of. The soul of man must be redeemed.

John Wesley had a good bunch of fine doctrines, but he did not use them much on people. He was hard on people for the way they lived, but rather easy on them for the things they believed. He took the position that if he got the man's heart and spirit and purpose right, his head would come along. He insisted that if people would stand with Christ and look as He looked, they would see what should be seen and travel on the right road and in the right direction. Getting men to Christ and getting Christ to men is the chief thing. Christ in them is the hope of their glory.—Bishop John M. Moore, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

NOTICE.

The missionary rally of the Franklin District will be held at Mt. Carmel Christian Church, Walters, Va., on Thursday, 10 A. M., April 3rd. Theme for study: "Builders in a New Day." We hope to have a large number present.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The artificial and the real both exist and attract attention. Both are useful in their place and represent values all their own. God made the real and man makes the artificial. The artificial is an imitation or copy of the real. As man was made in the image of God, all of man's works prove that he has the characteristics of his Maker. All inventions are efforts to produce something new and useful. All of man's best works prove that he aspires, unconsciously, to follow the divine Creator. His life belongs to God and works toward God. The artist is one who copies the human form, the mountain, the lake, the sunset, the flowers, or the floating clouds. The artist is in touch with nature, is moved by its beauty and its grandeur, and labors to reproduce what he sees and feels. His works attract the attention and admiration of that vast number who do not possess the art-gift of reproduction. Readers are always in larger numbers than writers; consumers in larger numbers than producers.

The artificial often attracts more attention than the real. Pictures attract people more than people, and that is the reason why moving pictures draw the crowds to the theater. Papers and magazines attract attention by their pictures. The picture-world is a big world, and it brings nature's wonders from afar and spreads them before our eyes. The National Geographic Magazine is a wonder in this field of the artificial. All countries and all peoples, all cities and all products are photographed and reproduced in colors of great beauty and great information. The artist uses his machine as well as his gifts in reproducing the vast realities of the natural world and the artificial world. This is not a monotonous world in which we live, but a world of infinite variety and beauty. Even nature's repetitions are attractive and intensely interesting; for example, the sunrise and sunset, the change of seasons, the day with its brightness and the night with its stars. The artificial never equals the real, and that is the reason that human society ought to be more real than artificial. Religion should be a real experience and a real life of that experience. Formal religion, artificial religion, creedal religion attract attention, but spiritual religion changes the hearts of men and makes love genuine in its manifestations. The artificial attracts more attention than the real because it is the product of man.

There was recently placed in the window of a corner store in Suffolk an artificial cow. She stands there wagging her tail, moving her head, opening and closing her mouth and eyes. She looks like a Jersey dairy cow. Evidently her motions, which seem natural, are produced and controlled by electricity. People, in passing, stop and look intently at this artificial cow. Little children and grown people alike stop, gaze, and wonder. More people have looked at that artificial cow than have ever stopped to look at a natural cow in Suffolk. Artificial society attracts more attention than real society. Artificial people attract more attention than real, natural people.

ELON LETTER.

The final offering for Elon for this college year in our Sunday Schools is scheduled for the fifth Sunday in March—the 30th day of the month. Just as soon as these offerings are in, we will ascertain which schools in each Conference have won the two scholarships awarded for the largest per capita offering and the largest gross offering. The winning schools will then be asked to name the young people to enjoy these scholarships for next year. Ten Christian Church young people are on scholarships at Elon this year—two from each Conference—appointed by their schools to this honor.

It is earnestly hoped that each Sunday School will make as liberal an offering as possible on March 30th, and that the advantages of attending our own college will be insisted on in connection with the offering. The Convention's hope is not only to raise necessary money for our college through these offerings, but to quicken local interest as well.

The following schools have remitted for the quarter ended on the fifth Sunday in January, 1929:

Eastern Virginia Conference.
Berea (Norfolk)	$ 5.31
Christian Temple	409.16
Dendron	2.00
Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va.	7.00
First, Norfolk	3.50
First, Richmond	60.12
Holland	7.00
Holy Neck	7.19
Hopewell	1.50
Mt. Carmel	3.30
Rosemont	6.06
South Norfolk	5.78
Suffolk	31.28
Union (Southampton)	1.29
Union (Surry)	2.10
Wakefield	2.67
Waverly	3.07
Webster	2.40
North Carolina and Virginia Conference.
Apple's Chapel	$ 1.10
Berea	2.33
First Church, Greensboro	9.92
Hines Chapel	.84
Kallam Grove	.60
Lebanon	1.00
Liberty	1.17
Long's Chapel	.58

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

Finding One's Place.

The schools of technology train for special vocations, but the training received from liberal colleges is larger than any special task. The small man knows in his freshman year just what he is going to do. The larger a man is, the greater will be his perplexity on the day of his graduation from college. Whatever supremely attracts us, we cannot permanently escape, for our attractions are proportioned to our destinies. When we find our task we will be delighted in performnig it or success will not attend our labors.

The salesman, the manufacturer, the transportation manager deals primarily with visible and tangible objects; but the learned professions deal primarily with ideas, conceptions, with principles which underlie all human action. The clergyman, the diplomatist, the artist, the poet, all live in the realm of ideas; and to them, ideas are far more real than the world of ledgers and shuttles and looms and steel rails. Do you like to deal with things or with ideas?

Are you at your best when fitting into a structure some one else has built, or in building a new structure for yourself? The farmer has to create and turn his passive soil into crops; the post-office clerk does as he is told and is happy to be relieved of further responsibility.

Are you working for quick returns or for something far away? For the position you can get when you are twenty-five years old, or the place you may occupy at fifty? If you demand swift pecuniary returns, keep out of all the professions, out of all scientific or historical research, out of all religious effort.

If you are working for your single self, you can give your time to stock speculations or attach yourself to some political boss. If you are working for the whole social order, you will not be permanently satisfied with any business or profession which does not visibly minister to the welfare of society. To manipulate securities so that one can extract a profit is a job so petty that no liberal mind can long stay in it. To create values, whether by raising hay or making shoes, or designing a bridge, or playing the violin is to leave the world a little richer and better because we have been in it.

Whatever our calling, the chief requisites to success are accuracy, promptness, fidelity and acceptance of responsibility—the virtues which we often neglect as out of date. They will go out of date with the multiplication table and the alphabet, not before. Without them we can climb to no worthy station in life.

PORTO RICO LETTER.

This year I have given a great deal of my time to Santa Isabel Church, as it has a splendid group of young people who need attention. Many times have I wished that I could live there, so that I could do more for this Church. I may say that we are very fortunate to have Brother Placida Vazquez as pastor of the Church, as he is one of the best educated workers that we have; also that he has taken a great interest in religious education work, and has co-operated with me more than all the workers and missionaries that we have on our field. His Church is one of the best organized Churches we have on this field.

A junior Endeavor was organized in January, with a membership of 17 eager little folks who are too happy to have the responsibilities of their little society. About two weeks ago a girls' club was organized as a branch of my club in Ponce Church. This work has proved to be more successful and mostly needed in the branch of religious education. The young girls need attention, which they do not receive from their homes. The motive of my club work has been to train the girls in domestic work, to learn more about themselves, and above all to help them to become real Christian characters. They are to be the mothers of tomorrow, and a real Christian mother can build a Christian home. Oh, I wish that I could open a community house, so that I could meet the needs of hundreds of boys and girls and little folks who are lost in the attractions of unclean surroundings.

The youth of Porto Rico is hungry for the wholesome recreational life, and that is the only way that we can reach the youth of a country as strong Catholic as is this island. The community work is proving a great success in the Churches that have tried and are trying.

During my term of work on this island I have given great attention to the recreational programs, and have tried to give our boys and girls as much as I could. I am living alone and have been very fortunate in having a big house in my possession, and I have taken the advantage of the place by leaving the doors open to our little folks as well as big boys and girls to come and enjoy wholesome games, music, parties, and hand-work. Every Monday afternoon, after school, I have a class of little girls that are learning to sew, also enjoy games, after an hour of hand-work. I also have two hours of play period in our Churchyard every Thursday afternoon after school, and certainly the little folks have enjoyed these two hours to the fullest. Most of our boys and girls do not have the opportunities of play, or to enjoy a normal childhood life. On Friday afternoon I give two hours to the young ladies of four of our Churches in Ponce to learn different sports. Probably you remember reading about the Union Girls' Athletic Club in my annual reports, as it was just organized, but I am glad to say that it is at work and we are having a great success with our basketball teams.

Last month we had the pleasure of having with us Dr. Day and Dr. Cady and Mr. Hinks, representatives of the Congregational Church. They brought to us an inspirational message that led us to believe in the union of His work more than before. May we not pray for the day to come when all will be one?

The splendid program of the "World Day of Prayer" was observed by three of our Churches. I was able to make enough copies on the mimeograph to send to our different points. At Santa Isabel the young people had this program in their charge, also in our Arus Chapel; but in Ponce the Woman's Society was responsible for the program. I wish to thank Mrs. Powers for sending me the program. However, this program is published in Spanish every year, which makes it easier for us, so that we do not have to translate it from English to Spanish. I am happy to say that daily the literature in the Spanish language for the evangelical work is increasing, which makes us do more, as it seems to be adapted to the conditions of the people.

I would appreciate it greatly if all those who are thinking of helping in this work by sending material, such as pictures, pencils, pieces of material, or old clothes, would kindly send them to me before the first of June, as I am trying to make my plans for the daily vacation Bible schools before I leave for my furlough. Thanks.

FIELD NEWS.

Corinth.

On the third Sunday in February I visited the Corinth Church and Sunday School in the interest of the Piedmont Junior College. This is one of our loyal Churches of the Alabama Conference, but it is not able to do as much for the college as some others. They pledged $25 and as much more as they could make up for the college through the fifth Sunday offerings.

Rev. C. W. Carter has been pastor of this Church for five years. He is one of our strong preachers and a fine pastor, and the membership certainly appreciate his services. He is one of the many who is a strong supporter of Piedmont Junior College in getting students and funds. We are hoping that this Sunday School, although small, will win one of the scholarships offered by the college.

Rock Stand.

Sunday at 11 A. M., February 23rd, I preached to the Rock Stand congregation, and at the close of the services presented the needs of the college. The attendance and interest was fine throughout the whole service.

The quota for this Church as interest on the Conference note is $40 and the fifth-Sunday offerings. We feel that this Church will have no trouble raising the full amount asked of the membership for Piedmont Junior College, and the college must get the quotas from the Churches and Sunday Schools if it continues its operations and get a large per cent of it soon.

This is Rev. J. D. Dollar's home Church. He was pastor of it for several years, and his son, Rev. C. C. Dollar, who is now a student in Elon College, was pastor last year. Their present pastor is Rev. A. H. Sheppherd, who is doing a good work and is finding his way into the interests of his people. He and his folks can be depended upon to do their share in support of the college.

They tell me that this Church was named for a certain incident in history of pioneer days, while many deer still roamed the forests. Hunters took their stand on a certain rock on a high elevation in order to see the deer pass by below as they followed their trail, and would shoot them (or at them) as they passed by); hence the name given to the place—Rock Stand. From the elevation that the Church stands on, you can see many miles away. May the ideals and kingdom interests of this community be in proportion to the elevation of the building.

New Hope.

I held services at the New Hope Church on the fourth Sunday night in February in the interests of the college. A very fine audience greeted the speaker, consisting largely of young people. The quota for this Church is $50 as their share of the interest on the endowment note given by the Conference to Piedmont Junior College, and the fifth-Sunday offerings are to apply on the $150 to be raised by the Alabama Conference from the Sunday Schools. All money may be paid through the Sunday School and credited to the scholarship.

This is one of our good Churches, and they will have no trouble in going over the top. They have the college at heart and will do their best to support it in its efforts to live and accomplish the work for which it was established. This is Dr. J. T. Clack's old Church, and he and his associates do things in a worth-while way.

Rev. G. D. Hunt was pastor of this Church for several years, and when he was elected to his new

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(March.)

Saviour of all, Thou dost bid us "Go." In mercy plead Thou for us that we may be swifter to learn the whole meaning of that command and obey it. As the efficacy of Thy blood is not measured by the Palestine path of Thy earthly journeyings, but reaches "unto the uttermost," even so does the Holy Spirit, not limited by the traverse of our feet, but according to the equipment which we supply, go for us "into all the world." Of whatever we are or possess, God help us not to withhold, but to give for others as we ourselves have received. In Jesus' name. Amen.

MISSIONARY LITERATURE AND OFFERING.

We have never had better literature for the enlightenment of our people in missionary fields than that issued this year. Some pastors and Churches are taking advantage of this and are finding it exceedingly helpful. Others, of course, are not, and they little realize what they are missing. There is one piece of literature, "My Church and Its Widening Horizon," which not only tells of our work in Porto Rico and Japan, but of that "to the uttermost" parts which have been opened up to us and made a part of our work since the merger with the Congregationalists. Fields in India, Africa, China and the isles of the sea are ours to help, if we will help, and are calling us and giving us the privilege fo becoming heralds of the cross among the people of all tongues and tribes.

Pastors and Churches never needed to place such emphasis as they do this year on the missionary offering, for two reasons:

1. Our opportunity has suddenly been enlarged, and the challenge is to the largest task we ever had.

2. This is a time of financial depression, and many feel that they cannot give. This should mean an opportunity rather than a hindrance. When there is abundance, it is not hard to give. We do not have to make sacrifices when giving in prosperous times. We give without making sacrifices. This year the people have the opportunity of making a real sacrifice, because there is not an abundance out of which to give. Instead of hard times and financial depression preventing, they should afford an opportunity. It is out of sacrifice that the Lord's work goes forward, and the Church is built up and the spiritual life is deepened. The whole missionary enterprise grew out of self-denial, self-sacrifice, and has been carried on through self-denial and sacrifice.

This is why missions constitute the spirituality, the vitality, and the vigor of the Church. God has seen fit to ordain that His gospel shall be preached through sacrifice. Those who have gone out for us have sacrificed most of all. Those of us who have sent them out and are to keep them out have to sacrifice in order to do so, but in this sacrifice and self-denial we are enriched spiritually.

There never was a better time for a spiritual awakening in the Church than now. If we deny ourselves for the sake of our Lord in order that we may bear witness of Him and give His testimony to the nations, we shall be spiritually enriched. Now is the opportunity for spiritual development, for spiritual enrichment, for we become spiritual by doing the spiritual work, by surrendering ourselves and our all to our Lord, that through this surrender we may be witnesses of Him both at home and abroad.

The Church this year has its best opportunity of being a witness-bearer for Christ. If we call upon the Churches and upon our people to sacrifice out of their necessity, out of their real need, out of their lack, out of their want, we are then being crucified with Christ and coming to be joint heirs with Him in sharing His glory and building up His kingdom. It will be a pity, indeed, if any Church neglects such a wonderful opportunity for spiritual enrichment by neglecting to take the offering and doing its best to bear testimony of our Lord through the offering. Bear in mind that our offering to missions is an offering made in Christ's name and for His sake, and to carry His message to those who haven't it. Through our offering this year, we will bear testimony of Him and make a real sacrifice for His sake. Through such sacrifice, again let it be said, comes spiritual enrichment. "Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." And He had a mind to practice the greatest self-denial, and, by the supreme sacrifice, make Himself known as the Saviour of the world. J. O. A.

UNION AND PROGRESS IN PORTO RICO.

Porto Rico is one of the newer fields for evangelical Christianity. Thirty years ago there was not a single Protestant Church on the island. Today there are more than two hundred organized Churches, besides many unorganized preaching points, with a total membership of more than twenty thousand. An even more significant fact is that for several years the mission boards have been able rapidly to reduce the number of missionaries until today no board has more than one missinoary in general evangelistic work, in addition to teachers and physicians. One of the largest missions has recently selected a Porto Rican as superintendent of its evangelistic work. Another mission has no American missionary connected with it in any capacity. Not a single Church on the island is in charge of a missionary pastor. The Churches are rapidly working towards self-government and self-support.

Within less than thirty years, the evangelical Churches have come to occupy a place of influence altogether out of proportion to their numerical strength. Being a Protestant is looked upon in most quarters as an asset. A prominent government official, himself a Roman Catholic, recently appealed to the Protestant ministers to send him young men to work in his department. In the course of the appeal he said, "The most reliable, trustworthy, efficient men I get come from the evangelical Churches. They seem to have a strength of character which the average young man does not have. I want more of them." The evangelical ministry is looked to for leadership in every forward movement for social, moral and spiritual betterment. The Commission of Education of Porto Rico, when congratulated on the remarkable progress of his department, replied that he did not feel that even his many and good schools were making the contribution to Porto Rico that the Protestant ministers scattered over the island were making. The chief justice of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, in a public address, said that he considered that each one of the many and difficult problems now before the people of Porto Rico was, in the last analysis, a religious problem, and that the young ministers were doing the one thing that could solve the problems. The judge of the federal court of Porto Rico told the president of the Evangelical Seminary that he is now convinced that not the courts, nor even education as he formerly had believed, but the kind of work being done through the seminary and through its graduates was the only hope for the future.

Of course, there are many elements entering into such a victory as this. The one, however, which the writer feels to be of greatest importance is the spirit of co-operation and unity which has more or less characterized the work from the beginning, but which has arisen to a place of dominant importance during the past ten years. This has enabled the evangelical Churches to present a solid front and to conserve and use many of their forces which, under ordinary conditions of rivalry and competition, would have been lost.

Fields of Activity.

The island is divided into zones of activity, and each mission is given a special field, with the responsibility of developing it. There has been practically no overlapping. The local Church is usually known by its location instead of by its denominational connections. The feeling is fine. The spirit of "the second mile" has more often predominated than has the contrary. A simple illustration will serve to demonstrate the spirit in which this territorial agreement has been carried out. Some years ago, the Presbyterian Church transferred a small portion of its territory to the Disciples of Christ, who were geographically better able to take care of it. The only hitch in the negotiations came in connection with the transfer of the three modern concrete Church buildings which the Presbyterians had erected. The Presbyterians insisted on giving the three buildings to the Disciples free of charge, while the Disciples insisted on paying for them! It was a desire to "give" rather than to "get" which characterized each one.

The dangers which the isolation of divisions of territory brings are overcome by the Interdenominational Conference which is held each summer. From 150 to 200 workers from all of the denominations come together in June for a week of study, fellowship and inspiration. In these gatherings, denominational lines are forgotten. The group becomes one great family interested in one great cause. No business is transacted. It is strictly a time of communion and inspiration.

The Protestant Churches own and operate one of the most modern printing establishments in Porto Rico. They issue a sixteen to twenty-four-page weekly journal of religion which ranks as the neatest, most attractive, best-edited periodical of its kind in the Spanish language. This has taken the place of several little denominational papers which were formerly published. It is a publication which can be placed in the public libraries or handed to the best people with the consciousness that it will make a good impression. A notable fact is that more than half of its subscribers are not members of the evangelical Churches.

The Evangelical Seminary.

But, without doubt, the greatest single factor in the development of the evangelical cause in Porto Rico is the Evangelical Seminary. This institution was established in 1919 to carry forward and enlarge the work formerly done by the various denominational training schools for ministers. Seven denominations—Baptist, Christian, Congregational, Disciples of Christ, Methodist, Presbyterian, and United Brethren—co-operate in its management and support. The faculty is composed of a president and four full-time professors, one of whom is a native son of Porto Rico and a graduate of the seminary. No two are from the same denomination. Each student receives the same training as all the rest. The spirit of the institution is thoroughly evangelistic, its viewpoint is Christo-centric, its methods are modern, its intellectual and spiritual standards are exacting. The Latin-American is cultured, idealistic, and intellectually strong. The minister who successfully appeals to them must have these qualities plus a faith and spiritual power to make him a real leader.

The Evangelical Seminary of Porto Rico is the largest institution of its kind in all Latin-America, and it is the only one giving a standard bachelor in theology degree. It is located just across the street from the University of Porto Rico, and works in complete harmony and co-operation with that institution, which is rapidly moving toward its ideal of becoming a great inter-American university. The students of the seminary and the university mingle in the class-rooms and on the campus, and one of the finest pieces of work being done on the island is that of the quiet influence of these student contacts.

The seminary draws its students from all parts of Porto Rico, and from Cuba, Santo Domingo and Venezuela. Its graduates go to every section of the Caribbean region, as well as to many other parts of the world. Already it has five men in Cuba, five in Santo Domingo, one in Central America, three in Spanish work in New York City, and more than one hundred in important pastorates in Porto Rico. There are constantly on file calls for prepared men from other sections of Latin-America, which cannot be filled.

Porto Rico is the only place in the world where both English and Spanish are official, currently spoken languages. It is the only place where the two civilizations, Spanish and Anglo-Saxon, live side by side under conditions of equal protection and encouragement. It is the logical and only place for the two great cultures of the new world to become welded into that enduring friendship based upon understanding and good will, which can and will stand the stress of suspicion, commercial rivalry, political blundering, and intentional misrepresentation. Columbia University recognized the strategic importance of Porto Rico when it established here its school of tropical medicine. Boston University recognized it when it gave its co-operation in developing here a school of commerce. Charles Evan Hughes recognized it when he accepted the chairmanship of a special committee organized in New York for the purpose of raising a huge endowment fund for the University of Porto Rico. The Evangelical Seminary wishes to do for the spiritual life of the Americas that which these other institutions and agencies are doing for the scientific, commercial, diplomatic, and purely cultural life.

Two of the big reasons why Protestant Christianity has not made more progress in Latin lands are (1) the lack of unity, and (2) the fact that the message has usually been cast in an Anglo-Saxon theological mold which the Latin mind neither cares for nor understands. Porto Rico has only 3,400 square miles of territory. Into that it has crowded a million and a half men, women, and children. Under these conditions, people have to work in harmony and understanding. Here, evangelical Christianity is trying out many experiments. Here, it is looking deep into its own soul in a noble effort really to find itself in relation to the supreme task of revealing Christ to a Latin people.—Missionary Review of the World.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XIII—March 30, 1930.

(Review Lesson.)

Jesus the Head of the Church.

Golden Text: "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name."—Phil. 8:9.

Lesson: Eph. 1:18-23; Col. 1:17, 18.

Devotional Reading: Phil. 2:5-11.

We Christians are rich—and we do not know it. We look at the meagerness of our material resources, think about our lack of this world's goods and our comparative poverty, and forget about our incalculable and abiding riches and wealth. Paul knew how subtle and universal was this danger, as is evidenced by the opening verses of this lesson. He writes the Ephesians that he earnestly and regularly prays God that they might come to an understanding and appreciation of their true riches, that "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, the eyes of your understanding being enlightened." If only we could see with the eyes of our understanding the things that cannot be seen with the natural eye; if only we could come to a clear appreciation of just what we who are Christians possess!

"That ye may know what is the hope of his calling!" One of the great words of the gospel is the word hope. The gospel in its true power begets a boundless and a deathless hope. Those who are in despair, and those who have no right to hope, humanly speaking, come to a living hope in Jesus Christ. Things as they are are not final, nor are they the ultimate reality. There is an indiscourageable hope that the good shall become better and the better shall become best. This hope concerns not only the life that now is, but the life that is to come. The approach of the Easter season quickens within us all that blessed hope of immortality which was brought to light through Christ.

"What the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints." True wealth cannot be interpreted or computed in terms of the things that one can handle with the hands. There are obscure and poor people from the standpoint of material standards who are rich beyond computation because they have the blessings of Christ upon and in their lives. And they know they are rich. And it doth not yet appear what they shall be or what they shall have.

"And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power?" Power is a word to conjure with in this age, when we read and hear and see so much about power. In a way, man has just begun to discover and to utilize the power in the universe. But even yet there are those who have become blinded to the place of natural power in the scheme of things. They have spelled power with a capital P, and they are bowing down and worshiping it. The highest power is spiritual power, and it is this power which men need, both the greatest and the least. Only as man has the working of the mighty power of God within him can there take place that regeneration of life that makes it safe for him to wield the other forms of power. What all of us need is not knowledge; what we need is more power. The life that is yielded to God has put itself in touch with a source of power that will enable it to do things of which it has not yet dreamed. The present age needs a new manifestation of the power of God expressed in ordinary human life.

"Which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead." Jesus as a worker of mighty works or miracles would have failed of His mission unless there had been resident in the universe a power that made Him victor over death. The supreme evidence of God's power was given in Christ's resurrection. It is that same power that is available to all who live and believe in Christ.

"And hath put all things under His feet." God intended that in all things Christ should have the Pre-eminence. He hath been exalted above all things and persons, both in the life that now is and in that which is to come. It is because of this fact that He was worthy to be the head of the Church.

"And He is the Head of the body, the Church." This verse of few words has tremendous significance. The function of the body is to carry out the will of the mind and the will of man. The Church, according to this figure, is the organized body of Christ, living members to carry out His thought and His will in the world. A man who is a member of the Church is, therefore, a member of the body of Christ. His supreme function is, therefore, to obey the will of the Head, even Christ. In other words, individual Christians, making up the organized, living body of Christ, are to function in manifesting and expressing the mind and will and heart of Christ. Belonging to the Church really means something, after all; that is, if we really belong to the Church. To see this principle in all its applications would revolutionize the life of the members of the Church of Jesus Christ.

What kind of Church would my Church be
If every member of the Church were just like me?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

March 30, 1930.

Topic: "Successful Evangelism in Mission Fields."

Scripture Reading: Acts 16:13-15, 25-33.

Our Christian Endeavor topic for tonight can easily be used for a study of our own mission work. We will crusade in other lands tonight. Let us hear what our own missionaries are doing on the field.

Miss Stacy took an intensive kindergarten course before she sailed for Japan. She has worked with kindergarten classes a great deal of her time in Japan. Miss Crew and the other missionaries to Japan hold kindergarten classes, too. At first, one does not think of the kindergarten work as evangelistic work. But during the forty years since the kindergarten work was started in Japan, it has proved itself a most efficient evangelistic agency. Today the workers of all denominations in Japan say they want "more kindergartens."

Another agency in evangelistic work is the newspaper. Mr. Garman started using this method of spreading the good news in 1916. He conducts an enquirer's column in the newspapers, and also lends books to those who write for them. Mr. Garman says: "The advantages of this form of work are that, with the exception of the first step, contributing articles and advertising in the newspapers, one is dealing with persons already interested to a greater or less degree; also it reaches those who, for some reason are unable or unwilling to attend the local Church to get their teaching, or more frequently those who are too far from Church to attend. Frequently we find our applicants are in trouble and in need of a friend or at least of some one to whom they may tell their troubles." A similar piece of work is done in Porto Rico through the Evangelical Union of Porto Rico, an interdenominational enterprise in which we have a part.

This year we have a definite share in a new type of missionary work that brings rich rewards in evangelism. With Dr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, Jr., on the field, we take part in medical missions. Dr. White will win his way into many hearts because he will heal bodies and will be called a "wonder man" by the natives of the Philippines.

Of course, personal evangelistic work is done by all of our missionaries. A friend writes of Dr. A. D. Woodworth that he "is skilled in the art of personal evangelism, and God has signally honored his consecrated efforts." In English Bible classes, seminary classes, cooking and sewing classes, Christian Endeavor, Sunday School and Church, and in every other phase of missionary work, our missionaries are making contacts that result in the winnnig of the men and women to Christ. Personal evangelism is a most effective method to win men and women to the kingdom.

Evangelism is successful when the men and women who are converted want to help in the work, too. Bible and kindergarten women have meant much to our work in Porto Rico and Japan. Then, there are native pastors. Once a Japanese man came to Dr. Woodworth and told him that he wanted to preach. He had little education, and Dr. Woodworth wondered how he could preach; so he asked him what he would preach. The man said, "I would go back to the village where I used to live and I would say to my friends, 'You know me. You know that I used to drink; I do not drink now. I used to lie; I do not lie now. I used to curse; I do not curse now. Jesus Christ changed my life. He can change yours too.' That is what I would preach."

It is not so much what our missionaries say as it is what they live; it is not so much what they do as what they are. Their living and their being what they are count for evangelism. Let's not forget that the missionaries need our backing. We must live and we must be Christian! America sends out missionaries, and she must back them up! But let not this be our motive for being Christian. No, we must be Christian because we follow the Master.

HOPEWELL, VA.

The Church at Hopewell is still holding the fort, even though they have not reported lately. Through the storms and muddy streets that our city is noted for, the people have found their way to our little house of worship during the winter months. The attendance at Sunday School has been fairly good, the Young Men's Class leading in attendance, with the other classes not so far behind. During the mission period a committee is giving programs of information about the different mission fields each Sunday, which are very interesting and helpful. The Christian Endeavor Society is having a variety of programs and have had some contests to stimulate more interest and activity.

Missionary interest in giving is kept alert by our Missionary Secretary, who solicits funds each Sunday between the Sunday School and preaching services. Although the amount received each Sunday is not large, yet it does count up in the long run, and we hope that our missionary offerings will exceed those of last year. The missionary societies show a gain in some ways over last year, which is encouraging.

The Young People's Society made the heart of the president of the Woman's Society glad by the way they so enthusiastically adopted plans which she presented. They will begin the study book, "All in a Day's Work," at their next meeting. The women have a good attendance at their meetings, and have taken as their study book, "The Crowded Ways," feeling that we are somewhat in the crowded ways right here in Hopewell and that we need much help in our great task.

It saddens our hearts to close this report with the news that our pastor, Rev. J. W. Barrett, will close his pastorate with us the last of March. We grieve to see him go. He and his good wife occupy a large place in our hearts, and we pray God's richest blessings on them as they go from us. Pray for us at this time, as our needs can only be met by the only wise God who giveth to all liberally when asked in faith, nothing doubting. R. H. W.

REIDSVILLE.

We are now in the second week of a Church loyalty campaign, which we hope to do three things:

1. The first month will be used in an effort to get back into harness those whose interest in the work of the Church has died, or at least is not sufficient to pull them out of bed on Sunday mornings. To aid in this work, a card printed for the purpose and carrying with it a pledge to attend at least one service each Sunday for the months of March, April and May are being used. All members of the Church are asked to sign the cards as a vantage point in getting the signatures of those who are not regular in attendance. The names of those to be solicited have been drawn by a group of interested ones who are willing to do the work. We meet each Sunday to report and check up on what has been done. In some cases, names are passed to another, who makes a second call, not as an agent of his Church, but as an interested brother. The results are already very gratifying. The membership is being visited each week in this effort by those doing the work.

2. The second month will be used largely for the purpose of getting people who live in Reidsville, but whose membership is elsewhere, to move their letters to our Church. Some of these are entering enthusiastically with us in the first month's work.

3. We plan during the third month (May) to unite the interest and strength gained in the first two months in a program planned especially to "clinch" the interest gained in the preceding months, and the last two Sundays and the week between are to be used in a series of meetings, not a revival, as a means of getting enthusiasm which will tide us over the summer months with good strength.

We plan to have a revival some time in the fall at which time some strong man will be called in to do the preaching. The preaching throughout the spring campaign is to be done by the pastor.

We feel that last Sunday was our best, morning and evening, since we have been in Reidsville. Pray for us, that the work may continue to grow in spirit and in purpose.

J. H. Dollar, Pastor.

SHALLOW WELL.

The pastor, Rev. T. Fred Wright, filled his regular appointment the second Sunday at 11 A. M. The attendance was large and very attentive. Mr. Wright preached a forceful missionary sermon. A special feature of the service was a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Wright, with Mrs. George Brannon at the piano.

The Sunday School is taking on new life and the attendance at both Church and Sunday School is gradually picking up. Plans are well under way for a "Thomas Day" program in the Sunday School on the fifth Sunday in this month. Everything done or said will be by a Thomas. Prof. H. Lee Thomas, superintendent of Moore County schools, will be the principal speaker. A number of prominent Thomases will take part in the music and other parts of the program. With more than 600 Thomases in Lee County, and visitors from other parts, we are expecting the largest attendance at Sunday School in the history of the Church. So far as we know, it is the only program of its kind ever attempted in North Carolina. Frank F. Watson.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

GOD'S LOVE THROUGH GRIEF.

"Be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves that ye sold me hither, for God did send me before you to preserve life . . . and to save your lives by a great deliverance. So, now, it was not you that sent me hither, but God."—Gen. 45:5-8.

The love of God for us is inconceivably great; so much so that we are told He was pleased to bruise His Son in order that we might be saved.

If this is hard to understand, think of Joseph and his sorrows, and how he understood that it was all for the purpose of the salvation of the remnant of Israel. We can understand this. It is a common experience of man. It has its counterpart in Jesus and His suffering. Who can imagine what the world would be now if Christ had not come? What are we saved to? Saved from sin and saved to righteousness. Saved from the sorrows of earth to the joys of heaven.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, take us in, and enable us to love and serve Thee. Help us to live, that Thou wilt delight in us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DUST.

"Thy soul cleanseth to the dust."—Psa. 119: 25-32.

When we consider our weaknesses and frailties, the most of us are ready to agree that we are not only dust but that we cleave to the dust.

While our souls occupy this tenement of dust, they are in great danger of clinging to the dust and departing from the everlasting things of God. We labor for meat that perisheth.

The Christian soul, however, sees beyond the material and beholds the unseen. He knows that there are values beyond gold. He labors for Christ in all that he does, and his desire is not after perishable things, but after righteousness and God.

In the world there is covetousness, cares and anguish, envy and bitterness, anger and malice. These make hell. With the children of God also there is sadness and sorrow, poverty and suffering, sickness and despondency, misfortunes and griefs, in which one is apt to grow weary of existence, feeling that he cleave to the dust and that life dissolves in sighs and tears. But, notwithstanding, such a one knows that his heart is in heaven, his treasure is with God, and he is not to let his burdens overcome him. If it pleases God to weigh a soul down, it is well. It may be the only way God has to deal with him, if he is to be eternally happy. Or it may be that he is preparing him for the salvation of others.

Cleave to God's premises, and not to the dust. Every faithful soul sometimes is set free from dust. It often comes in this life when the soul is satisfied with good things.

Prayer.—Teach us, O Lord, and we shall keep Thy law; yea, with our whole heart. By the blood of the pure Christ, who bears all for our sakes, cleanse us from all impurities, make us to delight in Thy way, even though it be in affliction. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SOWING AND REAPING.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6:7-9.

Let no man think he can serve the Lord and be a blessing on earth without receiving and keeping the Word of God.

In the lesson today we have the statement of Jesus as to the sins of attitude toward the Word of God. Some folks have a hard crust over them, and the Word cannot penetrate it. They hear it but they forget it. It makes no impression upon them. They have no feelings of unrest or the need of salvation. It may be because they are self-righteous, or it may be because they are obstinate, or because they are sinful. If a little bit of the Word should find lodgment in their hearts, and they should be disposed to listen to the call of God, the devil comes and takes the seed away and guides their thoughts into ways of pleasure and comfort and persuades them that they are fools to bother about anything but the joys of life.

Others are quite easily moved to repent of sins, but their ardor soon cools off. When afflictions come, which are as necessary to the fruit of soul as the sun is to the fruit of the fields, they faint and slide back. The Word did not strike down into a knowledge of sin and true repentance.

Others repent earnestly and sink the Word deep into their souls, but they forget to watch. Enemies sow evil therein, and the fruit soon languishes. How many a noble person has started out all right, married, had a family, contracted debts or acquired wealth, and drifted away, thereafter leading most pitiable Christian lives. There are many things in life classed as thorns that are given us that we might know them as such and weed them out.

Why cannot everybody be of contrite heart, earnest, honest, sustain life in love and bring forth fruits of repentance always?

Prayer.—Lord, do not let the devil take away the Word out of our hearts. Let it sink deep into our souls, that we may bear good and abundant fruit forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GLORY IN AFFLICTION.

"Before I was afflicted, I went astray; but now have I kept Thy word."—2 Cor. 12:2-9.

Paul says, on one hand in his life is the grace of heaven, and on the other is the power of hell which no prayer could drive away. But he says that the thorn in his life was a messenger of grace.

Who is it that may not be likewise blessed? Who has not pride? Yea, unto the end of life! At the same time, just so certainly does the Lord bring about conditions necessary for the lowering of that pride into true humility, and the combination makes good character. We all need these things which tend to keep us in the true, humble spirit. Keep them and thank God for them, for by them God perfects us in that which is good and preserves us from evil.

Prayer.—Lord, deal with us according to Thy wisdom and mercy. Show us the good of every trial and give us grace to sustain us. Humble our hearts, that we may become more and more like Jesus. Amen.

FRIDAY.

LISTENING TO GOD.

"Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."—1 Sam. 3:9.

Did you ever hear the voice of God? When was the last time you heard it? What did He say? Ought it to be possible to have Him speak to us every day? Answers to these questions should set us thinking.

Samuel heard it, and continued to hear it during life. Mary sat by Him and listened to His words. The Lord calls it the one thing needful.

Let us bear in mind that if we do not put ourselves and our attitude where we can listen to His words, we can no more live His life than we can to have a friend whom we never seen.

Our lives are troubled about many things. Our ears are full of noises. The roar of the world deafens us. These will drown the voice of God to us unless we get quiet, be still somewhere and hear God speak. Taste and see how precious the word becomes every day. Pray earnestly, definitely, and feel the regenerating power. Let nature, let truth, let righteuosness, let spirit speak. Hear the voice and glorify Him.

Prayer.—Lord, grant us this grace. Help us to love and hunger for Thy word. May we find delight in all things of Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RECEIVING THE HOLY SPIRIT.

"He saw the spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him."—Matt. 3:13-17.

From the time of his baptism, Jesus is looked upon as the Saviour of the world. From that time, He entered upon His office as a preacher. From that time, all that He said and did revealed heaven and God. From that time, the devil attacked Him furiously and stayed with Him until in the resurrection He won victory over death and the devil. On this He won the victory for us. This is the beloved Son, in whom the Father is well pleased.

This means to us that, as many as are baptized in Him "have put on Christ." It means that He is ours in all that He is, and that we are His—united with Him—and thereby dead to sin. It means that we have received His spirit and entered into His light. It means that if we follow Him, He will not lead us wrong. It means that if we fight in His strength we shall be victors over the devil. Blessed is the man who keeps the blessings conferred upon him by his baptism—he is a child of God in whom the Father is well pleased.

Prayer.—Lord, give us grace to believe, and to have faith, and to stand fast in Thy spirit, and to live in communion with Thee to the end. Amen.

SUNDAY.

BORN AGAIN—ARE YOU?

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." —2 Cor. 5:14-21.

God has reconciled the world to Himself in Christ, but the reconciliation is not effective except in receiving Him.

Every nurseryman knows that it is the graft that produces the refined, true, best fruit; but the graft is nothing until it is placed in the old stem and becomes the main part of the tree. When that takes place, it is a new creature. So it is in putting Christ in the life.

Paul was a true example of this new birth. After his conversion, love throbbed every thought, word and deed. All that he did was in a new spirit, different from the old. We may have what he had. Our hearts may burn, too, for God's gifts. We may hunger truly for the righteous, the regenerated, and the sanctified life in Christ.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, in Thy love we would abide. We pray to be one with Thee forever. Help us to remain in Thee. Be unto us our wisdom, and righteousness and redemption. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The cold, rainy weather has held up to some extent, and we have had some beautiful spring days. It gives us the garden fever and we are tempted by the pretty sunshining days to make a real garden; but we know by experience that there are more cold days in store for us and some frosty mornings, so we hesitate to venture too far, although our crop of garden peas are peeping up to get the sunshine. Busy days are ahead of us now. Irish potatoes to plan and the spring crops to prepare for. The boys are giving their attention after school hours to cutting and splitting wood for the cook stoves this summer. During the winter months, when the weather will permit, this is one of their occupations.

Losing all of our feed in the fire last fall will force us to plant all the hay crop this spring that we can, in order to get something ahead. We are going to greatly increase our dairy herd and put our surplus milk and butter on the market in order to help meet expenses. The Orphanage is not a haven of rest and ease, as some may think. It is a place of activity. Every fellow has his duties to perform, and we do not work by the clock. If the work in busy seasons demands it, the farm tractor may be singing across the field at 10 o'clock at night. Duty first and pleasure afterwards is our motto in carrying on the activities of the Orphanage.

We want to ask all the Sunday Schools to take a special interest in the monthly offerings for the Orphanage and lay special stress on its needs. When our income is about half our expense account, it makes it discouraging to us when the demands are so pressing.

We always feel hurt to turn away a little child when we know it is in need and ought to be given a place; but how can we answer the call of the helpless and needy unless we have funds with which to pay our bill each month. Help the fatherless and the helpless is our plea.

THE SUN LETTER.

Fifteen days in which to earn a nice handbag or a ten-dollar gold coin. Our contest will close April 1st. Mail in your list not later than April 1st. Plenty of time to win in the race. Just takes a little work. Others are working; why not you? One minister will carry a beautiful new handbag to the Southern Convention—will it be you? Let us have your list of renewals and new subscribers for THE SUN. It sometimes happens that some one you least expect wins in a contest like this. It makes no difference how many you have to your credit, some one may send in a larger list right at the end of the month. Keep busy, is my advice, up to March 31st.

FIELD NEWS.

field, Rev. G. S. Hunt, his son, who is now teaching in Piedmont Junior College, succeeded him. He is getting along fine with his Church and college work. He is a very conscientious young man, strong in teaching ability and pulpit work, with a bright future of expression for kingdom work.

We feel that the help coming from this Church will be according to its strength and that a goodly amount will be forthcoming soon to help meet our financial emergency, for our teachers must be paid.

Mount Zion.

On the first Sunday in March I visited the Mt. Zion Church and listened to a good sermon delivered by their pastor, Rev. W. T. Crowder. He is a young man and one of our coming preachers. His subject was "The Highways." He told about the different kinds of roads and their conditions; how they were—wide and narrow, straight and crooked, smooth and rough and full of ruts. While he was preaching, I could not help but think how often we get into ruts and how hard it is to get out, and some of us never get out.

How true it is with our attitude toward Christian education, how hard it is to see that a call of God to preach is a call to prepare, and this in turn gives place to denominational colleges and their whole-hearted support by our Church folks. When we get out of the old rut, we will leave behind our traditional views of the unnecessary qualifications for life service, make the necessary sacrifices to develop the best in our leaders, for the best expressions of lives are meager compared to the value of the work and its need for efficiency. Piedmont Junior College is our own home institution for developing character and leadership, and we must support it.

The pastor asked me to take charge of the Communion service, and at the close of this I presented the needs of the college. The quota for this Church as interest on the Conference note is $50, and in addition the fifth-Sunday offering. We feel that this Church will have no trouble in raising the amount asked for by the Conference for the college. The college is needing funds at once; we shall expect some money from this Church soon. We must not let the college suffer for lack of funds to carry on its work.

Antioch.

I had arranged to preach at the Antioch Church on the second Sunday in March at 11 A. M., but did not get there until the closing prayer on account of tire trouble. Some years ago, when organs were first introduced into our Church services, objectors said they had the devil in them, and the same thing was said when violins were used in orchestras for the Church; but this time it was the devil in the automobile tire. But it happened to be a deteriorated innertube, so I fixed it five times before I arrived there. Good old Brother Brown saved the day for me, for he got up to talk just as I went inside the Church, and when he got through I got a chance to present the work and needs of the college. They had a fine audience, and two of our trustees, who are members of this Church, were there—J. W. Lane, who is sheriff of Chambers County, and W. Royston, who is tax collector of the same county.

The quota for the Antioch Church is $50, not including the fifth-Sunday offerings. This is another one of our good Churches, and it will be no trouble for them to do even better than this, and we feel confident that they will. Rev. G. D. Hunt was pastor of this Church about thirty or forty years; probably I had better not say anything more, for I may come near telling his age, and he might object. He certainly did a good piece of work for this Church, and it was with regret and reluctance that they gave him up to enter upon his larger work as field secretary for the Georgia and Alabama Conferences.

Rev. A. H. Sheppherd, who is their present pastor, said he had a premonition that I would not be there to preach, so he loaded both barrels and fired them at the same time. I said, "You surely must have hit something." Brother Sheppherd is a good man and a good preacher. We are looking for this Church to send us a good offering very soon.

breeze in upon her neighbors, say "howdy," and pour out a stream of words which gave no one time to say anything. She would then arise and say, "Good-by, dears; I am so glad I came. It has been such a lovely conversation." When it was not a conversation at all; it was a monologue.

There is a prayer of similar sort. It is a prayer that is poured out fast and finished with an "amen" and a jump to the feet, and on with the show. Opportunity for God to speak has been shut out. The answer to prayer has been made impossible. The reality of God has been prevented. As there should be quiet times when one may listen to others speak, so there should be quiet times when one may listen for God's voice. There are many things He wishes us to know, comforts He wishes to give, guidance He would extend, encouragements to bestow, peace of soul in troubled moments to be provided. But He can never give them until one has stopped to listen. God the Father, loving, human, compassionate God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

OBITUARIES.

SIPE.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our brother, David Jennings Sipe, whose death occurred November 30, 1929; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in his passing our Church at Pleasant Grove, Va., has sustained the loss of a consecrated and efficient member.

2. That the Church realizes his love and interest in all Christian activities and commend that spirit in him as worthy of imitation.

3. We feel that he was a man of great honor and integrity, and that he looked upon his fellow-men with a broad faith in the same virtues within them.

4. He was clean physically, mentally and morally, and had an unfaltering faith in Christ.

5. He loved the service of worship and attended wherever he might be, if possible. His prayers were always beautiful and fitting for each occasion.

6. We extend to all his loved ones, brother, sisters, and especially his widow, who is secretary of this Church, our sincere sympathy, and commend her to the care of our Heavenly Father, in whom her companion so completely trusted.

SAMUEL.

Mr. Henry Franklin Samuel fell on sleep February 15, 1930, being 82 years, 10 months, and 14 days of age. He had been a member of Salem Chapel Christian Church for sixty years and deacon for fifty-nine. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Madie Robertson Samuel, eight grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren. His upright life and virtuous conduct merited for him an enviable reputation, which was his richly to enjoy through life. He loved everybody and everybody respected him.

Salem Chapel will miss his regular attendance, but he will still be a great inspiration as he lives in the hearts and lives of the people who knew him. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

The last rites for this godly man were conducted by Rev. J. L. Foster, his pastor, and myself. Peace to his memory and rest to his soul in the eternal city of our God.

J. WEBSTER PATTON.

DANIEL.

My father, J. R. Daniel, was born October 12, 1855, and departed this life, at his residence, near Sunbury, N. C., January 28, 1930, age 74 years, 3 months, and 16 days. He united with the Damascus Christian Church, Gates County, N. C., early in life and remained a faithful member until death. He was an honest and industrious man, a good provider, and a generous neighbor, and was cheerful as long as he was able to sit in his chair. He fell from a load of hay about thirteen years ago and broke both arms at once, and was an invalid for about eleven years. His suffering was great, and friends did all they could for him, but God knew best. He died a week after my mother died, and said he was going to heaven.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. B. White, of Windsor, Va., and burial was made in the family cemetery. "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," were sung at the house. "In the Sweet By and By" and "God Be With You" were sung at the grave. The display of floral designs and a crowded house witnessed the esteem in which he was held by his community. He will be missed, and especially by his only son and daughter-in-law.

I found great pleasure in reading to him, he being unable to read. He leaves several nephews and nieces. Our home has been made very sad by the death of father, mother and our only child within three months. We are very lonely, but we are trying to think of them as not dead but living in a better world, and we are trying to fight the good fight, so that when our course here on earth is finished the great Judge of all the world will be able to say, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," and be forever with them in that eternal home above.

WATSON.

Dr. George Saunders Watson was born on December 31, 1844, and peacefully fell on sleep March 4, 1930. Thus 85 years, 2 months, and 4 days marked the span of his pilgrimage in the flesh. He was a man blessed of God through this length of more than four-score years, and his days thus aiding and emphasizing the blessings and benefits of such a life to those around about him whom he influenced for righteousness and truth. He was the son of E. F. and Rachel Garrison Watson, and was reared amid gracious and godly surroundings and influences.

Graduating from the Medical College of Baltimore in 1874, he enjoyed a wide practice in the busy days of his young manhood, into which practice he carried not only a mind trained to medical science, but a heart tuned to sympathy and service. He was happily united in marriage to a true help-meet for him on November 28, 1880, when Mary Virginia McCauley, from the home of another and eminent physician, came to be his devoted companion. Of these twain, four children were born—Mary L., now Mrs. T. W. Chandler; Ellen, who, since June, 1911, has been transferred to the family of God on high; Martha Ann, of Elon College, and John McCauley, now of Greensboro, N. C. Besides these, there survive of the family one brother, D. W. Watson; one sister, Mrs. Sue L. Garrison, and two grandchildren, George R. and Frances Chandler. The family, embraced by the loving heart of the deceased, is far larger than these names or numbers indicate, since with him his home was a part of that larger family with which he was identified in sincerity, pursuit and love from early youth even till the time of his departure.

He served as deason first in Union Church, Union Ridge, N. C., of which Church and community he was a vital factor for many years, and later the Elon College Christian Church. His Church entrusted him, among others, with the all-important duty of selecting a site for and of locating Elon College. Having served in this capacity, he was made a member of the board of trustees of the college from its beginning and remained a member to the day of his departure. He has been a part of the very life, history and progress of this great enterprise of the Church, and gave to it the fervor, the favor and the flame of a willing hand and a zealous, consecrated soul.

Interested not only in the education of young men and young women, his great heart went out in sympathetic interest to the orphan and the widow, and through the years of its existence, he had been a member also of the board of trustees of our Christian Orphanage. Every neighbor of his who knew him as I knew him can, in good conscience and with all sincerity, use as our very own the words of nispiration in the good Book, which say, "And he walked with God and was not, for God took him." Worn from the pilgrimage of more than four-score years, enfeebled in the flesh, but never faithless or faltering in the spirit, our friend and brother in Christ rests from the journey, and his works, goodly works, faithful and loving works, do follow him. Blessed is such a memory forever.

IS IT APPETITE SPEAKING?—

The Literary Digest is at present conducting a nation-wide poll on the prohibition question. It has set for itself the task of ascertaining the desires and convictions of twenty million American citizens on this question that is being so widely discussed in every part of America. Great interest is manifested in the results of the vote, not alone because it will portray such a large cross-section of American sentiment, but because of the fact that the straw votes which the Literary Divest has conducted in national political campaigns have been such accurate indications of the actual vote itself.

In the Literary Digest issue of March 22nd, there is tabulated the results of a little over seven hundred thousand votes. The results so far indicate that a majority of the voters are wet in their convictions. Religious leaders everywhere will be deeply interested in the final outcome of the straw vote. But when the votes are all in, and the results are tabulated, there will still be an issue left unsettled in which the Christian forces of America should be more interested than in the majority favoring enforcement, modification or repeal. And that question is whether or not the vote expresses individual appetite for alcoholic liquors or whether it expresses unselfish consideration for the welfare of others.

As is always the case when moral and social questions become mixed up in politics, we are in danger of losing sight of the main issue, as seen from a Christian standpoint. For there is a distinctly Christian principle involved in the question of prohibition. It is the question that Paul faced with reference to the eating of meats which had been offered to idols. The Christian is under obligation to consider not only his individual desires and preferences in such an issue, but also the welfare of those who are weaker than he, and who may be overwhelmed by temptations that others might safely withstand. The issue that is at present being debated is but one of several ways by which America is being weighed in the balance to determine whether, at heart, selfishness or Christian brotherhood is the stronger motivating power in American life. And it looks at times as if selfishness were still predominantly ascendant.

STATE RELIGIOUS CONFERENCES.—

For several years there has been held in Ohio State conferences of Protestant religious bodies. Representatives of the various denominations have met and for three or four days given their attention to the consideration of the problems that confronted the religious workers in all sections of the Commonwealth. These conferences seem to have grown steadily in the number of workers who attend, and in the interest manifested and the good accomplished. Recently the idea seems to have taken hold in other States, and such conferences have been held in adjacent States.

We can foresee only increasing opportunities for good in such conferences. The surprising fact is that they have been so long coming into more popular favor. When one is privileged to attend religious conferences of a denominational connection other than one's own, the striking fact is that other people are confronted with identical problems as those with which we are wrestling. It will also be noted that generally the method of attack follows similar lines. Sometimes it will be noted that others have already abandoned the methods now being tried by one's own denomination, having found that they do not bring about the desired results. Sometimes there are other denominations that have already solved the particular problem with which we are at present engaged, and could give desired information, that it might take years to achieve working independently.

The only way that denominations will be able to maintain the present status of separation is by keeping apart. To enter into wider religious fellowship is often to find the spiritual companionship for which one's soul has hungered. It will also mean sometimes a deeper appreciation of the group with which we are at present connected. We sometimes see so much of our own little limited circle that we are conscious only of the weaknesses and imperfections of associates. Such contact as we have had with other denominational connections has been with the outstanding denominational figures. From such contacts we might get the idea that all the little people are afflicted with our group. An intimate acquaintance with other groups reveals the fact that they, too, have members with peculiar mental quirks and deep-seated obstinacies.

If there is any patent fact in connection with our religious life as at present constituted, it is that we are not adequately meeting the demands of the age in which we live. We ought to be availing ourselves of any experience or methods which others have been able to turn to advantage. We ought by this time to have become convinced of the value of united effort and concerted attack.

GIVE THE PREACHER A CHANCE.—

It has become a sort of accepted custom to lay at the door of the Church the responsibility for any weakness or collapse of the social order. When the World War was raging at its worst, we were very gravely informed that such conditions were possible only because the Church had failed. When industrial warfare was being waged in the cotton mills of the South, and when actual blood was being spilled, those who were seeking the cause of the disorders turned their attention upon what the Church was or was not doing.

And when the trouble-seekers get too insistent in their charges against the Church, then the next step is to lay the responsibility for the failure of the Church upon the shoulders of the preacher. The usual course of procedure is either to begin or to end with the premise that the preacher is the "key-man." It does not matter whether things have been done that ought not to have been done, or whether things have been left undone that ought to have been done, the general conclusion is that the preacher is responsible. Some day, perhaps, there will arise some indivdiual with a burning sense of justice and the ability to analyze a complicated situation who will tell us where the responsibility for existing conditions really lies.

For the present, however, we will take it for granted that what has been said about the pastor being the "key-man" is actually true. We will assume that the preacher is really responsible for all the weaknesses and the failures within the Church, and that since the Church is responsible for the moral and social order as it exists at present, that the responsibility for that, too, rests upon the shoulders of the preacher. If all these things, then, be true, by all means "give the preacher a chance!"

If the preacher is expected to accomplish all these things, his main weapon will have to be the power of spiritual ideals which he imparts mainly through his messages to his people. The Protestant Church, at least, pins its hopes for the salvation of the world upon the power of the preached word. But preaching has never been potent enough to move the world by empty pews. Fortunate, indeed, is the preacher who averages twenty-five per cent of his membership to hear his messages. We have long since realized that we can hold the public school teacher accountable, only when the pupils attend classes, and so we have the compulsory school attendance laws and the truant officer. "Give the preacher a chance!"

We know perfectly well that the Church ought not to be a one-man institution. But how many preachers are backed by a corps of Church officers that are giving their best thought and efforts to the work of the Church? The average preacher is entirely dependent for the success of his work upon the voluntary, willing and faithful efforts of the Church officiary and membership. In other words, if you are a Church member, the success of the work depends in so far as you are concerned, upon your willingness to do your part. "Give the preacher a chance!"

Then there is the question of the lack of physical equipment, and the limited opportunity because of lack of adequate finances. Think what these things mean, and "give the preacher a chance!"

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. A. Harper made a brief visit to the office of THE SUN last week. We are always glad to see him.

Many pastors are sending in requests for mission literature, and all report that they are doing their best to create missionary interest and to take the Easter offering for missions as decided upon by the Convention and the Conferences.

If the secretaries have not delivered to the Churches the envelopes for distribution, we are sure they have them and will be glad to deliver them if any one makes inquiry about them. They have been sent, and every member in every Church should have an envelope for the Easter offering.

Rev. G. D. Hunt writes: "The Georgia and Alabama Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention is to meet with the Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., embracing the fifth Sunday in this month. We are planning for the best Convention we have ever held. A good delegation is expected from Congregational Churches of the State, and some of their field workers are planning to be there. I have made one trip recently to Alexander City and had a good service. I think the prospect is good there for a Christian Church."

The Churches this year celebrate the 1900th anniversary of the resurrection of our Lord, and Pentecost. The Churches do well to bear this in mind at Easter time, because out of these two great events came the Church and the power to plant and sustain the Church and the command to bear witness of Him "whom to know aright is life eternal." Every Church can properly celebrate Pentecost by tarrying in prayer and praise and worship until the members are endued with power, and then they will be witnesses for Him and will not withhold.

We learn through Rev. J. Lee Johnson, pastor, that Pleasant Union Christian Church, near Lillington, N. C., was totally destroyed by fire one day last week. This news will carry sincere and deep regret to many hearts. The Sunday School Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference was held in this Church last summer, and many sacred memories cluster about it. Brother Johnson was not sure as to when and how the Church would be rebuilt, but surely another and even a better one will, in the providence of God, take the place of the building that is now in ashes.

This is mission period, and missions have the right of way in all Churches now until after Easter. Only as the Churches avail themselves of this opportunity can our work for missions in the home and foreign field be sustained. There are calls at home and opportunities abroad such as we never had before. We cannot believe that our pastors and Churches will be indifferent to the decision of the Convention and the Conferences to give this period to the cultivation of missions and strive, with zeal and in self-denial, to make the Easter offering for missions the most liberal we have ever made it.

The Mission Secretary was with Rev. J. Lee Johnson and his people at Wake Chapel, 11 A. M., Sunday, the 16th, and at Christian Light at 3 P. M. the same day. It was a real joy and inspiration to be in these congregations where pastor and people work together to the glory of God with such fervor and consecration. We were assured that the mission envelopes would be distributed to the membership of the Churches and all would be given an urgent invitation and request to make a liberal offering on Easter for missions. Bro. Johnson's Churches may be counted upon to do their part for missions and the enlargement of the kingdom of our Lord.

The date of the meeting this year of the Southern Christian Convention is 2 P. M., Tuesday April 29, and the place is the United Church, Raleigh, N. C. The program committee was in session at Norfolk last week preparing the program for the occasion. The State conferences of the Congregational Churches take place in the United Church at Raleigh just prior to the meeting of the Southern Convention, and many of its members plan to remain over and be in our Convention. Prepare to go to the Convention. It is likely to be the most interesting and the most potent session held for many decades. The question of working out many of the details of the merger of Christians and Congregationalists will be discussed.

Dr. L. E. Smith, of Norfolk, is conducting a series of meetings with the pastor, Dr. G. O. Lankford, in the Burlington Christian Church. Of Dr. Smith and these services, the Burlington Daily Times, March 20th, says: "Dr. L. E. Smith, of Norfolk, Va., who is doing the preaching in the revival services which are in process at the First Christian Church, is delivering eloquent and powerful sermons from night to night. The sermon last night was based upon James, the 5th chapter and the 16th verse, 'The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much,' the subject being, 'Prevailing Prayer.' The speaker stated that prevailing prayer is the prayer of the righteous man or woman. By a 'righteous man,' he asserted that he might make use of philosophical terms or give theological definition, but he preferred to use the simplest language possible, that all might understand. By a 'righteous man,' he had in mind 'a man who is right'—right with himself, his family, his neighbors, his Church and his God. Such a man touches God and brings God down to earth. 'Prevailing prayer is based upon a clean life, is persistent, expectant; prevailing prayer prevails.' This message was heard with the closest attention throughout and a profound impression was made upon the audience present. The attendance was the largest since Sunday, the auditorium being filled almost to capacity."

The Mission Secretary had the rare privilege on Monday, March 17th, of being a guest and one of the speakers at the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association, in Norfolk, Va. Every pastor of the Conference, save one, and every member of the association was present. This ministerial association enjoys the distinction of being the largest and longer in existence of any of the associations of the Conferences of Christia nministers in the Southern Convention. For about a quarter of a century now they have made it a point to meet monthly, to renew their fellowship and acquaintance and to discuss together their common problems. The subject uppermost for discussion at the meeting in Norfolk, March 17th, was the mission period now on in the Churches, the program that each minister was carrying out, and the prospects for the mission offering at or about Easter. After the Mission Secretary had addressed the association on these topics, the members of the association took up the discussion, and for more than an hour a most interesting and lively discussion of the topic was carried on. The great majority of the members of the association spoke individually, giving his plan of procedure and the program he was putting on, or was to put on. One member finally moved that it be the sense of the body that, as pastors, they would use their best effort to reach the goal in every Church —that of one-third for missions of the amount of pastor's salary. The ministers in Eastern Virginia will certainly do their part by the mission offering. One declared that there was talk of hard times and financial depression, but, said he, "we notice the people are getting what they need, possibly through sacrifice and self-denial; and if the people were shown, they would make self-denial and sacrifice for missions and for the glory of their Lord and the salvation of souls." If the Churches in Eastern Virginia do not reach their quotas for missions it will not be from lack of desire and interest on the part of pastors.

Shall we have a Christian Church in Winston-Salem? Dr. W. C. Wicker, pastor of two rural Churches out from Winston-Salem, which Churches have members and ex-members living in that city, was able with little effort to get hold of thirty-two names and addresses of members of the Christian Church, and he, with the Mission Secretary, met with a group of these by appointment at the home of Bro. and Sister J. G. Flynt Thursday evening, March 20th. Every one present was exceedingly anxious to see a Christian Church in Winston, and several in the city who could not be present sent regrets and expressed desires. We found that some of the very prominent and active leaders in other Churches of the city were once members of the Christian Church, and we found, on little inquiry and investigation, that there were in all probability more than one hundred in Winston-Salem now who either have been members of Christian Churches or are at present members. This is North Carolina's largest city, and while it may be difficult to start a Church there now, it will be still more difficult twenty-five years from now, and there will be still larger numbers of members and ex-members of the Christian Church there than at present. In other words, this city will remain a constant source of drainage and leakage from our Christian Churches in that section until it has a Christian Church into which they can go in this rapidly growing center. We should have had a Church there twenty-five years ago, and the longer we wait, the more we lose and the more difficult the task becomes. Shall we or shall we not enter in? That is the question. Dr. Wicker is spending three or four days of this week in Winston-Salem, seeking the names and addresses and to form contact with those who are members or have been members of the Christian Church. The prospects thus far seem promising, to say the least. We found two prominent residential sections of the city with wholly inadequate or almost no Church accommodations.

THE SUN LETTER.

We are expecting large lists of new subscriptions by the 1st of April. When you read this letter mail in your list that you have been working on, so it will reach me by April 1st. One minister will get a handsome hand-bag to take with him to the Southern Christian Convention, and one minister will get a ten-dollar gold coin. We are wondering who it will be! Some one who has a large list to send in at the last minute may get the prize.

JESUS AT THE DOOR.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with me."—Rev. 3:20.

The picture of Jesus at the door, which you have before you for this worship hour, is considered one of the greatest masterpieces in all religious art. The painter, Holman Hunt, completed the work in 1857, and today the original is exhibited in Oxford, London, England. The text to which we refer indicates just what the picture signifies, namely: Christ at the door, and truly this thought was in the mind of the painter; but he titled the work, "The Light of the World," a title which is most appropriate. Christ is all things to all men. He is that visitor, who so often knocks upon the door of our hearts; He is the light that guides the sinner from a darkened world into a world of light.

Behold, I stand at the door and knock. As one studies the picture, he observes a pleasing smile upon the face of the Master, who seems delighted with the privilege of calling upon his fellow-man and offering him a chance to learn about God. He anticipates great joy and hope for those who will hear His voice and open unto Him. Again He has a look of sadness upon His blessed countenance as He realizes the conditions under which He labors and of the universal indifference toward Him. A careful study of the painting, the reproduction at which you are now looking, reveals something of the condition of man's heart today. The entrance into it is covered over with vines; weeds have grown over the doorway and the hinges are covered with rust, which indicate that the door has not been opened unto Him in a long time.

As He gently knocks, with that hand that has been pierced with nails, we hear a voice inside say unto Him, "Thou art a stranger unto me; I never knew you; I cannot, I will not open." Thus the door is closed and remains closed for years and years, and grass grows around the door-step. The owner of the door says, "I have never opened it, and have gotten along very well without letting Him in, and I guess I shall go through life without ever opening unto Him; yet when I hear Him knocking, gently knocking, something tells me that I ought, for I have heard Him knock before and He is not exactly a stranger unto me.

Knocking, knocking, who is there?
Waiting, waiting, grand and fair.
'Tis a pilgrim, strong and kingly;
Never such was seen before.
Ah, my soul, for such wonder
Wilt Thou not undo the door?

Let us now behold His garments. How beautiful are His robes. He is clad in two seamless robes—the one is white, the other royal purple. The white robe is emblematic of purity and righteousness without end. There is nothing in His life to imply sin or impurity, and hence He comes clad in a white robe, which shines in all of its loveliness as the luster of the light in his hand shines against its folds. All the goodness of his life He offers to share with any man who will open the door and let Him come in and sup with him.

But there is another robe which He wears, and that is the royal robe of a King. It is thus called a priestly robe, and rightly so, for He is the Great High Priest as well as the world's greatest King. Yea, He is the King of kings. As one studies the kingly robe which hangs from His shoulders to His feet, this robe is adorned with kingly jewels —behold them, twelve on each shoulder of the garment. Those on the one side represent that His kingship extends over the twelve tribes of Israel, while the twelve jewels on the other side represent the twelve stars in the New Jerusalem.

Let us now behold the crowned head of the gentle Master. There are upon His brow two crowns. The one is a kingly crown, set in jewels. This is an ancestral crown and symbolizes that Jesus came from the lineage of kings, even back unto King David. He, therefore, inherits the right to wear such a costly crown. But the other crown! How differently it appears! for instead of sparkling jewels set therein, I see thorns on that crown and I know they were placed there by the unfriendly hand of the enemies who nailed Him to a cruel cross, on which He was to suffer and die for me. As He stands at the door and knocks, behold He reminds me of the badge of suffering, which is the crown He wore for me. Now that He wore the crown of thorns for me, I see that the several thorns have lost their sharpness and I am reminded that the way of salvation for me is not so costly as once it was. The thorns have lost their sharpness, because He wore them and paid the price; hence, the way of the cross for me is easier than it was for Him.

And now the Light. Behold its radiance, its brilliancy and enduring quality! Wherever He goeth, He sayeth, "I am the Light of the world." As He stands outside the door of my heart, the rays of the light of the Son of Righteousness pierce through the crevices of my heart and I feel the warmth and glow of the light of His love. As the light burns into my memory, I am constantly reminded of my sins over against His sincerity, of my trifles over against His trials, of my littleness over against His great love.

Last of all, let us look again at the door and be reminded of the incident relating to the painting that is so greatly impressive. The story is told that after Mr. Hunt had completed this great picture, which carries so many lessons upon its canvas, that a certain critic came to the room in which the work was exhibited. After a careful study of the picture, the critic is reported as having said, "Mr. Hunt, your colors are wonderful and most elaborately harmonized. The expression on the face of the Master is most life-like; the lines and blending work cannot be surpassed. But you have left something very vital from the picture, and that is the latch on the door."

"Then," said the artist, "the picture is just like I intended—the latch-string which you do not see is hanging on the inside." So it is that Jesus stands at the door of every heart and knocks. To each one He says, "If ye hear my voice and open unto me, I will come in and sup with him, and he with me." But, unfortunately, we have allowed sin to keep us from opening unto Him.

May this art study of the great painting inspire you to open the door unto Him—for

There's a Stranger at the door, let Him in;
He has been there oft before, let Him in.
Let Him in ere He is gone; let Him in, the Holy One—
Jesus Christ, the Father's Son, let Him in.

Open now to Him your heart, let Him in;
If you wait, He will depart, let Him in.
Let Him in, He is your Friend: He your soul will sure defend;
He will keep you to the end, let Him in.

Hear you now His loving voice? Let Him in!
Now, O now, make Him your choice, let Him in.
He is standing at your door, joy to you He will restore,
And His name you will adore—let Him in.

Now, admit the Heavenly Guest, let Him in;
He will make for you a feast, let Him in.
He will speak your sins forgiven, and when earth's ties are riven,
He will take you home to heaven—let Him in; let the Saviour in!

MEDITATION.

"Lord, teach us to pray."

"And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed" (Mark 1:35).

"He went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God" (Luke 6:12).

Lord, teach us to follow Thee in unceasing, self-sacrificing prayer. Teach us to find our delight, our satisfaction in constant communion with Thee

"He made intercession for the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

Lord, teach us to be faithful in intercession for the lost, that they may know Thee, the compassionate, merciful Saviour of men. Teach us the value of a human soul!

"I pray for them . . . which thou hast given me; for they are Thine" (John 17:9).

"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word" (John 17:20).

Lord, teach us to pray for fellow-believers everywhere, that they may be faithful witnesses unto Thee, kept from temptation, strengthened in faith, taught by the Holy Spirit in the things concerning Thee—ever magnifying Thy holy name.

I pray . . . "that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me . . . and hast loved them" (John 17:21, 23).

Lord, teach us to pray with Thee, our great High Priest, that there may be such unity, such love manifested by us, Thy servants, that the world may know Thee, through the testimony of our lives, as the eternal Son of God, who so loved them that Thou didst die for them.

"He ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Heb. 7:25).

Lord, teach us to praise Thee, that Thou art at the right hand of the Father, as our Advocate, our Intercessor, able to save "to the uttermost"!

"Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest" (Matt. 9:38).

Lord, teach us to praise Thee, that Thou art at the forth in Thy name, bearing Thy message of love, and hope and peace.

"And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive" (Matt. 21:22).

Lord, teach us the joy of answered prayer—prayer for the sinner, prayer for Thine own; prayer for the little things of every-day experience, prayer for the burdens that press heavily upon us; prayer for the consciousness of Thy presence by the way; prayer for lives of victory over self, and devotion to Thee—unceasing, believing, effectual prayer.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OF WHICH KINGDOM?

Dr. E. Stanley Jones points out that there are five great kingdoms, representing the five stages of life, on this earth. The lowest is the mineral; next above that, the plant or vegetable kingdom; next, the animal kingdom; fourth, the kingdom of man; fifth, and the highest the kingdom of God. Now, declares Dr. Jones: "We stand between the kingdom of the animal on the one side and the kingdom of God on the other. The kingdom of the animal, although now and then lighted up with gleams of unselfishness, stands primarily for self-assertion. In it the weakest go to the fall and war sounds through it. On the other hand, the kingdom of heaven stands for self-sacrifice, the renewal and regeneration of the weak; peace, harmony and brotherhood pervade it. We are in the stage between, and life seems to mingle both these kingdoms. The selfish struggles with the sacrificial within us for mastery. We feel the pressure of this higher kingdom upon our souls, and it awakens us to higher aspirations. This pressure gives birth to religion."

Quoting Dr. Jones further: "We mortals feel that our real life is in the higher; that is, in the kingdom of God. But to come into the higher means a new birth." So, whether we shall come into the higher, and live in the kingdom of God on earth, or remain in the kingdom of man and the animal, and grovel with the carnal and the corrupt, well, that depends upon the will of man and the attitude of man to his God. God has ever been seeking to break through the rebellious will of man and bring man up to the higher kingdom. This means the new birth. "Unless ye be converted, ye shall not see the kingdom of God," or as Jesus said to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again." We are born by nature into the kingdom of man, and by the grace of God we must be born into the kingdom of God if we are to see that kingdom and to know its blessedness and share its bounteous benefits. The whole life and message of our Lord were to the end that mankind should be given a chance to be born into the kingdom of God and invited to accept membership in that kingdom. The Church of the Living God is the institution, and the only institution, that is undertaking to give that message and extend that invitation to mankind, and to give the people of the world a chance to be members of the higher and the better kingdom. It is the privilege of every one, by the grace of God, to be born into, and live while here on earth, in the highest of all kingdoms, even the kingdom of God. J. O. A.

FIRST THINGS FIRST.

One wonders if we of the Christian Church will ever learn that we will not get far in Church growth and power until we learn to put first things first. It is God's way in building His kingdom, and certainly His Church is the earthly institution and agency through which He is building that kingdom. We shall have to learn as God has taught us to put first things first. The Disciples of Christ (in many places calling themselves Christians), though younger denominationally than our Christian Church, have swept on to larger numbers and achievement than we have. From the beginning they have cultivated the missionary passion, and have not only believed but heralded to the world that the way of growth for a Church is the missionary way, that of proclaiming Christ to the world. In the March number of their great missionary journal, The World Call, we find this burning message as a leading editorial:

"At last we have learned that there is no substitute for the missionary passion. It is so patent; it has been so painfully proved. On the wave of the machine-age leaders in religious enterprises were swept along with the rest of the world into a maelstrom of efficiency. It became our barometer of effort. Wheels within wheels, cogs gearing in—sometimes—with cogs, committees, commissions, charts and figures. 'Like all the rest, we had relaxed our hold on higher things and satisfied ourselves with . . . idols of our own fashioning.' All too costly was the price we paid to learn that to turn wheels and whirl motors there must be a constand flow of power, energizing, vitalizing power. Now, penitently, we are turning to refuel.

" 'Foreign Mission Day' is 'refueling day.' Go to Church and let your minister burn into your soul the glorious fact of the love of God, a love that is your opportunity and mine to broadcast to every man—black, red, brown, white and yellow. Read the amazing stories in this issue of World Call; stories that bring a slow tightening around the throat as they reflect the consuming passion in the souls of men and women out on the firing line who are patiently, tirelessly, pushing out farther and farther the frontiers of Christ's kingdom. Let your cry become articulate as you feel again the compelling urge to 'go and tell,' the urge that so dominated our foreign missionary appeal in years past that it has become the most revolutionary force for righteousness in all the world today. 'If we must build anew and build to stay, we must find God again and go His way.' "

If we Christians are to do our part in kingdom enlargement, we shall have to learn, too, that there is no substitute for the missionary passion, and that this must be put first and foremost in any program of kingdom construction that is to endure and result in Church power and soul salvation. We wish that burning message of the World Call might also be the message of our Christian ministers on and about Easter time, which, indeed and in truth, is refueling day.

There is no substitute for the missionary passion. It is that passion kindled by close touch with Christ and a desire to share with others the lifting love He has shown to us. A missionary Church is a growing Church. There is just one reason, and one only, why our Christian Church numbers its membership in thousands instead of in millions, and that is because we have not put first things first, as God intends we shall, and as we must if we are to glow and grow. J. O. A.

TAKE UP OR GIVE UP.

Henry Ward Beecher is credited with this proverb: "In this world it is not what we take up, but what we give up, that makes us rich." Beecher was expressing the truth of Christ when he said that. The rich young ruler who came to Christ "had been taking up." Christ longed for the young ruler's real enrichment, and so He told him to quit "taking up" and go and "give up" and he would be rich.

What the world means by "hard times," financial depression, and all the rest, is the inability "to take up." In such a time, Christ has His opportunity, for while we are unable to take up, we may easily give up. It is through sacrifice and self-denial that the kingdom of God is built up on earth. The kingdom of man, of man's welfare, convenience and comfort, the kingdom of material things and worldly interests, is built up by the process of taking up; but the kingdom of God is being established in the world by the process of giving up something for the sake of our Lord.

If we are to share the joy of Easter, of the resurrection, we shall have to make up our minds to give up something that we really would like to have for our bodily or physical wants. How about saving the money necessary to buy gas and oil for an expected trip? Leave off the trip and give the money to the cause of righteousness. How about leaving off the purchase of that hat or coat that our heart has been set upon? How about living a week or two weeks on the very simplest of diet, in order to reduce the grocery bill and give what is thus saved to the kingdom of righteousness? This writer was at the opening of a new Christian Church a while ago. On inquiry of the pastor as to how the work had been done, an old woman was pointed out in the congregation. "That woman," said he, "for the past year has found out on Saturday what a roast of beef would cost for Sunday dinner, and then instead of buying the roast bought the beef bone to make soup, and on the Sabbath brought to the treasurer of the Lord the difference between the cost of the beef bone and the beef roast." That was sacrifice; that was self-denial for her Lord. She had given out of her living. That was why the Christ commended the widow; not because she had given her mite, but because she had divided her living. If we really wish to be rich, even as our Lord was rich, and share the joy of His resurrection, we shall have to come to it by way of self-denial and the cross. We shall have to give up in His name and for His sake, that we may really take up that which enriches for eternity. J. O. A.

CHURCH UNION.

No one expects Church union to take place over-night; certainly not between Congregationalists and Christians. These two communions are of an independent mind and are locally self-governing. It is true, Christians are Congregational in their government and polity; it is furthermore true that Congregationalists are, should, and at least claim to be Christians in government and polity. On this account, the way would seem easy. But through the years, traditions have grown up around both communions; likes and dislikes, aspirations and activities that, viewed separately, seem to be quite different. However, when our views have been brought together, there is much more in common with us than there is to separate between us. We shall have to let the matter take its own course and run its own race. Where it is wrong, and if it is wrong, it will fail and fall of its own weight as it should. Where it is right, and when it is right, and according to the will of God, no man can stop it for long. The well-established local Churches with a history and traditions of fifty or a hundred years, will not be disturbed in their way of progress, save as the members themselves shall decide and elect. But where new projects are undertaken, and where Churches with a membership in the two communions are to be built, there would seem to be no good reason why they should not walk and work and worship together. However, there are gestures and activities in every direction, and the work goes on apace. These reflections come out of this announcement in the Daily News, Greensboro, March 21:

"Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, will preach at a union service at Asheboro Street Friends Church at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening, Rev. Milo S. Hinckle, the pastor, announced yesterday. Headed by their pastor, Dr. C. H. Rowland, the members of the congregation of the First Christian Church are to attend this service.

"About two years ago the United Church was fomred by a merger of the Christian, Congregational and Friends Churches in Raleigh. Dr. Kirbye, a Congregationalist minister, is widely known as an able speaker. Rev. Mr. Hinckle yesterday expressed gratification because of the fact that the engagement with the Raleigh minister was obtained.

"Next month a State-wide conference of representatives of the Christian, Friends and Congregational Churches will be held in Raleigh. As a matter of fact, decision to merge the Christian and Congregational Churches has already been reached. Friends Churches are said to be cooperating in effective fashion with the others."

There seems to be no good reason why Friends, Congregationalists and Christians should not unite. J. O. A.

CHRISTIANITY'S OPPORTUNITY.

Christianity has never had such an open door and such an inviting opportunity to establish the kingdom of righteousness in China as at present.

The revolutionary forces in that government have been destroying idols and temples (erected for the worship of idols) with vehemence and vigor. Growing intelligence has taught the Chinese that there is nothing to be expected from these idols and idol worship. They are only things made with man's hands and fashioned by his device. But the forces that have been destroying these idols have found nothing to take the place of this worship. They need the gospel of the Son of God. They need, and their hearts desire, Him who came to give life and to give it more abundantly. Only as they get this life will they get that which satisfies the hungry heart. If Christians will now share with others that which has made them what they are, they will not only come into a great possession, but they will enrich their own souls and make glad the city of God. J. O. A.

WHICH SHALL CONTROL?

There are three main forces at work in modern society, and when they co-operate the best results follow; but, in too many cases, one of these forces gets control of individuals and the public. It may be trite to name these three forces—the material, the intellectual, and the spiritual—but they are permanent forces that work in society and each one is useful and mighty, and deserves cultivation. It is difficult to determine which of these forces is the most important for man, though we usually lay the emphasis on the spiritual; but when God made man in His own image, He endowed him with intellectual capacity, nad a body, and for that body He created the earth and filled it with material wealth and beauty and commanded him to "dress it and to keep it." It is a great task to dress the world and keep it. This is essential to the welfare of the race. Then the intellectual world is as vast as the universe, and new planets may be discovered, the laws that control the heavens worked out, and the music of the world reproduced upon instruments of wind and strings as well as by vocal melody. Then the character produced by spiritual contact with and obedience to the Spirit of God is so far-reaching in results that religion seems to embrace all the rest. At any rate, these three fields of activity harmonize when properly adjusted and cultivated by man.

Mankind has witnessed the intellectual age with its climax in Greece, and relics of that age linger among us in this generation. There are many who place education above religion, and knowledge above character. The literature of the Church is more intellectual than spiritual, and the pulpit, in many cases, is filled with learning rather than spiritual power. What this age needs is a new adjustment of the forces that lead to a spiritual age that will control the world.

The ruling passion of this age is not educational, great as that force is, but material. People talk more about prosperity, or the lack of it, than anything else. The government, from Washington to the smallest chamber of commerce, strives harder to produce material prosperity than anything else. Material conditions and efforts to improve business seem to occupy the mind of those in authority as well as those who have no jobs. Labor and capital are concerned about wages, markets and profits. The solution of material problems seems to lead in thought, conversation, the press and the government. Claim is made that this is the richest nation in the world, and yet complaint is made about hard times. It would seem strange for a rich man to complain of hard times, yet that is what rich America is doing at this present time. What this age needs is not more business, but more religion. If spiritual conditions were improved, business and schools would be improved. What Sunday needs is more people at Church and larger contributions for missions and benevolences, and not more automobiles on the road. The really spiritual man or woman lives within earning capacity and is not so concerned about material conditions as to neglect support of the Church and its enterprises. We are in the spiritual dispensation of Christianity, but we have not yet reached the spiritual age. W. W. S.

UTILIZING OUR RESOURCES.

Many of our rural Churches have never learned to utilize their resources to the fullest extent in building up the kingdom of Christ in their respective communities. Pastoral visitation has been neglected, the every-member canvass has not been made, the financial conditions have not been properly utilized, and the Church attendance has not been adequately built up. If our country Churches were worked as well as many of our city Churches have been, greater things could be accomplished and greater things could be done for the growth of the strength of our rural congregations.

Country Sunday Schools should be more thoroughly worked for the saving and training of the young people for the kingdom, and our Churches would continuously advance in membership. With good roads, with better educational advantages, with better methods of training, with better teachers, there are greater possibilities for the growth of rural Churches than ever in the history of our denomination.

Many of our Churches are not doing their best for want of a better financial organization and financial method. If the country Church was worked more systematically and all the members were taught to contribute as systematically and as liberally as is in the city Church, greater things could be accomplished for the growth and development of the country Church than are now being accomplished.

Our country Churches are often worked for other institutions and outside enterprises until they are themselves neglected and continue to struggle along at the slow pace that has been in vogue from time immemorial, and will never become strong, working units until they wake up to self-development by undertaking greater things for their own growth. Ministers and laymen should study ways and means by which the country Church can enlarge its growth, expand its organization, develop its resources, and improve its methods of operation.

Special attention should be given to improving the Sunday School and Church music, training the young in active participation in public prayer, and religious self-expression. Such methods would grow a generation of active Church workers and provide for a more active and intelligent leadership for the future life of the Church. W. C. W.

CARELESS PAY TOLL.

One hundred and fifty-three persons killed and 181 injured was the toll paid by trespassers on the tracks and trains of the Southern Railway System during 1929, the annual report of the Southern's Safety Bureau, just issued, discloses. Trespassers on tracks accounted for 117 deaths and 83 injuries, and on trains for 36 deaths and 98 injuries.

This was an increase of thirteen deaths from this cause over 1928 and the heaviest death roll since 1923, when 154 trespassers were killed.

"Unauthorized use of railway property is simply flirting with death with all the chances against the trespasser," says the report, "but apparently about the same number of persons subject themselves to this hazard every year, since the number of casualties from year to year shows a remarkable constancy.

"Since 1922 when we began to compile these figures on a system basis, the results have been as follows: 1922, 129 killed and 171 injured; 1923, 154 killed and 178 injured; 1924, 130 killed and 174 injured; 1925, 128 killed and 151 injured; 1926, 135 killed and 154 injured; 1927, 140 killed and 133 injured; 1928, 140 killed and 162 injured; 1929, 153 killed and 181 injured.

"Tramps who formerly were supposed to make up the bulk of trespassers on railway property have now, to a large extent, deserted the railways for the highways, leaving useful citizens and school children to furnish practically all the victims of this deadly practice."

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A Conference Ministerial Association has many values to pastors and Churches. Ministers who do not come into personal association with other ministers lose a needed sense of what others think of them and a real appreciation of their brethren. The ministers of every Conference should select some central place of meeting and meet once a month except the regular months for revival meetings in their respective Conferences. They can pool the expenses of the meeting by each preacher paying so much at each meeting and out of that fund pay the expense of each one to the meeting. In that way, the expense is the same for each preacher. These meetings can be made of great value and of great enjoyment. Matters of financial obligation to the Conference and the institutions and enterprises of the Church can be considered in such a way that all the Churches can cooperate generously and on equal basis. Simply getting together puts unity of spirit, of purpose, and of action into all the Churches. Ministers can no more do their best without getting together than members of a Church could carry on their work successfully without meeting together. Every pastor known that the most useful members are those who come together to pray, sing, contribute, shake hands and touch heads and hearts in the worship and service of the Master. Ministers need the same kind of contact, and the most successful way is in a ministerial association. If any Conference does not have such an organization, let some preacher volunteer to get the pastors of his Conference together and form such an organization. There are many lines of profit in such a meeting.

Special books may be studied through one appointed to review the books for discussion. Special questions in theology, in Sunday School equipment and work, in pastoral visitation, in sermon preparation, by different members reporting their sermons, the discussion of individual problems in the management of local questions, questions of finance, evangelistic meetings, and a score of questions that naturally arise peculiar to local Conferences. Such an association is a real school, in which all the ministers may, from time to time, be both students and teachers. All Churches stand on a common level with local questions; and the most learned pastor can learn from the pastor who has had the poorest opportunities and serves the poorest Churches; and the least can learn from the greatest. Like the little girl who described the parable as "an earthly story with a heavenly meaning." No better definition has ever been written by a theologian. There is no better way to improve the pulpit than for the pastors to meet in regular session monthly in the interest of the kingdom.

Colleges and seminaries cannot furnish preachers with the real experience and education of such an association. It is altar, school, Church, spiritual fountain, pastoral preparation. One of the most valuable possessions in the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference is the "Ministerial Association." It unifies, intensifies, qualifies, and magnifies the work of the ministry in this Conference.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

Dr. Laird T. Hites, of Hiram College, has published a book, "The Effective Christian College." The foundational idea in this discussion is that education, to be Christian, must be a co-operative enterprise in which students and professors learn together the Christian way of life. He favors the small college, not to exceed five hundred, as more likely to achieve Christian character through intimate, personal association of faculty and students. The president of such a college is father to the faculty members and grandfather to the students, a concept that does much to orient Dr. Hites in the world of educational philosophy. Here is a professor of religion in a small denominational college thinking fundamentally of the college as a family, a patriarchal family at that; but who can deny the charm, not to say the naivete of the concept? And who is prepared to say it may not work?

Of one thing, Dr. Hites is thoroughly convinced that Christian colleges are not as effective in Christian character-building as they ought to be. These institutions were founded and have been maintained to develop Christian men and women, and with the disposition to accept responsibility as leaders in the Churches—lay leaders as well as professional leaders. Under the influence of the certificating bodies and of the standardizing agencies, these colleges have largely lost their religious fervor, and as a consequence their Christian product has deteriorated.

Part of this is due to the lack of co-ordination, of integration in the curriculum, part to the failure of the teaching staff to do teamwork with each other to further the Christian life interests of the institution, regarding religion as a separate department of learning instead of accepting it as the finest result of the teaching in every department, and part to the antagonism between faculty and students, between student activities and student passivities (studies), Dr. Hites points out.

Academic freedom cannot be tolerated in a Christian institution if it be conceived as permitting a professor, by his teaching and living and sneering attitude, to cast doubts upon and create student antipathies toward the Christian faith and the Christian Church. "Academic freedom must end where the interests of the group begin. There should be no place in a Christian college for an instructor who is not himself an earnest Christian, both in teaching and in life. We may not bridle his tongue—that would be unethical! It is entirely proper that we terminate his contract."

Dr. Hites advocates the abolition of the "honor system," and in its place an understanding camaraderie between students and faculty, making cheating "not the proper thing to do." He advocates chapel, either compulsory or voluntary, that shall be truly worshipful and be controlled by a "religious interests committee," composed of faculty members and students democratically chosen in both cases, with a dean of religion (separate from the president, or "Y" secretary, or professor of religion) as the executive secretary of the same. He also advocates college credit for Sunday School work in the Churches of the college community when academically safeguarded.

The curriculum is regaredd as a program of studies for the most part, though at times the place of activities as constituent in the curriculum is suggested. This is perhaps most pointedly stated on page 245, where it is said that "the objective of higher education in the United States is, in general, that of a life disciplined by study, under the guidance of instructors more mature than the students they direct." The writer would prefer to believe that education is the student's discovery of the meanings and values inherent in personal and racial experience and the organization of the same into a program of Christian living.

With Dr. Hites' principles, few Christian educators would disagree. With his practical program for their realization, there will be wide disagreement. That is as it should be. Effective Christian colleges cannot be standardized; must not be. They must be as individualistic as Christian personality itself. But basic in every Christian personality are certain abiding principles. Dr. Hites' principles are sound and they will abide. They will not fall with his practical application of them.

A real service has been rendered our day by this incisive study of the Christian college and this clarion call to it to recognize its duty to produce men and women of Christian character who will be devoted to Christ and who will invest themselves vocationally or avocationally, or both, for the furthering of Christianity in the world. The Christian college will best do this by according to its faculty and students alike what Dr. Hites eloquently styles "freedom under responsibility," and it will claim for itself in the pursuit of its high aim that same freedom, while not sidestepping or shirking its responsibility.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

The Leadership of the Blind.

Among all reasonable human beings, the primacy must always belong to the mind. The will, because of its influence and because of its majesty, often seems first; but the will is nothing more than the executive side of the mind. If it is a reasonable will, it is preceded by a reasonable emotion, which again is preceded by a reasonable idea.

Reading, writing and arithmetic are fundamentals of our primary education, and they are profoundly adjusted to life. Education is living without cessation, without expectation, and without desire of graduation; it is living, thinking, loving, serving and worshiping in the presence of the assembled intellectual and moral glory of the world.

Pericles was absolutely right when he thought that if he filled Athens with works of beauty, magnificent temples, splendid statues of the gods and of heroes, and every form of beauty that could be devised by mind and hand of men, the people who lived in the presence of this universal display of beauty would be affected in the quality of their thought in the character of their feeling and their action all unconsciously by the benignity and the universal benediction of beauty.

Christian education is something that lasts forever; living, thinking, loving, serving, praying, worshiping in the presence of that which is the highest version of the intellectual and moral glory of the world.

The dominant note in human nature, rising above the hurricane of voices, is capacity—capacity to do better than you have yet done, and ever more and higher capacity without end. Human nature is ever capable of truer thought, of a deeper sincerity, of a finer loyalty, and of a loftier soul.

The great stone face in the White Mountains is an image for human life, its prophetic quality, ever looking toward the future with steady eyes and solemn soul to welcome the mornings, the seasons of the years that are to be, that it may fill them with more truth, more beauty, more goodness, more of its own ever-developing and never exhausted or spent capacity to serve God.

There is an obligation on the part of every human being to meet the reasonable expectations of one's fellow-citizens, friends, teachers, of one's parents, and this applies universally, perhaps more especially to the youth. These good friends often cherish unreasonable expectations toward the youth; they speak of them as "angels" when everybody knows that characterization is nonsense. Birds grow a new plumage every year, but if we were to meet the unreasonable expectations of our friends, we should have to grow a new pair of wings every week.

What I want to see in all young people who are studying and thinking, who are still in the process of education, is more and more concern for the things of the mind as absolutely indispensable to life. I do not care for a good heart without a good head; the good heart should be matched with the good head, and the good head is first.

Character is the final word in human life, and it is the final aspect of God's life. Christian character is a sort of breathing apparatus whereby we receive the inspiration of the Almighty. Human beings individually and collectively, in communities and in nations, are inevitably brought to bay. This nation, in its public men, in its voters, in its office-holders everywhere needs character.

A great investment has been made in the lives of our youth—investment of love. Thousands of students are sent to our colleges from homes of toil, of self-sacrifice, of vast hope, and these parents have made a great investment of their own being in these students. Never disappoint a reasonable expectation here; the greatest sorrow of your life will be to know that during your school days you disappointed a reasonable expectation of father or mother, and one of the happiest of all memories will be this fact, that you met that expectation with complete fidelity.

ADDOR CHURCH.

Our work at Addor presents to us a real need. The Church as an organization has practically ceased to function. It looked as if the doors would have to be closed and services discontinued. Apparently the business of the town would not support the people who were living there. As a result, people began to move away. This shifting of population continued until there are only a few loyal ones left. The loyalty of those who remained cannot be questioned, but their load was too heavy. The Church, therefore, seemed doomed to failure.

Their pastor had acquainted them with his desire to change his field of labor for the next year. The Western Conference made an appropriation to this Church to be used in securing the services of a pastor. At the request of the Home Mission Board, the writer met the board at Addor on December 29, 1929. After the service, which was poorly attended, my services were secured for this year.

The future looked gloomy. I did not know the conditions there very well. When my next appointment came, more interest was shown. The interest in the Church has increased until at the present we believe that there is a real place and a definite mission for that body of believers. That which strengthens us most in such a belief is the interest these people are showing in their newly organized Sunday School. We are happy to say that the school, which was organized February 9, 1930, is a community, rather than sectarian, undertaking. The officers of the school were elected from three or four denominations. This is evidence that people are not as widely separated as they once were.

We are, therefore, anxiously working and praying that God will bless and strengthen the sheep of His pasture in this part of the vineyard.

E. CARL BRADY.

PLEASANT RIDGE.

Our work at Pleasant Ridge Church is making excellent progress. The Sunday School is growing in interest and attendance under the leadership of Bro. Charles B. Higgins as superintendent. Bro. L. C. Huffines is Bible class teacher and is creating greater interest in that class, and all the other classes are doing well under competent teachers.

Last Monday and Tuesday the men of the Church began to cut logs for the lumber for the new Church building, and a sawmill will soon be cutting the lumber. The plan is to construct a new Church building with four Sunday School rooms with folding partitions. The walls will be finished with brick-veneer and the building will be a credit to the community when finished. Everybody in the Church and community is enthusiastic over the prospects of a new Church building, and the outlook for the growth of the Church is bright.

Our revival meeting will be conducted the week following the third Sunday in July. This is the fifth year of the service of the present pastor with this Church, and the condition of the Church has never been brighter for success during the history of the Church.

W. C. WICKER.

BRO. FLOWERS' WORK.

The people of our Church and community have been greatly encouraged by the lectures of Rev. A. R. Flowers for the week ending March 8th. Mr. Flowers is putting his whole soul into the Christian Endeavor work and in the work of Christian education. Several of our young people have found their way into institutions of learning through Bro. Flowers' untiring efforts. Several have also been placed in positions where they could have a chance to make better incomes and where they could have a better chance to live a bigger life for the Master.

Bro. Flowers has been coming to our Church and community for the past six or seven years, and he has grown on us all the while. His addresses show more and more sound thinking on the better things of life as the years pass on. He is a strong advocate of the united effort of our Churches, and he presents the matter in such a manner as to command the respect and good wishes of all our denominations. His influence in this one respect has meant much in many sections of our State as well as other States.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The annual rallies of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will be held as follows: Norfolk District—Mrs. H. C. Caviness, superintendent, First Church, Norfolk, April 1st; Nansemond District—Mrs. B. D. Jones, superintendent, Oakland, April 2nd; Franklin District—Mrs. W. D. Harward, superintendent, Mount Carmel, April 3rd; Waverly District—Miss Louise Pittman, superintendent, Dendron, April 4th.

The theme of the program is "Builders in a New Day." A large representation is earnestly desired from all the Churches in each district.

CHAPTER 23.

THEN spake Jē'sus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

4102P. Black Silk Finished Cloth, gold titles, round corners, red burnished edges, with Psalms ..... $ .90
4113. French Morocco Leather, limp, gold back and side titles, round corners, red under gold edges 1.35

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(March.)

Saviour of all, Thou dost bid us "Go." In mercy plead Thou for us that we may be swifter to learn the whole meaning of that command and obey it. As the efficacy of Thy blood is not measured by the Palestine path of Thy earthly journeyings, but reaches "unto the uttermost," even so does the Holy Spirit, not limited by the traverse of our feet, but according to the equipment which we supply, go for us "into all the world." Of whatever we are or possess, God help us not to withhold, but to give for others as we ourselves have received. In Jesus' name. Amen.

WILL PREACHERS START REFUELING?

It is announced that the Disciples of Christ are setting up a series of great services and widely advertised conferences in important centers of the United States, to take under consideration the sole topic of missions, preparatory to their "Mission Day" this spring and the mission offering in their Churches. That our own people and pastors may catch a glimpse of what this Church is doing to create interest in missions and get an offering from their people with which to carry on missions, we quote the following editorial in the March number of World Call:

"Preachers are everywhere confessing that they are not preaching the missionary message from the pulpit as they once did. This was not only strongly expressed at the foreign missions conference held in January in Atlantic City, but is revealed in personal conversations with many of our own preachers. There is a wistful longing for a more vital and radiant message on world missions. There have been so many changes in the fields and such transition in thinking at home, that many ministers have been confused and have not pressed the missionary note as formerly. There is no doubt that the Jerusalem conference with its findings and reports presents a fresh and vital apologetic and appeal for the whole mission of the Church in the world of today.

"There is a movement on among our own preachers to acquaint themselves with this new approach and understanding of the missionary cause. Five or six of our leading ministers who feel this need deeply, together with Acting President S. J. Corey, of the United Christian Missionary Society, are setting up a series of meetings in various parts of the country for preachers alone, to discuss for a day the preaching values of the Jerusalem conference reports. The interest has been spontaneous and eager, and already such meetings have been arranged for in Cleveland, Lexington, St. Louis, Wichita and Dallas. Other meetings are in process of development. Such pulpit themes as 'The New World and the Mission of Christianity,' 'The New Challenge of Secularism to World Missions,' 'The Supremacy of Jesus in Relation to Non-Christian Religions,' and 'The New Day in Missions a Challenge to the Christian Pulpit,' are to be discussed by ministers themselves. It is hoped that out of this may grow many discussions of these vital themes in ministers' meetings and conventions, an increased literature on the subject and a vital linking up of the old unchanging realities of the missionary message, with this fearless facing of the new world in which we live, thus strengthening the note of authority and conviction."

A STUPENDOUS TASK.

Foreign missions is a stupendous task and will challenge the entire strength and resources of the Church. Few people have ever received any adequate conception of the size of this work, and only a limited number seem to realize that this is the chief mission of the Church. The program of the Church for foreign missions has never been made on the basis of the size of the task, but rather on the basis of what the Church members with an inadequate view have thought of the task.

We are not approaching the end of missionary work, as many seem to think today, but are just well started on the job. A recent survey of mission work being done in Japan brings this fact to our attention in a very forceful way. There is not a section of Japan where missionary work is adequately covering the territory. We face the startling fact that 80 per cent of all the work being done there is in 16 per cent of the territory. The great rural sections and villages are practically untouched. This statement would need but slight change to apply to any of the major mission fields. —World Call.

REASONS WHY.

Reasons why you should be a member of the Missionary Society and work for missions:

Because missions are God's thought. He asks your co-operation.

Because of our love for the Lord Jesus Christ whose commands are explicit (Matt. 28:10-20; Mark 16:15; Luke 24:47; Acts 1:8).

Because we are the fruit of missionary effort.

Because your example will help others to obey the Lord's command.

Because the need is urgent. Thousands die daily who never saw a Bible, or heard of Christ.

Because larger efforts are needed in home mission work.

Because all nations are now easily accessible, and with more means and more workers the work might be indefinitely increased.

Because the work of the Missionary Society is to help the heathen abroad and the spiritually needy at home.

Because of the reflex influence of missions upon the home Churches.

Because missions is the work of the Church, and all Christians should be active Church workers.

Because millions are yet in darkness and the laborers are so few.

Because the security of our nation now depends upon the civilization of all.

Because the Lord has left the work of carrying His message to the world in the hands of His followers. He expects you to help.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

District rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference will convene at 10 A. M., unless otherwise announced, and will be held as follows:

NOTICE.

The missionary rally of the Franklin District will be held at Mt. Carmel Christian Church, Walters, Va., on Thursday, 10 A. M., April 3rd. Theme for study: "Builders in a New Day." We hope to have a large number present.

MRS. W. D. HARWARD,
District Superintendent.

SOME OTHER WAY?

There is a heavenly, eternal home where dwells our eternal Father infinite in love and enduring mercy; and where Christ, our all-sufficient, perfect Saviour, sits at His right hand and has loving watch-care over all who truly deny themselves to fully follow Him in the blessed way of peace. His wonderful life makes easy for the surrendered soul to follow Him. Strange it is that some foolishly try to find some other way!

By divine inspiration, David was directed to write, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Psa. 14:1, 53:1). In both instances we read that they who spoke thus were "corrupt in their ways." The way of a fool is right in his own eyes (Prov. 12:15). "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is the way of death."

In these last days of great wickedness and corruption, a few are found who declare there is no God, though down deep in heart I do not think they believe it. They may wish that it might be so if thus they could escape punishment from their awful sin. In Russia at this time even some in governmental authority are closing the Churches and are expelling worshipers of God and Christ. What fools they will find themselves to be. There is a God! One God who reigns supreme over the whole universe He created, and one Lord Jesus Christ, His divine Son, whom He anointed and clothed with all power to redeem to eternal peace and joy all who in true faith accept Him.

There is a future—eternal blessedness for the saved, but eternal punishment for careless and indifferent sinners (see Matt. 25:46; also 31-46 in the American Version). There we find the word eternal used twice in verse 46. The Greek word aeovios is rendered sometimes eternal and sometimes everlasting in the old version, meaning the same thing. The American version rightly puts it eternal, thus avoiding confusion. In verses 41-45 see how careless and indifferent some become, showing no love and service for the Saviour. Therefore, they find no place for them in Christ's eternal kingdom. Vastly important teaching.

Some persons who are "confirmed" and become members of the visible Church lack heart-love for the Saviour and lack love for service. There is born in man a hope for a glorious future, yet so careless and corrupt one may become as to wish that death might end all. Some try to believe that there is no God. They need to "be born again"—born of the Holy Spirit. Note John 3:3-16—the very declaration of Jesus Himself. Yet they who love the world and worldly things, worldly riches, fashion, display, costly things and worldly entertainments that tend to draw away the mind from Christ and His service, have little or no heart-love for Christ, the gracious, all-loving Saviour; they soon become hardened in heart and have no relish for God's blessed word of truth. If, like the great, sincere Paul of Tarsus, they could be overpowered by the Holy Spirit until they could see their great need, they would exclaim, "Things I once loved, now I hate"—hate because they tend to draw one away from the glorious Christian life, in which all consecrated followers of Christ find joy—great joy in living. They love the Bible and they prayerfully study to know God. Christ only could declare, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away" (Luke 21:33); and in John 10:35, He declared, "The Scripture cannot be broken." Did any other in all history have wisdom and power or authority so to declare? None! Then who anywhere ever did have or will have the presumption to try to present any better way to obtain genuine peace and happiness on earth and a rich and glorious home in the eternal future than by fully accepting Christ as the indispensable, all-sufficient Saviour—the way, the truth, and the life? (The Greek word here denotes eternal life.

All who have reason and who honestly seek the truth, if they prayerfully study the Bible fifteen or more minutes daily, morning and night, carefully meditate thereon, asking the Holy Spirit to enlighten them, will be convinced that Christ is the only Saviour, and that He only gives sweet peace and enduring happiness to those who fully accept Him. He said truly, "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life" (the true life), "more abundant," that now is and continues in the world to come.

They put aside foolish, unmeaning talk, and they delight in things divine, and they talk to others about them. The Bible tells us what the will of God is: "This is the will of God, even your sanctification"—full consecration to God to do His will—"that ye abstain from all "immorality."

Sweet, abiding peace rests only upon the consecrated soul. Such only truly find success in winning others to Christ. Hear, O beloved! Feed upon the word! "Love not the world, neither the things (merely) of the world," lest the heart be hardened. Why, oh, why, do so many try to climb into the fold "some other way" when reason and the eternal word of God show it to be impossible? God help us all!

The Law of the Cross.

Golden Text: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."—Matt. 16:24.

Lesson: Matt. 16:13-17:27.

Christ the Son of the Living God.

"Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" There was no catch in the question. Jesus wanted to know what the people thought of Him, where they put Him, what they thought of His work. He wanted to know whether they saw in Him anything more than an itinerant teacher and preacher, a harmless, rather sentimental talker about good will and brotherhood.

"And they say unto Him, Some say that Thou art John the Baptist, some Elijah, some Jeremiah, or one of the prophets." They may have been confused as to just who He was, but one thing is sure—they thought He was some great Man. Every one of the men mentioned stood towering like a great mountain-peak in Hebrew history. They were all names to conjure with. Even those who do not accept Christ as the Son of God readily admit that He was one of the world's great men.

There is another interesting insight into the character of Jesus as reflected in this answer, for it bears testimony to the many-sidedness of Jesus. These men were unlike each other in so many ways. They were men of different temperament and different methods. Jesus is so many-sided. Like the facets of a diamond, He flashes light from so many different angles. Men of all times, of all stations in life, of all races, of all temperaments, of all shades of religious belief have looked at Jesus, and all have found something appealing in Him and in His character.

"But whom say ye that I am?" Jesus was not concerned simply with what the general public thought about Him. He was particularly concerned about what His immediate disciples thought about Him. It was important that they had the right conception of Him. It does make a difference what men think about Jesus. The view that holds Jesus simply as a great Man has never produced that dynamic and vital faith, or given impulse to whole-hearted service, that characterizes the view that holds Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." God's Anointed, the One who should come, the Son of a God who was a living, active, loving, seeking God, one who was more than man, and one who was more divine than ordinary man. Here was One who was unique in all history.

"Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee." Such an insight was not the result of mere human wisdom or thought. It had come as a blessed revelation through the Spirit from the Father Himself. It is thus with all the great truths of Christianity, and with all the great experiences of the Christian life. The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Those of humble minds and loving hearts often have vouchsafed to them revelations and experiences which are hidden from those who trust in mere wisdom and in human sufficiency.

"Upon this rock I will build my Church." Here is the battleground between Catholicism and Protestantism. The former says the Church is built upon Peter; the latter says it is built upon the confession, the recognition that Christ is the Son of the Living God. Argument will not change the one or the other. Suffice it to say that it is Jesus who says that He will build His Church. The Church has a divine Founder, and it is a divine institution. And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it—it has a divine destiny which nothing can thwart. Let us thank God and take new courage.

The Law of the Cross.

"From that time began Jesus to show unto His disciples how that He must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day." From that time—from the time that He had stood before them as the Son of the Living God—He began to talk to them about His suffering and His ignominious death. It was as it should be—suffering is the divine law of conquering evil. Self-denial is the first law of love, and hence of God. He was to be the suffering Servant of Jehovah foretold in the Old Testament. He wanted them to be prepared for the events that would be a denial in their minds of all that they thought the Messiah should be.

"Then Peter took Him and began to rebuke Him, saying, Be it far from Thee, Lord; this shall not be unto Thee. But Jesus turned and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art an offence to me; for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." How human and how modern it all sounds! How we need to learn that sacrifice is God's appointed way to victory. In this modern age which hears so much about freedom and self-expression, and in which religion is being interpreted in terms of ease and comfort and well-being, we need to have sounded again the stern note which Jesus sounded in that far-off day.

"If any man would come after me, let him deny himself." It is the first law of discipleship. Let him take up his cross—there is a personal cross. Whosoever will save his life shall lose it—to hoard life is to lose it. Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it—the one who gives himself to a great and worthy cause, who seeks to deny the lower and smaller self for the sake of the higher and larger self, such a one really finds life indeed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, April 6, 1930.

Topic: "What is Involved in Deciding for Christ?"

Scripture: Rom. 10:8-15.

Suggested hymns: "Give of Your Best to the Master," "More Like the Master," "Open My Eyes," "O Love that Wilt Not Let Me Go."

Assign the following outlines and materials for talks and discussion in the meeting:

Meeting Christ.

1. Through Christians (those who know Him): (1) observation of their lives, (2) personal friends, (3) invitations to Church services, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, socials, (4) preaching, (5) friendships.

2. Through reading.

3. Through work: (1) co-workers, (2) type of work, (3) meaning of work.

4. Through Christian organizations: (1) Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., (2) Boy Scout and Camp First Girls, (3) conferences, camps, (4) recognizing values of Christian orphanages, hospitals, colleges.

Deciding for Christ.

We must go farther than just meeting Christ. We must become so well acquainted that we decide whether or not we want Him for a Friend of our own. If we want Him for our Friend, it means that we believe in Him, that we have faith in this new acquaintance. Our lives are changed and remodeled constantly by our association with our friends; and so if we decide that we want Christ for our Friend we mean that we are willing for our lives to be influenced by His character. His is such a commanding personality that once we are well acquainted we determine that we shall follow Him and try to live as He would have us live.

Accepting Christ.

Have six different persons show how one of the following enter into one's acceptance of Christ: (1) forgiveness, (2) repentance, (3) faith, (4) association with Christ, (5) confession, (6) service.

Living for Christ.

"One of the greatest religious needs of our times is that we get away from our false conception of what it means to be a Christian. Some people still have the idea that believing certain things makes one a follower of Christ. One's belief certainly affects one's life; but no amount of mere intellectual assent to truths will make one a Christian. Christ showed this fact in His teachings.

"Others think that being a Christian means experiencing feelings of joy and peace. Religious life does bring peace and joy, and at times it is overwhelming; but the waiting for such a feeling to come has kept many a person from becoming a Christian. Christ does not say anything about any certain types of feelings that should be a condition of becoming a disciple of His.

"Still others think that to be a Christian is to live a high type of moral life. Christianity and morality are inseperable; but Christianity is deeper and more far reaching than morality. If there were no Christianity, there would probably be no morality. Christ said that to be a Christian was to know God and His Son Jesus Christ. To be a Christian is to be a friend of God as He is revealed in the person of Jesus Christ. One must not stop with the searching of the Scripture, but through it must pass on to a knowledge and fellowship with Christ. One must expect to have such feeling and only such as one would have in the presence of a great and true friend. And in view of this friendship with Christ, one must act as is becoming in the presence of this perfect Friend. And to be a friend of Jesus Christ means service. The very basis of our Christianity is that of sharing with our brothers that which we have. No man can be a Christian who will not serve in Christ's kingdom; and our field of service is among men who are Christ's brothers and God's children."—From "Introducing Men to Christ," Weatherford.

A Selection.

A selection from Montgomery's "The Watchman," in which the captain of the guard at Christ's tomb speaks:

"I care not for glory; all desire
For honor and for strife is gone from me,
All eagerness for war. I only care
To help and save bruised beings, and to give

Some comfort to the weak and suffering.
I cannot even hate those Jews; my lips
Speak harshly of them, but within my heart
I only feel compassion; and I love
All creatures to the vilest of the slaves,
Who seem to me as brothers. Claudia,
Scorn me not for this weakness; it will pass—
Surely 'twill pass in time, and I shall be
Maximus, strong and valiant once again,
Forgetting that slain god. And yet, and yet,
He looked as one who could not be forgot!"

WITH MY CHURCHES.

I am glad to report that most of our work seems to show signs of improvement. There seems to be among our people many with renewed interest in the Scriptures, which we are glad to note. If we could succeed in getting people interested in the Word of God, it would mean much and would be a great step toward bringing about the thing all pastors would like to see, namely: doers of the Word and not hearers only.

The Clayton Church, which is being aided by the Home Mission Board at present, is showing their appreciation for same by their loyalty. We begin our revival meeting with these people on the second Sunday in April, with Bro. M. T. Sorrell, of Danville, Va., doing the preaching.

Our Auburn Church is progressing nicely, with a faithful group of Sunday School and Church workers. I have been with these people for four years. In the year 1929 we increased the pastor's salary $100, purchased a piano, and progressed along other lines accordingly.

We had a good year at Zion Church last year, and we are expecting a better one this year, since we have there a newly organized Missionary Society, with eighteen members.

We are very grateful for our people at Turner's Chapel. The W. M. S. is one of the best we know anything about. Also we have a Young People's Society there, of which we are proud.

At Grace Chapel we begin our revival meeting March 16th. Will our friends please pray for us, that we may have a real revival of religion. The pastor will do the preaching in this meeting.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

I left home last Wednesday morning for Baxley, Ga., to assist Rev. G. N. Smith, of the Congregational Church, in a meeting from Thursday night until Sunday night following. We had a fine meeting, but were hindered very much on account of rain. The Church is located about three miles out from the city, surrounded by beautiful farms and fine bodies of level pine timber. This is indeed a beautiful section of south Georgia, and the citizens are loyal, kind and appreciative. Rev. Smith has preached here for the past thirty or more years. He is now becoming an old man, but active and very congenial in his fellowship; he loves his people and his people love him.

We had good attendance and good interest. One good, substantial citizen joined the Church, and others are to join at an early date. I thoroughly enjoyed my visit to this section of the State, and if it be the will of the Lord I shall come this way again. I am spending this time with my good friend, Tom Holland and his genial wife, of the Ambrose, Ga., Christian Church. I preached at this Church tonight and we had a fine service. Will go to Vanceville and preach there tomorrow night. Will turn my face homeward Wednesday morning. I spent the night most pleasantly with my good friends Walker Pearson and family as I came down; will spend tomorrow night with Bro. L. M. Veazey and family. I hope to spend some time with Rev. W. C. Carpenter before I go the homeward way. My time is full and running over, but I am enjoying my work. Will soon complete my circuit, and then—don't forget to take the mission offering. God's kingdom needs the money. G. D. HUNT.

ISLE OF WIGHT.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Isle of Wight Christian Church is one of the strongest features of the work. We have completed the mission-study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," which was very ably taught by Mrs. Cora Wilson, who with other members of the Baptist Church joined us in our study. A goodly delegation attended the one-day institute of missions held in Suffolk on March 5th.

March 16th being our regular preaching day, Bro. E. B. White gave us a wonderful message, his theme being "Rest for the Burdened." Bro. White is ready and willing to lead us in any phase of Church work, and we believe that with him as our leader old Isle of Wight will once more stand in the ranks of those who carry on in the name of the Lord.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

Conducted by H. E. Rountree
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

An Every-Day Voice.

"I am that I am."—Ex. 3:14.

This is the voice of God to Moses. Moses is to remember what and who he is as he goes forth to execute his commission of heaven for his people. He has divine authority, with a pledge of divine support to success. God follows up His pledge by a demonstration of His power to bless the smallest of talent. Read about the rod and the gift of speech in the fourth chapter.

Use what talent you have. Dedicate it to God. He will bless it and complete it. Remember the parable of the talents, and the boy with a few loaves and fishes, and also the widow's mite. All this is for you, and me too, if we will try Him and trust Him.

Prayer.—O Lord, we have not trusted Thee very far. This age of machinery, material, pleasure and comforts, lead us away. O that we may see Thee, whom to see is to trust, and whom to trust is life now and eternal life then. Help us to try Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

Paul's and Livingston's Way.

"I am ready not to be bound only but to die at Jerusalem for the name of Jesus Christ."—Acts 22:13.

"I beg to direct your attention to Africa. I know that in a few years I shall be cut off in that country. I go back to try to make an open path for commerce and Christianity."—Livingston.

Paul was a trail-blazer for Christianity in the early apostolic age. He established the Christian Church in the East. David Livingston is a trail-blazer in Africa. He established the Christian Church there.

There is a very striking similarity in our two texts. They each represent the consecration of one to the cause of Christ among a people where Christianity was not known. In fact, there is much in the lives and the experience of the two men; so much so that the work of Livingston seems only an outstanding follower of Christ comparable to Paul in carrying the gospel into all the world. Paul covered the East. Livingston covered much of Africa. To be sure, Livingston was only an humble missionary, while Paul was more than that. He became a divine author of the Word of God to mankind. Livingston is only a lesser light, reflecting the glory of the kingdom unto the darkest spot of the world.

They each suffered severe hardships attending their mission, suffering inexpressable, inconceivable. But each is given a dauntless spirit by God's promise, "Trust also in Him and He will bring it to pass." "I will be with you in the sixth trouble and in the seventh not forsake you; yea, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." God brought their work to pass all right, and He never left them. Like their Lord and Master, they each went to their death on the job, and like Him, they each lifted the cause to peaks of glory by such a death. (Read Paul's life; also read Livingston's. A new book of material hitherto unpublished is now available—"Livingston," Campbell—and may be had at any book store.)

Prayer.—O Lord, deepen in us, that we may have a life to live for Thee. Show us the good of the conclusion of it all, and strengthen our faith and steadfastness to be strong and never waver in what Thou hast given us to do. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A Fair Barter.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Matt. 16:26.

Answer this question today according to your own observation, experience and knowledge. What can a Christian have in his own life, more than a non-Christian, which may attract or be clear to the latter, as distinguishing him as a Christian and a child of God?

The Bible speaks of "letting your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify the Father which is in heaven," of your being the "salt," the "light of the world," of being "God's witnesses." What does it all mean to us as differentiating us from those who are not Christians? What is there about us that will constrain a non-Christian to believe that we walk with Jesus?

That is a problem of every-day living, and it is a problem of non-Christian people. They see so little in Christians that differ from their own way of living that they have gone so far as to say that Christianity is not very potent, and they see no evidences of qualities superior to their own. There are those around as who profess dislike for the Church and hate much that it does. They spurn the hypocrisy they see, and hold themselves superior to the most of it. Their lives may be beyond reproach. What will we do about it?

Prayer.—Dear Lord, send Thy Holy Spirit upon us and permeate our lives with the life of Jesus Himself, that no reproach be upon us. Amen.

THURSDAY.

The Blessing of a Good Conscience.

"Brethren, I have lived before God in all good conscience until this day."—Acts 23:1.

It has been said that conscience means the knowledge that one has of one's self in the presence of God. We all know, however, that conscience is not always a reliable guide. We may bribe it or sear it until the vilest of men may wipe his mouth and say, "I have done no wrong." But when we make Christ our conscience, bringing everything to be judged by His light, conscience will speak in no unmistakable tones judging for us the right and the wrong.

If at the end of each day we can look heavenward and say, "I have lived before the Lord in all good conscience," "Search me, O God, and know my heart," we can look the world, yea the devil, in the face and glorify God.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, give us the light within, the divine seed of purity, the voice of the Lord to our souls, and daily make us what Thou wouldst have us be. Amen.

FRIDAY.

The Conscience of Our Saviour.

"He had done no violence, neither was any deceit in His mouth."—Isa. 53:6-9.

The human race is today apparently, as it was in the days of the coming of Christ, like a flock of sheep gone astray, torn and scattered. If we are to believe what we know in many places, some have become lions and are no longer sheep.

But God gave us a Shepherd, and that Shepherd is still the Shepherd of all who will hear His voice. Like man, He was assailed by all the hosts of hell, and was the target of all darts of the seducer. He was tempted in all points as we, yet without sin. He went to the cross with the power to call the legions of heaven to save Him, but He would not use that power lest the stain of violence be upon his hands, or the blush of shame be upon his face, and his purpose be defeated. It was his stainlessness as well as his sacrifice that made him the Saviour. This same pure conscience he shares with those who come to him and follow him.

Prayer.—Great God of mercy, have mercy upon us and make us know a pure conscience. Give us singleness of heart and a vision for sincere faith in Thee, to experience the Christ's holy life in our hearts, and come no more in the power of the devil. Amen.

SATURDAY.

The Good and the Bad.

"And (they) gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good."—Matt. 22:10.

This parable of the wedding feast is, no doubt, the same as found in Luke 14, the difference being that this lesson is that the gospel, as rejected by Jews, is offered to the world, while the Luke story represents the Messianic banquet to which all nations shall come.

Jesus is understood here to teach that the primary purpose of God is not that of the selfish pleasures of His guests, but a great affair of His kingdom. It is the marriage of the heir. Christ is the Heir and Bridegroom, and the Church is the bride. This marriage is the union of the Son with humanity. God's house is the place, and His feast is the blessing. The most unfit, if they will come simply and sincerely, are welcomed. If we understand the incident about the "wedding garment," it is that no scurillons or hypocrites can enter there. God despises a hypocrite. The most of people do. We may rejoice that the human race has that much like its Maker.

Prayer.—Dear loving Father, we feel very thankful to Thee for everything this morning. It is great to be living and enjoying so many blessings of Thine of which we are so unworthy. Do forgive us of all our sins and help us to live purely, simply and sincerely today in all that we do or think. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Lesson: Exodus 1:22-210.

This lesson is a very edifying story. We see the faith of parents to bring up the child for a holy life, united with the wonderful providence of God in saving the life of the child and providing for him a training that equips him for life's work.

This should strengthen the faith of us all. Our children, when dedicated to God, are no longer merely our children, but they are also children of the Lord, royal princes.

If this child had not become the child of the royal household, the mother would have been robbed of him by the executioners. Parents need to consider more seriously than many do that if their children do not become children of the heavenly household, they will be prey for the wicked one who goeth about seeking whom he may devour. Parents are given the care of children. The Holy Spirit saith, "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give you your wages." This is their responsibility to God for the child. It is the vineyard given to them. It is the stewardship with which they are entrusted, and the finest kind.

Prayer.—Lord God of our souls, give us faith to believe with child-like simplicity. Give us wisdom to know what we must do for heaven in rearing children. Give us courage to go through the waters of sacrifice and live forever in the consciousness of eternal union. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

All our children attend Sunday School at the Community Sunday School, and the larger children attend Church; but, for the benefit of the smaller children, last year we instituted a special service in our own chapel at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon to which every child in the Orphanage is required to attend unless excused on account of illness or some other worthy excuse.

This service is held especially for the benefit of the children, and it is really their service. They always have a part. We sing together. We repeat the Lord's Prayer in concert. The little tots often have a program of their own. The larger children render solos, quartets, etc. The children all join in this inspiring service, and we feel that it is doing much good.

From time to time we invite friends to come and give us a fifteen-minute talk, especially for children, and those who have been with us from time to time have had messages that have reached the children, and they have been very much appreciated. Mrs. Walter R. Sellars was with us in our last service. She brought us a message that touched the heart of every child and all present. Her subject was "The Book." In her pleasant and convincing way as she held up the Book, she drove her truth home to the hearts of every one in the chapel.

The children appreciate the messages brought to them from time to time. They inspire them to better and nobler things. One special feature in this service is the song service by the children. They enjoy it. All take part, large and small. Visitors are always welcome.

A CURIOUS NUMBER.

Seven is a cabalistic number; it is also a favorite of poets.

The seventh child of a seventh child is reputed to have psychic powers.

But a Greek professor has discovered seven to be destructive. Writing for a Greek paper that appears in Paris, he produces a mathematical curiosity, which we reproduce from the London Evening Standard:

"The magic figures are 142,857. If they are multiplied by two, the result is 285,714. That is, the same figures and the same sequence are still undisturbed. Multiplied by four, the result is 571,428. Here again the same figures and the same undisturbed sequence. Multiply by five, and the result is 714,285; by six, 857,142. In this last example the result is even more curious, because the two sets of three figures are exactly transposed. When, however, the doubtless weary figures are multiplied by seven, the magic formula breaks down, and the following curious result is achieved—999,999. I wonder if any of my Wrangler readers can produce a better mathematical curiosity than this!"—Ex.

WHY WE FORGET GOD.

To say that we live in a period of transition is true. Every age is such. But some periods are more intense and more clearly marked than others. Such is the time in which we now live. We live in an age of thrilling interest to man. Instead of engaging in business in order to live, we have learned to live for our business. Such an age is not conducive to a knowledge of God. To know God requires thought, study, prayers, service. All these take time, and time is the one thing that the modern man cannot spare. We have forgotten God.

We live in a period of great intellectual upheaval, of far-reaching social changes, of low spiritual standards, and a great crime wave. In the realm of intellect, we are in a period dominated by so-called science. In the physical world we are dominated by speed, efficiency, intensity, of living, and a craze for amusements and pleasure. In the spiritual realm we are in a time of questioning and uncertainty. The great crime wave of lawlessness, murder, theft, divorces and suicide are fast increasing.

Is it not possible that God is opening up new possibilities and calling us forward in spiritual things, just as He is opening up new worlds in other things? The marvelous achievements of man during the last century have caused us to worship man's intelligence, sing songs to his praise. We have forgotten God. We are linked with the world by multiplied ties. We fly around the world in a few hours. We can talk around the world in a few minutes. Yea, the whole world is listening in to what we say and do. Our new day makes new demands upon us. Our temptations are stronger, our opportunities are greater.

From every angle our religion seems inadequate to the demands of the day. Therefore, we need and must have more spiritual power. Jesus calls us not only to confess Him, but to incarnate His spirit; not only to respect Him, but to reproduce His life. How are we measuring up to that standard? We have a changeless Christ, but we are living in a changing world.

Oh, but some one says we are living in a modern age. Times are better—we have conveniences for our comfort, and luxuries for our pleasure, good Churches and schools for training our youth, no need to worry. The words of our Saviour have come true again. We have so largely gained the whole world that we have almost lost our own souls. What shall we do about it?

There is only one wise thing to do: repent and get right with God. The prayer of the Church today should be "Lord, send a revival." Yes, a revival of pure and undefiled religion, that will enable us to have faith in God, faith in His word, faith that is not a mere statement of doctrine, but a faith which proves itself, through a burning desire, to spread the kingdom of God, and a consuming love for lost souls. This requires a high standard of Christian living, for to live aright one must be "born of God," for God is love.

I fear too often we are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but decrying the power thereof. I will now give a few reasons that I think cause us to forget God. In the first place, I am no modernist. I believe in the Bible as the inspired word of God. I believe in the Spirit-filled gospel sermons. I believe if there is a heaven to gain, there is a hell to shun. I believe we should teach and preach eternal punishment. I believe that we should have a sermon at least once each year on the second coming of Christ. We are inclined to believe that the idea of eternal punishment and the second coming of Christ were meant for some other age. If we expected the King of England to visit us, what great preparation we would make, and how we would tell our friends about it! Yet, if we are not expecting it, we know that the King of glory is coming one day, and we are seemingly little concerned about it. Will He find us prepared when He comes?

We have failed to take time to be holy. We are so filled with material things that we have failed to take time to read and meditate upon the Word of God. We should read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. Then we have failed to pray. Prayer is the connection between man and God—the great dynamo of power; and if the connection is broken, the power is lost.

Yes, if we fail to pray, we forget God. We have failed to obey. We are commanded to love not the world, neither the things of the world, and to come out and "be ye separate from among them." We have failed to deny ourselves. Jesus said if any man would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily, and follow me. We have no scriptural grounds for saying we are redeemed by the blood of the Lamb if we are failing to live the sacrificial life.

We have failed to give our time, our talents, our money for His glory. Oh, if we would only give God a chance to use them! Long time ago there was a lad that had only five loaves in the midst of a hungry multitude. He gave them to the Lord, and the Master multiplied the gift so that with them He fed five thousand. Just an example of what the Lord can do if we will only surrender all to Him.

The supreme need of the world today is men and women who will dare to live the Christ-life in spite of persecution; those who will dare to teach and preach the full gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation. May we obey the command, "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts."

MARRIAGES

ELLIOTT—SEAMANS.

On Saturday evening, March 15th, I united in marriage Mr. Thomas Elliott and Miss Elector Seamans. The groom is a member of Union Christian Church and is engaged in farming. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Frank Seamans, of Hites Mill, Halifax County. The good wishes of many friends for their happiness attend them.

MICHAEL—WALKER.

On February 22nd, at 7 P. M., at the home of Mrs. Walker, on Thompsonville Road, Reidsville, N. C., were united in marriage Joseph W. Michael and Mrs. Julia W. Walker. The ceremony was witnessed by a few close friends and neighbors of the contracting parties.

Bro. Michael is chairman of the board of deacons of the Reidsville Church and loved by all for his consecration and love for his Church. Mrs. Michael is a woman of refinement and is devoted to the Church and finds many ways by which she serves her Master in her quiet, consecrated way.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael have moved into the Apples Church community, where Mr. Michael will be engaged in farming. We are sorry to lose them from Reidsville, but the best wishes of their many friends go with them to wish them happiness.

OBITUARIES.

HALL.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, Nannie Whitley Hall, whose death occurred February 8, 1930; and

Whereas, we can realize to some extent the grief of the family at the loss of so noble a life; be it resclved:

1. That while we mourn her departure, we bow submissively to the will of the all-wise Father who doeth all things well.

2. That while the Church has lost a most devoted member, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

3. That we pledge ourselves to nobler efforts in behalf of our Church, in furthering the cause of Christ, feeling that by so doing we but continue work that was ever dear to her heart.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our Church record, and one sent to the bereaved family and one sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. M. T. WHITLEY.
MRS. L. H. WHITLEY.

JONES.

Fanny Elizabeth Jones, daughter of William and Rebecca Claybrooks, was born November 3, 1858, and died March 11, 1930, age 72 years, 4 months and 8 days. On December 18, 1889, she was married to Paul Jones, of Halifax County, Va., and to them were born four children—Eddie, Maggie, Rebecca, Gracie. Eddie died in infancy; Rebecca died in 1915; Gracie married Bro. Charlie Wilkins and died January 11, 1930, leaving two children; Maggie married Bro. Walter Satterfield, and is the only surviving child.

Sister Jones was a member of the Baptist Church from girlhood till Liberty Christian Church was organized. I was her pastor since 1911, with exception of three years. She was known by all to be a woman of deep piety and strong faith. Besides the surviving husband and one daughter, there are fourteen grandchildren. Funeral was conducted at the home by the writer, and burial was made in the family cemetery. Liberty Church has lost a faithful member. We believe she has entered into the rest of the redeemed.

C. E. NEWMAN.

JENKINS.

Funeral services for Elias Wesley Jenkins were held at Martha's Chapel March 1st. Mr. Jenkins was a Confederate veteran, and died at the age of 88. The friend and former pastor of Bro. Jenkins, Rev. B. J. Howard, was in charge of the services and was assisted by Rev. T. D. Collins, of Durham, and the writer.

The deceased is survived by his son, T. L. Jenkins, with whom Bro. Jenkins had been living for the past four years; Mrs. A. F. Nicholson and Mrs. W. J. Morgan. The sorrow of our loss is overcome by joy when we remember the quality of his character.

MARTIN.

The funeral of Bro. Jesse B. Martin was held at Auburn Christian Church on Friday, February 28, 1930. The service was conducted by the writer. Bro. Martin died at the Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., February 25th. He was a World War veteran, having enlisted for service early in 1917. He spent twenty-six months overseas. During this time he saw action in three major engagements, being wounded in the battle of Soissons and Argonne.

As a testimonial of honest and faithful service, he was honorably discharged from the army October 3, 1919. Since his return to civilian life, Bro. Martin had spent much of his time around Auburn, where he was known for his cheerful disposition and the regularity with which he attended the Christian Church. He gave his heart to God early in life, but did not affiliate himself with any Church until his return from the army, having joined the Christian Church in Raleigh while a vocational student at State College.

He was married to Mary E. Huffines on May 22, 1922. To this union, one son, David Webster, was born. Besides his wife and son, he is survived by five brothers. J. A. DENTON.

KERNODLE.

Mrs. J. G. Kernodle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. and Elizabeth Simpson, departed this life February 9, 1930, being in her forty-fourth year of age. She was a good girl, an obedient daughter, devoted wife, and faithful mother. She was a loyal member of Bethlehem Christian church for many years. Her genial, kind, friendly disposition will be greatly missed by the many who knew her.

The last rites of Christian burial were conducted at Bethlehem by her pastor on Monday, February 10th, attended by a crowd so large that all could not get into the house of worship even after opening the folding doors, throwing into the auditorium all available space of this large building. And thus were expressed the highest esteem and tenderest regards of the many for this good woman.

She leaves a kind, Christian husband and five daughters to mourn their loss as she goes to join her five sons who in infancy preceded her. May the comforts of our holy religion attend the bereaved until the end comes.

WHERE THE TROUBLE LIES.—

As we view the evidence of the apparent declining interest in missions, we are inclined to think only of the disastrous effects that must be wrought on the foreign fields by the reduced appropriations. The shortening of lines that are already far too inadequate for the needs is a very real disaster. The effect upon the morale of the workers on the field is also a matter of no slight consequence. It does not require a very vivid imagination to realize how one who has invested all in the mission cause must feel at the lack of support of those who are so wonderfully blessed at home.

But we make a grave mistake if we view the falling off of missionary interest only in the light of the effects which it produces. Its deepest meaning is as a symptom of a grave spiritual disorder in the very body of the Church itself. It means the very same thing for the Church that loss of appetite and diminishing physical vigor means for the body. It is a symptom that there are grave disorders within.

Following and in line with the lack of missionary activity, there has appeared another weakness which is a kindred ailment. That is the loss of evangelistic zeal. The failing of the springs of evangelism is a secondary phase of the disorder, and follows naturally in the trail of diminishing missionary enthusiasm. There are those who think that a Church can be evangelistic and not be missionary. It may be for a time. But the Church that has lost its missionary zeal will soon find the work of evangelism increasingly difficult. The religion that is not thought worthy of exporting will soon seem of too little value to be worth the necessary effort to perpetuate itself in the home land.

And it will soon be found impossible to keep alive in the individual heart and life the religion that does not extend itself beyond the confines of the immediate contacts of one's life. The most hopeful fact in connection with the entire situation is the recognition that missions is not something apart from or added on to the life of the Church; but that it is a part and parcel of the very life itself.

CANADA'S SPLENDID MOVE.—

One of the most outstanding of all the friendly relationships between adjoining nations is that between the United States and Canada. Since the establishing of American Independence, the relationships between the United States and the Dominion of Canada have been unique in the annals of history. There have been numerous occasions when the trouble-seekers have scented issues which they feared would shatter the amicable good will. But before such issues have come to a head they have dissolved before the understanding sympathy which existed between the two peoples.

The most recent move on the part of Canada to co-operate with the United States is in the form of a bill which has been introduced in the Canadian Parliament which would prohibit the export of liquor which is destined for the bootleg trade in the United States. The bill has passed its second reading, and all indications point to its enactment into law. The bill is sponsored by the Canadian Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King.

From the standpoint of Canadian business, it will be a costly move. It is estimated that the liquor which has been exported from Canada and which eventually reached the American consumer amounted to $25,000,000 annually. This will be quite a loss to the Canadian distiller and brewer. Of the above amount, the Canadian government derived about $15,000,000 in revenue taxes. At the present time, all governments are anxiously seeking new and larger sources of revenue, and when it is remembered that Canada sanctions the manufacture and sale of liquors within its own territory, the proposed action is all the more magnanimous.

Of course, the enactment of the proposed law will not automatically stop all the flow of liquor from Canada into the United States, but it does put a stop to the official recognition of the thwarting of the Constitution and laws of the United States by Canada. The fact that ships will no longer be given export clearance to bring liquor into the United States will make the smuggling of liquor far more difficult. It has been estimated that one-fifth of the liquor illegally sold in the United States has come from Canada. If the proposed bill becomes law, it will undoubtedly materially lessen the amount of liquor available in this country. But, regardless of its influence upon prohibition here, it will stand as a memorial to the splendid spirit of co-operation and international neighborliness between Canada and this country.

COSTS TO BE GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.—

There are about four distinct types of Church members. And, like most types, there are gradual shadings from one to the other. Every one, however, is familiar with the general types. There is first of all the type that has long been recognized as the pillar of the Church. They are the members that can be counted on to be present whenever there is any service to be rendered to their Church. They can also be counted on to support every activity and enterprise of the Church. They are the ones that are always inquired about when they are absent. Church members are sometimes sensitive over the fact that nobody inquired about or visited them when they were sick. When often the truth is that the preacher has ceased to inquire about their absence in order to avoid the necessity for their making shallow, trivial, or insincere excuses.

There is the average Church member who attends with a fair degree of regularity and who supports the enterprises of the Church with some degree of faithfulness. Those who are responsible for the work of the Church have long since learned that something can always be expected of this type, but that it will not do to expect very much. This type generally comprises about half the membership of the average Church.

Then there are the "once-in-awhilers." They are the members who may be expected at Church if the weather is unusually fine, and they have no other special engagement for the day. They are the ones who come when there is some special program put on. If they should happen to attend both the morning and evening worship, the regular attendants would wonder just what had been responsible for such an unusual demonstration. They are the ones from whom financial support can be secured only by much insistent solicitation.

And finally there are those who only count for one when the statistics are being compiled as to the Church membership. They are those whose Church membership is a consolation to the family only when they die. Every Church generally manages to have at least one or more of this last type.

We have called attention to these different kinds of Church members in order that you may realize that it only costs a little more, if any, to be a good Church member than it does a poor one. In fact, this scribe is absolutely convinced that if one is going to be a Church member at all, the most expensive course is to be anything short of the best. The same is true in every other walk or relationship of life. The most costly thing in the world is to be a sorry farmer, lawyer, doctor, or a sorry anything else. One of the best farmers I ever knew modestly explained the fact of his success by saying that he worked just a little longer, a little harder, and planned a little more carefully than the most of his neighbors. And he had accurately and truthfully analyzed the situation.

It only requires a moment's thought to realize that the extra effort he had put forth was compensated for a hundred-fold by the satisfaction which success had brought. Most people can testify that an hour's neglect frequently costs more than an entire week of faithful work. In fact, the less one does, the harder it is to get it done. Most of us only need to put forth a little extra effort to lift the irksome and unpleasant responsibilities of life into the most exquisite sources of satisfaction.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Miss Ida S. Robinson, president of the Congregational Woman's League of the Carolinas, sending in her check for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, includes this splendid sentiment: "Our Conference in Raleigh will be of great interest, now that we are of one Church and one purpose. God grant that the spirit of unity may come to all our Churches the world over."

A good and deeply interested subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN writes: "To my mind, there is cause, and I believe opportunity, for THE CHRISTIAN SUN to become a greater force. If only the constituency of the Southern Convention would get behind it with real purpose; not with selfish or divisive emphasis, but because it has an almost immortal identity and background."

Rev. W. T. Scott, under date of Dayton, Ohio, March 24th, writes: "Yesterday Bro. John G. Truitt and I brought our congregations together in a merger. Bro. Truitt becomes the pastor when I leave, the last of April. The merged Church will take the name 'First Congregational-Christian Church (Walnut Hills), Dayton, Ohio.' We had a great day, and feel like the merger means much to both congregations and to the Christian forces of Dayton."

It is announced that Dr. W. D. Hooper, president of the University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., will be the literary speaker for the Elon College commencement this year, and that Dr. Fred B. Smith, moderator of the General Council of Congregational-Christian Churches, will be the baccalaureate preacher at the Sunday morning service. President W. A. Harper, according to custom, gives the baccalaureate address to the senior class Sunday evening.

One of our most progressive and promising Churches of recent organization and building is the Christian Church of Biscoe, Western North Carolina Conference. It is a neat and very attractive brick building, and does credit not only to the faithful ones who built it, but to the town in which it is situated. THE SUN editor enjoyed an evening service there some time ago and has not found a more loyal and active group of workers in kingdom development.

Our good women of the various districts are exceedingly anxious to have the pastors of each district, with delegations from their Churches, in their annual missionary rallies. The dates of these rallies are given elsewhere in THE SUN, and the pastors have been especially invited, so the superintendents write. It would seem that every pastor would wish to be present at the rally in his district, since the work is his very own and is essential to the spiritual growth of the Church.

THE SUN'S editor learns with sorrow of the death of Bro. D. J. Mood, in Richmond, Va., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard Randolph, on March 4th. The burial was at Smithfield, Va., March 5th. Bro. Mood was once associate-owner and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and, under the name of "Uncle Tangle," conducted what was then the "Children's Corner" in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, which sponsored the Christian Orphanage in the days of its beginning. Bro. Mood was a good man, modest, quiet, unassuming. He is most kindly remembered by many SUN readers.

Dr. W. C. Wicker spent four days of last week with members and former members of Christian Churches, in Winston-Salem, N. C. Dr. Wicker listed more than fifty such names, many of whom are exceedingly desirous of a Christian Church in Winston-Salem. It would seem that if the Christian Church cares for anything, for the conservation of its own, for a constructive program, and for the contribution that it is trying to make to Christianity, there should be a Christian Church in Winston-Salem.

THE SUN editor enjoyed March 23rd with three of Dr. W. C. Wicker's congregations—Belew Creek, 11 A. M.; Pleasant Ridge, 3 P. M.; Graham, 7:30 P. M. The first two named contemplate new buildings at an early date, Pleasant Ridge already having made a beginning, logs being cut for the framing and other activities started. Belew Creek realizes its great need and will build. It has many promising young people who deserve and should have more adequate room for Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. The congregation at Graham in the evening was fine, and had a musical program of unusual merit.

One of our most faithful pastors, who is using mission period for spiritual uplift of his people, said to THE SUN editor recently: "Giving to missions is not a sacrifice, and should not be so regarded. It is a real privilege, and our people should regard this as one of the most distinct privileges and opportunities for good granted to Christian people." Another pastor, equally interested, whose work is with rural Churches, said that he was urging his people, all of them, this year to set aside one acre, a veritable God's acre, to be cultivated as the other acres of the farm, the price of the products of which is to be given to the Lord's cause.

Rev. J. W. Knight, Stokesdale, pastor of Mt. Bethel, New Lebanon, and Howard's Chapel Churches, has been quite unwell all winter, we regret to learn, but feels improved to some extent with the beginning of spring. Here is hoping that Bro. Knight's health will be fully restored. He is one of our consecrated and faithful pastors. Under date of March 26th, he writes: "We are making a special effort to get our full quota for missions raised in all of my Churches. In at least one of my Churches I am sure the full quota will be reached, as I do not know of any Church of its financial condition that goes beyond it in giving to missions as this Church does."

Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor, writing under date of March 24th, says: "Miss Susie Riddick and Miss Lucille Mulholland, both of Durham, went with me to Beulah Church yesterday and organized a Missionary Society, of which Mrs. A. W. Watkins, Route 3, Wake Forest, N. C., was elected president, and Mrs. Vance Raybon, Route 3, Zebulon, was elected secretary. The pastor organized a Christian Endeavor Society at the evening service." Bro. House is zealous in the good work of his Churches and, in a constructive manner, is proceeding to interest them in that which means growth and development of his Churches and the kingdom of God.

The Associated Press dispatch from Shanghai, China, under a recent date, said: "Movies, based upon crook or war themes, have been barred from cinemas in a Chinese city, although natives may still see them in the international settlement. The rule was made by the Shanghai special district film censorship, which takes its orders from the Chinese municipal government." That dispatch is enough to make the Christian nation sit up and take notice. They control the "international settlement" over which the municipal government of the Chinese city has no control, but the Chinese city itself has spoken and put the ban on the movies which show the crook themes and war themes to their youth.

One of our leading and very active pastors says that we Christians should make our goal at least one-half the amount of pastor's salary for missions instead of one-third. We do hope that all Churches this year will reach the goal of one-third, since it does seem that every Christian in every Church would willingly give as much to have the gospel preached to others as to have it preached to themselves. The next session of the Convention should raise the goal and the quota for each Church from one-third the amount of pastor's salary to at least one-half. We know Churches of other denominations that pay more to carry the gospel to others than they pay for having it preached to themselves, and this is the great goal all Christians should strive to reach.

One of the most successful and devoted of our pastors, in speaking of the mission offering at or about Easter, said: "Though our missionary offering may require urging and self-denial, we must not fail in the one real thing for which the Church is here. We cannot raise our quota without a passion for our Lord and for the cultivation of His kingdom. The one enterprise that the Church alone, of all institutions on earth, is promoting challenges us to do our best, and we cannot afford to fail or to falter in accepting the challenge." Another pastor, equally interested and doing his best in this mission period, said: "We too often identify missions with money. I began a system of missionary education in my Church some time ago, and on at least one Sunday in every month I try to stir the hearts of our people to the spiritual joy and opportunity afforded through mission study and service. It costs more not to sacrifice for our Lord than it costs to sacrifice for Him."

The Disciples of Christ, a denomination younger in years than we, now have in their employ 2,011 men and women in its foreign mission fields. Two hundred and seventy-eight of these are missionaries sent out and 1,733 are nationals. These workers carry on in 1,135 preaching points, including Churches. There are 112 self-supporting Churches on the foreign fields. In these congregations 25,000 members gather every Sunday for fellowship and worship. The total Church membership of the Disciples in the foreign field now numbers 40,319, a gain of 3,256 last year. (The gain on the foreign field in the Disciples' Church last year was 8.7 per cent, but in the home field here in America 2.1 per cent.) They have 600 Bible schools with an enrollment of 23,637, and 512 day schools of all grades enrolling 15,608 students; 16 hospitals and 19 dispensaries gave 434,791 treatments last year. Last year the missionaries on the foreign field raised in their fields and expended on their work $347,608.66, and the Disciples here in America raised for the same work $787,280.92. That is to say, the converts and missionaries on the foreign field gave to the foreign work forty-four cents in every dollar raised for the foreign work by the Disciples of Christ in America; for every dollar the Disciples of Christ gave for foreign missions last year $1.20 was spent on the foreign field. What a base slander and falsehood it is for any one to say that it takes one-half of each dollar to get the other half across, when the facts invariably are that a dollar given here is more than a dollar when it is spent for advancing the kingdom of God in fields afar!

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, Preacher.

LOVE YOUR ENEMIES.

"I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you."—Luke 6:27-28.

The essence of Christianity is love. Jesus had more to say relative to the power and application of this phase of living than anything else. In the words of the text, taken from the greatest of all sermons, He sets forth a statement which may seem like a paradox, yet in truth it contains the most vital element of the religion of which we claim as our own. It was very necessary that Jesus should say to the great multitude gathered there on the mount to hear Him preach, that they should apply love to their enemies if they would gain the most from following Him.

To them, this was a new doctrine. While they had never been taught to really hate their enemies, they had been admonished to love their neighbors and to retaliate in all things. The old law had encouraged each man to return a blow for a blow, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a stripe for a stripe, and a burn for a burn. This old Mosaic law went so far as to advocate the killing of the ox that would gore a man, and if need be, kill the owner of such a beast that would attack a person. Such an oxen was to be despised, his flesh burned rather than eaten, so that there would be no more remembrance of such a one. The same law of old said, "He that smiteth father or mother shall be put to death, and he that curseth father or mother shall also be killed." For further references on the old law, see Exodus 21, Lev. 24:17-23, and Deut. 21.

Vengeance or any attempt to retaliate is directly contrary to the principles of the new kingdom which Jesus came to establish, and therefore He had much to say relative to love, even for one's enemies. Before we come to discuss the ways and means of love for an enemy, let us ask, "who is my enemy?" In answer to the question who is my neighbor? Jesus set forth a parable, known as the parable of the Good Samaritan, in which He reveals that one's neighbor is any one to whom we may do good through ministry. But who is my enemy? Now, the word "amicus" means friend, or one who is attached to another because of love; but the word "inimicus," we see, is just the opposite of amicus, because of the prefix "in," meaning negative; hence an enemy is one who is hostile toward another person; a friend is any one who is helpful, whereas an enemy is one who is harmful.

Jesus said, "As ye would that men do to you, do ye also to them likewise. For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love them that love them. If ye lend to them from whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners to receive as much again. But love your enemies" (Luke 6: 33-34).

Jesus revealed God as a Father who loved all men and who out of His great love made His rain to fall upon the crops of the just and the unjust alike. If you would be godlike, we, like Him, must love our enemies as well as our friends. By loving one's enemies, Jesus does not mean that we are to expound the same spontaneous love upon our enemies that we do upon our parents and best friends, nor does He mean that we should tolerate the wrongs of those who do us evil. He realizes that the welfare of society depends largely upon the well-ordered behavior of all the citizens who dwell therein. Every criminal must be punished; every evil-doer must pay the price; every enemy must suffer for wrong-doing—nevertheless, it is the duty of every follower of Jesus to do good, through the application of the golden rule, upon every single man, be he friend or foe. This task seems rather difficult, doesn't it? Yet with the love of God in our hearts, all things are possible. Christianity is a religion of friendship, rather than hatred—to hit back is to become unfriendly. Therefore, let us see how Jesus would have us apply the love of God, to even an enemy.

When I ask Jesus to teach me to love my enemy, He tells me to:

1. Bless them that curse you. In these five words of the first division of the text, Jesus is admonishing me to speak well of the indviidual that speaks evil of me. To speak evil of the man who speaks evil of me, is to hit back, and as Jesus has already shown us, retaliation is contrary to the principles of Christianity and is the farthest thing in the world from a kindly spirit. Though an enemy slander me, I am to speak well of him. Though he curse me, I am to praise him, though he gossip about me, I am to speak well of his good qualities. At no time as I to speak evil of him, but rather am I to speak well of him. If he tells falsehoods on me, I am not to tell lies on him, but rather to live down the falsities spoken against me, and go forth and tell the truths about the man that seeks my destruction.

The easy method is to return story for story, gossip for gossip, slander for slander, unkind words for unkind words, and malice for malice. The easy way is the way of the devil—the way of destruction and the way that is un-Christ-like. The other way is to love one's enemies and give expression to the same by saying a good word in behalf of the one who declares false sayings upon another. The latter plan was used so often by Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday we recently honored. It is claimed that a certain member of his cabinet spoke evil of him and declared that he was the missing-link between man and beast. Lincoln declared that maybe the man was right, and that he was the man, he must pick for a higher office than he held at present.

The epistle of James, in its practical way, admonishes us concerning the use we make of the tongue. In this epistle the writer says that the tongue is a very small member of the body, very hard to tame, and containing a deadly poison. With it, we may bless God or curse man, for out of the same mouth may proceed blessings and cursings. Let us, therefore, bless them that curse us, rather than curse them that curse us.

2. We may love our enemies by serving them, in obedience to the words of the Master, who said, "Do good to them that hate you."

Helping an enemy, by ministering unto his needs, is a greater indication of one's Christian discipleship than speaking kind words about him, for every one that sayeth, Lord, Lord, and doeth not the will of God shall not enter the kingdom. We remember that our actions speak louder than our words. It is not so difficult to speak good things concerning an enemy, for the things we say he may not hear, but to go to him and do good in his behalf is most difficult.

While Robert E. Lee was president of Washington and Lee University, an old soldier came to his home for help. Lee gave him food, clothing and money. As he left his home, he said to a friend, there is one of the old soldiers who fought a good fight. It is true he fought on the other side, but he couldn't help that, and it is just as much pleasure to help one who fought against me as it is to help one of my own men. Such was the Christ-like spirit of the great Southern general.

In that famous chapter written to the Church at Rome, Paul says, "If it is possible as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Avenge not yourselves, for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink, for in so doing thou shalt heep coals of fire upon his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good" (Rom. 12:18-21).

3. Pray for them which despitefully use and persecute you.

Christ Jesus knew whereof He spoke when He alluded to the fact that the righteous would be persecuted and despitefully used. The righteous prophets had been persecuted before his time, and now He was to be lifted upon a cruel cross; so it is that every righteous man must battle against trial and tribulations. He tells us that the best way to do good to the enemy that would willfully harm and persecute is to pray for his welfare. This was the manner which Jesus used when on the cross He prayed for those who were His enemies and asked God to forgive them.

GOD'S WORD OR MAN'S WILL?

In the organized Churches today there is evinced so much of the spirit and tendency of the Israelites when they were clamoring to have a king over them, "like other nations," that it might be well for us to see if we could pause and see where we are.

The Word of God says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). This shows us that the Word has divisions.

Today there is great emphasis on religion. Is there a difference between religion and Christianity? Is there a difference between the law and grace? Have there been different dispensations in the dealings and the requirements of God with man? How many different dispensations have there been since man's creation? How many supposedly educated and cultured preachers know what dispensational truth is? And how many of them can tell in which dispensation we are living today, and can tell wherein this dispensation differs from all that were before this present dispensation and the dispensations to come? What is salvation, and who are the saved and who are the unsaved? Does The Christian Sun propose to be a religious paper, or to be a paper of Christianity?

I know of no man more capable of answering these questions than J. Lee Johnson, and know of no man freer from indirection, and I am asking him to answer all these questions except the last one, and to answer them with the consciousness that he is pleasing God rather than pleasing man.

M. Eugene Street.

(Ed. Note: The Christian Sun seeks, at all times and under all circumstanies, to be a thoroughly Christian paper; to reflect the spirit, not of legalistic religion, but of the Christ, the world's only hope and Saviour.—J. O. Atkinson, Editor.)

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

AS EASTER APPROACHES.

With April comes Easter. Some of the Churches who have preaching only once a month will be taking their missionary offering. Others throughout the Convention will be planning, pursuing and praying. It is to be a time of real testing and trial. We Christians have been slow to put first things first and to realize the words of our Lord: "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." When we put the claim of His kingdom, its needs and enlargement first into our reckoning, thinking and giving, we will experience a new spiritual fervor and a new power of strength and growth. This we must do through faith in His name, and in His power to lead, redeem and save.

Mission boards, missionary societies, and even the Church itself are not responsible for missions, for the call to support missions, nor for the need and claims on the mission fields. Our Lord Himself is responsible for all that. He assumed that responsibility when He instituted His supreme commission: "Go ye and make disciples of all nations, teaching them to observe whatsoever I have commanded you." There may be faults and defects in our human management of missionary pleas and programs; but there can be no fault in the motive, the fact and the spirit of missions, because our Lord is the sole sponsor of that, and in Him there is no fault.

Moreover, He instituted that program, and the spirit of it, through His own sacrificial offering on the cross; crucified, nailed and suffered there, that He might fulfill His own words, which said: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." He was lifted up that He might draw. He draws and He lifts through self-denial.

It is only through self-denial that we shall do our part in delivering the message of His love and His life to those who are perishing without it, and build houses of worship in places where they are so much needed and where souls are hungry for the gospel.

Only through our once-a-month offering in the Sunday School, and through the Easter offering the free-will offering of individuals and Churches will we have opportunity to enter into the sacrificial spirit of our Lord and the privilege of proclaiming the power of His resurrection to the world. Every Church should avail itself of this privilege, and with sincere and unstinted dedication and consecration seek to do its best, even as our Lord Christ did His best and gave His all for us. Let us come into the spirit of His blessed resurrection and the joy of a triumphant gospel, as we, through self-denial, seek to find fellowship with Him, and thus show our willingness to divide with others the infinite power of the gospel that has made us what we are. THE GOSPEL IS SUPREME AND FINAL.

There are many helpful programs and pronouncements in this world. Many of them, by the truth they contain, inspire and carry a long way. But there is one supreme and final message and pronouncement, and that is the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." "All things were made by Him, and without Him not anything was made that was made." He is the final one and the Supreme. In Him was revealed the God-head bodily. What the world stands in need of today is a passoinate proclamation of the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, pastor, Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, writing in the Missionary Review of the World for April, in answer to an inquiry, "What is the remedy for the decline in gifts to missions?" very pertinently declares: "One thing, and only one, is needed. The Church in America needs to be baptized into the conviction that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is supreme and final. The Church must recapture the urgency of its own message." Man's love is not sufficient to save his fellow-man; only divine love can take away sin, give life and restore to righteousness. Human institutions cannot take the place of the divine inastitution, the Church. Jesus Himself founded and is building the Church, and it is the only institution that He is building. Out of the Church which He builds come many other institutions and enterprises, and these will live and have power only as they reflect and reveal the spirit of Him who gave them birth through the Church, and who is building the Church.

We may think that there are many human philosophers, poets, authors, high in genius, great in achievement, wonderful in intellect, rich in influence; but our Lord Christ is in a class alone, and has done more to help the world thing straight and to bring about righteousness and holiness among men than any and all other teachers, prophets, seers that ever came into the world. His words are spirit, and they are life, and they are final, and they are supreme. We cannot overreach the gospel message, and we do well if, by consecration, study, life and devotion, we reveal in ourselves and proclaim to the world anew that age-old message of the cross of Christ in which Paul gloried and which has been the heart and soul of every saving message delivered since Paul's day. The gospel is supreme and is final.

FIFTY YEARS OF HUMAN UPLIFT.

The Salvation Army has just celebrated the fiftieth year of its work in the United States. Their first street meeting was held in New York City fifty years ago, just after a little band of the army landed in that great metropolis. At first haughty and self-sufficient Americans laughed or smiled indifferently, or treated with scorn the little bands that beat their drums and tambourines and sang their songs with weather-broken voices on street corners and in public parks. After a while, scorn and contempt gave way to inquiry and respect, and finally inquiry and respect gave way to admiration and support. When a Mr. Booth wrote a book about London society less than a half-century ago, he said there was a "submerged tenth" of London's population who were too low, too degraded, too far gone to ever be lifted, reformed or redeemed. Therefore, it was economy to let the "submerged tenth" alone, leave the hog in his wallow, and prevent those just above the "submerged tenth" from descending any lower. "This," declared Booth, "would be economy as well as morality and righteousness." Then another Booth, General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, with supreme faith in the lifting power of our Lord, came forth with his famous declaration and slogan: "A man may be down, but he is never out."

General Both believed there was economy in religion, and that human beings never descended so low that the strong arm of the Lord Jesus cannot reach them. He founded the Salvation Army on that belief. At first the Churches thought they had a competitor. They have lived to see the Salvation Army doing a work they could not do, and that an army with banners was needed to carry the war for righteousness and salvation even into the battlefield where Satan himself seemed already to be in supreme command. Today it is doubtful if any religious organization in America has more generous support and profound respect from any and all sources than the Salvation Army. The army has proven its worth by its fruit. It is close to the "underworld" and comes in contact with what the rest of the world call the "down and outs." The Salvation Army can look back upon fifty years of real service for America's betterment, as it has sought to lift the lowly by helping them to hear of and to know the Christ of God.

In this connection, Commander Evangeline Booth of the army this year celebrates her twenty-fifth anniversary of service in the United States. Possibly no person can speak with such authority and acquaintances on subjects that pertain to drink and drunkenness, prohibition and its effects as Commander Booth, and of prohibition in the United States she recently said, "It is the greatest blessing that has ever been visited upon this country. Do not tell me about its evils. Whatever they are, they are as nothing compared to the good that it has done throughout the country." J. O. A.

TALKING OF SACRIFICE.

The word "sacrifice" is very loosely used. As a rule, those who have made real sacrifices are the last to acknowledge it, feeling that whatever is done in the name of the Lord and for His sake is paid back a hundred-fold. From every human point of view, one of the outstanding instances of a man who denied himself of every comfort and went on and on through disease and deprivation, hunger and thirst, need and every bodily comfort, was David Livingstone (who breathed out his last in African jungles on the floor of a mud hut). The world offered him honor, reward and comfort if he would turn back and accept the ease and luxury of civilization for a season. Livingstone declared he could not come back, but must press on. And yet this man declared he had made no sacrifice. Read his words:

"People talk of the sacrifice I have made in spending so much of my life in Africa. Can that be called a sacrifice which is simply paid back as a small part of a great debt owing to our God, which we can never repay? Is that a sacrifice which brings its own best reward in healthful activity, the consciousness of doing good, peace of mind, and a bright hope of a glorious destiny hereafter?

"Away with the word in such a view, and with such a thought! It is emphatically no sacrifice. Say, rather, it is privilege. Anxiety, sickness, suffering, or danger, now and then, with a foregoing of the common conveniences and charities of this life, may make us pause and cause the spirit to waver and the soul to sink, but let this only be for a moment.

"All these are nothing when compared with the glory which shall hereafter be revealed in and for us. I never made a sacrifice. Of this we ought not to talk when we remember the great sacrifice which He made who left His Father's throne on high to give Himself for us. (See Hebrews 1:3.)"

Yet many of us Christians are ready to claim for ourselves a service of sacrifice when we have denied ourselves the least luxury or comfort for the sake of our Lord. Shall we bear in mind that our Lord went to the cross voluntarily and suffered there beyond all power of human understanding, the innocent for the guilty, and gave up all for our sakes? In the light of that sacrifice, that which we do in His name and for His sake dwindles to insignificance. We get back from the service for our Lord, and self-denial in His name far more than we ever put into that service. In that light there is no sacrifice, but joy, gladness, glory and victory. J. O. A.

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST.

Only "the biggest" seems to give thrill and attract attention. On the front page of the morning daily recently there were two announcements the same day of the world's biggest. One was that New York City is to have the largest bank in the world. Three of her largest banks are to be merged, and the world's greatest bank is to have resources approximately $2,800,000,000.

And then on the same day and in the same paper goes the announcement that a "modern colossus of steel costing $38,000,000" is rising above the waters of the Chicago River. This building, the largest in the world, is approaching completion and is to be occupied by 60,000 persons and contains four million square feet of floor space." The world of our day revels in the big things men are building and projecting. These fascinate the mind, evoke the fancy and stagger the imagination of mankind. Yet there is something greater than bigness, larger than human proportions, mightier than skyscrapers. God has piled up the mighty mountains and stretched out the infinite oceans, and holds the seas in the hollow of His hand. All that man can do in sizable structures is nothing when compared to His might and majesty in building the great and creating proportions. Moreover, all that He built is good, is very good, and He builds solely out of a benevolent heart and only with a generous hand that all men may be blessed and benefitted by His building. If our great mergers and big buildings will lead us closer to Him and to the realization of His majesty and might, we do well. But if, in the exercise of our scientific and electric energies and activities, we become self-sufficient, and come to forget Him who piled up the mountains and dug out the seas, ours shall be an unfortunate people and an unhappy race.

THE PREACHER.

The first call is to be a Christian, and the call to be a preacher is essential in a minister's life and work. When God called the Hebrews to be His people, they became His people. When God called Jonah to be a prophet, he became a prophet. When God called Paul to be an apostle, he became an apostle. The twelve were called in person by Jesus and learned under His teaching and example. Paul was called by a vision and a conviction as impressive as the call of the twelve by Jesus. Others were called by similar impressions and convcitions made by the Holy Spirit. In no case, either in the Old or the New Testament, were prophets or preachers brought into the ministry by self-choice. A call to the ministry is essential to success.

There is only one way by which human help can bring preachers into the ministry, and that is by prayer. "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest" (Luke 10:2). The Church can feel the need for more preachers, but the Church cannot supply that need by schools, suggestion, by advice, nor by opportunity to offer themselves for such service. A human-called preacher is a failure in the spiritual kingdom. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned, and a call to stand in the pulpit to proclaim the gospel must be a divine call. It is an inner sense of obligation imparted by the Holy Spirit, a feeling of necessity, a conviction from which the individual cannot rid himself; and if he does not yield to this call, he suffers defeat all his days. There is no reason why one truly called to the ministry should fail, unless he neglects the cultivation of the life necessary for such a calling. Preaching is really a calling, and the preacher is called. He is not only a man, but a Christian, called of God to preach the gospel.

In the case of the fishermen called by Jesus, they left all and followed Him. They had no salary consdieration, and that is not a part of the call in this day. God will provide for the necessities of those who surrender to His call and devote their lives to His service. Jesus promised to make them fishers of men. Fishermen do not always catch the fish they seek, but they catch some; and it is even so with the preacher. He does not get into the kingdom all he seeks, but he wins some, and their influence helps to win others. Jesus did not win many in His day, and He met much opposition; but the work goes on through those He did win from the world unto God. Jesus said, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father" (John 14:12). That process continues, and will continue until every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to God. The first step toward the pulpit is a divine call, and there is no other true path to that high position of preaching the gospel which is God's method of saving the world.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

It seems that the good old days are forever gone—days when men and women had time to visit each other; when they were vitally interested in each other's welfare; when they really showed their appreciation of each other. They stayed at home and attended to their own business, made their own living, and got real joy out of life. They were real neighbors to each other. Men had log-rollings, the women had quiltings. They enjoyed the day together and a great part of the night. They had plenty time, and thought it no disgrace to assemble with some neighbor one night in every week and engage in an old-time prayer service. Souls were made happy. Sons and daughters were born into the kingdom of God. On Sunday the house of God was crowded, and often the man of God would proclaim God's message to a spell-bound audience for two hours and longer at a time. Then the people would return to their homes with their hearts overflowing with joy because of the presence of the power of God.

It was not an uncommon thing in the good old days to find a minister living in the rural section. He traveled on horse-back, or on buggy, and was seldom late at his appointment, and when he arrived at his Church he spent some time with his members. Times have changed. All our ministers are living in towns and cities now, and the rural Churches are fast passing away.

In the good old days, a man did not have to go to college to learn to preach the gospel. God called and qualified men, and they had power. They would kneel in prayer and pour out their souls to God, and He never disappointed His faithful followers. The minister and his people did not spend everything they could get to dress themselves, that they might make a great show.

Now the minister rides out from town in a car that is not paid for and has the appearance of some great man-of-the-world. He talks for twenty minutes about his college experience, and then quotes Dr. So-and-So and repeats a bit of Shakespeare. Then he dismisses his congregation and rushes back to town. His excuse for not spending more time with them is, "I'm too busy." Then his folks are made to wonder what he does. They are aware of the fact that he has not been busy preparing a sermon. The people went to Church hungering for the gospel that has power, and went away disappointed. The minister went back to town wondering why the rural Church is failing, and finally concludes the reason is that those fellows are just too ignorant to understand a real sermon, when the fact is they have not heard one in so long that they are almost starved to death.

In the good old days you could tell a Christian from a sinner, and when a sinner got into the Church and would not try to do better, he was expelled. But nowadays some of the meanest rascals in the community are leading members, and the minister is perfectly satisfied because they pay liberally.

In the good old days, people gave as they purposed in their hearts, and the man of God was satisfied; but now they must pay some college chap a big salary or do without a preacher.

If I were a preacher I would endeavor to proclaim the unadulterated gospel to rural Churches. The rural Church has been the nucleus on which this great republic was built. When the rural Church ceases to function, farm life will be a failure. Unless our ministers are willing to make sacrifices for the rural Church and study its needs, it cannot exist much longer. Many rural Churches have been forced to close their doors for the lack of a pastor, while many preachers have gone into other business for the sake of more money.

I don't know much about the city Church, but I hear they are not doing much real, constructive kingdom work. Just what their needs are, I cannot tell, but I do know the rural Church problem from A to Z, and her greatest need is "the foolishness of preaching."

Yours for a better rural Church—such as they had in the good old days. SENEX.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Funerals and flowers attract the serious attention of people and, in many cases, provoke adverse criticism. Often one hears good people say that it would be so much better if flowers were given to people while living instead of after they are dead. The thought in that criticism is that the beautiful flowers artistically arranged are presented to the dead. They cover the casket, they fill the room with their beauty and fragrance, and then they cover the grave. So far as we know, the dead know nothing of their presence, nothing of the hearts and hands that arranged them. If they are given to the dead, the sympathy they express is wasted on the desert air. There are other views that may be taken of the flower-crowned grave and the hearts of those who bring or send them. Three views may be taken of the common custom of sending flowers at funerals.

They are for the living and not for the dead, though the dead may prompt the giving. They express the sympathy and love of friends for those who have lost their loved ones. If for the dead only, they would be taken to the grave after the burial; but they are taken to the home, the Church, the funeral, so that weeping eyes and aching hearts may be comforted in their deep sorrow. If the dead left no friends to mourn, there would be few flowers. Those great banks of flowers are for the living, and not for the dead; and it is the sweetest way to express sympathy for the bereaved. Many do not know some of their real Christian friends until they see the flowers and read the cards at the funeral of their dead. It is true that the flowers express respect and even love for the dead, but the main thing expressed is for the living.

Those who raise the flowers often earn their living by that means. A widow said: "The only way I can support my children and send them to school, Sunday School, and Church is by raising flowers to sell for marriages, memorial services, and funerals." Buying flowers from her is contribution to the living, and that way of caring for her family is a beautiful way of supporting herself and children. Buying such flowers is helping the poor, comforting the sorrowing, and helping to beautify the world. It would be a dull world without flowers, and it might be a world without sympathy and without love.

Flowers increase the business of the world, and business is a necessary part of the progress of mankind. The beauty of pictures is made up largely from flowers in the mind of the painter expressed by his brush. The art galleries are mostly picture-gardens, and the harvests of the world start in flowers. Ruskin describes the beauty God has displayed in the plumage of birds, and nature smiles on mankind through its flowers. The language of libraries is colored by beautiful expressions, and women improve their looks and their lives by paints and flowers. The pulpit is all the sweeter by the flowers that the thoughtful women bring into the Church. Flowers are simply the beauty of nature, man and God combined; and beauty of character is simply faith, truth, and love combined in human lives.

ELON LETTER.

The North Carolina Baptist State Convention met in its centennial session at Greenville, N. C., March 26th and 27th. Just 100 years ago the Baptists of North Carolina met in this same city of Greenville, when it was but a "dirty village on the banks of the Tar," to use the expressive description of George Washington, who, during the Revolutionary War, spent a night there. Now Greenville is a thriving city of some 20,000 to 30,000 people, the seat of a teacher-training institution of high order. The sessions of this centennial meeting were so largely attended that the commodious Church of the city could not furnish the necessary seating capacity, and so the convention adjourned to the auditorium of the Eastern Carolina Teachers' College.

The Baptist Church has been facetiously said to have begun in the Jordan River, and no doubt there have been since that baptismal scene in that famous stream persons in the Christian communion who have espoused the traditions upon which the Baptist Church is founded. In order of time, however, there is no controversy as to the origin of the Baptist Church. The first group to take this name were English refugees in Amsterdam, Holland, in the year 1608.

Roger Williams came to America in 1631, and after a brief stay in the Plymouth colony removed to the Massachusetts Bay colony. He was a man of incisive conviction and believed absolutely in independence of thought and in religious freedom. Six years were as long as the Massachusetts Bay colony could tolerate such an independent spirit, and so they expelled him in 1637. He applied for a permit to live in the Plymouth Bay colony, but was refused admission, and was advised to seek quarters for believers of his free faith and independence of spirit elsewhere.

Roger Williams was forced, therefore, to found the colony which later became the State of Rhode Island. In 1639 he started what is supposed to be the first Baptist Church in America in the city of Providence, though the Baptist Church of Newport, started by John Clarke, lays claim to this honor. Both Churches claim to have been started in 1639.

Roger Williams and his fellow-citizens of Providence drew up a pact which they signed and in this pact they agreed that they would be subject to each other only in civil matters. This is the beginning of what is popularly known as the separation of Church and State in history. However, it is far more than that. The pact really limits the State to civil matters, but leaves the Church absolutely free and independent in every respect. The Baptist Church has never hesitated to make suggestions to civil officials in respect to any matter which they considered of importance, but they have never permitted the civil authorities to make any suggestions to them. It would be well to keep this matter in mind when an appraisal of of the real contribution of the Baptists to the world is made.

Some of the most distinguished leaders in Christian history have been Baptists. A few of them are as follows: William Carey, founder of Modern Missions, 1792; Adoniram Judson, founder of American Missions, 1812; John Milton, the great poet; Daniel DeFoe, founder of modern fiction; John Bunyan, the allegorist; Charles H. Spurgeon, famous preacher; Alexander Maclaren, profound biblical expositor; Henry Dunster, first president of Harvard; Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court; David Lloyd George, the English statesman; John D. Rockefeller, father and son, Christian philanthropists.

The eight fundamental principles of the Baptist Church are: (1) The Church is an independent organization; (2) there should be complete separation of the Church and State; (3) there should be religious liberty as respecting belief; (4) the Church consists of the baptized followers of Christ; (5) there must be no infant baptism; (6) only believers should be baptized; (7) the Lord's Supper is a memorial, and not a sacrament; (8) the Bible is God's inspired word of revealed truth.

It was my privilege to attend this centennial session of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention and to speak a word of greeting on behalf of the Christian Church.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

By-Products.

In these days, much of the profit and sometimes the whole of success depends upon utilizing the odds and ends. The by-product is something apart from the main article manufactured, and yet something that has an actual value of its own.

In the manufacture of gas there are many by-products. These are obtained from the coal as the latter is made into lighting-gas. And these by-products, including coke from the coal, actually paying the cost of the gas. All kinds of big businesses have their by-products, their little odds and ends, that pay well.

In Mr. Armour's enormous meat factory there are endless by-products, from the pigtails which are dried and sold as a delicacy to the hair of the animals made into powerful and valuable kind of rope. If he neglected to make the hair rope or sell the pigtails, it would make a big difference in his dividends.

Not every individual is a manufacturer, but we are all dealers in time. Our success depends upon the use we make of our time and its by-products—the odd moments. Each of us has a regular day's work that we do in routine, and that ends it, but what about the by-products, the odd moments?

The men who have made great success in this world are men who have used wisely those odd moments. Thomas A. Edison was hammering away at a telegraph key while he was operator, on a small salary, using his odd moments between messages as a foundation for all his later inventions which have given him millions, and the inhabitants of the world many new ideas.

What a man does in his odd moments will not only bring him profit, but will increase his mental activity. There is a foolish motto which reads, "Let well enough alone." Nothing is "well enough" if we can do it better. There is an old Spanish proverb which says, "Enjoy the little you have while the fool is hunting for more." An American would make this proverb read, "While the fool is enjoying the little he has, I will hunt for more." The way to hunt for more is to utilize odd moments.

The odd quarter of an hour in the morning before breakfast, the odd half-hour after breakfast, the chance to read or figure, or think with concentration on your own career—all these opportunities are the by-products of your daily existence. Among the aimless, unsuccessful or worthless, you often hear talk about "killing time." The man who is always killing time is really killing his own chances in life, while the man who is destined to success is the man who makes time live by making it useful; for the only value time has is the use we are able to make of it.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

The world will not think it worth while to molest or ridicule a Christian who completely conforms to its way of living. It is the out-and-out Christian who must drink the Master's cup.

TEN MILLION PAIRS OF EYES.

I am proud of our thirty thousand missionaries. I knew nearly half of them as undergraduates, and I think of every one of them as ambassadors in the largest conception we have when we speak that word. I think of them as interpreters, not only of the language, but interpreting backward and forward the two nations which they are serving—the countries which sent them and the countries in which they are living. May I not use stronger language still? I think of them in some humble sense as mediators like our Lord who, with his body on the tree, broke down the middle wall of partition. So they are breaking down this wall of fundamental misunderstanding and are dissolving the barriers between man and God. It is no time for us to plan any measures which would weaken or counteract this Christ-like impression.

Organized Christianity in Asia, and the same is true in Africa and Latin-America, is today working under a terrible handicap. In the first place, there are all too many divisions among us as Protestants. I have some deep convictions under that head, but I would say about our divisions over there that they never seemed so unnecessary to me, never so unwise, so un-Christian, and, therefore, never so intolerable. We must shake off this handicap.

Second, because of our associations. They speak of us here in the West as Christian nations, sometimes with emotions of great gratitude, but more oftentimes today they use that phrase in cynicism and with emotions that do not bring us satisfaction. They see phases of economic imperialism, commercial exploitation, ruthless competition and forced labor, and of what is put on in the movies on the Asiatic coast. I have come to the conclusion that what is put on in the movies each night will do more to counteract the constructive, patient, upbuilding work of missionaries through long years than anything else. These things connote something that profoundly concerns us in our world strategy and at the home base, as well as over there.

Our handicap exists not only because of our divisions and association, but also because of our inadequate leadership. Here I am not speaking only of qualifications. I would find it impossible to mention any group of workers in any calling who will average higher in intelligence and character and sacrificial devotion than the missionaries and national Christians under their leadership. But there are not enough of them. We are asking the impossible. They are breaking under the strain.

Having said what I have about the handicap of organized Christianity, let me also say that the influence of Jesus Christ was never so widespread, never so penetrating and never so transforming as I found it on these recent journeys. I would put it like this. There are over ten million pairs of eyes today riveted on this central personality of the ages, the Lord Jesus Christ, where there were one million at the time of my first world journey. This takes us right into the genius of the world mission of Christianity—the confronting of a living Christ by living men, women and children. You could sum up our mission by saying it is to fix the gaze of people on this fountain-head of vitality, spiritual energy—Christ Himself. He makes His own impression, which, without exception, is always a profound impression. It is always a transforming impression and time shows it is an enduring impression because it is superhuman. Why not break through the mists and secondary processes and rivet the gaze increasingly on Him? The fact that this is being done, I say, is reassuring. I do not understand the person who could be a pessimist in days like these.

I remember when Sherwood Eddy and I were in India on my first journey. When the name of Christ was mentioned, oftentimes a hiss swept across the entire audience of students. We had no such experience on this last tour. Whenever the name of Christ was mentioned, under all conditions, there would come a hush, and something more, a sense of reverence that I sometimes miss even in voluntary chapel services in Christian colleges in this country. There is a responsiveness to the note of reality wherever they hear it. That is wonderful. With fresh hope and confidence, I bring you the report that there is a rising spiritual tide that is increasing in volume and momentum.

There has been a marked quickening of the social conscience of Asia and other non-Christian areas. I know there is a school of philosophy in this country and a school of ethics in this country which will take issue with what I now say, but I wish to say that, in my judgment, Jesus Christ not only quickens conscience, not only awakens conscience, but in a sense really creates conscience. With increasing holiness comes the sense of sin. Jesus Christ multiplies sins. The more the white light of His matchless example is turned on in His penetrating teachings, the more Christ stands out in His unique and absolute sufficiency as the one above all the rest—the strong among the weak, the believing among the faithless, the erect among the fallen, the clean among the defiled, the living among the dead, alive forever more. And so it means everything to those of us who are giving ourselves to the founding of this mission of uniting and furthering Christianity, that Christ is being recognized as moving among the consciences of Asia as never before.

There is happening a great change in the psychology of Christian workers all over these fields I have been visiting. I wish I could discover more of it in the workers here at home. I would decry the psychology I found about three years ago or a little longer, as one showing itself in divided households and conflicting voices because of confusion of thought. This was leading to a lack of certainty, a lack of sense of direction. It is a serious matter when you have leaders who do not know where they are going.

I found the opposite this time. I found the most aggressive plans that I have met in my forty years of serving Christendom. I might decry the attitude that invites defeat. No one welcomes defeat, but it is possible for our workers to attain such an attitude that defeat becomes inevitable. The word we want to put over against this is "service." That is the word we need right now to describe what has come. The time has come for great affirmations by reminding people that nothing has happened in these last years to invalidate a single claim that Christ has ever made. While we see not yet all things subject to man, we see Jesus. This is the word right now to interpret the happy change in the psychology that I discovered in the workers over there.—John R. Mott, in World Call.

TO OUR PASTORS.

I have been doing evangelistic work in High Point for about two years and am at the service of any Church needing and demanding me. I enjoy and am ready to do evangelistic work in which God seems to be using me, and in this I rejoice. Should any Church or pastor desire my services, I will be pleased to go and to serve as the Lord may direct. W. J. EDWARDS.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(April.)

Son of God, Thou lovest Thy Church. Her victory is sure, but it looms afar. Make us to realize that only Thy Spirit manifest in souls redeemed through faith in Thee, Thou great Foundation Stone, can lift her walls, and that never can they rise to completion while a crevice or niche of Thine unalterable purpose remains unfulfilled. Many sit in darkness unaware. Forbid, O God, that in us, Thy willing servants, that "greater darkness," consequent upon misused light, should delay the triumph for which Christ's Church is set. Father Almighty, hear, and bring our prayers to blessed fruition in the liberation of souls wherever and however bound. Amen.

AFTER THE CROSS, THE CROWN—AN APPEAL.

The greatest single event in the history of mankind is the Resurrection. If He had not arisen, all the rest would have been in vain. And yet preceding the resurrection, and essential to it, was the supreme act of sacrifice and self-denial, the Crucifixion. Our Lord went to His crucifixion, forced the enemies of God and righteousness to crucify Him, because He had come to earth to establish a kingdom on the principle of sacrifice, self-denial. By way of the cross, self-denial, our Saviour was establishing His kingdom whose victory He sealed and made sure by His resurrection. If we would share the joy of His resurrection we must pay the price He paid, crucify our earthly wants, our physical needs and thus, through self-denial, come as He came to the resurrection.

The sacrifice we make, therefore, in helping to establish His kingdom is a sacrifice solely in His name and for His sake. We are not called upon to give our money for a charity or a benevolence when giving to missions, but to pour out our love upon our Lord just for His sake, that His kingdom may be built up in the world. As the woman poured out the alabaster box of precious ointment upon His head, even when the disciples rebuked her for her seeming waste, so are we in this resurrection time to pour out our love on Him for His sake that those who have surrendered themselves to Him and gone out in His name may be supported by us, even to the uttermost parts. Our missionary offering at Easter time is in the name and for the sake of our risen Lord.

In the power of that resurrection, He said to His disciples (His Church): "Go ye into all the world." And the Church alone of all institutions on earth undertakes the missionary task and sends out the gospel of the Son of God. Neither the State, nor civic, nor social, nor benevolent orders or organizations send out missionaries to preach the gospel of the Son of God. Only the Church does that. Our appeal is for self-denial for His sake. Surely this is a reasonable appeal, and if we are genuine Christians, really love our Lord, and wish the fellowship of His suffering and the joy of His triumph, we are willing and are ready to give at least one-third as much to carry the gospel to others as we pay to have it preached to ourselves. Just in His name. Just for His dear sake. That is all. J. O. A.

In fighting fires successfully, you have to get where the fire is hottest. There the need is greatest. So with missions.

WHY HAVE MISSIONARY CONTRIBUTIONS DECLINED?

In The January issue Missionary Review of the World, it was declared that a survey of eleven denominations showed that contributions to missions have steadily fallen off since the year 1921, and where there had been an advance since that time in gifts to missions, it has not been commensurate with the increase in money expended on Church buildings at home and other institutions of the Church that served the home and the State. "Meantime," continued the declaration, "unprecedented sums are being poured out on educational institutions in America." The editor of the Review declared his belief that the reasons for this phenomenon are temporary and the remedy is available and adequate. In the April number of the Review, a symposium is given by outstanding ministers of various communions. I wish there was space to give the entire symposium, but there is not. We give space for three only, one of the number being that of our own Dr. Brewer Eddy, whom many Sun readers recently heard, and who, as will be seen from his contribution further on, seems to get at the very bottom of the situation in his final paragraph: "Of course, at bottom, it is all a question of raising the spiritual devotion of our Churches. Missions thrive in spiritual earnestness; it does in comfortable indifference. It thrives in obedience; it perishes in the atmosphere of modern humanism or of selfishness. Contact with Christ spells missionary loyalty." We agree with Dr. Eddy that if the Churches of America could be brought more closely in contact with Christ, missionary loyalty would be revived. Missions thrive in spiritual earnestness.

Here are some salient and vital truths that every Christian Sun Reader should have:

Hugh Thomson Kerr, D. D., Pastor Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The missionary enterprise is the thermometer of the Christian Church. There can be no doubt about it. The Church at home can be judged by its missionary passion. When the fires on the home altars burn brightly then we know that the light is shining far beyond her borders. If missionary enthusiasm is low, then it is because the Church at home has lost its zeal.

Dr. Alexander Duff, whose name is associated with India, wrote: "There was a time when I had no care or concern for the heathen. That was the time I had no care for my own soul. But by the grace of God when I began to care for my own soul I began to care for the heathen, too. And in my closet on my bended knees I said, 'Oh, Lord, Thou knowest silver and gold have I none for this cause. What I have I give: I offer myself; wilt Thou accept the gift?' This has been historically true of the Church of Christ. When it was selfish and self-centered, then it was without the missionary flare. It was at the door of a self-sufficient, worldly and wealthy Church that the risen Christ stood waiting for entrance, saying, 'Behold, I stand at the door and knock,' and it was upon that Church that He pronounced the most dreadful of all judgments: 'Because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked.'"

One thing, and only one, is needed. The Church in America needs to be baptized into the conviction that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is supreme and final. The Church must recapture the urgency of its own message. Many things have transpired to weaken the conviction and to slacken the step of the messengers. There has been a growing religious toleration throughout the Church at large, and this is well. There has been an appreciation of the good in other religions, and this, too, is well. On the other hand, there have been reiterated and insistent attacks upon the Christian position. It is not foreign missions that are under fire; it is the whole Christian position. The question is being asked of Christians as it was asked of old: "Where is now thy God?" There has been a lowering of the sense of values growing out of a vulgar use of wealth, and a more flagrant display of things that are material. We are facing, too, the powerlessness of merely altruistic motives which are not undergirded by the love that was born at the cross of Christ. The Christian Church is reflecting the low standard which has laid hold upon the life of the people and has not challenged the social order of our own land by the supernatural and divine mandate of the gospel.

One thing will help. The Church at home needs clear-cut evidence from the mission field that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. Personally, I believe that this evidence is in our hands, but our imaginations are dulled and we have eyes and see not. The Church's generosity, however, cannot live forever on the missionary sacrifice of the great pioneers. The passing generation was fired in its missionary enthusiasm by the daring needs of Livingstone and Paton, Carey and Morrison, Judson and Chalmers. The Church today needs fresh evidence. Too frequently from missionary leaders it has asked for bread and has been given instead the cold stones of economic situations and political maneuverings. The Church will listen to evidence. The heart of the Church will respond to the things of the spirit. When the Church hears from the lips of inspired missionary prophets the story of lives redeemed and sins forgiven through the power of the conquering Christ, there will be no lack of enthusiasm in money or life.

Mrs. DeWitt Knox, President Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America.

Reasons for decline in gifts are:

1. Decline in belief (a) in the Bible as the Word of God; (b) in the Christ of the gospels, the divine, ever-living, ever-present Saviour of the world; (c) in the presence and power of the Holy Spirit; (d) in the heinousness of sin and the need of redemption.

2. Not enough preaching about foreign missions as the direct command of Christ.

3. Too much emphasis laid upon every form of social service and so-called humanism.

4. Lack of vision of the world's real need of Christ. Indifference toward responsibility of every Christian to share Christ.

5. Failure to "lift up Christ" as we should—His face has been blurred by our lives; His true beauty has not been made manifest.

6. Responsibility for the work as a whole has not been sufficiently shared, and Church mergers have a tendency to lessen loyalty and responsibility in the individual member.

7. Newspaper articles giving wrong impression of the attitude of Chinese, Indian and Japanese Christians towords our missionaries, throwing doubt upon their usefulness and welcome is universal.

8. Multiplicity of appeals.

The remedy:

1. Voltaire prophesied that before the end of the fifteenth century the work of the twelve fishermen would be over and done with. Just then prayer for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit over the whole earth by a small company of Christians started a great revival. One hundred years after Voltaire died, the house in which he wrote those words was used as a depot for the British and Foreign Missionary Bible Society.

2. The prayer of the Chinese leader—"Revive Thy Church, O Lord, beginning with me."

3. "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit," saith the Lord of hosts."

BREWER EDDY, D. D., Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

1. The reasons for the decline: Many denominations report large increases in Church expenses under local budgets, added to the heaviest building program ever achieved by the American Churches. It may be chancelitis or the rapid expansion of parish houses and recreation facilities. At any rate, the closest competition for missionary gifts will always exist between the needs of the local Church and the money that can be "spared" for the gift to missions. The attitude of the average board of trustees responsible for the local budget is familiar.

In addition, the immense increase in local charities for new buildings, mergers, community chests, often backed by professional drives, have diverted the proportion of stewardship gifts available for missions.

These two reasons, in my opinion, far outrank any decreased interest due to 100 per cent Americanism or a growing sense of racial hostility, or the unfair reports of world travelers and journalists. In our denomination the interested minority are giving as loyally as ever in increasing amounts. The majority in our Churches, half indifferent, find their missionary gifts crowded out. In addition, a half-dozen denominations have not yet proved successful in merging all appeals into a somewhat more mechanical percentage plan, which loses a large degree of personal knowledge and interest in the particular work ahead. In such merger, the foreign work will always be forced into closer competition with the home needs backed by patriotic and local loyalty, and will tend to lose out in the long run.

2. The remedy: In our denomination in the next few months we are trying a very definite remedy. We cannot expect the needed increased income through the collection envelopes of the Churches on the percentage basis. Now we turn to the individual givers who are most interested.

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR APRIL.

Women's Societies.

Theme: "Kindness."

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Song—prayer—business.

1. Devotional period (Rom. 12:9-21).
2. Talk, "After School—What?"
3. Talk, "Whither Bound?"
4. Current news.
5. Poem, "Did You Give Him a Lift?"
6. Heart-to-heart message.

The talks, "After School—What?" "Whither Bound?" are both leaflets and found in the envelope of helps. If you do not have this envelope, you may secure them from Mrs. Emma S. Powers, Dayton, Ohio. These leaflets should be given in the speaker's own words, and much help for the first one may be secured from the article by Miss Helen M. Brickman in the March Herald of Gospel Liberty magazine number. It is entitled "The Jesus Road for the Young Indian." No. 5—this poem is found on page 18 of the Herald. No. 6—this heart-to-heart message comes with the envelope of helps.

Be sure to read Mrs. Morrill's suggestions for this program in the magazine number of the Herald. They are fine.

Young People's Societies.

"What is the Non-Christian World?"

Purpose: To discover in what area Christianity is still not being lived.

Program:

1. Hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign." Scripture, John 1:1-17. Hymn, "O Zion, Haste." Prayer by three members.
2. Project committee.
3. "What is the non-Christian world?"
4. Phases of the problem.
5. Special music (sacred).
6. "The Christian World and Politics, Industry, Peace and War, Race Relations."
7. "What is the non-Christian World?"
8. Sing again first verse of first hymn.
9. Benediction.

Suggestions:

Poster—at top write, "What is the Non-Christian World?" Below that sketch is a map of the world outlining the continents. Time, date.

3. Leader questions group as to their definitions of the non-Christian world.

4. Illustrations as to what the non-Christian world may be. Assign those found in chapter 7 of Y. & W. O., or any others that you have found in your reading. The Herald of Gospel Liberty for April will contain further helps.

5. Be sure that it fits the spirit of the service.

6. Ask four people to speak on these topics, allowing each person five minutes. Is Christianity applied in these fields? If it is not, what has been the result? How can it be applied? etc.

7. Leader sums up the thought, comments on connection between topic and Scripture lesson and asks the group to co-operate in formulating a definition of the non-Christian world and the Christian world.

Juniors or Willing Workers.

Theme: "Easter."

Song: (use Easter songs this month).

Call to worship: Awake, O north wind, and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out.

Response: For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds is come.

Prayer: Psa. 19:14.

Offering response.

We thank Thee, Father, for Thy care,
And for Thy bounty everywhere;
And so to Thee we bring our gift,
While grateful hearts to Thee we lift.

Song.

The Easter theme, and the thought of Christ's resurrection fits into the idea of carrying the good tidings, just as the early disciples did after the first Easter.

Stories: Finish study book, complete map work if possible. If an Easter story is desired, tell the story, "It Will Live Again," or other Easter story.

Closing song.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson II—April 13, 1930.

The Child and the Kingdom.

Golden Text: "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for to such belongeth the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 19:14.

Lesson: Matt. 18:1-14, 19:13-15.

This man Jesus was always doing the most unexpected things! Take for instance the incident recorded in today's lesson. The disciples came to Him and asked Him who was the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. It is possible that they thought He would say that some of them were greatest in the kingdom of heaven. In any event, the question showed that they had missed the point in regard to the nature of the kingdom, for those who are true members are not concerned with greatness in the sense that the disciples used the term.

"And Jesus called a little child unto Him and set him in the midst of them." He put that child right in the midst of those disciples who had asked who was greatest, and said, "Verily, I say unto you, except ye become converted (He was talking to those who thought they already had "religion") and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." That is to say, unless they had the spirit of teachableness, docility, willingness to learn; unless they had a lack of the spirit of vanity and of the spirit of self-sufficiency; unless they had child-likeness (not childishness)—they could not enter into the kingdom. Membership in the kingdom was primarily a matter of spiritual qualities, which for genuineness had their counterpart in a normal child.

"Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." The disciples might have guessed a year and they would hardly have guessed that a child was the greatest in the kingdom. They probably did a lot of hard thinking before it ever got into their brains just what Jesus meant. It was such a reversal of standards.

In a sense, Jesus might be said to be the discoverer of childhood. It was He above all others who saw the tremendous possibilities of the child, and hence the importance of the child. His act in placing the child in the midst is symbolic of his teaching, in that He made the child central. Indeed, the kingdom was inherent in childhood. Far beyond any other religion, Christianity has given childhood an exalted place, and all of the modern agencies that are concerned with bettering child-life are the direct and undirect expression of the Spirit of Jesus at work in the world.

"Whosoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." The word offend comes from the Greek word which means "causes to stumble." To give it this meaning is to make it much more suggestive. One gets the picture of a man putting something in the way of a child that would cause it to stumble, or of a man tripping up a child and causing it to fall heavily. Woe unto such a one if he should do such a thing literally! What a poor sport such a one would be! But woe unto the one who by example or by act causes one to stumble, to fall, to falter in the act of walking in the way of righteousness. Woe unto those interests which put upon children through unwholesome child labor or long hours, or unsanitary living conditions, and woe unto those who neglect their training in early years in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Woe unto all who do not give childhood its due, and who do not seek to call out the best that is in it. Woe unto that community in which the agencies that blight childhood go unrestrained. Woe unto that Church which neglects its children in its ministry of teaching.

"Then were brought unto him little children, that he should put His hands upon them and pray, and the disciples rebuked them." They probably thought that their Master was too busy to be bothered with children, or that their own interests were too important to be side-tracked by children.

"But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." One can, of course, bring undue pressure to bear upon children as concerning a profession of religion and Church membership. But when a child feels that inner impulse, and when it seeks to respond to that which is undoubtedly the call of Christ, let a man beware of keeping such a one from coming to the Master.

"And He laid His hands on them, and departed thence." What a joy it must have been to those children to have had the Great Teacher's own hands laid upon their heads! How the fond mothers must have talked about it in their own village and in neighboring villages! But still the Master lays His hands upon children, even in their tender years and calls them and often sets them apart for special service in the years to come. In any event, happy is that life which has the Master's touch upon it in the tender years when habits are forming into character and the permanent set is being given to life. Thank God for the wholesome touch of Jesus upon child-life.
